ADVERTISEMENT

TO

THE TWENTY-NINTH EDITION.

SINCE the year 1837 (the date of the last edition of this work) a great number of Statutes connected more or less with the office of a Justice of the Peace have been passed. Some of these lessen, but the larger portion of them add considerably to, the duties of that office. Many Statutes have also been passed materially affecting Parish Officers. These, with the decisions of the superior Courts, and a variety of new and important matter connected with these offices, have been introduced into this Edition. New practical Forms have also been added, and the former ones amended where necessary. The whole work has undergone a complete revisal, and no pains have been spared to render it as useful as possible, and worthy of the commendation so flatteringly bestowed upon it.

PREFACE

TO

THE FIRST EDITION, BY DR. BURN.

THE Author proposeth in this Book to render the laws relating to the subjects it treats of, a little more intelligible than hath hitherto been done.

The method he makes use of is various.

The first thing regarded is the order of time. Thus, in the poor laws:—first, is set forth the appointment of overseers; next, the several branches of their duty, in finding settlements for the poor—in removing them to such settlements—in making rates for their relief—in relieving and otherwise ordering them—and, last of all, in accounting at the expiration of their office. Then again, in treating of settlements, it occurs, to consider distinctly, and as near to the said order as may be, ten different kinds of settlements,—by birth—by the parents' settlement—by apprenticeship—by service—by marriage—by inhabiting forty days after notice—by paying parish rates—by serving a parish office—by renting 10*l. a year*—and by a person's own estate. In like manner in treating of the rates; first, is set forth the course of laying the assessment—then, the allowance thereof by the justices—publishing the same in the church—appeal against the rates at the sessions—levying the same by distress—and, finally, commitment, where no distress can be had.

Thus to exhibit another instance. In the article of the Woollen Manufacture, which makes up a considerable part of the justice of the peace his duty, and of the officers subordinate to him, there is such a number and variety of statutes, that authors are generally overwhelmed with them. To avoid which perplexity, the laws are here digested in order, according to the natural progress of that business; from the shearing of the sheep, to the exportation of the wool manufactured, under the several heads of winding of wool by the shearer—laws to prevent its exportation—working of cloth—fulling—measuring—dyeing—stretching—dressing—exporting. (a)

Where there is no priority in point of time, the next method is that of Lord Coke, to frame a definition which takes in the whole subject, and then explain the several parts of such definition in their order. Thus, grand larceny is defined to be, a felonious and fraudulent taking and carrying away by any person of the mere personal goods of another, above the value of 12*d*. In the handling of which the several branches of the definition are explained in the order as they stand; viz. a felonious and fraudulent taking—and carrying away—by any person—of the mere personal goods—of another—above the value of 12*d*. Under which heads the general learning relating to that whole title is comprehended.

(a) This arrangement has not in the present edition been closely followed, the laws as to Woollen Manufactures having been in many respects altered since the first edition.

The like method is pursued in treating of the commission of the peace, the form of an indictment, the form of an order of removal, and other articles.

In general it is provided that one thing shall clear the way for another, and the subsequent paragraphs explain the preceding.

Under the influence of which conduct, the author hath attempted to bring together, under one general title, divers articles relating to the same subject, which in the common books are broken and detached under various separate titles; hoping thereby that what hath hitherto been thought introductory of confusion, may tend to render the subject more perspicuous, in exhibiting the whole under one comprehensive view. Thus the laws relating to the game, which are above forty in number, and are interspersed in the common books under about thirteen different titles, are here digested under one general title Game, to which the reader shall have recourse for the knowledge of whatsoever belongeth to that subject. For example, if any person would be satisfied what penalty the law hath proposed for tracing hares in the snow, by recurring to the general title concerning the game, he will find the game distinguished into three kinds, the four-footed game, the winged game, and the game of fish; the four-footed game are distributed into the several species of deer, hares, and conies; under which head concerning hares, he will readily find what is desired. In like manner, the winged game are subdivided into several branches, concerning hawks and hawking—swans—partridges and pheasants—pigeons—wild ducks, wild geese, and other water-fowl—grouse or moor game—herons—and other fowl; each of which have their peculiar laws.

In these large comprehensive titles, care is likewise taken to be as particular as may be without injuring the connection in the statutes, by inserting the whole law by itself, relating to each separate article. The benefit of which will appear by the following instance: if a person would know what number of horses or beasts in a cart or waggon are allowed by the statutes for the preservation of the road; let him take what treatise at present he pleases concerning the highways, he must read over the whole, before he shall be sure that he hath found all which the law hath enacted concerning the same; and such is often the inaccuracy and confusion, that when he hath perused the whole, perhaps he may be still to seek. For as to this instance before us, there have been regulations made concerning the same, by ten different acts of parliament at very different times. Before he can have any competent knowledge thereof, he must lay all these ten acts together; and when he shall have done this, he will find amongst them so many repeals, and revivals, and explanations, and amendments, that it will even then be no easy matter to conclude with certainty how the law doth stand as to that article. To spare the reader all which trouble, the author hath in this, and all other the like instances, laid the whole law together relating thereunto, or at least all that hath occurred to him, or which he hath thought it material to insert. So that the reader may receive satisfaction in a very small compass, as to what he shall be inquiring about; or at least he may be satisfied in this, that if he doth not find it there, he need not seek for it elsewhere in the book.

And by this method of bringing together into one general title, all those separate distinct titles, which have a mutual relation to and dependance upon each other, the author hath avoided one great inconvenience, of referring the reader from one title to another, and from that other back again to the first, and (which is not unusual in books of the like kind) perhaps losing the thing to be treated of betwixt them.

Upon which account also, where one law occurreth under two different titles, it is usual with him to insert the same under both those titles, that so the reader's attention may not be interrupted by sending him to search other titles, and from those perhaps others again, which have no principal relation to the matter he hath in hand.

Also, upon another account, he hath sometimes made use of more words than otherwise he would have done, namely, to avoid the frequent repetition of the term &c. which is a vague expression, and apt to create an uneasiness in the reader's mind, for that he cannot be satisfied from thence how much, or how little, is intended to be understood.

He hath also been somewhat large in the matter of precedents under divers titles; and hath endeavoured to bring them much nearer to the statutes upon which they ought to be formed, than usually hath been done.

For all which enlargements he hath the more space allowed to him, for that he hath not thought it necessary (as others have done) to take up near one-fourth part of the book by inserting Blackerby's Justice at the end of it, by way of Index; hoping that the method he hath pursued will render every thing of that kind impertinent and useless.

THE MATERIALS which the author hath made use of are chiefly of four kinds: the Statutes at large—the several treatises concerning the Pleas of the Crown—the Reports of Cases adjudged in the Court of King's Bench—and the books concerning the Office of a Justice of the Peace.

As to the Statutes at large, or acts of parliament, the author hath not thought himself at liberty, as Mr. Dalton and others have done, to deliver the import thereof in his own words; but hath constantly abridged the act in the words of the act itself, leaving out nothing which may seem any way material. And to each distinct clause, he hath annexed the interpretation thereof, where the same hath been determined in the Court of King's Bench, or expounded by other good authority.

The treatises concerning the Pleas of the Crown, are those of Stamford, Coke, Hale, and Hawkins. Of the first of these the author hath made little use, further than as he is adopted by the other three. As to which three great authorities, the law hath been declared by Lord Coke, and not controverted by any other, nor altered since his time by any act of parliament, or judicial determination, the author hath given to him the preference. And where any of these differeth from the other, he hath noted the difference.

In citing of Mr. Hawkins, he hath not thought it allowable, as is usual with others, to omit the several degrees of caution and assent, with which he delivereth his opinion; as it seemeth, or it hath been said by some, or it seemeth to be the better opinion, or it seemeth to be agreed, and the like; which are by no means arbitrary words without much meaning, but are inserted by him with the utmost deliberation and judgment.

As to the books of Reports, where the cases therein have been considered by Mr. Hawkins, and the other learned persons before mentioned, the author hath judged it very proper to leave the matter there as settled by them. As to the rest, he hath by no means thought himself of ability to proceed in Mr. Hawkins's manner by laying together all the reports on the same subject, and thereupon extracting an opinion out of the whole; but hath inserted the same at large, or what he hath thought most material thereof, and left the determination thereupon to the reader's better judgment

And here it may be requisite, that the reader be admonished, not to expect that the book shall be more perfect than the materials of which it is composed. All the books of reports are not of equal authority. Many of them are only notes that had been taken for gentlemen's own private use. For these, or for any other, the author himself vouched not; and as he doth not add to their credit, so he doth not detract from it; but leaveth every author (as he needs must) to answer for himself. For he hath made it an invariable rule, upon all occasions, to cite his authorities, what such soever they be; and in all material instances, in the very words of the original authors; that so what may be of good authority in itself, shall not be rendered less so by his handling of it. And where no authority is alleged, he desires the reader will look upon it as such, namely, as having no authority; the same being nothing but the author's own private observations, which are submitted to every reader's judgment, to approve or reject as he shall see cause.

The books of authority concerning the Office of a Justice of the Peace, are those of Fitzherbert, Crompton, Lambard, and Dalton; the last of which was published in the reign of King James the First; since which time no book under that title hath been allowed as sufficiently authentic. And even the additions which have been made to Dalton since his death, seem to have no better claim to an uncontroulable authority, than other collections which have not obtained it. And Dalton himself is much injured in the modern editions in like manner, as was observed before of Mr. Hawkins, by delivering that as absolute, which Mr. Dalton published under the several degrees of assent or doubtfulness before mentioned; and which the author, in justice to Mr. Dalton, hath restored.

Where Dalton hath adopted Lambard, Crompton, and Fitzherbert, (which he doth most frequently in their words,) the author hath thought it sufficient to cite Dalton's single authority. And generally, in all other cases, where authors are agreed, he hath judged it unnecessary to allege more than one or two good vouchers.

Concerning the other books of this kind, which have been published since Dalton's time, it is unnecessary to enlarge, since of the most of them the author hath made no use, and of the rest very sparingly; and he will not seek to recommend his own book, by finding fault with others before him.

Abatement, Pleas in. (a)

A PLEA in abatement consists of matter of defence, which merely defeats the present proceeding, and does not, like a plea in bar, show the defendant to be for ever discharged. What.

In criminal proceedings, such a plea is pleadable only to indictments, informations in the Crown Office, and appeals of felony.

It is founded either on some defect apparent on the proceeding itself, or on some defect in matters of fact not so apparent, such as a misnomer of the defendant, or a mistatement of his addition.

Our present considerations will be confined only to pleas in abatement to indictments and informations in the Crown Office.

Pleas in abatement of misnomer, or of want of addition or wrong addition of the party pleading, are now rendered of no advantage to such party in consequence of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 19, allowing an amendment, as will be seen, post, p. 3. Inutility of.

We will now consider

I. What may be Pleaded in Abatement, 1.

II. Time and Manner of Pleading it, and Affidavit of Truth, 2.

III. Amendment, Replication, Demurrer, and Issue, &c. 3.

IV. Evidence, 4.

V. Judgment, &c. 5.

VI. Forms, 5.

I. What may be pleaded in Abatement.

The defendant may plead in abatement any defect apparent on the face of the indictment. (2 Hale, 236, 238.) As if it does not state the defendant's What may be pleaded. For apparent defects.

(a) As to these pleas in general, see 2 Hale, 236 to 239, 2 Hawk. c. 34; Bac. Ab. Abatement; Com. Dig. Abatement; 1 Chit. C. L. 445.

1. What may be pleaded.

addition as required by the 1 Hen. V. c. 5 (a); (Andr. 145; 1 Show. 392;) so if it does not state defendant's Christian name.

The want of certainty seems pleadable in abatement.

For defects not apparent.

The defendant may plead in abatement a defect not apparent on the face of the indictment; (Hawk. b. 2, c. 25, s. 70;) as if he be misnamed either in his Christian or surname, or his addition be mistated. (b) (1 Leach, 476; 2 Hale, 176, 236.)

So if a peer be indicted as a commoner, he may plead his privilege in abatement. (2 Hale, 240; 6 Rep. 53; R. v. Knowles, 2 Salk. 509; 3 Salk. 242.)

So if the description of an highway, in an indictment for the non-repair of it, be too indefinite, being equally applicable to several highways, defendant may plead in abatement, alleging that all such highways are equally known by the description in the indictment; and if indeed the description be true in fact, that seems the only mode of taking advantage of the objection. (Rex v. Hammersmith, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 357.)

The defendant cannot, as in the case of an information, plead in abatement to an indictment that there is another indictment against him for the same offence; (1 Jones, 199; Sir W. Withipole's case, Cro. Car. 147;) but sometimes in such case the Court will quash the first indictment; (2 Hawk. c. 34, s. 1;) and as to where the Court will quash an indictment, see post, "Indictment," Vol. III.

Where several defendants.

It should seem, in an indictment against several defendants, a misnomer of one cannot be pleaded by the others; (see Lutwyche, 36; Wade v. Stiff and others, 1 Moore & P. 26;) but each may plead distinct matters in abatement, or one may plead in abatement and the other in bar. (See R. v. Sherman, R. T. Hardw. 303; 2 Hale, 177.)

II. Time and Manner of Pleading, and Affidavit, &c.

Time of pleading.

Time of Pleading.]—The plea in abatement must be pleaded before any plea in bar. (2 Hale, 175; Fost. 16.) It should be put in upon the arraignment, when the defendant is called upon to answer. (2 Hale, 175.)

Manner of pleading.

Manner of Pleading.]—These pleas, like pleas in civil actions, are required to be framed with the greatest accuracy and precision, and should be certain to every intent, and be pleaded without any repugnancy, and must point out the objection, so that it may be readily amended or avoided in another prosecution. The general rules which are to be followed in framing pleas in abatement in civil actions will, for the most part, be here applicable, and will be found collected in 1 Ch. Pl. 395 to 401; Com. Dig. Abatement, 1, 11.

In a plea of misnomer the defendant must disclose his real name, and by such name he will be concluded. (2 Hale, 238.)

Where a peer pleaded in abatement his right to be tried before the House of Lords, it was held the plea should have stated he was a peer of the United Kingdom, and the mode in which he derived his title, because such plea was to be determined by the record. (Rex v. Cooke, 2 Barn. & C. 618; 4 Dowl. & R. 592, S. C.; 6 Co. Rep. 53 b.; 2 Hale, 240.)

In a prosecution for a felony, the defendant may plead over to the offence, together with a plea in abatement; and if he omit to do so, the Court will order it to be done, and insert it at the bottom of the parchment; (Dean's case, 1 Leach, 478; 2 Leach, 712, n. a; 2 Hale, 238;) but the omission is no ground of demurrer, as defendant may plead over to the felony after the plea

(a) How to state such addition, see title, "Indictment," Vol. III. If no addition were given, the Courts would formerly, it seems, have quashed the indictment. (See Rex v. Thomas, 3 D. & R. 621.

(b) As to the mode of stating defendant's name and addition, and what is a misnomer, see title, "Indictment," Vol. III.

in abatement has been determined against him, and this is in favorem vitæ. (Id.; Carth. 55) In misdemeanors the defendant is not allowed to plead over together with or after plea in abatement. (See Rex v. Gibson, 8 East, 107) 2. Manner of pleading.

The plea may be pleaded by attorney as well as in person. (Rex v. Westby, 10 East, 83, n.; 2 Hawk. c. 34, s. 3, § C.)

Great accuracy is required in the commencement and conclusion of the plea. A plea of misnomer commencing thus, "and the said C. D who is indicted by the name of E. D. comes, &c." would be bad, for by styling himself the said C. D, he concludes himself as the party indicted. (2 Hale, 175.) It should conclude, "praying judgment on (or "of") the indictment and that it may be quashed." If the plea conclude in bar instead of in abatement, it will be bad. (See R. v. Shakespeare, 10 East, 83)

It has been decided the plea may be put in ore tenus; (2 Leach, 535; 1 Leach, 476;) the present practice, however, does not warrant this, it being usual and therefore safest to put it in writing engrossed on parchment or paper. It should be signed by counsel. (See Cro. Car. C. 21; 1 Ch. C. L. 448.)

Affidavit of Truth.]—By the 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 11, it is provided, "That no dilatory plea shall be received in any court of record, unless the party offering such plea do by affidavit prove the truth thereof, or show some probable matter to the Court to induce them to believe that the fact of such dilatory plea is true" Affidavit of truth.

This provision applies to pleas in abatement in criminal proceedings. (Rex v. Grainger, 3 Burr. 1617) It is at all events necessary to add the affidavit to a plea in a prosecution filed in the Crown Office. (Id.; Rex v. Jones, 2 Stra 1161.) It has been said, though for what reason it does not appear, that this affidavit is unnecessary on a trial at bar of an indictment for high treason. (Fost. 16, Rex v. Grainger, 3 Burr. 1617; 2 Hawk. c. 34, s. 7.)

The affidavit may, it seems, be made by the defendant or a third person, (Lumley v. Foster, Barnes, 344) It should be properly entitled in the prosecution. It should state that the plea is true in substance and fact, and not merely that the plea is a true plea. (Onslow v. Booth, 2 Stra. 705.)

III. Amendment of, Replication, Demurrer, and Issue.

Amendment.]—If a plea of misnomer or want of addition be true, the prosecutor may, by the practice at common law, instead of replying, if the grand jury be still sitting, alter the indictment by substituting the name, &c. by which the defendant so pleaded, for the name in the indictment, and have it again preferred and found, and the defendant again arraigned upon it, in which case he will be estopped from again pleading a misnomer or want of addition Amendment.

But a more effectual course in this respect is provided by the 7 Geo IV. c. 64, s. 19, which allows the Court to cause the indictment to be amended, and call on the defendant to plead over thereto, as if the plea in abatement had not been pleaded. The enactment of such provision is as follows — "And for preventing abuses from dilatory pleas, be it enacted, that no indictment or information shall be abated by reason of any dilatory plea of misnomer, or of want of addition, or of wrong addition of the party offering such plea, if the Court shall be satisfied by affidavit or otherwise of the truth of such plea; but in such case the Court shall forthwith cause the indictment or information to be amended according to the truth, and shall call upon such party to plead thereto, and shall proceed as if no such dilatory plea had been pleaded."

It should seem that this statute does not affect the right of a peer, when indicted as a commoner, to plead in abatement of an indictment for felony; for his title is not only part of his name, but gives him a different mode of trial, viz. by his peers. (Arch. Crim. Law, 9th ed. by Jervis, 83.)

The Court will not allow a plea in abatement to be amended.

3. Replication, &c.

Demurrer.]—If the plea be insufficient in form, or bad in point of substance, the prosecutor may demur. (Rex v. Gibson, 8 East, 83.)

Demurrer.

The Court will not, in general, on motion, quash a bad plea in abatement. (Rex v. Cooke, 2 Barn. & C. 618; 1 Dowl. & R. 43, S. C.) Abbott, C. J. intimated in that case that there was a great difference between quashing indictments and quashing pleas, and that it would in general be much too strong a measure to quash the latter, though it were clearly defective.

In cases of felony the demurrer and joinder may be ore tenus. (Fost. 105; 1 Leach, 476.) In indictments for treason the defendant must join in demurrer instanter. (6 Harg. St. Trials, 241.)

Unless the plea be clearly defective, it is best not to demur, but to amend as above.

Replication.

Replication.]—If the plea be untrue in fact, the prosecutor may reply denying such fact, or allege matter of estoppel. Thus to a plea of misnomer, he may either deny the plea, or reply that the defendant is known as well by one name as the other. (2 Leach, 476; 2 Hale, 237.) The replication must not commence as to a plea in bar. (See Carth. 187; Bac. Ab. Abatement, 8.) The conclusion must be proper, and usually is to the country. On a plea of peerage the conclusion should be by the record, and not to the country; (see Countess of Rutland's case, 6 Rep. 53; 2 Hale, 240;) but an issue whether a woman is a peeress by marriage, may conclude to the country. (Id. See Rex v. Cooke, 2 Barn. & C. 618; 4 Dowl. & R. 592, S. C.)

Unless the plea be clearly untrue, it is best to amend.

Issue, &c.

Issue, &c.]—If the replication be bad in form or substance, the defendant may demur, and if he establish the insufficiency, he will have judgment; as where the defendant pleaded in abatement that he was a peer, and the Attorney-General replied, that he formerly petitioned the Lords to be tried by them and was refused; he obtained judgment on demurrer, inasmuch as the decision of the House of Lords is no judgment, and therefore the replication was invalid. (Rex v. ———, 2 Salk. 209; Holt, 530.)

Where issue is joined on a plea in abatement, the venire may be returned and the trial proceeded in instanter by a jury of the same county. (1 Leach, 478; 2 Hale, 238.) At the sessions, however, where a misdemeanor only is in question, it is the usual practice after plea for the defendant to enter into a recognizance to prosecute the same with effect at the ensuing sessions, and then he must give four days' notice of his intention to try to the prosecutor; and if he does not reply, judgment will be entered for the defendant. (Cro. Car. C. 31.)

IV. Evidence.

Evidence in misnomer.

In a plea of misnomer, where defendant alleges that he was "named and called," it is sufficient for him to prove that he was generally known by that name. But it is not sufficient in such case to prove that he has been called so once or twice. (Maester v. Hartz, 3 Maule & S. 453.) The usual proof in support of a plea in abatement of misnomer, is an examined copy of the register of his baptism, with evidence of identity by a party present at the ceremony or otherwise. It is said that this proof of baptism is absolutely necessary when the plea alleges that defendant was "baptized" by the name; (Welekier v. Peletier, 1 Camp. 479;) but this seems very questionable. (See Arch. C. L. 5th ed. 83.) Defendant may prove his name by letters of denization, or a commission in the army by it, and proof that he has been known in other countries by that name is sufficient. (See id.)

A plea of peerage must be proved by letters-patent under the great seal. (See Rex v. Knollys, 2 Salk. 509; 1 Ld. Raym. 10, S. C.) As to proof of such letters, see title "Evidence," Vol. II.

5. Judgment, &c.

V. Judgment, &c.

Judgment for defendant.

Before the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 19, the judgment for the defendant on a plea in abatement was, in case of a misdemeanor, that the indictment be quashed, and that he be not compelled to answer, but should depart the court without day; (2 Hale, 238; Rex v. Shakespeare, 10 East, 87;) but for felony or treason, though the indictment were quashed, the court would not dismiss the defendant, but would cause him to be indicted de novo. (Sir H. Ferrers's case, Cro. Car. 371; 2 Hale, 176, 238; 2 Hawk. c. 34, s. 2.) A judgment in abatement for one of several defendants would not affect the others. (Rex v. Sherman, R. T. Hardw. 303; 2 Hale, 177.)

But this, as regards pleas in abatement of misnomer, or want of addition or wrong addition, is materially altered by the above statute, which as we have seen, ante, 3, allows the court to cause the indictment to be amended on such plea, and to call on the party to plead as if no dilatory plea had been pleaded.

Judgment for the Queen.

The judgment for the queen on a plea in abatement to an indictment for a misdemeanor is final; (Rex v. Gibson, 8 East, 107; 2 Hawk. c. 31, s. 7; 1 Leach, 478;) but in treason or felony the judgment is that the defendant do answer over. (Rex v. Gibson, 8 East, 110; 1 Leach, 478; 2 Hale, 239.) And in both cases, on a judgment on demurrer, the judgment is that the defendant do answer over; (Trem. P. C. 189, 190; Rex v. Hon. R. Johnson, 6 East, 583, 602; Eichorn v. Le Maitre, 2 Wils. 368; 1 Ch. C. L. 451;) and the reason for this latter doctrine is, that every man shall not be presumed to know matter of law, which he leaves to the judgment of the court, but he is presumed to know whether his plea be true or false in matter of fact.

VI. Forms.

(1.) Plea in abatement of misnomer of defendant's Christian name(a).

Abduction of Women. (a)

THIS offence may be divided into two classes,—first, the forcible abduction of a woman on account of her fortune, with intent to marry or defile her; and—secondly, the unlawful abduction of a girl under the age of sixteen from her parents or guardians. As to stealing children under the age of ten years, see post, "Children."

I. Abduction of Women on Account of their Property.

Abduction of a woman on account of her property against her will.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 19, enacts, "That where any woman shall have any interest, whether legal or equitable, present or future, absolute, conditional or contingent, in any real or personal estate, or shall be an heiress presumptive or next of kin to any one having such interest, if any person shall, from motives of lucre, take away or detain such woman against her will, with intent to marry or defile her, or to cause her to be married or defiled by any other person; every such offender, and every person counselling, aiding or abetting such offender, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding four years." And the act repeals the 3 Hen VII. c. 2; 39 Eliz. c. 9; and 3 Edw. I. c. 13; 1 Geo. IV. c. 115; as also so much of 6 Rich. st. 1, c. 6, as relates to ravishers and to women ravished.

See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of this act, post, "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. V.

What an offence within the act.

It is not necessary, as was the case under the prior statutes, that an actual marriage or defilement should take place. Under the present act the taking or detaining, for the purposes of lucre, coupled with an intent to marry or defile, constitutes the offence. The taking must be against the will of the woman. It seems, however, that although it be with the will of the woman, yet if that be obtained by fraud practised upon her, the case will be within the act. (Wakefield's case, Lancaster March Assizes, 1827; Deac. C. Law, 4.) It is no excuse, that the woman was at first taken away with her own consent, if she afterwards refuse to continue with the offender, because if she so refuse, she may from that time as properly be said to be taken against her will, as if she had never given any consent at all; for till the force was put upon her, she was in her own power. (1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 7; 1 Russ. 571.) Moreover the detaining against her will is an offence. It seems also it is not material whether a woman so taken contrary to her will at last consent thereto or not, if she were under the force at the time, for the offence is complete at the time of taking. (Fulwood's Case, Cro. Car. 488; Swendon's Case, 5 St. Tr. 459; Hawk. c. 41, s. 8.)

Accessaries.

It will be observed that the above enactment expressly makes accessaries before the fact liable as principals, which was a doubtful point under the prior statutes.

The indictment must set forth that the woman taken away had the property, or that she was heiress presumptive, &c. as required by the act, in order to show defendant's interested motives. (Moulin v. Sir G. Dallison, Cro. Car. 484.) The place and manner of taking must also be set forth in the proceedings. (Id. ibid.) It must also be alleged that the taking was against her will, and that it was for lucre; (Bruton v. Morris, Hob. 182; 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 5;) and with an intent to marry or defile. (See 1 Hale, 660.)

1. On Account of property.

Indictment.

It may be as well observed, that by 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 12, every felony or misdemeanor begun in one county and completed in another may be dealt with and tried in either county.

Venue.

Not triable at sessions.

Evidence.]—To sustain the indictment, the prosecutor should look to the averments in it, and prove them accordingly, and in the order stated in such indictment; as that the woman was possessed of the real or personal estate, or was the heiress presumptive or next of kin to some one having the property required by the act. It should be proved that the defendant, from motives of lucre, took away or detained the person mentioned in the indictment against her will; and the jury ought not to convict the prisoner, unless they are satisfied that the prisoner committed the offence from motives of lucre; but evidence of expressions used by the prisoner respecting the property of the lady, such as his stating that he had seen the will of one of her relatives (naming him), and that she would have 220*l.* a-year, are important for the consideration of the jury, in coming to a conclusion whether the prisoner was actuated by motives of lucre or not. (Reg. v. Barratt, 9 Car. & P. 387.) A prisoner was taken into custody at the house of his brother, on a charge of abduction. When he was taken, a letter was found in a writing-desk in the room where he and his brother were. The letter was directed to a person in the neighbourhood of the prisoner's late residence. The police-officer was going to open it, when the prisoner told him it had nothing to do with the business he had come about: held, that the letter was receivable in evidence on the trial of the prisoner for the abduction. Ib.

Evidence.

The party injured, though the force continued till the time of the marriage, will be a good witness for or against the offender, because she is not his wife de jure, and may herself swear to the compulsion. (Swendon's case, 5 Harg. St. Tr. 456; Brown's case, 1 Ventr. 243; Fullwood's case, Cro. Car. 488; Rex v. Parry, 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 13.) But some writers seem to think that where the actual marriage was good, in consequence of a subsequent consent, the wife cannot be sworn; though the better opinion seems to be that the offender should not be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong, and that the act of marriage, which is the completion of his offence, should not be construed to disqualify the witness on whose testimony he may be convicted. (1 Hale, 301; 4 Bla. Com. 209; 1 East, P. C. 454; Rex v. Wakefield, supra.) And indeed it would now probably be considered that a wife de jure may always be a witness against her husband in case of personal injuries. It seems that her dying declarations may be read against him on a trial for her murder; (1 Leach, 500;) and it is certain that her testimony may be received when he is charged with assisting others to ravish her. (1 Harg. St. Tr. 387; 3 Ch. C. L. 819; and see "Wife," Vol. VI.; "Evidence," Vol. II.)

Witnesses.

If the jury should not be satisfied that the prisoner used force to the person of the lady in taking her away, and that he took her away against her consent, they may convict him of the assault, under the stat. 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11. And if they should not be satisfied that the prisoner was actuated by motives of lucre; and they be satisfied that the prisoner used force to the person of the lady in taking her away; and that he took her away against her consent, they may likewise convict of an assault, under the stat. 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11. (Reg. v. Barratt, 9 C. & P. 387. See post, "Assault.")

May be convicted of an assault.

Punishment.]—This crime is a felony, and punishable accordingly with transportation for life or for not less than seven years, or with imprisonment with or without hard labour, for not more than four years. (9 Geo. IV. c. 31,

Punishment.

2. Of Girls under Sixteen.

s. 19, ante.) By sect. 31 of the same act, accessaries after the fact are punishable with imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding two years. (Post.)

II. Abduction of Girls under Sixteen.

Abduction of a girl under sixteen years.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 20, enacts, "That if any person shall unlawfully take, or cause to be taken, any unmarried girl, being under the age of sixteen years, out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother, or of any other person having the lawful care or charge of her; every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to suffer such punishment, by fine or imprisonment, or by both, as the court shall award." And the act repeals 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 8.

This provision was passed in order to meet those cases where the girl is of so tender an age that she might be easily imposed on and her consent obtained. It alters the law as it stood under the 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 8.

What an offence within the act.

An illegitimate child appears to be within the act. (Rex v. Cornforth and others, 2 Stra. 1162; better reported in Bott, by Const. Rex v. Sweeting, 1 East, P. C. 457.) The mother retains her authority though she marry again, and the assent of the second husband is not material. (Ratcliffes' case, 3 Rep. 39.) But the statute extends only to the custody of the mother, where the father has not disposed of the custody of the child to others. (Id.) It seems that if the taking were with the consent of the parent or person having the charge of the child, no restriction could do away with the effect of such approval. (Calthorpe v. Axtell, 3 Mod. 169; 1 East, P. C. 457.) Under the prior act it was holden, that if a parent place a daughter under the care of another, who, by collusion, marries her to his own son, the case was not within the act if the marriage were solemnized in a parish church, at a canonical hour, and without any attempt at privacy. (3 Mod. 88.) The principle of this case was disputed by Mr. East, who contended, that it would protect a school-mistress in disposing of the female infants under her care in marriage; when it is manifest no power of that kind is ever deputed, but is impliedly reserved by the parent. (1 East, P. C. 457.) And where a man, by false and fraudulent representations, induced the parents of a girl between ten and eleven years of age to allow him to take her away, such taking away has been considered an abduction within this statute. (Reg. v. Hopkins, 1 Car. & M. 254.)

Offence at common law.

It appears to be an offence at common law to take a child from her parents or guardians, or others entrusted with the care of her, by any sinister means; either by violence, deceit, conspiracy, or any other corrupt or improper practices, as by intoxication, for the purpose of marrying her, although she herself might have consented to the marriage. (1 East, P. C. 459; Rex v. Twisleton, 1 Lev. 257; Rex v. Lord Ossulton, 2 Stra. 1107; Rex v. Lord Grey, 3 St Tr.; 3 Chit. C. L. 713;) and post, "Conspiracy." But seduction alone is not an indictable offence.

Indictment.

No particular observation as to the framing the indictment is here necessary. The usual allegation of the girl being unmarried is sufficient. (Rex v. Moor, 2 Lev. 179; Rex v. Boyal, 2 Burr. 832.)

Evidence.

The prosecutor should be prepared to prove that the defendant took away the girl out of the custody of the parent or temporary guardian, that she was under sixteen years of age, that the taking was against such parent's or guardian's consent, and for which purpose any of these parties may be called.

This offence is a misdemeanor, and punishable by fine or imprisonment, or by both, as the court think fit. (See the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 20, supra.) Hard labour cannot be imposed.

Not triable at sessions.

Abortion. (b)

When murder at common law.

If a woman be with child, and any give her a potion to destroy the child within her, and she take it, and it work so strongly that it kills her, this is murder; for it was not given to cure her of a disease, but unlawfully to destroy her child within her, and therefore he that gives her a potion to this end must take the hazard, and if it kill the mother, it is murder. (1 Hale, 429, 430.)

And if a woman quick or great with child took, or another gave her, any potion to make an abortion, or if a man struck her, whereby the child within her was killed, though it were a great crime, yet it was not murder nor manslaughter by the law of England, because it was not yet in rerum naturâ, nor could it legally be known whether it were killed or not. (1 Hale, 433.) Though if the child were born alive, and afterwards died of the poison or bruises it received in the womb, it was murder in such as administered or gave them. (1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 16; 4 Bla. Com. 198.)

By statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 13.

But this omission in our criminal code was in a great degree corrected by stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 58: and afterwards by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 13, (which wholly repeals the 43 Geo. III.) This act enacts, "That if any person, with intent to procure the miscarriage of any woman then being quick with child, unlawfully and maliciously shall administer to her, or cause to be taken by her, any poison or other noxious thing, or shall use any instrument or other means whatever with the like intent; every such offender, and every person counselling, aiding, or abetting such offender, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall suffer death as a felon. And if any person, with intent to procure the miscarriage of any woman not being, or not being proved to be, then quick with child, unlawfully and maliciously shall administer to her, or cause to be taken by her, any medicine or other thing, or shall use any instrument or other means whatever, with the like intent; every such offender, and every person counselling, aiding, or abetting such offender, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years nor less than seven years, or to be imprisoned with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding three years, and if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped (if the court shall so think fit,) in addition to such imprisonment."

Where woman quick with child.

And now by 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 6, "Whosoever, with intent to procure the miscarriage of any woman, shall unlawfully administer to her, or cause to be taken by her, any poison or other noxious thing, or shall unlawfully use any instrument or other means whatsoever with the like intent, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of his or her natural life, or for any term not less than fifteen years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years."

And now 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 6.

In order to constitute an offence under the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, the woman must be either quick with child, or at least with child. (Rex v. Scudder 1 Moody, C. C. 216.) This is not necessary in order to bring a case within the 1 Vict. and which relates to procuring the miscarriage of "any woman," whether she was pregnant or not at the time. Indictments are now usually framed on the latter statute owing to the greater facility of proof, and we shall confine our observations under this head to the offence as provided for by that statute.

What an offence within the act, and evidence to prove it.

The poison or noxious thing must be administered, or some means used with the intent to procure the miscarriage. It must be proved according to the fact stated in the indictment, either that the defendant administered to, or caused to be taken by, the woman, the drug as therein stated; or perhaps proof of any other substance or thing ejusdem generis would be sufficient, as in the case of murder. (See post, "Homicide," Vol. III.; and see R. v. Coe, 6 C. & P. 403.)

Where an indictment, on section 2 of the 43 Geo. III. c. 58, charged the prisoner with having administered to a woman "a decoction of a certain shrub called savin," and it appeared upon the evidence that the prisoner prepared the medicine, which he administered, by pouring boiling water on the leaves of a shrub; the medical men who were examined stated that such a preparation is called an infusion, and not a decoction, (which is made by boiling the substance in the water,) upon which the prisoner's counsel insisted that he was entitled to an acquittal, on the ground that the medicine was misdescribed; but Lawrence, J. overruled the objection, and said that infusion and decoction are ejusdem generis, and that the variance was immaterial: that the question was, whether the prisoner administered any matter or thing to the woman to procure abortion. (Rex v. Phillips, 3 Camp. 74.) (a)

(a) In addition to the foregoing, it may be of some utility to give the following surgical observations on this offence. They frequently become very material in the evidence. They will be found collected in Mr. Carrington's little work on the Criminal Law, 3d edition, xxx.

Abortion may arise from various causes; external violence, any sudden shock, sudden influence on the passions, rapid and uneasy travelling, dancing, walking, &c. (3 Par. p. 95.) Sometimes the causes are constitutional; many women are predisposed to it, and females in a disreputable way of life are more so than others. (Sm. For. Med. p. 296; 1 Par. p. 271, acc.)

What are symptoms of Abortion having taken place. Dr. Gordon Smith states these to be—a bloody and ichorous [thin, watery] discharge from the vagina, the vagina itself dilated and relaxed, the labia enlarged and soft, and the os uteri (mouth of the womb) open; and the further pregnancy has advanced, there will be a stronger resemblance to the process of parturition. (For. Med. p. 300.)

Progress of the Fœtus in size, &c. From the 26th to the 28th day from conception, the embryo reaches a size that is perceptible. It is composed of two masses, the larger being the head. About the sixth week it reaches the size of a large bee, and the navel-string is formed, the twisting of which begins after the tenth week. Before the thirteenth week the sex is not readily distinguishable, as the female clitoris is so disproportionate as to resemble the penis of the male. By the end of the third month, the head is covered with down. At four months and a half the embryo is about seven inches long. After the fifth month, the abdomen seems to predominate over the thorax. At the sixth month, the fœtus

Where woman not quick with child.

In Rex v. Harley, 4 C. & P. 369, it was held that if a servant put poison into a coffee-pot which contains coffee, and when her mistress comes down to breakfast, the servant tells the mistress that she has put the coffee-pot there for her (the mistress's) breakfast, and the mistress drink the poisoned coffee, this is a "causing the poison to be taken" within the 11th section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, (a) relative to attempts to murder by poison, and the servant is therefore indictable under that act. And from the same case it should also seem that this is also an "administering" within that act; as to constitute an administering it is not necessary that the poison should be delivered by the hand of the party.

It is, it seems, necessary, to constitute an offence within the act, that the thing administered was swallowed by the woman to whom it was administered; merely giving it, if no part be swallowed, is not sufficient. In a case where the prisoner was indicted for administering poison to E. D. with intent to murder her, the proof was that the defendant gave her a bit of cake, which contained arsenic and sulphate of copper. She put this into her mouth and spit it out again, but did not swallow any part of it: this was held not a sufficient administering within the 43 Geo. III. c. 58. (Rex v. Cadman, Carr. C. L. 237, 3d ed.) (b)

It is not necessary that there should be an actual delivery of the poison, &c. by the hand of the defendant. (Rex v. Harley, 4 C. & P. 369.)

It is immaterial whether in fact the drug or other thing administered was likely or calculated to procure abortion; it is sufficient to prove that the defendant administered the drug, &c. with intent to procure miscarriage, and that the drug, &c. was a "poison" or "other noxious thing." (Rex v. Coe, 6 C. & P. 403.) (c) measures about nine inches, and the testes of the male begin to descend into the scrotum, but are not found there till the eighth. From the fifth to the seventh month, it may be born alive, but can never maintain a separate existence; but beyond the seventh month we cannot carry the consideration of abortion, the child being then on the same footing with one perfectly mature, and only deficient in size and weight; and about this time the membrana pupillaris disappears. (Sm. For. Med. p. 292.)

Of Savin and Colocynth. These are things commonly taken by women to procure abortion. They generally do not answer their intended purpose, and always do injury to the health of the woman who takes them. Savine is a shrub, whose leaves have a hot and bitter taste, and a disagreeable smell. It is a powerful stimulant, and it acts on the nerves, the stomach, and rectum, but has no specific effect on the uterus. (2 Par. p. 379.) Colocynth (also called Colloquintida, or Bitter Apple) is bitter in taste, and is a powerful drastic purgative. (Id. p. 377.) For these there are no chemical tests.

As to symptoms of pregnancy and diseases that have the effects of recent delivery, see post, "Children, Concealing Birth of."

(a) Post, "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. V.

(b) This same case is also reported in 1 R. & Moody, 114, but the two reports differ very materially; for by the latter, it should seem necessary, to constitute the offence, that the poison should be swallowed. According to the report of Rex v. Harley, 4 C. & P. 369, the former report in Mr. Carrington's work on the Criminal Law is the correct one.

(c) See Rex v. Phillips, 3 Camp. 74, which was an indictment under the 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 2. In this case, witnesses having been called on behalf of the prisoner to prove that the shrub he used was not savin, the counsel for the prosecution insisted that he might, notwithstanding, be found guilty upon the last count of the indictment, which charged, that he administered a large quantity "of a certain mixture, to the jurors unknown, then and there being a noxious and destructive thing." The prisoner's counsel objected, that unless the shrub was savin, there was no evidence that the mixture was "noxious and destructive." Lawrence, J. held, that in an indictment on this clause of the statute it was improper to introduce these words; and that though they had been introduced, it was not necessary to prove them. And he further said, "it is immaterial whether the shrub was savin or not, or whether or not it was capable of procuring abortion, or even whether the woman was actually with child. If the prisoner believed at the time that it would procure abortion, and administered it with that intent, the case is within the statute, and he is guilty of the offence laid to his charge."

Where woman not quick with child.

The defendant, if not convicted of the felony, may be found guilty of an assault, if the evidence shall warrant such a finding. (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11.) The enactment is as follows: "That on the trial of any person for any of the offences thereinbefore mentioned, or for any felony whatever, where the crime charged shall include an assault against the person, it shall be lawful for the jury to acquit of the felony, and to find a verdict of guilty of assault against the person indicted, if the evidence shall warrant such finding, and when such verdict shall be found, the Court shall have power to imprison the person so found guilty of an assault for any term not exceeding three years."

Defendant may be found guilty of an assault.

Offence not triable at sessions.

The punishment is transportation for life, or for any term not less than fifteen years, or imprisonment for any term not exceeding three years, at the discretion of the Court, (ante, p. 11,) with or without hard labour, or with or without solitary confinement for any portion of such imprisonment, with hard labour not exceeding one month at one time, nor three months in any one year. (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 8.)

Punishment.

If found guilty of an assault only, imprisonment for any term not exceeding three years. (Id. s. 11.)

Principals in the second degree and accessaries before the fact are punishable in the same manner as principals in the first degree; and accessaries after the fact are liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, which imprisonment may be regulated as before. I. Of Principals in General.

(1.) Of Principals in general.

In order to ascertain who are accessaries, it will be expedient to inquire in the first place who are principals.

Principals in the first degree.

Principals in First Degree.]—A principal in the first degree is he that is the actor or actual perpetrator of the offence. (1 Hale, 233, 615; 4 Bla. Com. 34.) It is not necessary that the act should be perpetrated with his own hands; for if an offence be committed through the medium of an innocent agent, the employer, though absent when the act is done, is answerable as a principal in the first degree. (See R. v. Giles, R. & M. 166.) Thus, if a child under the age of discretion, or any other instrument excused from the responsibility of his actions by defect of understanding, ignorance of the fact, or other cause, be incited to the commission of murder or any other crime, the incitor, though absent when the fact was committed, is, ex necessitate, liable for the act of his agent, and a principal in the first degree. (Fost. 340 ; 1 East, P. C. 118 ; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 7 ; R. v. Palmer, 1 N. R. 96.) But if the instrument be aware of the consequences of his act, he is a principal in the first degree, and the employer, if he be absent when the fact is committed, is an accessary before the fact; (R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 363;) or, if he be present, a principal in the second degree. (Fost. 349; Arch. C. L. 9th ed. by Jervis, 4.) Also in other cases a party absent may be liable as principal; as he that puts poison into any thing to poison another and leaves it, though not present when it is taken: and so it seems all that are present when the poison is so infused and consenting thereto are principals. (Hale's Sum. 216.) Turning out a wild beast with intent to do mischief, so that thereupon death ensues, the party offending is guilty of murder as a principal. (Fost. 349; 1 Hale, 514.)

(a) As to Accessaries in general, see Law, title Accessary ; 1 Russ. Crim. Law, 31, &c. 1 Chit. C. L. 256 to 275 ; Arch. Crim. Law, 9th ed. by Jervis ; Deacon's Crim.

1. Of Principals.

But if one came casually, not of the confederacy, though he hindered not the felony, he is neither principal nor accessary, although he apprehend not the felon; but for his negligence he is punishable by fine and imprisonment. (Hale's Sum. 216; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 10.)

Principals in second degree.

Principals in Second Degree.]—A principal in the second degree is he who is present aiding and assisting with a felonious intention to commit the felony, (1 Hale, 233, 615; 4 Bla. Com. 34,) at the time the offence was committed.

The presence need not be an actual standing within sight or hearing of the act: an active co-operation in the crime at the time of its commission completes the felony. As if several persons set out together, or in small parties, upon one common design, be it murder or other felony, or for any other purpose unlawful in itself, and each taketh the part assigned him, some to commit the fact, others to watch at proper distances and stations to prevent a surprise, or to favour, if need be, the escape of those who are more immediately engaged. They are all, provided the fact be committed, in the eye of the law, present at it: for it was made a common cause with them, each man operated in his station at one and the same instant towards the same common end; and the part each man took tended to give countenance, encouragement, and protection to the whole gang, and to insure the success of their common enterprise. (Fost. 350).

In case of stealing in a shop, if several are acting in concert, some in the shop and some out, and the property is stolen by one of those in the shop, those who are on the outside are equally guilty as principals in the offence of stealing in a shop. (Rex v. Gogerley, Russ. & R. C. C. 343; and see Rex v. Owen, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. 96; Rex v. Borthwick, 1 Dougl. 207.)

If several act in concert to steal a man's goods, and he is induced by fraud to trust one of them, in the presence of the others, with the possession of such goods, and another of them entices him away, that the man who has the goods may carry them off, all are guilty of felony as principals. (Rex v. Standley, Russ. & R. C. C. 305.)

All persons aiding and abetting the personating a seaman are principals; the offence is not confined to the person only who personates the seaman. (Rex v. Potts, Russ. & R. C. C. 353.) So in simony all are principals. (Baker v. Rogers, Cro. Eliz. 789.)

If one encourage another to commit suicide, and is present abetting him while he does so, such person is guilty of murder as a principal; and if two encourage each other to murder themselves, and one does so, the other being present, but the latter fail in the attempt upon himself, he is a principal in the murder of the first: but if it be uncertain whether the deceased really killed himself, or whether he came to his death by accident before the moment when he meant to destroy himself, it will not be murder in either. (Rex v. Dyson, Russ. & R. C. C. 523; see Rex v. Russell, Moody, C. C. 356; Reg. v. Alison, 9 C. & P. 418.)

So if several persons come to a house with intent to commit an affray, and one be killed while the rest are engaged in riotous and illegal proceedings, though they are dispersed in different rooms, all will be principals in the murder. (Dalt. J. c. 161; 1 Hale, 439; Hawk. b. 2, c. 29, s. 8.) All those who assemble themselves together, with an intent even to commit a trespass, the execution whereof causes a felony to be committed; and continue together, abetting one another till they have actually put their design into execution; and also all those who are present when a felony is committed, and abet the doing of it, are principals in felony. And where persons combine to stand by one another in the breach of the peace, with a general resolution to resist all opposers; and, in the execution of their design, a murder is committed, all of the company are equally principals in the murder, though, at the time of the fact, some of them were at such a distance as to be out of view. (Reg. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.)

Presence during the whole offence.

The offender, to constitute him a principal, it is not necessary that he should be present during the whole of the transaction: it is sufficient to show that he originally assented to the felony, and was present aiding and abetting when the offence was consummated, although he was not at the inception. As where the servants of A. feloniously removed goods in A.'s warehouse from one part of it to another, and B. several hours afterwards assisted in removing the goods from the warehouse, he was held a principal, since it was a continuing transaction. (2 East, P. C. 768.) If several combine to forge an instrument, and each executes by himself a distinct part of the forgery, and they are not together when the instrument is completed, they are nevertheless all guilty as principals. (Rex v. Bingley, Russ. & R. C. C. 446; sed vide Rex v. Kelly, Russ. & R. C. C. 421, and id. 332, infra.) As, if A. counsel B. to make the paper, C. to engrave the plate, and D. to fill up the names of a forged note, and they do so, each without knowing that the others are employed for that purpose, B., C. and D. may be indicted for the forgery, and A. as an accessary; (Rex v. Dale, Moody, C. C. 307;) for if several make distinct parts of a forged instrument, each is a principal though he do not know by whom the other parts are executed, and though it is finished by one alone in the absence of the others. (Rex v. Kirkwood, Moody, C. C. 304.)

Not sufficiently near to give assistance.

Persons not sufficiently near to give assistance, are not principals. Thus where Brighton uttered a forged note at Portsmouth, the plan was concerted between him and two others, to whom he was to return when he had passed the note and divide the produce. The three had before been concerned in uttering another forged note; but at the time this note was uttering in Portsmouth, the other two stayed at Gosport. The jury found all three guilty; but on a case reserved, the judges were clear, that as the other two were not present, nor sufficiently near to assist, they could not be deemed principals, and, therefore, they were recommended for a pardon. (Rex v. Soares, Atkinson and Brighton, 2 East, P. C. 974; Russ. & R. C. C. 25, S. C.; and see R. v. Stewart and others, Russ. & R. C. C. 363; and Rex v. Badcock and others, Russ. & R. C. C. 249; Rex v. Manners, 7 C. & P. 801.)

Going towards the place where a felony is to be committed, in order to assist in carrying off the property, and assisting accordingly, will not make a man a principal if he were at such a distance at the time of the felonious taking as not to be able to assist in it. (Rex v. Kelly, Russ. & R. C. C. 421.)

Where H. and S. broke open a warehouse and stole thereout thirteen firkins of butter, &c. which they carried along the street thirty yards, and then fetched the prisoner, who was apprised of the robbery, and he assisted in carrying the property away; he was held not a principal, the felony being complete before he interfered. (Rex v. King, Russ. & R. C. C. 332; Rex v. M'Makin, id. 333, note.)

If a wife, by her husband's order, but in his absence, knowingly uttered a forged order and certificate for prize money, the presumption of coercion at the time of uttering does not arise, as the husband was absent, and the wife may be convicted. (Rex v. Morris, Russ. & R. C. C. 270.)

It is not sufficient to make a person a principal in uttering a forged note that he came with the utterer to the town where it was uttered, went out with him from the inn at which they had put up a little before he uttered it, joined him again in the street a short time after the uttering, and at some little distance from the place of uttering, and ran away when the utterer was apprehended. (Rex v. Davis, Russ. & R. C. C. 113; and see Rex v. Else, id. 142.)

The offender must also be aiding, assisting and abetting, to constitute him a principal in the second degree; mere presence is not enough. Thus, if two persons are fighting, and a third comes by and looks on, but assists neither, he is not guilty of homicide in any degree, though he may be fined for a misprision if he neglect to exert himself to apprehend the offenders. (Hale's Sum. 216; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 10; post, "Arrest.")

1. Of Principals.

Offender must be aiding and assisting.

But if several come with intent to do mischief, though only one does it, all the rest are principals in the second degree. (1 Hale, 442; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 8) And if one present command another to kill a third, both the agent and the contriver are guilty. (Id.) And, as we have already seen, where many are engaged in the perpetration of a criminal act, and one of them is guilty of murder in the pursuit of their common object, all who are engaged in the riot or disorder are principals in the second degree. (1 Hale, 442; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 8.)

Where principal insane.

If the principal were insane when the act was committed, no one could be convicted as an aider or abettor. (Reg. v. Taylor, 8 Car. & P. 616)

Offender must be participating in the felonious design.

The offender must also be participating in the felonious design, or at least the offence must be within the compass of the original intention. (1 East, P. C. 257; Rex v. Plumer, Kel. 109, 117.) For if a master assaults with malice prepense, and the servant, being ignorant of his master's malignant design, takes part with him, the servant is not an abettor of murder, but of manslaughter only. So if an affray arise between two parties, and constables interfere and are killed, those who kill them, knowing their office, are principals in the first degree; those who abetted them, not knowing or having the means of knowing the constable's office, are guilty in the second degree of manslaughter only; and those who were present and concerned in the original affray, but desisted from interfering on the approach of the officers, are not at all concerned, for this was a new outrage independent of the original quarrel. (1 Hale, 446; 1 Ch. C. L. 258.)

The act must also be the result of the confederacy; and if several are out for the purpose of committing a felony, and upon an alarm run different ways, and one of them maim a pursuer to avoid being taken, the others are not to be considered principals in such act. (Rex v. White, Russ. & R. C. C. 99.)

And in order to render persons liable as principals in the second degree, the killing or other act must be in pursuance of some unlawful purpose, and not collateral to it. (1 East, P. C. 258; Fost. 354, 355.)

If A. is charged with the offence, and B. is charged with aiding and abetting him, it is essential to make out the charge as to B., that B. should have been aware of A.'s intention to commit murder. (Reg. v. Cruise, 8 C. & P. 541.)

Duelling.

In the case of murder by duelling, in strictness both the seconds are principals in the second degree; yet Lord Hale considers that, as far as relates to the second of the party killed, the rule of law in this respect has been too far strained; and he seems to doubt whether such second should be deemed a principal in the second degree. (1 Hale, 422, 452.) But all persons present at a prize fight, having gone thither for the purpose of seeing the prize fighters strike each other, were principals in the breach of the peace. (Rex v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537; Rex v. Murphy, 6 C. & P. 10; Rex v. Young, 8 C. & P. 645.)

Indictment against principals in second degree.

Indictment against Principals in Second Degree.]—The indictment may in general charge all the parties as principals in the first degree, or as being present, aiding and abetting. (Fost. 351; 2 Hawk. c. 23, s. 76; Rex v. Young, 3 T. R. 105; Rex v. Towle, Russ. & R. 314; Reg. v. Crisham, 1 C. & Mar. 187.) But there are exceptions to this rule as to the structure of indictments under particular statutes, which make the punishment different; and it is best not to charge all the parties as principals in the first degree, but to charge the principals in the second degree specially as aiders and abettors, when there is any doubt as to the evidence to prove them all equally guilty; for if one were altogether innocent, having repented of his purpose and left the others before the felony, and it is uncertain which is guilty, both must be acquitted. (1 Leach, 387.) Where a prisoner was convicted upon an indictment which charged him with a rape as a principal in the first count, and as an aider and abettor in the second, it was holden that the conviction upon the first count was good. (Rex v. Folkes, Moody, C. C. 354.) A., B. and C. were indicted for murder, in the first count as principals in the first degree, in the second count A. was indicted as principal, and B. and C. as principals in the second degree; the first count was ignored as to B. and C. and a true bill found on the second count against all, and it was held that B. and C. might be convicted on the second count, though A. was acquitted. (Reg. v. Phelps, 1 C. & Mar. 180.) See further as to the joinder of principals, post, "Indictment," Vol. III.

1. Of Principals.

Trial.

Trial.]—The former doctrine, that principals in the second degree were only accessaries at the fact, is now exploded; (see 1 Ch. C. L. 256;) and in confirmation of this, principals in the second degree may be arraigned and tried before the principal in the first degree has been outlawed or found guilty; (1 Hale, 437; 2 Hale, 223; 9 Co. 67 b.;) and he may be convicted though the principal in the first degree has been acquitted. (1 Leach, 360; Reg. v. Wallis, 1 Salk. 334; 1 Hale, 437, &c.; 1 Ch. C. L. 260; Rex v. Towle and others, Russ. & R. C. C. 314; 3 Price, 145; 2 Marsh. 465, S. C.)

Punishment of principals in second degree.

Punishment of Principals in Second Degree.]—Principals in the second degree are liable to the same punishment as the actual perpetrators of the crime, and this not only in offences at common law, but in cases of felony created by statute, to which the same implication extends. (1 Leach, 64; Rex v. Royce, 4 Burr. 2076.) Though when the act is necessarily personal there are exceptions; (see 1 Ch. C. L. 252;) and some particular statutes impose on the actual perpetrator a different punishment.

IV. & 1 Vict. c. 87, s. 9, ("Robbery," Vol. V. and stealing from the person, "Larceny," Vol. III.); 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 88, s. 4, ("Piracy," Vol. V.); 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 11, ("Burning," post); and 7 Will. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 36, s. 35, (offences against the post office, "Post Office," Vol. V.): principals in the second degree in felonies punishable by these acts respectively, are punishable with death, or otherwise, in the same manner as principals in the first degree. Provisions applicable to principals in the second degree are also contained in most of the sections of the statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, relating to offences against the person; and by statutes 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 66, s. 25, and 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 84, "Forgery," Vol. II., principals in the second degree are punishable in the same manner as principals in the first degree.

Where, upon the construction of any particular statute, principals in the second degree are not punishable with death, and no punishment is prescribed by the statute, then principals in the second degree may be transported for seven years, or imprisoned (with or without hard labour, for the whole or any part of the imprisonment, and with or without solitary confinement, such confinement not to exceed one month at any one time, nor three months in any one year, 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 56, s. 4, and see 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 9, post, ("Larceny," Vol. III.) for any term not exceeding two years; and, if a male, may be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, in addition to the imprisonment, if the court shall think fit. (7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 8, post, "Larceny," Vol. III.)

Let us now consider as to—Accessaries in General;—Accessaries before the Fact;—and Accessaries after the Fact.

II. Of Accessaries in General.

2. Of Accessaries in general.

An accessary (quasi accedens ad culpam) is he who is not the chief actor in the offence, nor present at its performance, but is some way concerned therein, either before or after the fact committed. (4 Blu. C. 35.)

(2.) Who are accessaries.

In the highest capital offence, namely, high treason, there are no accessaries, either before or after the fact; for all consenters, aiders, abettors, and knowing receivers and comforters of traitors, are principals. 1 Hale, 613; 4 Bla. C. 35. Sed vide Fost. 342, contra.) But yet as to the course of proceeding, it hath been the course, that those who did actually commit the very fact of treason should be first tried, before those that are principals in the second degree; because otherwise this inconvenience might follow, that the principals in the second degree might be convicted, and yet the principals in the first degree may be acquitted, which has been considered absurd. (1 Hale, 437, 613; 2 Hale, 223; 9 Co. 67 b.)

In treason there are no accessaries.

The rule that there are no accessaries in treason does not hold in the case of inferior treasons, as those which relate to the coins, &c.; for in these no advice to commit them, unless they are actually performed, can make a man a principal traitor. (Fost. 342; 4 Blu. C. 35.)

In inferior treasons there are.

In cases that are criminal, but not capital, being below the degree of felony, as in misdemeanors and trespass at common law, there are no accessaries; for all the accessaries before are in the same degree as principals; and accessaries after, by receiving the offenders, cannot be in law under any penalties as accessaries, unless the acts of parliament that inflict those penalties do expressly extend to receivers or comforters, as some do. (1 Hale, 613; 12 Rep. 81; Evans's case, Fost. 73; 4 Bla. C. 36.)

In offences below felony no accessaries.

By the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 55, it is enacted, that if any person shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, the stealing, taking, obtaining, or converting whereof is made an indictable misdemeanor by this act, (relating to larceny and acts connected therewith,) such person knowing the same to have been unlawfully stolen, taken, obtained or converted, every such receiver shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be indicted and convicted thereof. See this provision in full, post, with provisions as to the trial and punishment of offenders. See also the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 61, and 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 26, ante, 18, enacting the liability and punishment of accessaries before and after the fact in felonies and misdemeanors under those acts.

If indeed the act of the receiver amount to a rescue, or to the obstructing an officer of justice in the execution of his duty, or the like, he would undoubtedly be indictable for it as for a misdemeanor. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 4.)

In this respect the highest and lowest offences are alike; the former, as it should seem, on account of the magnitude and danger of the guilt; the latter, because the crime is so small that the law does not condescend to mark the minor shades of distinction.

Therefore the business of this title of accessary refers only to capital felonies, whether by the common law or by act of parliament.

Accessaries only in capital felonies.

Concerning which, Lord Coke observes generally, that when an offence is felony, either by the common law or by statute, all accessaries both before and after are incidently included. (3 Inst. 59.)

When implied in felony.

But as to felonies by act of parliament, Lord Hale distinguishes thereupon as follows; regularly (he says) if an act of parliament enacts an offence to be felony, though it mention nothing of accessaries before or after, yet virtually and consequently those that counsel or command the offence are accessaries before, and those that knowingly receive the offender are accessaries after. (1 Hale, 613.) But if the act of parliament, that makes the felony, in express terms comprehend accessaries before, and make no mention of accessaries after, namely, receivers or comforters, there it seems there can be no accessaries after; for the expression of procurers, counsellors, abettors, all which import accessaries before, makes it evident that the law-makers did not intend to include accessaries after, which is an offence of a lower degree than acces-

In felonies by statute.

2. Of Accessaries in general.

saries before. (1 Hale, 614.) Yet, says Mr. Hawkins, I take it to be settled at this day, that in these and all other cases, where a statute makes any offence treason or felony, it involves the receiver of the offender in the same guilt with himself, in the same manner as in treason or felony at common law, unless there be an express provision to the contrary. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 14.)

And although it be generally true that an act of parliament, creating a felony, renders, consequentially, accessaries before and after within the same penalty, yet the special penning of the act sometimes varies the case. (1 Hale, 614.) Thus the statute of 27 Eliz. c. 2, made the coming in of a Jesuit treason, the receiving or relieving of him felony, the contributing of money to his relief a præmunire. So that acts of parliament may diversify the offences of accessary or principal, according to the various penning thereof, and so have done in many cases. (1 Hale, 615.)

A statute which excluded the principals from the benefit of clergy did not thereby exclude the accessaries before or after; neither did a statute excluding the accessaries thereby exclude the principals. (2 Hawk. c. 33, s. 26.)

Accessary to an accessary.

There may be an accessary to a person who was accessary before the fact. —As if A. advise and procure B. to murder C.; by this A. is accessary before the fact; and though but accessary, yet if D. receives and conceals him from justice, D. hereby becomes an accessary; but there cannot be an accessary to a person who was accessary after the fact. (3 P. Wms. 475; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 1.)

III. Of Accessaries before the Fact.

(3.) Accessary before the fact.

An accessary before the fact committed is he that, being absent at the time of the felony committed, doth yet procure, counsel, command, or abet, another to commit a felony. (1 Hale, 615.)

Must be absent.

Being absent at the time of the Felony committed.]—For if he be present, he is not an accessary, but a principal.—As if divers come to commit an unlawful act, and be present at the time of the felony committed, though one of them only doth it, they are all principals. (Hale's Sum. 215; ante, 15.) So if one present move the other to strike; or if one present did nothing, but yet came to assist the party if needful; or if one hold the party while the felon strikes him; or if one present deliver his weapon to the other that strikes: for they are present aiding, abetting, or comforting. (Hale's Sum. 216.) And we have already seen what is a sufficient presence to constitute a party an offender as a principal. (ante, 15, 16.)

Must procure, counsel and abet.

Procure, counsel, command, or abet.] Lord Coke and Mr. J. Foster considered the word command as comprehending all those who incite, procure, set on, or stir up, any other to do the fact. (2 East's P. C. 641.) But here note some diversities: As,—

(1) When the principal doth not accomplish the fact altogether in the same sort as it was beforehand agreed between him and the accessary; and therefore if one command another to lay hold upon a third person, and he lays hold upon him and robs him, the person commanding is not accessary to the robbery, for his command might have been performed without any robbery. (Dalt. c. 161, p. 369; and see 1 Ch. C. L. 262.)

But if the command had been to beat him, and the party commanded doth kill him, or beat him so that he dieth thereof; the person commanding shall be accessary to the murder; for it is a hazard in beating a man that he may die thereof. (Id.) Sed query, if this does not mean where the command was to beat the other violently. (See 1 Hale, 442; 1 East, P. C. 257.)

(2) He that commandeth or counselleth any evil or unlawful act to be done, shall be adjudged accessary to all that shall ensue upon the same evil act, but not to any other distinct thing. As if one command another to steal a horse, and he stealeth an ox; or to rob a man by the highway of his money, and he robs him in his house of his plate; or to burn such a one's house, and he burneth the house of another: these are other acts and felonies than he commanded to be done, and therefore he shall not be adjudged accessary to them. (Id.)

3. Of Accessaries before the fact.

(3) But if a person commit the same felony which another did command or counsel to be done, though he doth it another time, or in another place, or in another sort than was commanded or counselled, yet here such person commanding or counselling shall be accessary. As if he doth counsel to kill a man by poison, and he kills him with a dagger; or to kill him by the highway, and he kills him in his house; or to kill him one day, and he kills him on another day; in these and the like cases he shall be accessary to the murder (id.); for the means used are immaterial so that the criminal object be effected.

(4) Those offences, which in the construction of law are sudden and unpremeditated, cannot have any accessaries before. As killing a man by misadventure in his own defence, or manslaughter; for in such case there can be no procuring, counselling, commanding, or abetting. (1 Hale, 847. 450. 616.)

(5) It seems to be generally agreed, that he who barely conceals a felony which he knows to be intended, is guilty only of a misprision of felony, and shall not be adjudged an accessary; for this is not procuring, counselling, or abetting. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 23.)

Thus words that seem to imply mere permission, as if one informs another that he is about to commit a felony, and the latter replies, "You may do your pleasure for me," this does not implicate him as an accessary, but it only fixes him with the guilt of a misprision. (1 Hale, 616; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 23. 28.)

(6) Also if a man counsel or command another to kill a person, and before he hath killed him, he who counselled or commanded it repents and countermands it, charging him not to kill him, and yet after he doth kill him; here such person countermanding shall not be adjudged accessary to the murder; for, generally, the law adjudgeth no man accessary to a felony before the fact, but such as continue in that mind at the time that the felony is done and executed. (Dalt. c. 161, p. 369.)

(7) But if a person advise a woman to kill her child as soon as it shall be born, and she kill it in pursuance of such advice; he is an accessary to the murder, though at the time of the advice, the child not being born, no murder could be committed of it; for the influence of the felonious advice continuing till the child was born, makes the adviser as much a felon as if he had given his advice after the birth. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 18.)

(8) If the crime solicited to be committed be not perpetrated, then the adviser may still be indicted for a misdemeanor in having made such solicitation. (Rex v. Higgens, 2 East, 5; see post, "Attempts.")

IV. Of Accessaries after the Fact.

An accessary after the fact is where a person knowing the felony to have been committed by another, relieves, comforts, or assists the felon. (1 Hale, 618; 4 Bla. Com. 37.)

(4.) Accessaries after.

Knowing the Felony to be committed.]—There can be no doubt but that it is necessary that the receiver have notice of the felony, either express or implied; and it must be laid in the indictment, that the receiver knew that the person received by him had committed the principal felony. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 32.) Some particular evidence appears necessary to raise a presumption of knowledge. (1 Hale, 323. 622; 3 P. Wms. 496.)

He must have notice.

The Felony.]—This, as hath been said, holds place only in felonies, and in those felonies where by the law judgment of death regularly ought to ensue; and therefore ought not in misdemeanors. (See 1 Hale, 618.)

There must be a felony.

4. Of Accessaries after the fact.

And it seems if a person do barely receive, comfort, and conceal an offender guilty of any common trespass, or inferior crime of the like nature, though he knew him to have been guilty, and that there is a warrant out against him, (which by reason of such concealment cannot be executed), yet he is not an accessary to the offence; but perhaps in such case he may be indictable for a contempt of the law in hindering the due course of justice. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 4.)

The felony must be completed. If therefore A. gives B. a mortal stroke, and C. receives or relieves A., or helps him to escape before the death of B., and B. afterwards dies, C. is not an accessary, because at the time when he harboured A. no felony had been completely committed. (1 Hale, 622; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 35; 4 Bla. Com. 38.)

He must relieve, comfort, or assist the felon.

Relieves, comforts, or assists the Felon.]—In the explication of these words, several things are considerable:—

(1) Generally, any assistance whatsoever given to one known to be a felon, in order to hinder his being apprehended, or tried, or suffering the punishment to which he is condemned, is sufficient to bring a man within this description, and make him accessary to the felony; as where one assists him with a horse to ride away with, or with money or victuals to support him in his escape. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 26.)

(2) But if a man know that a person hath committed a felony, but doth not discover it, this doth not make him an accessary, but it is a misprision of felony, for which he may be indicted, and upon his conviction fined and imprisoned. (1 Hale, 618; post, "Felony," Vol. III.)

(3) Also if a man see another commit a felony, but consents not, nor yet takes care to apprehend him, or to levy hue and cry after him, or upon hue and cry levied doth not pursue him; this is a neglect punishable by fine and imprisonment, but it doth not make him an accessary. (1 Hale, 618.)

(4) In like manner, if one commit a felony, and come to a person's house before he be arrested, and such person suffer him to escape without arrest, knowing him to have committed a felony, this doth not make him an accessary; but if he take money of the felon to suffer him to escape, this makes him accessary: and so it is if he shut the fore-door of his house, whereby the pursuers are deceived, and the felon hath opportunity to escape, this makes him an accessary; for here is not a bare omission, but an act done by him to accommodate the felon's escape. (1 Hale, 619.)

(5) Also it seems to be settled at this day, that whosoever rescues a felon from an arrest for the felony, or voluntarily suffers him to escape, is an accessary to the felony. (2 Hawk. c 29, s 27.)

(6) But if a felon be in prison, he that relieves him with necessary meat, drink, or clothes, for the sustentation of life, is not accessary. (1 Hale, 620.)

(7) So if he be bailed out, it is lawful to relieve and maintain him, for he is quodammodo in custody, and is under a certainty of coming to his trial. (1 Hale, 620.)

(8) But if a felon be in gaol, for a man to convey instruments to him to break prison to make an escape, or to bribe the gaoler to let him escape, makes the party an accessary; for though common humanity allows every man to afford such persons necessary relief, yet common justice prohibits all unlawful attempts to cause their escapes. (1 Hale, 621; post, "Escape," Vol. II.)

(9) The sending a letter in favour of a felon, or advising to labour witnesses not to appear, makes no accessary; but it is a high contempt. (Hale's Sum 219.)

(10) A man may be accessary to an accessary before the fact, by the receiving of him, knowing him to be an accessary to felony. (1 Hale, 622; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 1, 3 P. Wms. 475; ante, 20.)

(11) If a man have goods stolen, and he receive his goods again, simply, without any contract to favour the felon in his prosecution, this is lawful; but if he receive them upon agreement not to prosecute, or to prosecute faintly, this is theftbote, punishable by imprisonment and ransom, but yet it makes him not an accessary; but if he takes money of him to favour him, whereby he escapes, this makes him accessary. (1 Hale, 619.)

4. Of Accessaries after the fact.

(12) It seems agreed, that the law hath such a regard to that duty, love, and tenderness which a wife owes to her husband, as not to make her an accessary to felony by any receipt given to her husband. Yet if she be any way guilty of procuring her husband to commit it, it seems to make her an accessary before the fact, in the same manner as if she had been sole. Also it seems agreed, that no other relation besides that of a wife to her husband will exempt the receiver of a felon from being an accessary to the felony; from whence it follows, that if a master receive a servant, or a servant a master, or a brother a brother, or even a husband a wife, they are accessaries in the same manner as if they had been mere strangers to one another. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 34; post, "Wife," Vol. V.)

But if the wife alone, the husband being ignorant of it, do receive any other person, being a felon, the wife is accessary, and not the husband. (1 Hale, 621.)

But if the husband and wife both receive a felon knowingly, it shall be adjudged only the act of the husband, and the wife shall be acquitted. (Id.)

(13) A person may be indicted for receiving stolen property if it remain the same in substance though the name be changed, and therefore a principal may be indicted for stealing a live sheep and the accessary with receiving twenty pounds of mutton. (R. v. Cowell, 2 East, P. C. 781; and see R. v. Puckering, R. & M. C. C. 242.)

V. Of the Proceedings against Accessaries.

And herein—first, of Proceedings in General—secondly, of the Indictment—thirdly, of the Trial—fourthly, of the Evidence—fifthly, of the Punishment.

(5.) Proceedings against accessaries.

(1.) Proceedings in General.

(1.) In general.

Formerly accessaries could not be prosecuted with effect until the principal was convicted and attainted, and such conviction is still necessary before proceedings against accessaries in general after the fact, unless they consent to such proceedings, see 1 Hale, 623; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 45; now, however, by the recent statute, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 9, accessaries before the fact to felonies are to be deemed guilty of a substantive felony, and may be proceeded against as felons whether or not the principal has been convicted. (See the provisions in full, post, 30.) But this statute only applies where the accessary might at common law have been indicted with, or after the conviction of, the principal. (R. v. Russell, Moody, C. C. 356.) And therefore a person cannot be tried for inciting another to commit suicide, although the other commits suicide. (Reg. v. Leddington, 9 C. & P. 79.)

Conviction of principal, when necessary.

And receivers of stolen goods, if the stealing was a felony, may be tried and convicted, either as accessaries or for a substantive felony, and in the latter case whether or not the principal be convicted or be amenable to justice, or may be indicted and convicted for a misdemeanor if the stealing was a misdemeanor. (7 & 8 Geo IV. c. 29, s. 54, post, 34.)

And with respect to attainder, by the stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 11, which recites, that in order that all accessaries may be convicted and punished in cases where the principal felon is not attainted, it is enacted, "That if any principal offender shall be in anywise convicted of any felony, it shall be lawful to proceed against any accessary, either before or after the fact, in the same manner as if such principal felon had been attainted thereof, notwithstanding such principal felon shall die or be admitted to the benefit of clergy, or pardoned, or otherwise delivered before attainder; and every such accessary shall suffer the same punishment, if he or she be in anywise convicted, as he or she should have suffered if the principal had been attainted." This provision is substituted for that contained in the stat. 1 Ann. st. 2, c. 9, s. 1, which is repealed.

Attainder of principal, when necessary.

If the principal be erroneously attaint, yet the accessary shall be put to cipal is erroneously attainted.

answer, and shall not take advantage of the error in that attainder; but the principal reversing the attainder reverseth the attainder of the accessary. (1 Hale, 625.) Where an indictment for receiving stolen goods averred that the principal felon had been duly convicted, upon an objection that the record which was produced was not sufficiently formal and correct to support the averment, it was held that the judgment was not necessary, and might be rejected; that the conviction was sufficient; that in the common case where the receiver is tried with the thief, there is no judgment on the thief before the verdict against the receiver; and that although the record produced was full of errors, yet an erroneous attainder of the principal is sufficient, as against the accessary, until it is reversed. (Baldwin's case, Monmouth Summer Assizes, 1812, cor. Thomson B., 3 Campb. 265.(a)) And it should seem the reversal will not now be of any avail to the accessary if he be not indicted as an accessary, but for a substantive felony according to the foregoing recent enactments.

Where a person is charged as accessary to more than one.

Formerly if a man had been indicted as accessary in the same felony to several persons, he could not have been arraigned till all the principals were convicted and attainted: but now, if a man be indicted as accessary to two or more, and the jury find him accessary to one, it is a good verdict, and judgment may pass upon him. (Lord Sanchar's case, 9 Rep. 119; Fost. 361.)

And therefore the Court in their discretion may arraign him as accessary to such of the principals who are convicted; and if he be found guilty as accessary to them or any of them, judgment shall pass upon him; but on the other hand, if he be acquitted, that acquittal will not discharge him as accessary to the others.

Accessary when may be tried twice.

By statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 9, post, 29, it is provided, that no person who shall be once duly tried for any such offence, viz. of being accessary before the fact to a felony, whether as an accessary before the fact or as for a substantive felony, shall be liable to be again indicted or tried for the same offence.

Again, the 10th section of the same act (post, 31) provides, that no person who shall be once duly tried for any offence of being accessary, shall be liable to be again indicted or tried for the same offence.

But if one person be indicted as principal, and another as accessary, and both be acquitted, yet the person indicted as accessary may be indicted as principal, and the former acquittal as accessary is no bar. (1 Hale, 626.)

It has been said, if a person be indicted as principal, and acquitted, he shall not be indicted as accessary before: and if he be, he may plead his former acquittal in bar, for it is in substance the same offence. (1 Hale, 626.) But Mr. Justice Foster observes upon this, that in the eye of the law the offences of principal and accessary do specifically differ; and if a person indicted as principal cannot be convicted upon evidence tending barely to prove him to have been accessary before the fact, which must needs be admitted, it doth not appear how an acquittal upon one indictment can be a bar to a second for an offence specifically different from it. (Fost. 362.) And the distinction is also taken in Rex v. Winifred Gordon; (1 East's P. C. 352;) and there it was held by all the judges, that W. G. having been indicted as accessary before the fact, and acquitted upon that indictment, might be indicted again as principal.

So if a man be indicted as principal, and acquitted, he may be indicted as accessary after, for they are offences of several natures. (1 Hale, 626.)

And so it is if he be indicted as accessary before, and acquitted; yet for the same reason he may be indicted as accessary after. (Id.)

No particular observations seem necessary as to the proceedings themselves

(a) The judgment upon an indictment must be taken to be good until it is reversed by a writ of error; as in the case of proceedings against the accessary. So if there be a judgment against the husband for treason, not reversed by error, it is sufficient to deprive the wife of her dower. (Per Lawrence, J. Holmes v. Walsh, 7 T. R. 465.)

against accessaries, except perhaps as regards—the indictment; the evidence; the trial; and the punishment of them; each of which proceedings we shall consider accordingly.

5. Proceedings against.

(2.) The Indictment against Accessaries. (a)

(2.) Indictment.

Since the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 9, and 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, ss. 54, 55, the points relative to indictments against accessaries, collected in the prior editions of this and other works, are for the most part inapplicable.

Accessaries before the fact.

By the former of these enactments accessaries before the fact to felonies may be indicted and convicted either as an accessary together with the principal, or after conviction of the principal, or he may be indicted for a substantive felony, whether or not the principal has been convicted or is amenable to justice. (See ante, 23, 24, and the words of the act, post, 30.)

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 61, and 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 26, accessaries before the fact to misdemeanors punishable under those acts may be indicted as principals. (See these enactments, "Larceny," Vol. III; and "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. V.)

Accessaries after the fact.

With respect to accessaries after the fact, it has been already observed that at common law an accessary could not be tried without his consent before the conviction of his principal; (Fost. 365; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 45; 1 Hale, 623; ante, 23); and this is still law in the case of accessaries after the fact, except in particular cases of receivers of stolen property, provided for by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 54 & 55, (post, 34.)

By the first of these sections (54) accessaries after the fact to receiving stolen property as therein mentioned, the stealing whereof amounts to a felony, may be indicted and convicted as such accessary after the fact, or for a substantive felony, and in the latter case, whether or not the principal has been convicted or is amenable to justice. (See this enactment in full, post, 34.)

Also by the other section (55) the receiver of stolen property, the stealing whereof is a misdemeanor, by that act may be indicted and convicted of a misdemeanor, whether the principal has been convicted or not, or whether or not he be amenable to justice. (b) (See this enactment in full, post, 34.)

Venue.

With respect to the venue in the indictment, see post, 29.

Choice of remedies.

The prosecutor has now the option, in prosecuting an accessary before the fact, to indict him either as an accessary in an indictment against him with the principal, or to indict him alone as an accessary after the conviction of the principal, or to indict him alone for a substantive felony. In the choice of these remedies it would be best to adopt the first, as the prosecutor would

(a) As to the framing of indictments in general, see post, "Indictment," Vol. III.

(b) Formerly where the principal was amenable to justice, the receiver ought still to have been prosecuted as an accessary to the felony, and not for a misdemeanor only, under the 3 W. & M. c. 9, s. 4, and 5 Anne, c. 31, s. 6. By all the judges, 2 MS. Sum. 309; Fost. 373. Thus Jonathan Wild was indicted for a misdemeanor, in receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen. Upon the prosecutor's evidence it appeared that the felons had been convicted and executed. Whereupon it was objected that this indictment would not lie, being only given in case where the felon cannot be taken, this being only a jurisdiction given under these particular circumstances. And Pratt, C. J., being of that opinion, the defendant was acquitted. Jonathan Wild's case, O. B. 5 Geo. I. 2 East's P. C. 746. W. Wilkes was convicted on statute 3 W. & M. c. 9, s. 4, and 5 Anne, c. 31, s. 6, as for a misdemeanor in receiving stolen goods; but it appearing that the prosecutor had had an opportunity of taking the principal, which he had neglected to do, though the latter could not be taken at the time of finding the indictment, judgment was respited until the opinion of the judges could be taken. In Trinity Term, 1774, seven of the judges against four were of opinion that there ought to be judgment on the conviction. The four other judges thought that where a prosecutor had it once in his power to take the principal, and neglected it, it took the case out of the sta-only have to prove the guilt and not to procure the conviction (a) of the principal, as he would under the second.

In prosecuting an accessary after the fact, unless in the cases provided for by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, ss. 54, 55, (ante, 25, post, 34,) he must be indicted as such accessary either with the principal, or without him if the principal has been convicted; (1 Hale, 623;) the former course being the most usual and best. If he be indicted under the cases provided for by the above provisions, the prosecutor has the same choice of remedies as he has against an accessary before the fact.

Joinder of offences.

It is no objection in point of law that an indictment charges prisoners in one count as principals and in another as receivers. (R. v. Galloway, R. & M. C. C. 235.)

Or that the prisoners are tried without having the prosecutor put to his election on which charge to proceed, though the prisoners asked it. (Id.)

But semble, it is reasonable to put the prosecutor to his election, and the officers ought not to join both charges. (Id.)

When the principal does not appear to take his trial, but the accessary does, the latter is not compellable to plead. (Reg. v. Ashmell, 9 C. & P. 236.)

Against principal and accessary jointly.

Indictment against Accessary together with his Principal.]—Where the parties are thus joined in the same proceeding, the proper course is first to state the guilt of the principal according to the facts as if he alone had been concerned, and then in case of accessaries before the fact to aver "that C. D. late of, &c. (the procurer) before the committing of the said felony and murder, (or burglary, as the case is,) in form aforesaid, to wit, on, &c. with force and arms, &c did maliciously and feloniously incite, move, procure, aid, and abet, (or counsel, hire and command, following the words of the statute if the defendant be made an accessary thereby, or else the effect of such words, see Rex v. Grevil, 1 And. 195,) the said A. B. (the principal felon) to do and commit the said felony and murder, and in manner aforesaid against the peace," &c. See form, post, 42.

And where a man is indicted as accessary after the fact together with his principal, the original felony is to be stated in the same way, and the conclusion must aver that the accessary did receive, harbour, and maintain, &c. the principal felon, well knowing that he had committed the felony; see form, post, 41. The averment of knowledge is indispensably requisite, because without it the guilt does not manifestly appear. (1 Hale, 622; Com. Dig. Justices, t. 2; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 33; c. 25, s. 67; R. v. Thompson, 2 Lev. 308.)

Indictment.

A person may be indicted for receiving stolen property, if it remain the same in substance, though the name be changed: and, therefore, a principal may be indicted for the stealing of a live sheep, and the accessary with receiving twenty pounds of mutton. (Rex v. Cowell and Green, 2 East's P. C. 781; R v. Puckering, R. & M. C. C. 242.)

In an indictment against the receiver of stolen property, the property stated to have been received should agree with that averred to be stolen; but in Morris's case, Leach, 525, where the indictment charged the principal with stealing two bank notes, the property of S. S., and charged the accessary with receiving the said notes, the property and chattels of the said S. S., it was holden that the word "chattels" might be rejected as surplusage.

It is not necessary to use the word "accessary" in the indictment, (Rex v. Burridge, Plow. 477,) or to set forth the means by which the accessary before the fact incited the principal to commit the felony, or the accessary after tutes. But the seven held that the word "cannot" in the statute, must be applied to the time of the prosecution for the misdemeanor, if the principal be then without collusion out of custody, which was the case here, Wilkes's case, Warwick Lent Ass. 1774, 2 East's P. C. 746. This was remedied by the 22 Geo. III. c. 58, and now by the above act of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 55.

(a) As to this, see post, 27. As to proof of such conviction, see post, "Evidence," Vol. II.

received, concealed, or comforted him; for it is perfectly immaterial in what way the purpose of the one was effected, or the harbouring of the other secured; and as the means are frequently of a complicated nature, it would lead to great inconvenience and perplexity if they were always to be described upon the record. (Co. Entr. 56, 57; Rast. Entr. 48; 9 Co. 114; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 17.)

5. Proceedings against.

If two are charged jointly with receiving stolen goods, a joint act of receiving must be proved; proof that one received in the absence of the other and afterwards delivered to him, will not suffice. Successive receivers are all separate receivers, and all punishable. (R. v. Messingham, R. & M. C. C. 257.)

Against accessary alone after conviction of principal.

Indictment against the Accessary alone after the Conviction of the Principal.]—It is not necessary in this case to aver, that the latter committed the felony, or on the trial to enter into a detail of the evidence adduced against him; but it is sufficient to recite with certainty the record of the conviction, because the Court will presume every thing on the former occasion to have been rightly and properly transacted. (Holmes v. Walsh, 7 T. R. 465; Fost. 365.)

It is sufficient in an indictment for felony against a receiver of stolen goods, to state, that the principal was "tried and duly convicted," without going on to show what judgment was passed upon him, or how he was delivered. (Hyman's case, 2 Leach, 925.)

Against accessary alone for a substantive felony or misdemeanor.

Indictment against Accessary alone for a substantive Felony or Misdemeanor.]—In this case it is not, it seems, necessary to allege the original felony or misdemeanor with that particularity as to time and place as in an indictment against the defendant together with the principal. (See 1 Stark. C. L. 168; R. v. Scott, 2 East's P. C. 781.) The indictment against a receiver of stolen goods need not allege time and place to the fact of the stealing the goods; it is sufficient if they be alleged to the fact of the receipt. (2 East's P. C 780.) In this indictment it is not necessary to aver that the principal has not been convicted. (R. v. Barter, 5 T. R. 83.) An indictment is properly framed which states that the principal felon cast away and destroyed a vessel, and that the accessary incited, moved, aided, counselled, hired, and commanded him to do it; and the accessary may be convicted on an indictment so framed, although the principal felon has not been tried, and does not appear to be amenable to justice. (Reg. v. Wallace, 1 C. & M. 200.) In other respects the indictment will assimilate that against principal and accessary jointly. (See form, post, 43.)

If the principal felon be unknown, the indictment may state the offence to have been committed by "some person or persons to the jurors aforesaid unknown." Thus in the case of John Thomas, the indictment was for receiving goods stolen by persons unknown, which was objected to be insufficient, in not ascertaining the principal thief, and that it ought to appear to whom in particular the prisoner was accessary. This objection being referred to the judges, they were unanimously of opinion that the indictment was good; that the great view of the statutes was to reach the receivers where the principal thieves could not easily be discovered. (R. v. Thomas, 2 East's P. C. 781.)

Where the principal is known, it seems proper to state it according to the truth: and the common form of the indictment is to state the fact of stealing the goods by the principal, and the receipt of them by the receiver, he then and there well knowing the said goods and chattels to have been feloniously stolen, &c. (R. v. Hyman, 2 Leach, 925.) Or, an allegation that the goods were stolen "by a certain evil disposed person," is good, without stating the name of the principal felon or averring that he is unknown. (R. v. Jervis, 6 C. & P. 156.) And this in many cases may be the best mode of stating the offence.

Where in an indictment against an accessary to a felony it was stated, that the felony was committed "by a person to the jurors unknown;" and it appeared that the principal felon was a witness before the grand jury, it was held, that the indictment could not be supported. (R. v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264; Reg. v. Caspar, 9 C. & P. 289.)

If a charge against an accessary be that the principal felony was committed by persons unknown, it is no objection that the same grand jury have found a bill imputing the principal felony to J. S. Thus in R. v. J. Bush, the prisoner was tried before Mr. Baron Garrow, at the Gloucester Summer Assizes, 1818, and was convicted, and received sentence of transportation for fourteen years, but execution was stayed in order that the opinion of the judges might be taken upon the propriety of the conviction. The indictment stated, that "a certain person or persons to the jurors unknown," the dwelling-house of Hannah Wilmot burglariously did break and enter, and certain silver plate, commonly called a silver cream jug, her goods, did steal, and that Bush feloniously did receive and have the same, he then and there well knowing the same to have been feloniously and burglariously stolen, &c. Upon the trial it appeared, that among the records of indictments returned by the same grand jury, there was one charging one Henry Moreton as principal in the burglary, and the prisoner Bush as accessary after, in receiving the cream jug. Mrs. Wilmot proved that her house had been broken but once, that she had lost only one cream jug, and that she had preferred two indictments to the grand jury. The counsel for the prosecution had declined to proceed on the indictment against Moreton. Ludlow, for the prisoner, objected, that the allegation in the present indictment, that the person or persons who committed the burglary were unknown to the jurors, is negatived by the other record, and that the prisoner was entitled to be acquitted. This point was reserved for the opinion of the judges, who, in Michaelmas Term, 1818, held the conviction right, being of opinion that the finding by the grand jury of the bill imputing the principal felony to J S. was no objection to the second indictment, although it stated the principal felony to have been committed by certain persons to the jurors aforesaid unknown. (R. v. Bush, R. & R. C. C. 372.)

In a late case it was made a question, but not decided, whether upon a charge of receiving from T. S., the receipt from T. S. must be proved, the statute making it criminal without regard to the person from whom the stolen property is received. (R. v. Messingham, R. & M. C. C. 257.)

(3.) Trial of Accessaries.

(3.) Time of trial where accessary indicted as such with principal.

Time of Trial, &c.]—Where the accessary is indicted as such, together with his principal, which is in general the best and most usual way, it seemeth the accessary may be put to answer before the principal hath appeared; but his plea cannot be tried before such appearance, unless he desire it himself; but if he will put himself upon the trial before the principal be tried he may, and his acquittal or conviction upon such trial is good. (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 45; 1 Hale, 623.) But it seemeth necessary in such case to respite judgment till the principal be convicted and attaint, for if the principal be after acquitted, that conviction of the accessary is annulled, and no judgment ought to be given against him; but if he be acquitted of the accessary, that acquittal is good, and he shall be discharged. (1 Hale, 623, 624.)

If the principal and accessary appear together, and the principal plead the general issue, the accessary shall be put to plead also; and that if he likewise plead the general issue, both may be tried by one inquest; but that the principal must be first convicted, and that the jury shall be charged, that if they find the principal not guilty, they shall find the accessary not guilty. But it seems agreed, that if the principal plead a plea in bar or abatement, or a former acquittal, the accessary shall not be forced to answer till that plea be determined; for if it be found for the principal, the accessary is discharged; if against the principal, yet he shall after plead over to the felony, and may be acquitted. (2 Hawk c. 29, s. 47; 1 Hale, 624.)

Even in a case where the principal was indicted for burglary and larceny in a dwelling-house, and the accessary charged in the same indictment as accessary before the fact to the said "felony and burglary," and the jury acquitted the principal of the burglary, but found him guilty of the larceny: it seems the judges were of opinion that the accessary should have been acquitted; for the indictment charged him as accessary to the burglary only, and the principal being acquitted of that, the accessary should be acquitted also. (R. v. Dannelly and Vaughan, 1 Russell, 30; 2 Marsh. 571; 1 R. & R. C. C. 310, S. C.)

5. Proceedings against.

Formerly if a man had been indicted as accessary in the same felony to several persons, he could not have been arraigned till all the principals were convicted and attainted; but as the law now stands, if a man be indicted as accessary to two or more, and the jury find him accessary to one, it is a good verdict, and judgment may pass upon him. (Lord Sanchor's case, 9 Rep. 119; Fost. 361; 1 Hale, 624.)

And therefore the Court in their discretion may arraign him as accessary to such of the principals who are convicted; and if he be found guilty as accessary to them or any of them, judgment shall pass upon him. but on the other hand, if he be acquitted, that acquittal would not discharge him as accessary to the others; but by statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 54, and 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 9 and 10 (a), it is provided, that no person shall be tried more than once for the same offence of being accessary, if once duly tried.

Where the defendant is indicted by himself for a substantive felony, and which he may be under the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 9, the time of his trial need not be regarded as in the case of other accessaries. By that statute, for the more effectual prosecution of accessaries before the fact of felony, "if any person shall counsel, procure, or command any other person to commit any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law, or by virtue of any statute or statutes made or to be made, the person so counselling, procuring, or commanding, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted either as an accessary before the fact to the principal felony, together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted and convicted of a substantive felony, whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and may be punished in the same manner as any accessary before the fact to the same felony, if convicted as an accessary, may be punished." The section then provides for the place of trial of such accessaries, for which see infra, and concludes with enacting, "that no person who shall be once duly tried for any such offence, whether as an accessary before the fact, or as for a substantive felony, shall be liable to be again indicted or tried for the same offence." This statute only applies where the accessary might at common law have been indicted with or after the conviction of the principal. (R. v. Russel, Moody, C. C. 356.)

Where accessary before the fact is indicted for a substantive felony.

Not to be tried twice.

There is no legislative provision, as to the trial of accessaries after the fact, altering the common law principle, that the principal shall be tried and convicted before the accessary unless they consent to it, ante, 23. The common law, in this respect, therefore, now prevails; and such accessaries may be tried with their principal, (1 Hale, 623,) or separately after the principal has been convicted; and having been once duly tried, they cannot be again indicted or tried for the same offence. (7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 10, post, 31.)

Accessaries after the fact when triable.

Not to be tried twice.

Place of Trial.]—Formerly when the accessary became guilty in a county different from that in which the principal felony was committed, it was doubted, from the strict locality of offences at common law, whether he could be indicted in either; (2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 48;) but this doubt was removed by the statutes 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 24, s. 2 and 3, and 43 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 5, since repealed by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, and 9 Geo. 4, c. 31.

Place of trial.

And now by 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 9, for the more effectual prosecution of accessaries before the fact of felony, "if any person shall counsel, procure,

Accessary before the fact of felony,

7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 9, or command any other person to commit any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any statute or statutes made or to be made, the person so counselling, procuring, or commanding shall be deemed guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted either as an accessary before the fact to the principal felony, together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted and convicted of a substantive felony, whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and may be punished in the same manner as any accessary before the fact to the same felony, if convicted as an accessary, may be punished; and the offence of the preson so counselling, procuring, or commanding, howsoever indicted, may be inquired of, tried, determined, and punished by any court which shall have jurisdiction to try the principal felon, in the same manner as if such offence had been committed at the same place as the principal felony, although such offence may have been committed either on the high seas or at any place on land, whether within his Majesty's dominions or without; and that in case the principal felony shall have been committed within the body of any county, and the offence of counselling, procuring, or commanding shall have been committed within the body of any other county, the last-mentioned offence may be inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in either of such counties. Provided always, that no person who shall be once duly tried for any such offence, whether as an accessary before the fact or as for a substantive felony, shall be liable to be again indicted or tried for the same offence."

may be tried by any court having jurisdiction to try principal felon, although offence committed on seas or abroad.

Offence committed in different counties, accessary may be tried in either.

Accessary after the fact of felony.

And by sect. 10, for the more effectual prosecution of accessaries after the fact of felony, "if any person shall become an accessary after the fact to any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law, or by virtue of any statute or statutes made or to be made, the offence of such person may be inquired of, tried, determined, and punished by any court which shall have jurisdiction to try the principal felon, in the same manner as if the act by reason whereof such person shall have become an accessary had been committed at the same place as the principal felony, although such act may have been committed either on the high seas or at any place on land, whether within his Majesty's dominions or without; and that in case the principal felony shall have been committed within the body of any county, and the act by reason whereof any person shall have become accessary shall have been committed within the body of any other county, the offence of such accessary may be inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in either of such counties. Provided always, that no person who shall be once duly tried for any offence of being an accessary shall be liable to be again indicted or tried for the same offence."

may be tried by any court having jurisdiction to try the principal felon.

Offence committed in different counties, accessary may be tried in either.

Admiralty jurisdiction.

As to the place of trial of accessaries in the Admiralty jurisdiction, see post, "Admiralty Court."

(4.) Evidence against Accessaries in General.

(4.) Evidence.

On Indictment against Principal and Accessary before the Fact.]—The evidence in this case must consist of proof of the guilt of the principal, so as to obtain his conviction. (See ante, 21.) The accessary may enter into the full defence of the principal, and avail himself of every matter of fact and every point of law tending to the acquittal of the principal; for the accessary in this case is to be considered as particeps in lite, and this sort of defence necessarily and directly tendeth to his own acquittal. (Fost. 265, infra.)

Evidence.

The prosecutor must prove that the accessary had previous to the crime procured, hired, advised, or commanded the principal to commit it, and whether this were done directly, or through the intervention of a third person, is immaterial. (Fost. 125.) It must appear the accessary was absent when the crime was committed, so that he was not a principal, ante, 22; and see ibid. as to what is necessary to constitute a party an accessary before the fact.

Against accessary after the fact.

On Indictment against an Accessary after the Fact together with the Principal.]—The prosecutor should prove the guilt of the principal, as ante, 22. He must prove that the defendant received, harboured, or maintained him, as ante, 22; and knew he had committed a felony, as ante, 22. This knowledge may be proved either from the defendant's admissions, or the like, or by evidence of circumstances, from which the jury may fairly presume it. Buying stolen goods at an under value is a presumptive evidence that the buyer knew they were stolen. (1 Hale, 619.) If the prisoner, at different times, receive property stolen from the prosecutor, although the substantive charge must be confined to some one receiving, yet the other receivings may be given in evidence, to show a guilty knowledge that the goods were stolen. (Rex v. Dunn, Carr. C. L. 131; R. & M. C. C. 146, S. C.; and see Rex v. Burridge, 3 P. Wms. 439.) He must be proved to have done some act to assist the felon personally, or employed another person to do so. (Reg. v. Chapple, 9 C. & P. 355; Reg. v. Jervis, 2 M. & Rob. 40.)

5. Proceedings against.

On Indictment against the Accessary after Conviction of Principal.]—In this case the prosecutor should prove the conviction of the principal. Where the accessary is tried in the same county in which the principal was convicted, this is easily effected by the clerk of nasize or clerk of the peace attending at the trial with the record. But if the accessary be tried in a different county, it is necessary to produce either the record itself, or at least an examined copy of it. (See post, "Evidence," Vol. II. p. 391.) This is evidence against the accessary sufficient to put him upon his defence, for it is founded upon a legal presumption, that every thing in the former proceeding was rightly and properly transacted. (Holmes v. Walsh, 7 T. R. 465.)

Against accessary after conviction of principal.

But a presumption of this kind must, as it seemeth, give way to facts manifestly and clearly proved. (Fost. 365.) As against the accessary, therefore, the conviction of the principal will not be conclusive; it is as to him res inter alios acta: for an accessary may controvert the guilt of the principal, notwithstanding the record of his conviction. (Smith's case, O. B. Dec. 1783, 1 Leach, 289.) And therefore if it shall come out in evidence upon the trial of the accessary, as it sometimes hath and frequently may, that the offence of which the principal was convicted did not amount to felony in him, or not to that species of felony with which he was charged, the accessary may avail himself of this, and ought to be acquitted. (Fost. 365; and see Dannelly's case, 1 Russ. 30; 2 Marsh. 371; Russ. & R. C. C. 310, S. C.; ante, 19.)

And as in point of law, so also in point of fact, if it shall manifestly appear in the course of the accessary's trial that the principal was innocent, common justice seemeth to require that the accessary should be acquitted. As suppose a man is convicted upon circumstantial evidence, strong as that sort of evidence can be, of murder; another is afterwards indicted as accessary to this murder; and it cometh out upon the trial by incontestable evidence, that the person who was supposed to be murdered is still living: in this case certainly the person indicted as accessary shall be acquitted. Or suppose the person to have been in fact murdered, and that it should come out in evidence, to the satisfaction of the court and jury, that the witnesses against the principal were mistaken in his person (a case of this kind Sir Michael Foster says he has known), that the person convicted as principal was not nor could possibly have been present at the murder. (Fost. 367, 368; 1 Hawk. 457.)

Whatever is evidence against the principal is primâ facie evidence of the principal felony, as against the accessary. If an indictment against a receiver state the principal felony to have been committed by A. B, whatever would have been evidence of the principal felony to convict A. B. is receivable to prove this allegation on the trial of the receiver, but is not conclusive. Therefore if A. B. confessed the principal felony, that confession is admissible on the trial of the receiver to prove the commission of the principal felony. (Rex v. Blick, 4 C. & P. 377.)

After proof of the conviction then prove the defendant's guilt as accessary; see ante, 20, 21, as to what will render him one.

5. Proceedings against.

For a substantive felony.

On Indictment against Defendant alone for a substantive Felony.]—In this case the prosecutor should prove the offence stated in the indictment, and that the same was committed by the principal therein stated. As to proof of a commission of the offence by persons unknown, see ante, 27. The defendant's guilt as an accessary should be proved as in other cases, see ante, 20, 21.

Witnesses.

Competency of Witnesses.]—The principal, though not convicted or pardoned, may be examined as a witness against the accessary or receiver. In two prosecutions for a misdemeanor on statute 22 Geo. III. c. 58, the principal felons, though not convicted, were admitted as witnesses on the part of the crown. (Rex v. Patram, Bridgewater Sum. Ass. cor. Grosse, J. 1787, 2 East, 782; Rex v. Haslam, 1 Leach, 418; 2 East, P. C. 728; sed vide Reg. v. Lyons, 9 C. & P. 555, where principal and accessary are charged on the same indictment) So in Jonathan Wild's case, on a prosecution on statute 4 Geo. I. c. 11, for taking a reward to help to stolen goods. (2 East's P. C. 782, 783.) So an accessary is a competent witness against his principal. See further as to the competency of witnesses, post, "Evidence," Vol. II. p. 421.

(5.) Punishment of Accessaries.

(5.) Punishment of accessaries.

Accessary before the fact.

Accessaries before the Fact.]—Accessaries before the fact are in general punishable in the same manner as principals, for they are frequently more deeply criminal than the principal. (See Dalt. c. 161.) But there are several legislative provisions pointing out the punishment in different offences. Thus, —Accessaries before the fact to murder are punishable with death. (9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 3, post, "Homicide," Vol. III.) So are accessaries to administering poison, and attempts to drown, suffocate, or strangle, and to maliciously shooting and stabbing, with intent to murder or maim, &c. (9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 11, 12, post, "Malicious Injuries to the Person,") So are accessaries to administering poison to a woman to procure abortion, with intent, &c. (9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 13, and 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 6, ante, 11, 13.) Accessaries to administering poison to a woman not quick with child, with intent, &c., are punishable as principals. (Id.) So are accessaries to the forcible abduction of women for lucre. (9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 19, ante, 6.) So are accessaries to child stealing. (9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 21, post, "Children.") So are accessaries to bigamy. (9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 22; post, "Polygamy," Vol. V.) And accessaries to any felony, punishable under stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, for whom no punishment is otherwise provided, may be transported for not more than fourteen nor less than seven years, or imprisoned with or without hard labour, not exceeding three years. (9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 31; post, "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. V.; see Arch. C. L. by Jervis, 9 ed. 689.)

Accessaries before the fact to felonies within the statutes 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29; c. 30; 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 66; 2 Will. IV. c. 34; 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 7; c. 86, s. 6; c. 87, s. 9; c. 88, s. 4; c. 89, s. 11; and also c. 36, s. 35, as to offences against the post-office, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 56, s. 2, respectively, are punishable with death, or otherwise, in the same manner as principals in the first degree. (For notices of these several statutes, see ante, 18.)

In many statutes also specific punishments are provided for accessaries before the fact, in which cases accessaries must be punished under the particular statute; but where no punishment is provided, then accessaries may be transported for seven years, or imprisoned (with or without hard labour, for the whole or any part of the imprisonment, (7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 9, post, "Larceny," Vol. III.), and with or without solitary confinement, such confinement not exceeding one month at any one time, nor three months in any one year (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5; 4 & 5 Vict. c. 56, s. 4) for any term not exceeding two years; and, if a male, may be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, in addition to the imprisonment, if the court shall think fit. (7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 8; post, "Larceny," Vol. III. See Arch. C. L. by Jervis, 9 ed. 689.)

5. Proceedings against.

Accessaries after the Fact.]—The punishment of accessaries after the fact is at common law trivial, they being in most cases allowed the benefit of clergy. (See Fost. 372; P. W'ms. 475.) There are several legislative provisions pointing out the punishment in different offences. Thus, in abduction, bigamy, assaults, child stealing, rape, and unnatural crimes, the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 31, provides "that every accessary after the fact to any felony punishable under this act (except murder) shall be liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years; and every person who shall counsel, aid, or abet the commission of any misdemeanor punishable under this act, shall be liable to be indicted and punished as a principal offender." See titles "Abduction," "Assaults," "Sodomy," "Child," "Polygamy," and "Rape."

Accessaries after the fact.

Punishment.

In murder, by 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 3, "every accessary after the fact to murder shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding four years." See "Homicide" Vol. III.

Accessaries after the fact to offences within the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29; c. 30; 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 66; 2 Will. IV. c. 34; 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 36; c. 85; c. 86; c. 87; c. 88; and c. 89; respectively, may be imprisoned not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, such confinement not exceeding one month at any one time, nor three months in any one year. (For notices of these statutes, see ante, 18.) Where accessaries after the fact are punishable as for a felony, but no specific punishment is provided by the particular statute, they may be transported for seven years, or imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for the whole or any part of the imprisonment, and with or without solitary confinement, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 9, post, "Larceny," Vol. III., such confinement not exceeding one month at any one time, nor three months in any one year, 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5, and, if a male, may be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, in addition to the imprisonment, if the court shall think fit, (7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 8, post, "Larceny," Vol. III.)

VI. Particular Statutes against Receivers of Stolen Goods.

6. Receivers of stolen goods.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, is now the only statute in force affecting receivers of stolen goods in general. All the statutes prior to that statute are repealed, (a) and the only other acts in force on this offence are the 2 Geo. III. c. 28, relating to receiving stolen goods, &c. on the river Thames,

(a) The stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, repeals the stat. 6 Ann. c. 31, vulgo 5 Ann. c. 31, "except the special provision affecting the sheriffs and under sheriffs of London and Middlesex." And the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the following statutes on this subject, viz.—3 W. & M. c. 9; 4 Geo. II. c. 32; 25 Geo. II. c. 10; 29 Geo. II. c. 30; 5 Geo. III. c. 14; 6 Geo. III. c. 36; 10 Geo. III. c. 48; 21 Geo. III. c. 68; c. 69; 22 Geo. III. c. 58; 51 Geo. III. c. 41; and 3 Geo. IV. c 24; and it also repeals so much of the stat. 31 Eliz. c. 12, "as enacts that all accessaries to horse-stealing shall be deprived of the benefit of clergy; and the stat. 1 Ann. st. 2, c. 9, except so much thereof "as relates to witnesses on behalf of the prisoner on any trial for treason or felony;" and the stat. 4 Geo. I. c. 11, "except so much thereof as relates to the trial of piracy, felony, or robbery committed within the admiralty jurisdiction;" and sects. 7 & 8 of 44 Geo. III. c. 92; and so much of the stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 114, (Hard Labour Act,) "as relates to the punishment for receiving stolen goods, and for obtaining any property, as therein mentioned, by false pretences."

C. Receivers.

and the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 75, relating to anchors, cables, shipping, &c. which will here be noticed.

Receivers. Where stealing is felony.

In larceny, where it is a felony, with regard to receivers of stolen property, by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 54, "if any person shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, the stealing or taking whereof shall amount to a felony, either at common law, or by virtue of this act, such person knowing the same to have been feloniously stolen or taken, every such receiver shall be guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted either as an accessary after the fact, or for a substantive felony, and in the latter case, whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and every such receiver, howsoever convicted, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years, nor less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years, (with or without hard labour for the whole or any part of the imprisonment, and with or without solitary confinement, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 4, (post, "Larceny," Vol. III.) such confinement not exceeding one month at any one time, nor three months in any one year, 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5); and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, (if the court shall so think fit,) in addition to such imprisonment. Provided always, that no person, however tried for receiving as aforesaid, shall be liable to be prosecuted a second time for the same offence."

Punishment.

Receivers, where stealing is a misdemeanor.

In larceny, where it is a misdemeanor, the same act, sect. 55, enacts, "that if any person shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, the stealing, taking, obtaining, or converting whereof is made an indictable misdemeanor by this act, such person knowing the same to have been unlawfully stolen, taken, obtained or converted, every such receiver shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be indicted and convicted thereof, whether the person guilty of the principal misdemeanor shall or shall not have been previously convicted thereof, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice; and every such receiver shall on conviction be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned (with or without hard labour for the whole or any part of the imprisonment, and with or without solitary confinement, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 4, (post, "Larceny," Vol. III.) such confinement not exceeding one month at any one time, nor three months in any one year, 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5) for any term not exceeding two years; and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, (if the court shall so think fit,) in addition to such imprisonment."

Punishment.

May be tried where principal is triable, or where property found in their possession, or where receiving takes place.

Sect. 56 enacts that "if any person shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, knowing the same to have been feloniously or unlawfully stolen, taken, obtained, or converted, every such person, whether charged as an accessary after the fact to the felony, or with a substantive felony, or with a misdemeanor only, may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished in any county or place in which he shall have or shall have had any such property in his possession, or in any county or place in which the party guilty of the principal felony or misdemeanor may by law be tried, in the same manner as such receiver may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished in any county where he actually received such property."

Receivers, where taking is punishable on summary conviction

In larceny, where the original offence is punishable on summary conviction by the 60th sect. of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, it is enacted, "that where the stealing or taking of any property whatsoever is by this act punishable on summary conviction, either for every offence, or for the first and second offence only, or for the first offence only, any person who shall receive any such property, knowing the same to be unlawfully come by, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, be liable for every first, second, or subsequent offence of receiving, to the same forfeiture and punishment to which a person guilty of a first, second, or subsequent offence of stealing or taking such property, is by this act made liable."

Punishment.

The provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, as we have seen, ante, 34, extend to "receivers of any chattel, money, valuable security or other property whatsoever." So that the doubtful and difficult questions that have arisen as to the nature of the property received being sufficient to create the offence of receiving are now entirely set at rest. (b)

G. Receivers.

(b) The following are some of the decisions on the now repealed law:—

On the construction of the statutes of 3 W. & M. c. 9, s. 4, and 5 Ann. c. 31, s. 5, it was holden that they included sheep; and by the same reasoning, fowls and other animals. (2 East's P. C. 748.) But it was clearly settled that the receivers of money, were not within the words "goods and chattels" in those acts, for if every receiver of money which happened to have been stolen were liable to be called to account for it, it might be attended with serious inconvenience to the public in their general dealings; it being always difficult, and sometimes impossible, to account for the possession of each individual coin which passes in circulation. (2 East's P. C. 748.) And in analogy to this, it was ruled by a majority of the judges (seven) in 1787, that bank-notes were not within the statutes against such receivers. (Rex v. Sadi and Morris, O. B. July, 1787, 2 East's P. C. 748; 2 Russ. 1308, 1309.) And this point was considered by the judges in Rex v. Gaze and another, Russ. & R. C. C. 384. Ann Gaze was convicted of stealing certain promissory notes for the payment of money, and William Gaze (her husband) of receiving the said notes, knowing them to have been stolen; but on case reserved, eleven judges, in Easter Term, 1819, were unanimous that William Gaze was not rightly convicted, and they founded their opinion upon the reason assigned by Ashurst, J. in Rex v. Sadi and Morris, which was, that though a statute which creates a new felony will attach to that felony all the common law incidents to felony, so that accessaries thereto will be included, it will go no further, and a receiver of the goods, not being a common law accessary, is not included.

It appears to have been considered at one time, that the statute (29 Geo. II. c. 30), related only to the metals mentioned in it, when in their common or raw state, as contradistinguished from wrought goods. (Scott's case, cor. Adair, Serjt. C. J. of Chester, Chester Spring Assizes, 1798, cited in 2 East's P. C. 752; 2 Russ, 1353.) It seems, however, that metals, though in a manufactured state, were deemed to be within the statute. A case occurred at Staffordshire Michaelmas Sessions, 1816, in which the subject underwent considerable discussion. The prisoner was indicted for unlawfully receiving a quantity of brass and copper, knowing it to have been stolen and unlawfully come by, against the form of the statute, &c. It appeared in evidence, that the articles received by the prisoner were brass and copper sockets, which form part of the moveable machinery used in spinning cotton, and are from time to time detached from the fixed machinery, and carried from place to place, for the purpose of discharging the cotton twist originally wound thereon. At the time of their being stolen, part of them were broken into pieces; the rest were whole, in the state in which they had been manufactured. With respect to the latter, the evidence was rejected, on the ground that the statute had uniformly been construed to extend to articles of the description therein mentioned, in their common or unmanufactured state, as iron and lead in pigs or sheets, bars of brass and copper, &c. and not to wrought or manufactured articles. But the evidence was admitted as to the broken sockets, they being considered as mere pieces of brass and copper, to which no appropriate name could be given; and the prisoner, upon that evidence, was found guilty. It was contended, on behalf of the prisoner, that the statute did not apply to these broken pieces of metal; and it was strongly urged, that it would be an extraordinary construction to suppose that the legislature should have protected, by a statute so highly penal, articles damaged and broken, and consequently of small value. The chairman said, that whatever his own opinion might be, he considered it his duty to reserve the point for the opinion of the judges of assize; and at the succeeding quarter-sessions he stated that several of the judges had very kindly permitted him to confer with them upon the question in this case, whether the broken sockets, by the circumstance of their becoming broken after they had been manufactured, lost the character of manufactured articles, so as to fall within the statute; and that those learned judges clearly thought the conviction right. And he further stated that they were also of opinion, that manufactured articles of brass, &c. whether broken or unbroken, were within the statute. (Dolphin's case, Staffordshire Michaelmas Quarter Sessions, 1816, and Epiphany Quarter Sessions, 1817, 2 Russ, Questions on 3 W. & M. c. 9, s. 4. 5 Ann. c. 31, s. 5.

6. Receivers. It seems from the above sections that receivers may be indicted either as accessaries after the fact, or for a substantive felony; or the principal and receiver may be indicted jointly in the same manner as other accessaries.

As to the evidence in proof of the offence, see ante, 30.

Where two receivers are charged in the same indictment with separate and distinct acts of receiving, it is too late after verdict to object that they should have been indicted separately. (Reg. v. Hayes, 2 M. & Rob. 156.) Where a person knowing goods to have been stolen, directs his servant to receive them, and the servant also knowing them to be stolen does so, they are jointly indictable. (Reg. v. Parr, 2 M. & Rob. 346.) Three persons were charged with a larceny, and two others as accessaries, in separately receiving portions of the stolen goods. The indictment also contained two other counts, one of them charging each of the receivers separately with a substantive felony, in separately receiving a portion of the stolen goods. The principals were acquitted, but the receivers were convicted on the last two counts of the indictment. (Reg. v. Pulham, 9 Car. & P. 280.) A lad stole a brass weight from his master, and after it had been taken from him in his master's presence, it was restored to him again with his master's consent, in order that he might sell it to a man, to whom he had been in the habit of selling similar articles, which he had stolen before. The lad did sell it to the man, and the man being indicted for receiving it of an evil disposed person, well knowing it to have been stolen, was convicted, and sentenced to be transported for seven years. (Reg. v. Lyons, 1 C. & Mar. 217.) Where six 100*l* notes were stolen, and the party was indicted for receiving them, it appeared that the notes had been changed by the thief for 20*l.* notes, which latter notes had been received by the accused; it was held, that he could not be convicted on the indictment, as he did not receive the notes which were stolen. (Rex v. Walkeley, 4 C. & P. 132.)

Where owner of goods entitled to restitution.

The owner of the goods prosecuting the receiver or thief to conviction, is entitled to restitution of his property, except in the case of a negociable security transferred bonâ fide and for a valuable consideration. (7 & 8 Geo IV. c. 29, s. 57.)

With respect to the apprehension and discovery of receivers of stolen goods in general, see "Arrest," Vol. I.; "Larceny," Vol. III.; "Rewards," Vol. V.; "Search Warrant," Vol. V.

1355; 1 Burn's J. 24th edit. p. 23.) And in a subsequent case the same doctrine was acted upon by Burrough, J. in respect of articles which had become broken after having been manufactured. (Rex v. Wilson and Wife, Stafford Lent Assizes, 1817.) On this occasion Mr. Manley, amicus curiæ, cited from the MS. of Mr. Serjt. Manley, a note of a case of Rex v. Metcalfe, on the Chester circuit, at Mold, September 10, 1808, in which Dallas, C. J. said, "a doubt arose on the construction of this act,—whether wrought articles were within it, or whether it was not confined to goods in an unwrought state; but we are clear that the act extends to wrought goods, and to all goods mentioned in it, whether manufactured or not." (2 Russ. 1356, n. (m); 1 Burn's J. 24th edit. p. 23.)

On 10 Geo. 3, c. 48.

A question arose upon the 10 Geo. III. c. 48, in the case of E. Moses, who was indicted at the Kent Summer Assizes in 1783, before Gould, J. The indictment stated that Mr. Drummond had been robbed in the highway of a gold watch, gold watch case, a red cornelian seal set in gold, and a white one also set in gold; and then charged that the prisoner received the same knowingly, against the form of the statute. The prisoner having been convicted, judgment was respited to take the opinion of the judges, whether receiving a gold watch and such seals, knowing them to have been stolen, (being taken by a robbery on the highway,) were a felony within the act? This was first debated by all the judges in Michaelmas Term, 1783, and adjourned for further consideration to the Hilary Term following, when ten judges present (and one absent and concurring) held that the conviction was proper. Some thought that the gold in the watch might be deemed plate, (a term used in the act); others thought that was not the meaning of the act; but all held that the seals set in gold came under the word jewels. (2 East's P. C. 754.)

6. Receivers.

(1.) Goods, Cargoes, &c. of Vessels on the Thames.

With respect to the receivers of stolen cargoes and goods, &c. of vessels on the Thames, by the 2 Geo. III. c. 28, s. 12, "every person who shall buy or receive any part of the cargo or lading, or any goods, stores, or things, of or belonging to any ship or vessel in the said river, knowing the same to be stolen or unlawfully come by, or shall privately buy or receive any such goods, stores, or things, or any part of such cargo or loading, by suffering any door, window, or shutter to be left open or unfastened between sun-setting and sun-rising, for that purpose, or shall buy or receive the same, or any of them, at any time, in any clandestine manner, from any person or persons whomsoever, shall, being thereof convicted by due course of law, (although the principal felon or felons, offender or offenders, has or have not been convicted of stealing or unlawfully procuring the same,) be transported for fourteen years to any of his Majesty's colonies or plantations in America, according to the laws in force for the transportation of felons."

Receivers, &c. of stolen cargoes on the Thames to be transported (a)

By sect. 14, "if any person, being out of prison, shall, after the 24th day of June, 1762, by stealing or unlawfully receiving any part of any cargo or lading of, or any goods, stores or things belonging to, or out of, or from any ship or vessel in the said river, and shall afterwards discover two or more persons who shall have bought or received any stolen or unlawfully procured goods, stores, or things, or any part of any cargo or lading of or belonging to, or by, from, or out of any ship or vessel in the said river, after the 24th day of June, 1762, knowing the same to be stolen, or unlawfully procured, so as two or more of the persons discovered shall be convicted of such buying or receiving, every person so discovering shall have and be entitled to the gracious pardon of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, for all such felonies by him or her committed at any time or times before such discovery made; which pardon shall be likewise a bar to any appeal brought for such felony."

Pardon to offenders discovering, &c. offenders.

By sect. 18, "it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons, by the authority of this act, and without any other warrant, to apprehend any offender or offenders committing any of the offences hereinbefore mentioned, and intended by this act to be redressed, and, with all convenient speed, to convey or deliver every such offender or offenders to a constable or some other peace-officer of the county, city, division, liberty, or place, in or near to which the offence shall be committed, or the offender or offenders shall be apprehended, in order to be conveyed before some justice of the peace for such county, city, liberty, or place, there to be dealt with according to law." (See the 3 W. IV. c. 19, s. 31, post, "Police," Vol. V.)

Any one may apprehend offender.

By sect. 19, "in case any person or persons, acting in the execution of any of the powers granted by this act, shall be obstructed therein, every person so obstructing, and all such as shall act in their assistance, shall, on being thereof convicted before the justices of the peace, at the general or quarter sessions of the county or city adjoining to the said river, upon the oath of two or more credible persons, be transported to any of his Majesty's plantations in America for the space of seven years, according to the law or laws now in force for the transportation of felons."

Obstructing execution of act transportation.

In the case of Rex v. Wyer, 2 T. R. 77, the Court of King's Bench were of opinion that the prisoner might be prosecuted as for a felony for an offence under this section of the act; and they refused to bail him.

Offence a felony.

But the legislature seems to have considered it only as a misdemeanor; for by the statute 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 22, (after reciting that by the last-mentioned act, 2 Geo. III. c. 28, persons guilty of certain offences are punishable by transportation for fourteen years; but the said offences not being by the said act declared to be felony, the trial thereof may in all cases be put off, by means of a traverse, to the next sessions after the finding of the bill of indictment for the same, and the offender be in the mean time liberated, on being admitted to bail, whereby justice has been in many instances eluded), for remedy thereof it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, whenever any indictment shall be found against any person or persons for the said offences, or any of them, the person or persons so indicted shall plead to the same indictment, without having time to traverse the same, as is usual in cases of misdemeanors."

(a) See post, Vol. V. titles "Police," "Ships."

6. Receivers.

No traverse.

(2.) Receivers of Anchors, Cables, &c.

Receivers of anchors, cables, &c.

With respect to the receivers of these articles, by the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 75, after reciting that by the 49 Geo. III. c. 122, for remedying certain defects relative to the adjustment of salvage in England, under an act made in the twelfth year of Queen Anne, which act was to continue in force for seven years, and from thence to the end of the next session of parliament; and also that by an act passed in the fifty-third year of his late Majesty King George the Third, the said above-recited act (except so far as the same was altered and extended), was further continued in force for seven years from the passing of the said act, and from thence to the end of the next session of parliament, and no longer; and that it is fit and expedient that the said above-recited acts should be further continued, except so far as the same are altered by this act: it is enacted, "that all pilots, boatmen, hovellers, or other persons, who shall take up any anchors, cables, tackle, apparel, furniture, stores, or materials, or any goods or merchandize, which may have been parted with, cut from, or left by any ship or vessel within any harbours, rivers, or bays, or on any of the coasts of the kingdom, whether the same ship or vessel shall be or shall have been in distress or otherwise, and which shall have been weighed, swept for, or taken possession of, by any such boatman, pilot, hoveller, or other person, shall send a report in writing of the articles so found, and stating the marks, if any, thereon; and also an accurate and particular description of the bearings, distances, and situations, and time when and where the same were so found, to a deputy vice-admiral or his agent, at or near to the port or place where such boatman, pilot, hoveller, or other person shall first arrive with such articles, within forty-eight hours after his or their arrival at such port or place, or before he or they shall leave the port, if he or they shall quit it before that time shall expire; and shall also, within such period as aforesaid, deliver such articles so found into a proper warehouse, or such other place as the vice-admiral of each county shall appoint for safe custody, until the same shall be claimed by the owner or owners thereof, or his, her, or their agent or agents, and the salvage, together with such other charges and expenses as are hereinafter directed to be paid in respect of such articles, paid by him or them, or security given for the payment thereof, to the satisfaction of the salvor or salvors thereof; and every such pilot, boatman, hoveller, or other person, who shall wilfully and fraudulently keep possession of, or retain, or conceal, or secrete any anchors or cables, tackle, apparel, furniture, stores, or materials, or any goods or merchandize, or deface, take out, or obliterate the marks and numbers thereon, or alter the same in any manner, with intent thereby, directly or indirectly, to prevent the discovery and identification of such articles so found, weighed, swept for, or taken possession of, as aforesaid, and shall not report and deliver the same at some proper warehouse or other place, in the manner aforesaid, and within the time hereinbefore limited, shall forfeit all claim to salvage, and shall, on conviction, be adjudged and deemed guilty of receiving goods knowing them to have been stolen, and shall suffer the like punishment as if the same had been stolen on shore."

Pilots, &c. to deposit anchors, &c. taken by them, in certain places.

Forfeiture of salvage, and punishment for concealing them.

Persons purchasing anchors, &c. considered receivers.

Sect. 12. "If any person shall knowingly and wilfully, and with intent to defraud and injure the true owner or owners thereof, or any person interested therein as aforesaid, purchase or receive any anchors, cables, or goods or merchandize, which may have been taken up, weighed, swept for, or taken possession of, whether the same shall have belonged to any ship or vessel in distress or otherwise, or whether the same shall have been preserved from any wreck, if the directions hereinbefore contained with regard to such articles shall not have been previously complied with, such person or persons shall, on conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of receiving stolen goods, knowing the same to be stolen, as if the same had been stolen on shore, and suffer the like punishment as for a misdemeanor at the common law, or be liable to be transported for seven years, at the discretion of the court, before which he, she, or they shall be tried." 6. Receivers.

Sect. 15, after reciting that pilots, hovellers, boatmen, and other persons in small vessels have for many years conveyed anchors and cables, which may have been weighed, swept for, or taken possession of by them, as aforesaid, or which they may have purchased of other persons, knowing them to have been weighed, swept for, or taken possession of, without being reported as aforesaid to foreign countries, and there sold and disposed of, to the manifest injury and loss of the owners thereof: for remedying whereof it is enacted, "that every pilot, hoveller, boatman, or the master of any such vessel, who shall convey any such anchor or cable to any foreign port, harbour, creek, or bay, and there sell and dispose of the same, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony, and shall be transported for any term not exceeding seven years." Punishing pilots, &c. selling, &c. anchors, &c. in foreign countries.

Sect. 21. "The inhabitants of any parish, township, or place, shall be deemed and taken to be competent witnesses for the purpose of proving the commission of any offence against this act, within the limits of such parish, township, or place, notwithstanding the penalty incurred by such offence, or any part thereof, is or may be given or applicable to the poor of such parish, township, or place, or otherwise, for the benefit or use, or in aid, or in exoneration of such parish, township, or place." Inhabitants competent witnesses.

By sect. 28, "all felonies, misdemeanors, and other offences under this act, shall and may be laid to be committed, and shall be tried in any city or county (being a county) where any such article, matter, or thing in relation to which such offence shall have been committed, shall have been found in the possession of the person committing the offence; or if the same shall have been sold in foreign parts, then in the county or place in which the person selling the same shall reside." Trial in county where articles found, &c.

and of Scotland the 45th, at London, that is to say, in the parish of St. Dunstan in the West, in the ward of Farringdon Without, London, aforesaid, &c. with force and arms, &c. feloniously, and of their aforethought malice, in and upon one John Turner, then and there in the peace of God and of the said Lord the King being, made an assault and affray; and the aforesaid R. C. with a certain gun [tormentum] called a pistol, of the value of 5s. then and there charged with gunpowder and one leaden bullet, which gun the said R. C. in his right hand then and there had and held, in and upon the aforesaid J. T. then and there feloniously, voluntarily, and of his malice forethought, did shoot off and discharge; and the aforesaid R. C. with the leaden bullet aforesaid, from the gun aforesaid then and there sent out, the aforesaid J. T. in and upon the left part of the breast of him the said J. T. then and there feloniously struck, giving to the said J. T. then and there with the leaden bullet as aforesaid, near the left pap of him the said J. T. one mortal wound of the breadth of half an inch, and depth of five inches, of which mortal wound the aforesaid J. T. at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, instantly died: And that J. I. feloniously and of his forethought malice then and there was present, aiding, assisting, abetting, comforting, and maintaining the aforesaid R. C. to do and commit the felony and murder aforesaid, in form aforesaid, and so the aforesaid R. C. and J. I. the aforesaid J. T. at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, in manner and form aforesaid, feloniously, voluntarily, and of their forethought malice killed and murdered, against the peace of the Lord the now King, his crown and dignity; and that one R. Creighton, late of the parish of St. Margaret, in the county of Westminster, esquire, not having God before his eyes, but being seduced by the instigation of the devil, before the felony and murder aforesaid, by the aforesaid R. C. and J. I. in manner and form aforesaid done and committed, that is to say, on the 10th day of May, in the 10th year of the reign of our Lord James, by the grace of God of England, France, and Ireland, King, defender of the faith, and of Scotland the 45th, the aforesaid R. C. at the aforesaid parish of St. Margaret, in Westminster aforesaid, in the county of Middlesex aforesaid, to do and commit the felony and murder aforesaid, in manner and form aforesaid, maliciously, feloniously, voluntarily, and of his forethought malice did stir up, move, abet, counsel, and procure, against the peace of the said Lord the King that now is, his crown and dignity.

(19.) Indictment against accessary before the fact, the principal being convicted.

—— (venue) The jurors for our Lady the Queen upon their oath present, that heretofore, to wit, at the general sessions of the delivery of the gaol of, &c. &c. [so continuing the caption of the indictment against the principal,] it was presented that one A. B. late of the parish of in the county of labourer, on the day of in the year of the reign of our Lady the now Queen Victoria [continuing the indictment to the end, reciting it however in the past tense, as in the form (23) infra,] upon which said indictment the said A. B. at the session of the gaol delivery aforesaid, was duly convicted of the felony and burglary [according to the fact] aforesaid; as by the record thereof more fully and at large appears. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that C. D. late of the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, labourer, before the said felony and burglary* [according to the fact] *was committed in form aforesaid, to wit, on, &c. with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, did feloniously and maliciously incite, move, procure, and counsel, hire, and command the said A. aforesaid,"] the said felony and burglary [according to the fact,] in manner and form aforesaid to do and commit, [against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and] against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

(21.) Indictment against accessary after the fact, with the principal.

—— (venue) The jurors, &c. [after framing the indictment against the principal in the usual terms until the usual conclusion, omitting such conclusion, proceed thus.] And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that E. F. late of the parish of in the county of labourer, on the day of in the year of the reign of our Lady the now Queen Victoria, well knowing the said C. D. to have done and committed the said felony and burglary [according to the fact] in form aforesaid, afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, him the said C. D. did feloniously receive, harbour, and maintain, against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

(22.) Indictment against accessary after the fact, the principal being convicted.

As in the form (19), supra, against an accessary before the fact, the principal being convicted, to the *, and then thus:] And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that E. F. late of the parish of in the county of labourer, on the day of in the year of the reign of our Lady the now Queen Victoria, well knowing the said C. D. to have done and committed the said felony and burglary [according to the fact] aforesaid, after the same was so committed as aforesaid, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, him the said C. D. did feloniously receive, harbour, and maintain, against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

(23.) Indictment against accessary for receiving goods, knowing them to have been stolen, in one county, the principal having been indicted and convicted in another.

—— (venue) The jurors for our Lady the Queen upon their oath present, that at the delivery of the gaol of our Lady the Queen of her county of Dorset, holden at Dorchester, in and for the said county of Dorset, on before the Right Hon. Thomas Lord Denman, Lord Chief Justice of our Lady the Queen, assigned to hold pleas in the Court of our Lady the Queen, before the Queen herself, and Sir knight, one other of the Justices of our said Lady the Queen, assigned to hold pleas in the Court of our said Lady the Queen, before the Queen herself, then justices of our said Lady the Queen, assigned to deliver the said gaol of the prisoners therein being, X. Y. late of the parish of in the county of labourer, was convicted in due form of law, for that the said X. Y. on the day of in the year of the reign of our Lady the now Queen Victoria, with force and arms, at the parish of in the county aforesaid (ten yards of broad cloth) of the value of thirty shillings, of the goods and chattels of one M. N. then and there being found, feloniously did steal, take and carry away, against the peace of our said Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity, as by the record thereof remaining filed in the said court of gaol delivery may more fully and at large appear. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that A. O. late of in the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, labourer, afterwards, to wit, on the said day of in the year aforesaid, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, the goods and chattels aforesaid, so as aforesaid feloniously stolen, taken and carried away, feloniously did receive and have (he the said A. O. then and there well knowing the aforesaid goods and chattels to have been feloniously stolen, taken and carried away,) against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

(24.) Indictment against receiver of stolen goods, as for a substantive felony.

—— (venue) The jurors for our Lady the Queen upon their oath present, that C. D. late of the parish of in the county of labourer, on the day of in the year of the reign of our Lady the now Queen Victoria, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid (one silver tea-pot) of the value of ten pounds, of the goods and chattels of A. B. by one F. F. [or "by a certain ill-disposed person to the jurors aforesaid unknown,"] then lately before feloniously stolen, taken, and carried away by the said E. F. [or "by the same ill-disposed person"] feloniously did receive, he the said C. D. then and there well knowing the said goods and chattels to have been feloniously stolen, taken, and carried away as aforesaid, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

If the offence of the principal were a larceny not amounting to felony, the indictment will be in the same form as the last, merely substituting the word unlawfully for the word feloniously. But if the offence of the principal be not a larceny, then, besides substituting unlawfully for feloniously, make the necessary alteration in the above form, as to the description of the original offence; as for instance, where the offence of the principal was the obtaining goods under false pretences, instead of saying, then lately before feloniously stolen, taken, and carried away, you say, then lately before unlawfully obtained from the said A. B. by false pretences.

(25.) Indictment against receiver, where offence of the principal is a misdemeanor.

Accomplice—(Is a person concerned with others in the commission of a felony or misdemeanor.)—See "Accessary" and "Approver." As to the Evidence of, see "Evidence," Vol. II.

Accusations. See "Robbery," "Threats," Vol. V.

Acquittal.

ACQUITTAL, in its most general sense, is a deliverance and setting free of a person from the suspicion of guilt; as he that on trial is discharged of a felony is said to be acquietatus de feloniâ; and if he be drawn in question again for the same crime he may plead autre fois acquit, as his life shall not be twice put in danger for the same offence. (2 Inst. 385.)

Quashing a conviction on a penal statute for a mere matter of form at sessions is not an acquittal of the defendant, concluding the case against any further inquiry in the Court of Queen's Bench. (R. v. Ridgway, 1 D. & R. Mag. Cas. 38; R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 375.)

It is questionable whether a new trial is grantable after acquittal in any criminal case except a penal action, but the Court may suspend the judgment in order that a new indictment may be preferred. (See R. v. Sutton, 5 Ad. & Ell. 52.)

If a defendant, against whom an information has been laid for a penalty, be acquitted by the justices, the Court of Queen's Bench cannot reverse the judgment. (R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 575; post, "Conviction." See further, as to its effect in summary proceedings before justices, &c., post, "Conviction.")

As to the effect of an acquittal in general on indictments, see post, "Autre fois Acquit," and "Evidence," Vol. II.

As to the acquittal of one defendant to enable him to be evidence for the defendant, see "Evidence," Vol. II.

As to costs on, see "Costs," post, Vol. II.

As to the right to copy of record of acquittal, see Browne v. Cunning, 10 B. & Cres 70; post, "Indictment," Vol. III. and post, "Autre fois Acquit."

I Its Jurisdiction.

JURISDICTION of, at Common Law.]—The jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court is at common law confined to offences and other matters com- (1.) Jurisdiction of. At common law.

(a) As to the Criminal Jurisdiction of this Court in general, see 2 Hale, 11 to 20, Com. Dig. Admiralty, E. 1., Bac. Abr. Admiralty, D., 1 Ch. C. L. 151. As to forging hand of registrar in, see "Forgery," Vol. II. As to the evidence of the proceedings of the Admiralty Court, see post, "Evidence," Vol. II.

mitted on the main sea or coasts of the sea not being in any county, cinque port, haven, or pier. (See 3 Rep. 107; 4 Inst. 134.) Therefore if a murder be upon the main sea it may be tried before the admiral. (1 Hale, P. C. 54.)

It is plain that the admiral can have no jurisdiction in any rivers, or arms or creeks of the sea, within the bodies of counties, though within the flux and reflux of the tide; except in the particular instances of mayhem and homicide, done in great rivers, beneath the bridges near the sea, which depend on stat. 15 Rich. II. c. 3 (infra.) In general, it is said, that such parts of the rivers, arms or creeks, are deemed to be within the bodies of counties, where persons can see from one side to the other. Lord Hale, in his treatise (De Jure Maris), says, that arm or branch of the sea which lies within the fauces terræ, where a man may reasonably discern between shore and shore, is, or at least may be, within the body of a county. Hawkins, however, considers the line more accurately confined by other authorities to such parts of the sea, where a man standing on one side of the land may see what is done on the other; and the reason assigned by Lord Coke in the Admiralty case, 13 Rep. 52, in support of the county coroner's jurisdiction, where a man is killed in such places, because that the county may well know it, seems rather to support the more limited construction. But at least, where there is any doubt, the jurisdiction of the common law ought to have the preference. (2 East's P. C. c. 17, s. 10.)

In a case at the Admiralty Sessions, of a murder committed in a ship in a part of Milford Haven, never known to be dry except at the very lowest tide, and which was about three miles over, about seven or eight miles from the mouth of the river or open sea, and about sixteen miles below any bridges over the river, a question was made whether the place where the murder was committed was to be considered as within the limits to which commissions granted under stat. 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, do by law extend. Upon reference to the judges, they were unanimously of opinion that the trial was properly had; and it is said that during the discussion of the point, Lord Hale's construction of this act (in 2 Hale, P. C. 16, 17, 18,) was much preferred to the doctrine of Lord Coke, (in 3 Inst. 111; 4 Inst. 134); and that most, if not all, of the judges seem to think that the common law has a concurrent jurisdiction with the admiralty in this haven and in all other havens, creeks, and rivers in this realm of this nature, although in the body of a county. (a) (Bruce's case, 2 Leach, C. C. 1093; 1 East's P. C. 368; Russ. & R. C. C. 243, S. C.)

Between high and low water mark.

An alternate jurisdiction

Upon the open sea shore the common law and admiralty have alternate jurisdiction over the space between high and low water mark, (3 Inst. 113; 2 Hale's P. C. 17,) so that if a man stricken on the high sea die on the shore on the reflux of the tide, the case is out of the admiral's jurisdiction. R. v. Lucie, 2 Hale's P. C. 17, 20; 1 East's P. C. c. 5, s. 131.) On the other hand, where A. standing on the shore of a harbour, fired a loaded musket at a revenue cutter, which had struck on a sand-bank in the sea, about 100 yards from the shore, by which firing a person was maliciously killed on board the vessel; this was held to be piracy, for the offence was committed where the death happened, and not at the place from whence the cause of death proceeded. (1 Hawk. c. 37, s. 17; R. v. Combe, 1 Leach, 388; 1 East's P. C. 367.) If it appears that the goods were taken at sea and afterwards brought on shore, the offender cannot be indicted as for a larceny in that county into which they were carried; because the original felony was not a taking of which the common law takes cognizance. (2 East's P. C. c. 17, s. 12, p. 805; 3 Inst. 117. (b)

(a) The words "although in the body of a county," are to be found only in the latter report of Russ. & R. C. C. 243.

(b) It may be questionable however, whether such a case would not now be triable in the county into which the goods were carried, on account of the provisions of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 12, which enacts that offences begun in one county and completed in another may be tried in either.

Jurisdiction by Statute.]—The statute 15 Rich. II. c. 3, authorises the admiral "to inquire of deaths and mayhems done in ships being and hovering in the main streams of great rivers, only beneath the bridges of the same rivers nigh the sea." This jurisdiction is, however, concurrent with and does not supersede the common law jurisdiction. (2 Hale, 16, 54; 1 East's P. C. 168.)

1. Its Jurisdiction.

Jurisdiction by statute.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 65, extends the powers and jurisdiction of admiralty commissioners to the Lord High Admiral.

Lord High Admiral.

The 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 108, abolishes the chartered admiralty jurisdictions. (See post, "Corporations," Vol. II.)

Corporations.

But the practice and proceedings of the Court of Admiralty are now chiefly regulated by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65 and 66; which statutes are, however, too extensive for insertion in a work of this description.

II. Trial in.

Trial by jury of offences at sea.

By stat. 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, A. D. 1536, treasons, felonies, robberies, murders, and confederacies committed in or upon the sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place where the admiral has or pretends to have jurisdiction, shall be tried according to the course of common law, and in such places and counties as shall be appointed by the king's commission, (c) in like manner and form as if the same had been committed upon land.

Previous to this act a person who had committed an offence on the high seas or in the admiralty jurisdiction, could only be prosecuted in the High Court of Admiralty, held before the lord high admiral or his deputy, according to the course of the civil law and not by a jury, and therefore, according to the maxims of Roman jurisprudence, he could not be convicted or sentence of death given without proof by two witnesses or his confession. (See 4 Bla. C. 268; Com. Dig. Admiralty, E. 5.) This statute, it will be observed, obviates this evil.

This statute merely alters the mode of trial in the Admiralty Court, and it does not enlarge or narrow its jurisdiction as it stood before the passing of it; (Com. Dig. Admiralty, E. 5;) and it does not, neither does the 39 Geo. III. c. 37, infra, take away any jurisdiction as to the trial of offences which might before have been tried in a court of common law; and therefore an indictment for a conspiracy on the high seas is triable at common law, on proof of an overt act on shore, in the county where the venue is laid. (4 East, 164.) And as to shooting from the land and killing at sea, and stealing goods at sea and bringing them on the land, see ante, 48; and see ante, 47, 48, as to the concurrent jurisdiction with the common law.

The statute does not give the admiral jurisdiction in any river, creek or port within the body of a county; and the main question of jurisdiction arising on the statute is, whether the fact happened at any place within the body of a county? If it did, the trial must be had before the ordinary jurisdiction; for the admiral can have no jurisdiction there, unless by positive statute. (1 Russ. 144; 4 Inst. 137; 15 Rich. II. c. 3, ante, 48.)

With respect to the words in the act, "where the admiral pretends to have power," they are not to be extended to such a pretence as is without any right at all. (2 Hale's P. C. 17; 1 Hawk. P. C. c. 37, s. 11; 4 Inst. 137; 2 East's P. C. c. 17, s. 10.) Thus a felony committed between high and low water mark, after the water is reflowed, is not within the admiral's jurisdiction by these words; (2 Hale's P. C. 17;) but these words are to be understood between the high and low water marks; (3 Inst supra;) and in great rivers, where the sea flows and reflows below the first bridges, and also in creeks of the sea, at full water, where the sea flows and reflows, and upon high water upon the shore, though these are possibly within the body of the county; for there at least, by stat. 15 Rich. II. they have a jurisdiction, and thus, accordingly, it has been constantly used in all times, even when common law judges have been named and sat in their commission; but the words pretend to have must not be extended to such a pretence as is without any right at all, as if the admiral pretend jurisdiction on the shore when the water is reflowed, yet he hath no cognizance of a felony committed there. (Lacie's case, 2 Hale's P. C. 17; ante, 49.)

2. Trial in.

The jurisdiction for the trial of offences under the statute of 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, only extended to the offences therein named, viz. treasons, felonies, robberies, murders, and confederacies, and did not give conusance of any felony not a felony at land, nor to any new created felony created by statute since the passing of that act. (See Rex v. Snape, 2 East's P. C. 807; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 45.)

To remedy this the stat. 39 Geo. III. c. 37, enacts, "that all offences committed on the high seas, out of the body of any county, shall be offences of the same nature, and liable to the same punishments, as if they had been committed on shore, and shall be inquired of, heard, tried and adjudged as offences under stat. 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15."

And by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 43, relating to malicious injuries to property, "where any felony or misdemeanor punishable under this act, shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England, the same shall be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in the same manner as any other felony or misdemeanor committed within that jurisdiction."

And by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, s. 77, relating to larceny and other offences connected therewith, "where any felony or misdemeanor, punishable under this act, shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England, the same shall be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined, in the same manner as any other felony or misdemeanor committed within that jurisdiction."

And by 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 32, relating to injuries to the person, "all indictable offences mentioned in this act, which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England, shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature, and liable to the same punishments, as if they had been committed upon the land in England, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in the same manner as any other offences committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England." This provision is substituted for those contained in sect. 2 of the stat. 1 Geo. IV. c. 90, which made offences under Lord Ellenborough's act, if committed at sea, triable at the admiralty sessions; and that section is now repealed.

Also, by 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 27, relating to forgery, "where any offence punishable under this act shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, the same shall be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in the same manner as any other offence committed within that jurisdiction;" and the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 10, relating to offences against the person; the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 86, s. 10, relating to burglary and stealing in a dwelling house; the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 87, s. 13, relating to robbery and stealing from the person; and the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 14, relating to burning or destroying buildings or ships; all contain similar enactments with respect to the offences punishable under these acts respectively.

By the 11 & 12 Will. III. c. 7, made perpetual by 6 Geo. I. c. 19, piracies and felonies upon the sea, &c. may be inquired of in any place at sea or upon land in his Majesty's dominions, appointed by the king's commission. Also by the stats. 4 Geo. I. c. 11; 8 Geo. I. c. 24, and 2 Geo. II. c. 28, several piratical offences therein mentioned, and by stat. 18 Geo. II. c. 30, certain acts of hostility committed at sea in time of war, may be inquired of and tried in the admiral's court; and see 2 & 3 Anne, c. 20, s. 35.

For the acts against the wilful destruction of ships, see "Ships," Vol. V.

The piratically stealing a ship's anchor is a capital offence by the marine laws, triable under the stat. 28 Hen. VIII. and the stat. 39 Geo. III. c. 37, does not extend to that case; and the stealing is equally an offence whether the master concur in it or not, and whether to defraud the underwriters or the owners. (Rex v. Aveling, Russ. & R. C. C. 123.)

2. Trial in.

Accessaries.

Upon the statute 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, a doubt arose whether one who was accessary at land to a felony committed at sea, was triable by the admiral within the purview of it; (Yelv. 134; 13 Co. 51;) but by the stat. 11 & 12 Will. III. c. 7, made perpetual by 6 Geo I. c. 19, accessaries to piracy may be inquired of according to the stat. 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15. And by the stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 9 & 10, ante, 29, 30, all accessaries to felonies committed upon the high seas, whether the offence of becoming accessary shall have been committed within the body of a county of the realm or upon the high seas, may be tried by any court that may try the principal felon.

Mode of trial.

Judges.

With respect to the mode of trial in this court, all offences committed on the seas are tried before commissioners nominated by the Lord Chancellor, the indictment being first found by a grand jury of twelve men, and afterwards tried by another jury, as at common law; the course of proceedings being according to the law of the land. Among the commissioners are always the deputy of the admiral, or the judge of the admiralty, and two or more of the common law judges; see stat. 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, s. 1, 2. (4 Bla. C. 269.)

The mode of trial in the admiralty court is regulated by the civil law et per consuetudines marinas, grounded on the law of nations, which may possibly give to that court a jurisdiction which our common law is not able to invest. (Per Mansfield, C. J.; Rex v. Depardo, 1 Taunt. R. 29.)

Times for holding the court.

The stat. 32 Geo. II. c. 25, s. 20, for the more speedy bringing of offenders to justice, &c. enacts, "that a session of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery for the trial of offences committed on the high seas within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England, shall be holden twice at least in every year, viz. in March and October, at the Old Bailey, (except when the sessions of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery for London and Middlesex shall be there holden,) or in such other places in England as the Lord High Admiral, &c. shall in writing under his hand, directed to the judge of the court of admiralty, appoint. (Sed query if this provision be not expired.)

Central Criminal Court.

When offenders are first committed to Newgate for the offences above-mentioned, the Central Criminal Court act, 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 36, s. 22, enacts, "that it shall and may be lawful for the justices and judges of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, to be named in and appointed by the commissions to be issued under the authority of the act, or any two or more of them, to inquire of, hear, and determine any offence or offences committed or alleged to have been committed on the high seas, or other places within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England; and to deliver the gaol of Newgate of any person or persons committed to or detained therein, for any offence or offences alleged to have been done or committed upon the high seas, within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England; and all indictments found, and trials and other proceedings had and taken by and before the said justices and judges, shall be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever. The same section enables the justices and judges to order the payment of costs in the manner prescribed by the stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 27, infra.

An accessary before the fact to a felony committed on the high seas within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England may be indicted and tried at the Central Criminal Court, by virtue of the stats. 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 9, and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 36, although the person charged as the principal offender has not been committed to or detained in the gaol of Newgate for his offence. (Rex v. Wallace, 1 C. & Mar. 200.)

III. Expenses of Prosecutions, &c.

Expenses of prosecutions in.

By the stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 27, for enabling the high court of admiralty to order the payment of the costs and expenses of prosecutors and witnesses, and compensation for their trouble and loss of time, in cases in which other courts have a like power under this act, it is enacted, "That it shall be lawful for the judge of the said court of admiralty, in every case of felony, and in every case of misdemeanor of the denominations hereinbefore enumerated, committed upon the high seas, to order the assistant to the counsel for the affairs of the admiralty and navy to pay such costs, expenses and compensation to prosecutors and witnesses, in like manner as other courts may order the treasurer of the county to pay the same; and such assistant is hereby authorised and required, upon sight of every such order, forthwith to pay to the person named therein, or to any one duly authorised to receive the same on his or her behalf, the money in such order mentioned, and shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

3. Expenses of Prosecutions, &c.

This enactment puts prosecutions in the High Court of Admiralty on the same footing as those in other criminal courts, in regard to the allowance of prosecutors' expenses. See further post, "Costs."

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 36, s. 22, the Central Criminal Court Act, enables the judges and justices to order the payment of costs in the manner prescribed by the above act of 7 Geo. 4, c. 64.

IV. Punishment of Offences in Jurisdiction of.

Punishment of offences in jurisdiction of.

With respect to the punishment of offences committed in the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, it is by the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 12, enacted, "That all offences prosecuted in the High Court of Admiralty of England, shall, upon every first and subsequent conviction, be subject to the same punishments, whether of death or otherwise, as if such offences had been committed upon the land."

As to the punishment of offences against the person, &c. see the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 32, ante, 50.

V. Summary Jurisdiction of Justices, &c. other Offences in Jurisdiction of.

Commissioners or justices to have jurisdiction, &c.

By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 38, "it shall and may be lawful to and for any one or more of the commissioners for the time being, named or to be named in the commission of oyer and terminer, for the trying of offences committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England; and also to and for any one or more of the commissioners for the time being, named or to be named in any commission made or granted under or by virtue of the act of the 46 Geo. III. c. 54; and also to and for any one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the time being for any county, riding, division, or place in the United Kingdom, and they are hereby respectively authorised, empowered, and required, from time to time, to take any information or informations of any witness or witnesses upon oath, which oath they and each of them are hereby respectively authorised to administer, touching any treason, piracy, felony, robbery, murder, conspiracy, or other offence, of what nature or kind soever, committed upon the sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place where the admiral or admirals hath or have power, authority, or jurisdiction; and thereupon, (if such commissioner or commissioners, justice, or justices of the peace, shall see cause,) by any warrant or warrants under his or their hand and seal or hands and seals, to cause the person or persons charged in such information or informations to be apprehended and committed to safe custody, to remain in such custody until discharged in due course of law, or until bailed, in cases in which bail may by law be taken."

This enactment, authorising magistrates to commit or bail on charges of offences alleged to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty, is new and important.

As to the commitment of offenders, in cases of murder or manslaughter on land out of the United Kingdom, see "Foreign Country," Vol. II.

As to the jurisdiction of justices over offences committed on the high seas against the customs or excise laws, and their power of mitigating penalties, see post, tit. "Excise and Customs," Vol. II.

What an affray in general.

An affray is a public offence to the terror of the Queen's subjects; so called (according to Lord Coke) because it affrighteth and maketh men afraid. (3 Inst. 158.)

From whence it seemeth clearly to follow, that there may be an assault which will not amount to an affray; as where it happens in a private place, out of the hearing or seeing of any, except the parties concerned, in which case it cannot be said to be to the terror of the people. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 1.)

Words do not amount to.

Also it is said, that no quarrelsome or threatening words whatsoever shall amount to an affray; and that no one can justify laying his hands on those who shall barely quarrel with angry words without coming to blows; yet it seemeth, that the constable may, at the request of the party threatened, carry the person who threatens to beat him before a justice, in order to find sureties. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 2.)

Challenge to fight.

Also it is certain, that it is a very high offence to challenge another either by word or letter to fight a duel, or to be the messenger of such a challenge; or even barely to endeavour to provoke another to send a challenge, or to fight, as by dispersing letters to that purpose full of reflections, and insinuating a desire to fight. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 3. See also, post, "Challenge to Fight.")

Duel.

It should seem a duel as managed in the present times is not an affray. (See 1 Russ. C. & M. 398, n.)

Where no violence.

But although no bare words, in the judgment of law, carry in them so much terror as to amount to an affray, yet it seems certain, that in some cases there may be an affray where there is no actual violence; as where a man arms himself with dangerous and unusual weapons in such a manner as will naturally cause a terror to the people, which is said to have been always an offence at the common law, and is strictly prohibited by statute; for by statute 2 Edw III. c. 3, it is enacted, that no man of what condition soever, except the king's servants in his presence, and his ministers in executing their office, and such as be in their company assisting them, and also upon a cry made for arms to keep the peace, shall come before the King's justices or other of the King's ministers doing their office with force and arms, nor bring any force in affray of peace, nor go nor ride armed by night or day in fairs or markets, or in the presence of the King's justices or other ministers or elsewhere, upon pain to forfeit their armour to the King, and their bodies to prison, at the King's pleasure. And the King's justices in their presence,

Carrying arms, 2 Edw. 3, c. 3.

sheriffs and other ministers in their bailiwicks, lords of franchises and their bailiffs in the same, and mayors and bailiffs of cities and boroughs within the same, and borough-holders, constables, and wardens of the peace within their wards, shall have power to execute this act. And the judges of assize may punish such officers as have not done their duty herein. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 4.)

1. What is an Affray.

Upon a Cry made for Arms to keep the Peace.]—It is holden upon these words of exception, that no person is within the intention of this statute who arms himself to suppress dangerous rioters, rebels, or enemies, and endeavours to suppress or resist such disturbers of the peace and quiet of the realm. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 10.)

In an Affray of Peace.]—En affrayer de la pees (Lord Coke has it pais,) of the country or the people; and so, he observes, that the writ grounded upon this statute saith, in quorundam de populo terrorem; and therefore the printed book in affray of peace ought to be amended. (3 Inst. 158.)

And it is holden upon these words, that no wearing of arms is within the meaning of this statute, unless it be accompanied with such circumstances as are apt to terrify the people; from whence it seems clearly to follow, that persons of quality are in no danger of offending against this statute by wearing common weapons, or having their usual number of attendants with them for their ornament or defence in such places and upon such occasions in which it is the common fashion to make use of them, without causing the least suspicion of an intention to commit any act of violence or disturbance of the peace. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 9.)

Nor to go nor to ride armed.]—It is holden that a man cannot excuse the wearing such armour in public, by alleging that such a one threatened him, and that he wears it for the safety of his person from his assault: but it hath been resolved, that no one shall incur the penalty of the said statute for assembling his neighbours and friends in his own house against those who threaten to do him any violence therein, because a man's house is as his castle. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 8.)

Their Bodies to Prison.]—Stat. 20 Rich. II. c. 1, adds a fine likewise.

Wardens of the Peace.]—It is holden that any justice of the peace, or other person who is empowered to execute this statute, may proceed thereon ex officio; and if he find any person in arms, contrary to the form of the statute, he may seize the arms and commit the offender to prison; and that he ought also to make a record of the whole proceeding, and certify the same into the exchequer. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 5.)

In addition to the above statute of Edward, by 7 Rich. II. c. 13, no man shall ride in harness within the realm, nor with launcegays; and the 20 Rich. II. c. 1, is to the same effect. (a)

7 Rich. 2, c. 13.
20 Rich. 2, c. 1.

(a) The act of 20 Rich. II. c. 1, is as follows:—"First, Whereas in a statute made the seventh year of the reign of the King that now is, it is ordained and assented, that no man shall ride armed within the realm against the form of the statute of Northampton thereupon made, nor with launcegays within the same realm, and that the said launcegays shall be utterly put out within the said realm as a thing prohibited by the King, upon pain of forfeiture of the same launcegays, armours, or any other harness in the hands and possession of them that bear them from henceforth within the same realm against the same statutes and ordinances, without the King's special license. Our Lord the King considering the great clamour made to him in this present parliament, because that the said statute is not holden, hath ordained and established in the said parliament that the said statutes shall be fully holden and kept and duly executed, and that the said launcegays shall be clear put out, upon the pain contained in the said statute of Northampton, and also to make fine and ransom to the King. And, moreover, that no lord nor knight, nor other, little nor great, shall go nor ride by night nor by day armed, nor bear sallet, nor skull of iron, nor of other armour, upon the pain aforesaid, save and except the King's officers and ministers in doing their office."

2. How suppressed.

II. How far it may be suppressed by a Private Person.

Private person's power to suppress.

It seems agreed, that any one who sees others fighting may lawfully part them, and also stay them till the heat be over, and then deliver them to the constable, to be carried before a justice to find sureties for the peace. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 11.) And he may likewise stop those whom he may see coming to join either party. (Id.)

And the law doth encourage him hereunto; for if he receive any harm by the affrayers, he shall have his remedy by law against them; and if the affrayers receive hurt by endeavouring only to part them, the standers-by may justify the same, and the affrayers have no remedy by law. (3 Inst. 158.)

And if either of the parties be slain or wounded, or so stricken that he falleth down for dead, in that case the standers-by ought to apprehend the party so slaying, wounding, or striking, or to endeavour the same by hue and cry, or else for his escape they shall be fined and imprisoned. (3 Inst. 158.)

As to arrests by private persons in general, see post, "Arrest."

III. How far it may be suppressed by a Constable.

Constable's power over affrays in his presence.

It seems agreed that a constable is not only empowered, as all private persons are, to part an affray which happens in his presence, but is also bound at his peril to use his best endeavours to this purpose; and not only to do his utmost himself, but also to demand the assistance of others, which if they refuse to give him, they are punishable by fine and imprisonment. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 13. And see R. v. Browne, 1 Car. & M. 314.)

And it is said that if a constable see persons either actually engaged in an affray, as by striking or offering to strike, or drawing their weapons, or the like, or upon the very point of entering upon an affray, as where one shall threaten to kill, wound, or beat another, he may either carry the offender before a justice to find sureties for the peace, or he may imprison him of his own authority for a reasonable time till the heat shall be over, and also afterwards detain him till he find such surety by obligation: but it seems that he has no power to imprison such an offender in any other manner or for any other purpose; for he cannot justify the committing an affrayer to gaol till he shall be punished for his offence: and it is said that he ought not to lay hands on those who barely contend with hot words without any threats of personal hurt; and that all which he can do in such case is to command them under pain of imprisonment to avoid fighting. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 14; and see Howell v. Jackson, 6 C. & P. 723.)

But he is so far entrusted with a power over all actual affrays, that though he himself is a sufferer by them, and, therefore, liable to be objected against as likely to be partial in his own cause, yet he may suppress them; and, therefore, if an assault be made upon him, he may not only defend himself, but also imprison the offender in the same manner as if he were no way a party. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 15.)

A person merely standing in the way with intent to hinder a constable from preventing a breach of the peace, will not justify the constable in giving him a blow, though he may take him into custody. (Levy v. Edwards, 1 Car. & P. 40.)

If an affray be in a house, the constable may break open the doors to preserve the peace; and if affrayers fly to a house and he follow with fresh suit, he may break open the doors to take them. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 16.) It should seem, however, a demand of admittance ought to be first made.

But it is said that a constable hath no power to arrest a man for an affray done out of his own view without a warrant from a justice, unless a felony were done or likely to be done; for it is the proper business of a constable to preserve the peace, and not to punish the breach of it. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 17; see Cook v. Nethercote, 6 C. & P. 741, post, title, "Arrest.") He may however, it seems, carry those before a justice who were arrested by other persons present at an affray, and who have been thus delivered into his hand. (Id. and vide Reg. v. Tooley, 2 Lord Raym. 1206; Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Camp 367.) 3. How suppressed.

Also a constable hath no power to arrest an affrayer without warrant after the affray is ended. (Cook v. Nethercote, 6 C. & P. 741.) Constable's power over.

As to the duty of a constable in taking a party into custody for disturbance in a church, see Williams v. Glennister, 2 B. & Cress. 699; 4 Dowl. & R. 217, S.C.; post, "Church.")

IV. How far it may be suppressed by a Justice of the Peace.

There is no doubt but that a justice of the peace may and must do all such things to the aforesaid purpose, which a private man or constable is either enabled or required by the law to do; but it is said that he cannot, without a warrant, authorise the arrest of any person for an affray out of his own view; yet it seems clear, that in such case he may make his warrant to bring the offender before him, in order to compel him to find sureties for the peace. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 18.) Justice's power over.

And a justice has a greater power over one who has dangerously wounded another in an affray than either a private person or a constable; for there does not seem to be any good authority that these have any power at all to take sureties of such an offender; but it seems certain that a justice has a discretionary power either to commit him or to bail him till the year and day be past. But it is said that he ought to be very cautious how he takes bail if the wound be dangerous; for that if the party die, and the offender appear not, he is in danger of being severely fined, if he shall appear upon the whole circumstances of the case to have been too favourable. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 19; see further, post, "Arrest.")

V. Punishment of an Affray.

All affrays in general are punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 20); and a very high fine will be imposed for an affray in a court of justice (3 Inst. 141; 12 Co. 71); and as to an affray in a church, see "Church." Punishment of.

Affrays are inquirable in the leet as common nuisances. (3 Inst. 158.) Inquirable in the leet.

VI. Forms.

(1.) Warrant to apprehend affrayers.

Westmoreland { To the Constable of and all other Constables and others whom these may concern.

Whereas A. I. of yeoman, hath this day made oath before me, J. P. Esquire, one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, that on the day of in the year of the reign of our Lady the now Queen Victoria, A. O. of yeoman, and B. I. What an Alehouse, &c.; who may keep it, &c. and where.

AN inn or hostel may be defined to be a house in which travellers, passengers, wayfaring men, and other such like casual guests, are accommodated with victuals and lodgings, and whatever they reasonably desire, for themselves and their horses, at a reasonable price, while on their way. (See R. v. Luellin, 12 Mod. 445, Thompson v. Lacy, 3 B & Ald. 283.) What an inn, &c.

A beer house or shop is a house in which beer, ale, porter, cider or perry is sold by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises. A beer house.

If an inn uses common selling of ale within the meaning of the recent statutes allowing persons licenses for that purpose, it is then also an alehouse; and if an alehouse lodges and entertains travellers it is also an inn.

A coffee-house is a house where coffee is sold to be consumed on the premises, and is not of itself an inn. (Doe d. Pitt v. Laining, 4 Campb. 77.) But in the case of Thompson v. Lacy (3 B. & Ald. 283) it was held, that a house of public entertainment in London, where beds, provisions, &c. are furnished for all persons paying for the same, but which was merely called a coffee-house and tavern, and was not frequented by stages and waggons from the country, and which had no stables, was to be considered as an inn. A coffee house.

A house in which lodgers are received and provided with meat and drink under an agreement at a stipulated rate, is not an inn, although the master of the house provides stabling. (Parkhurst v. Foster, 1 Salk. 387; 1 Ld Raymond, 479; S. C., 12 Mod. 284.) A lodging house.

An hotel is a place for the accommodation of occasional lodgers, who are supplied with apartments hired for the night or by the week—it is not unlike an inn. (See last cited case, and Jones v. Osborn, 2 Chit. Rep. 484.) An hotel

A tavern is a place where wine and liquors are sold and drinkers entertained. A tavern.

A victualling-house is a house where persons are provided with victuals, but without lodging. A victualling-house.

At common law, any person may erect or keep an inn to lodge travellers without any license or allowance; (Hutt. 99; Dalt. c. 56;) and it is not an indictable offence to keep an inn without a license; (Anon. 3 Salk. 25; Watson's case, id.; Rex v. Edwards, 3 Salk. 27;) but we shall hereafter see, that where a license is necessary by statute, a restriction is imposed against some persons keeping an inn; and the statute provides a particular punishment. (Post, 82.) Who may keep one at common law.

Also, by local custom, the right to keep an inn may be confined to particular individuals, as burgesses, &c. and this, notwithstanding the recent statutes. (Mayor of Leicester v. Burgess, 5 B. & Adol. 246; 2 N. & M. 131, S. C.)

It has indeed been laid down in prior editions of this work, citing 1 Hawk. Inn not a franchise.

1. What is, who may keep, &c.

c. 78, s. 1, that no man can set up a new inn in a place where there is no manner of need of one, to the hinderance of other ancient and well-governed inns, or keep it in a place in respect of its situation wholly unfit for such a purpose; (and see Newton v. Trigge, 3 Mod. 329;) this, however, seems an incorrect doctrine, for no place is entitled to this privilege, unless it be of the character of a franchise originating in a grant from the crown. (See 2 Roll. Ab. 84, 85.)

At one time a doubt prevailed, whether an inn was not a franchise, but this was denied to be the case in 2 Roll. Ab. 84, 85.)

No common law restrictions peculiarly applicable to inns.

There does not appear to be any common law restrictions peculiarly applicable to innkeepers; (Parker v. Flintt, Holt, 366; Stevens v. Watson, 1 Salk. 45;) and though it has been said that the keeper of an inn may by the common law be indicted and fined as being guilty of a public nuisance, if he usually harbour thieves or persons of scandalous reputation, or suffer frequent disorders in his house; (1 Hawk. c. 78, s. 1;) yet this doctrine would apply to any other person. (See post, 82.)

It seems, however, an innkeeper might be indicted for taking exorbitant prices. (Kirkman v. Shadcross, 6 T. R. 7; see post, 109, 120.) There are also various other common law liabilities affecting innkeepers in a civil point of view, as will be seen, post, 88, et seq.

Alehouses, near bridges.

By the 13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 62, a person collecting tolls of a public bridge was prohibited from keeping an alehouse; but that is now repealed by the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 50. (See title "Highways in General," Vol. III.)

II. Licence for the Sale of Beer, &c. by Retail, in Beer Houses (not being Inns or Public Houses.)

The statutes on the subject.

The statutes by which the sale of beer and cider by retail in beer houses and shops is now regulated are the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64; the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85; and the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61. The first statute is in force so far as it has not been altered by the second, and the first two are still operative, unless where they have been repealed or modified by the last.

Magistrates' license not necessary.

These statutes, it should be remarked, are applicable to such persons who take out an excise license for the sale of beer and cider only, by retail, or in other words, they extend to retail beer-houses as distinguished from inns or public houses. Such persons do not require a magistrates' license under the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, (post, 82,) but they are authorised to sell beer and cider (which include ale, porter, and perry) by retail, on taking out an excise license and complying with the provisions of the before-mentioned acts.

Public house keeper need not take out a beer license.

The keeper of a common inn, alehouse, or victualling-house may procure a license to sell beer and cider as well as wine and spirits by retail, under the provisions of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, which shall be stated at length in the next section, and need not and does not usually take out a license for that purpose under the above acts.

The general provisions of the statutes on the subject.

We shall first consider the general provisions contained in these acts, whereby they are to be construed and interpreted, and which have the effect of incorporating and forming them into one code; and we shall then treat of the special provisions in detail, which together constitute the present law by which beer-houses are governed.

What is a retailing of beer, cider, or perry.

By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 19, every sale of any beer, or of any cider or perry, in any less quantity than four gallons and a half, shall be deemed and taken to be a selling by retail.

Who deemed dealers in beer.

And by the 1 Will IV. c. 51, s. 22, every person who shall sell any beer or ale in quantities not less than four gallons and a half or two dozen reputed quart bottles, to be drunk or consumed elsewhere than on the premises where sold, shall be deemed a dealer in beer. (See title "Excise," Vol. II.)

2. License, &c. for, &c.

Rules for interpretation of words.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 32, reciting that, "In order to remove doubts as to the meaning of certain words in this act," it is enacted, "that the word 'justice' shall be deemed to mean justice of the peace; and that the word 'person,' and the word 'party,' shall be deemed to include any number of persons and parties; and that the word 'license,' and the word 'day,' and the word 'time,' and the word 'house,' and the word 'place,' shall each be deemed to include any number of licenses, days, times, houses, or places; and that the word 'beer,' shall in all cases be deemed to include beer, ale, and porter; and that the word 'cider' shall in all cases be deemed to include cider and perry; and that the word 'county,' and the words 'county or place,' shall be deemed severally to include any county, riding, division of the county of Lincoln, hundred, division of a county, liberty, division of a liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, cinque port, or town corporate; and the words 'division or place' shall be deemed to include any division of a county or riding, liberty, division of a liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, cinque port, or town corporate; and that the words 'parish or place,' shall be deemed to include any township, hamlet, tithing, vill, extra parochial place, or any place maintaining its own poor; and that the word 'penalty' shall be deemed to include any fine, penalty, or forfeiture of a pecuniary nature; and that the meaning of the several words in this act shall not be restricted, although the same may be subsequently referred to in the singular number or masculine gender only." And by the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 12, and the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 20, this clause shall be applicable to the interpretation of words in these acts respectively.

The 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, to continue in force except as altered by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 20, "All the provisions of the said two recited acts, 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, shall be deemed and taken to be in full force and applicable to this act, save and except where the provisions of the said first-recited act are altered by the provisions of the said secondly recited act, or where the provisions of either of the said two acts are altered by this act."

Penalties where not otherwise directed, to be recovered under provisions of the former acts.

Sect. 19. "All penalties and forfeitures by this act imposed, except where otherwise specially directed, shall be sued for, recovered, mitigated, and applied in the same manner and by the same means as the penalties imposed by the said recited acts of the first and fourth and fifth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth are directed to be sued for, recovered, mitigated, and applied: and all the powers, provisions, authorities, and regulations in the said acts contained, for the recovery, mitigation, and application of penalties, shall, except where otherwise specially directed, extend to and be put in force, as to penalties imposed by this act, as fully and effectually as if they were herein repeated and re-enacted."

Powers, provisions, and penalties of former acts to apply to persons licensed under this act.

Sect. 21. "All the powers, regulations, proceedings, forms, penalties, forfeitures, enactments, and provisions contained in the said recited acts, or in either of them, with reference to persons licensed under either of the said acts, and to the offences committed by such persons against either of the said acts, or against the tenor of any license granted under the said acts, and also with reference to the sureties of such persons, and to persons doing the things thereby prohibited without the license required by the said acts or either of them, shall (except where they are altered by this act, or are repugnant thereto) be deemed and taken to be applicable to all persons licensed under this act, and to all offences committed by such persons of the same description as the offences mentioned in the said acts, and to the sureties of all such persons in respect of such offences, and to all persons doing, without the license required by this act, things of the same description as the things prohibited without the license required by the said recited acts, as fully and effectually as if all the said powers, regulations, proceedings, forms, penalties, forfeitures, enactments, and provisions had been repeated and re-enacted in this act, with reference to persons licensed under this act, and to the sureties of such persons, and to persons acting without the license required by this act; and also that all the powers, regulations, and provisions in the said acts contained, authorising any party convicted to appeal to the general session or quarter sessions of the peace against any conviction under the said acts, shall also extend and apply to any convictions under this act." The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 11, contains a similar clause to this, enacting in like manner that the provisions of the 1 Will. IV. c. 64, shall apply to persons licensed under that act.

2. License, &c. for, &c.

Acts not to affect the two universities, nor the vinters' company in London.

Nor to affect any license to the keeper of an inn, &c.

Nor to prohibit the sale of beer in booths at fairs as heretofore.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 29, "Nothing in this act contained shall extend to alter or in any manner to affect any of the rights or privileges of the universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or any of the powers and authorities vested by charter or otherwise in the chancellors, masters, and scholars of the said universities, and their successors, or in the master, wardens, freemen, and commonalty of the vinters of the city of London, but not to extend to those freemen of the said company of vinters who have obtained the same by redemption only; nor in any way to affect any license to the keeper of any inn, alehouse, or victualling-house, unless in so far as relates to the sale of beer by retail; nor to prohibit any person from selling beer in booths or other places at the time and within the limits of the ground or place in or upon which is holden any lawful fair, in like manner as such person was authorised to do before the passing of this act." The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 22, contains similar provisions as to the universities; and see 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 41. See the case of Reg. v. Archdall, 8 Ad. & Ell. 281, where the right of the university of Cambridge to grant alehouse licenses was considered at length.

Covenants against houses, &c. being used as public houses to extend to persons licensed under this act.

Sect. 31. "Any and every covenant or clause of restriction contained in any lease or contract between any landlord and tenant, whereby the trade or business of a victualler or publican is prohibited from being carried on in any house, building, or place mentioned or comprised in such lease or contract, or whereby any such house, building, or place is prohibited from being used as a public house or alehouse, shall apply and extend, and shall be construed to apply and extend, to every person who shall be licensed to sell beer, ale or porter, or cider or perry, under the provisions of this act, and to any and every house specified and mentioned in the license granted to such persons."

(1.) Who may take out the License.

All persons licensed may sell beer by retail.

By statute 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, intituled, "An Act to permit the general Sale of Beer and Cider by Retail in England," reciting, by s. 1, "That it is expedient, for the better supplying the public with beer in England, to give greater facilities for the sale thereof than are at present afforded by licenses to keepers of inns, alehouses, and victualling houses," it is enacted, "That from and after the 10th day of October, 1830, it shall and may be lawful for any and every person who shall obtain a license for that purpose under the provisions of this act, to sell beer, ale, and porter by retail [and also cider and perry, s. 30] in any part of England, in any house or premises specified in such license; any thing in any act or acts heretofore made or in force at the time of the passing of this act to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

The enactment, though it enables any person to obtain the license, does not supersede the custom of a borough, that no person shall carry on the trade of an alehouse therein who is not a burgess. (Mayor, &c. of Leicester v. Burgess, 2 Nev. & Man. 131; 5 B. & Adol. 246, S. C.)

Not to be granted to sheriff's officer or non-householder.

By sect. 2, no license shall be granted to any person being a sheriff's officer, or officer executing the legal process of any court of justice, nor to any person not being a householder assessed to the poor rates in the parish or place in which he shall be licensed to sell beer by retail, and that any license granted to any such person shall be void to all intents and purposes.

License to retail beer not to be granted to any but the real resident occupier, nor in respect of any house rated at less than 15*l.* per annum within the bills of mortality, or in cities, towns, &c. containing 10,000 inhabitants;

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1 [7th August, 1840], reciting the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, and the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, and that it was expedient to alter and amend the said acts, it is enacted, "That no license to sell beer or cider by retail under the said recited acts or this act shall be granted to any person who shall not be the real resident holder and occupier of the dwelling-house in which he shall apply to be licensed, nor shall any such license be granted in respect of any dwelling-house which shall not, with the premises occupied therewith, be rated in one sum to the rate for the relief of the poor of the parish, township, or place in which such house and premises are situate on a rent or annual value of fifteen pounds per annum at the least if situated in the cities of London or Westminster, or within any parish or place within the bills of mortality, or within any city, cinque-port, town corporate, parish, or place, the population of which, according to the last parliamentary census, shall exceed ten thousand, or within one mile, to be measured by the nearest public street or path, from any polling-place used at the last election for any town having the like population, and returning a member or members of parliament; nor shall any such license be granted in respect of any dwelling-house which shall not, with the premises occupied therewith, be rated in one sum to the rate for the relief of the poor of the parish, township, or place in which such house and premises are situate on a rent or annual value of eleven pounds per annum, if situated within any city, cinque-port, town corporate, parish, or place, the population of which, according to nor less than 11*l.* per annum in places exceeding 2,500 inhabitants;

2. License, &c. for, &c.

nor less than 8*l.* per annum in places situated elsewhere.

such last parliamentary census, shall exceed two thousand five hundred, and shall not exceed ten thousand, or within one mile, to be measured as aforesaid, from any polling place used at the last election for any town having the like population as last aforesaid, and returning a member or members of parliament; nor shall any such license be granted in respect of any dwelling-house which shall not, with the premises occupied therewith, be rated in one sum to the rate for the relief of the poor of the parish, township, or place in which such house and premises are situate on a rent or annual value of eight pounds, if situated elsewhere than as aforesaid; and every license granted contrary hereto shall be null and void."

Licenses may be granted to persons licensed before the passing of the act, whilst they continue the occupiers of the same house, although it is below the qualification.

It is provided, however, by sect. 18, "That nothing in this act contained shall prevent any person from obtaining, at the expiration of his existing license, a renewed license in respect of any house in which he shall at the time of the passing of this act be duly licensed to retail beer or cider under the said recited acts or either of them, notwithstanding such house may not be of the rent or annual value by this act prescribed, nor to oblige such person to produce any other certificate (where a certificate is required) for obtaining his license than the certificate required by the said recited acts; but it shall be lawful for the officers of excise duly authorised to grant licenses to renew and continue to grant licenses to such person (being in other respects properly qualified) on the production of such certificate as last aforesaid, so long as such person shall continue to be the resident holder and occupier of the same house, any thing in this act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Persons using or obtaining false certificates, disqualified.

Sect. 6. Every person convicted who shall forge any certificate, or make use of any certificate knowing it to be forged, or the matters therein certified to be false, in order to obtain a license or enable any other person to obtain it, shall be disqualified from obtaining any license, post, 67. The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 8, post, 70, contains a similar provision.

Persons convicted of felony, or of selling spirits without license, disqualified.

Sect. 7. Every person who shall be lawfully convicted of felony, or of selling spirits without license, shall be disqualified from obtaining a license to sell beer and cider by retail, post, 70.

Persons guilty of a third offence against the tenor of their license, cannot take out a license for two years.

By s. 16, post, 71, persons convicted of a third offence against the tenor of their license, and whose license shall therefore have been adjudged void, are incapable of taking out another license for two years, to be computed from such adjudication.

Persons convicted twice of refusing to admit constable, disqualified.

And by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 7 (post, 73), persons convicted for the second time of refusing to admit a constable into his house, shall, if the justices so adjudge, be disqualified from selling beer for the space of two years next after such conviction, or for such shorter space as they may think proper.

Persons disabled by conviction from keeping an inn, &c. not entitled to take out beer license.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 22, precludes persons disabled by conviction from keeping a common inn, &c. from retailing beer, cider, or perry, under any excise license. The enactment is as follows—"That all and every person or persons who shall be disabled by any conviction from holding or having a license to keep or from keeping a common inn, alehouse, or victualling-house, shall also by such conviction be disabled from taking out and from having any excise license to sell and from selling beer, cider or perry by retail, in any manner whatsoever, under any excise license or licenses obtained for such purpose; and if any such person shall, after such conviction as aforesaid, take out or have any excise license or licenses for any such purpose as aforesaid, the same shall and is hereby declared to be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes; and every person who shall, after such conviction as aforesaid, sell any beer, cider or perry by retail in any manner whatsoever, shall incur the penalty for so doing without license; and in all such cases in the prosecution for the recovery of such penalty, a certificate from the clerk of the peace, or person acting as such, of any such conviction as aforesaid, shall, on the trial in such prosecution, be legal evidence thereof, which certificate such clerk of the peace, or other person acting as such, is hereby authorised and required, within one week after any such conviction shall have been returned to his office, to deliver to the collector of excise, or other person or persons authorised to grant excise licenses within the district or place in which such conviction shall have taken place, setting forth a copy of such conviction signed by himself, for which he shall demand no fee or reward whatsoever, and if any such clerk of the peace, or other person acting as such as aforesaid, shall neglect or omit to deliver such certificate as aforesaid, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of ten pounds."

2. License, &c. for, &c.

(2.) Proceedings to obtain License—Form of Application—Certificate of Occupation and Character, &c.—Bond, with Sureties, &c.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 2, "in every application for such license there shall be specified, set forth, and inserted the Christian name and surname of the party applying for such license, and a description of the house or premises in which beer, ale, and porter is intended to be sold by retail by such person, together with the Christian names and surnames and the occupation and residence of the person or persons who shall be proposed as surety or sureties for the party so to be licensed."

Form of application for.

Sect. 4. "It shall not be lawful for the commissioners of excise or any person authorised by them, nor for any collector or supervisor of excise, to grant or deliver any such license to any person applying for the same, unless such person shall, before receiving such license, or at the time of receiving the same, enter into a bond to the commissioners of excise with one sufficient surety in the penalty of twenty pounds, or with two sufficient sureties in the penalty of ten pounds each, such surety or sureties being the person or persons named in the application of the party requiring the license, or some other person or persons approved of by the said commissioners or by the person authorised to grant such licenses; and such bond shall be executed by such person and his surety or sureties, conditioned for the payment by such person, or his surety or sureties, of any penalty or sum of money not exceeding the amount of such twenty pounds or ten pounds respectively, which shall be incurred for any offence against this act by the party to whom such license shall be granted, or for the payment of such sum of twenty pounds or ten pounds respectively, in case any penalty incurred by such party licensed shall exceed such twenty pounds or ten pounds respectively; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners or the person so authorised by them, or for such collector or supervisor of excise respectively, to judge of and determine upon the sufficiency of any such surety or sureties: provided always, that such bond shall not be subject or liable to the payment of any stamp duty whatever; any thing in any act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding."

Applicant to enter into bond, with sureties, &c.

Stamp on bond.

Sect. 5. "That no person licensed to sell beer by retail under the provisions of this act, and that no person not being a householder assessed to and paying the poor rates within the parish in which the person licensed shall be resident, shall be deemed competent to be or shall be accepted as a surety in any such bond as aforesaid."

Who may not be a surety.

By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, reciting that much evil has arisen from the management and conduct of houses in which beer and cider is sold by retail, under the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, and that it is expedient to amend the provisions of that act in certain particulars, sect. 1 enacts, "That from and after the commencement of this act it shall be lawful for the commissioners of excise, or other persons duly authorised, to grant licenses for the sale of beer, ale, porter, cider, or perry, under the provisions of the said recited act, to any person applying for the same, but that such license shall not authorise the person obtaining it to sell beer or cider to be drunk or consumed in the house or upon the premises specified in the same license, unless the same be granted upon the certificate hereinafter required."

Licenses to be granted for sale of beer, but not to authorise consumption thereof on the premises unless granted upon certificate.

Sect. 2. "Every person applying for a license to sell beer or cider by retail, intending the same to be drunk in the house or on the premises, shall (in addition to the application setting forth the particulars required by the said recited act) annually produce to and deposit with the commissioners of excise, collector, supervisor, or other person authorised to grant such license within the parish, township, or place in which the person so applying intends to sell beer or cider by retail, a certificate signed by six persons residing in and being and describing themselves to be inhabitants of such parish, township, or place, and respectively rated therein to the poor at not less than six pounds, or occupying a house therein rated to the poor at not less than six pounds,

Every person applying for a license to sell beer to be drunk on the premises to deposit with the commissioners of excise a certificate of good character signed by six rated inhabitants of the parish, &c. and certified by one of the overseers.

2. License, &c. for, &c.

(none of whom shall be maltsters, common brewers, or persons licensed to sell spirituous liquors or beer or cider by retail, nor owners or proprietors of any house or houses licensed to sell such liquors or beer or cider by retail,) stating that the person applying for the license is of good character, and that at the foot of such certificate one of the overseers of the parish, township, or place shall certify (if the fact be so) that such six persons are inhabitants respectively rated as aforesaid; and such certificate and license shall respectively be in the forms of the schedule annexed to this act. (See the forms, post.)

If not ten rated inhabitants in the place the certificate of the majority of them.

Provided always, that in any parish, township, or district maintaining its own poor in which there are not ten inhabitants rated to the relief of the poor to the amount of six pounds each, or not occupying houses respectively rated to the poor at six pounds each, (not being maltsters, common brewers, or persons licensed to sell spirituous liquors or beer or cider by retail) the certificate of the majority of such inhabitants of such parish, township, or district maintaining its own poor, as are rated to the amount of six pounds each, shall be deemed to be a sufficient certificate for the purposes of this act."

Penalty on overseers refusing to certify as required.

Sect. 3. "If any overseer of any parish, township, or place shall, after application made to him by or on behalf of the person applying for the license required by this act, refuse or neglect to certify (if the fact be so) that the persons who have signed such certificate (as required by this act, ante, 65) are inhabitants rated respectively as aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay any sum of money not exceeding five pounds, to be recovered before any justice of the peace acting for the county in which such parish, township, or place shall be situate, on complaint of the person by whom the application shall have been made, unless such overseer of the poor shall show to the satisfaction of such justice reasonable cause for such neglect or refusal."

Penalty for making or using false certificates.

Sect. 8. "If any person shall, in any certificate required by this act (ante, 65), certify any matter as true, knowing the same to be false, or shall make use of any certificate for the purposes of this act, knowing such certificate to be forged, or the matters certified therein to be false, every such person shall, on conviction of such offence before two or more justices of the peace, forfeit and pay the sum of twenty pounds; and every license for the sale of beer or cider by retail which shall be granted to any person who shall have made use of any such certificate in order to obtain the same, such person knowing such certificate to be forged, or the matters certified therein to be false, shall be void to all intents and purposes; and any person who shall have made use of such certificate shall for ever hereafter be disqualified from obtaining a license to sell beer or cider by retail under the provisions of the said recited act or this act."

Licenses obtained on false certificates to be void

Persons obtaining it to be afterwards disqualified from obtaining a license.

No license for beer to be drunk on the premises to be granted without a certificate.

Sect. 9. "No license for the sale of beer or cider by retail to be consumed or drank in the house or on the premises shall be granted, except upon the certificate hereby required: provided always, that in all extra-parochial places the certificate required by this act may be signed and given by the inhabitants rated to the poor at six pounds in any adjoining parish or parishes."

Certificate not to be required for houses in certain situations if population exceed 5000.

Sect 21. "Provided always, that such certificate shall not be required as to any house situated within the cities of London and Westminster, or within any parish or place within the bills of mortality, nor within any city or town corporate, nor within the distance of one mile from the place used at the last election as the place of election or polling place of any town returning a member or members to parliament, provided that the population, to be determined according to the last parliamentary census that shall have been taken, in such city, town corporate, or town returning a member or members to parliament, shall exceed five thousand."

Applicant to produce a certificate of his being the real resident occupier of the house, and of the amount at which it is rated. (a)

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 2, "Every person who shall apply to be licensed to retail beer or cider shall produce to the proper officer of excise authorised to grant such licenses a certificate in writing from an overseer of the township, parish, or place in which he shall reside, certifying that such applicant is the real resident, holder, and occupier of the said house, and also certifying the

(a) This enactment does not require the certificate of value in all cases, but only for persons not licensed on 7th Oct. 1841: see sect. 18, ante, 64. The certificate of character is still required in all cases not excepted in the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 51.

true rent or annual value at which such house, with the premises occupied therewith, is rated in one rating to the poor rates, according to the last sum or rate made and allowed in such township, parish, or place for the relief of the poor; and every such certificate shall be deposited and left with the proper officer of excise by whom such license shall be granted; and a duplicate thereof shall be deposited and left with the clerk of the peace for the county, riding, or city, within which such township, parish, or place is situate."

2. License, &c. for, &c.

Certificate to be left with officer of excise, &c.

Sect. 3. "That when any person shall become the occupier of a house newly erected, and not yet rated, and shall be desirous of taking out a license to retail therein beer and cider before the making of a new rate, it shall be lawful for the proper officer of excise, if the applicant shall in other respects be duly qualified, to grant such license, on the certificate of the overseer of the poor certifying the rent or annual value to be not less than that at which such house, with the premises occupied therewith, will be rated in one sum to the relief of the poor in the next rate to be made and allowed, and certifying also that the applicant has claimed to be rated in respect of the said house and premises."

Provision for new houses occupied since a rate was made.

Sect. 4, reciting that "in some extra parochial places no assessments are made or rates collected for the relief of the poor, and it is expedient to provide for persons obtaining licenses in such places," enacts, "That in any extra-parochial or other place where no rates are made or collected for the relief of the poor it shall be lawful for the proper officers of excise authorised to grant licenses to grant a license to any person to retail beer or cider in a dwelling house, which, with premises occupied therewith, shall be of the real rent or annual value of fifteen pounds, eleven pounds, or eight pounds respectively, according to the situation thereof as aforesaid; and in such case the person applying for such license shall produce to and deposit and leave with the proper officer of excise granting such license a certificate in writing, signed by two inhabitant householders of the township or place, certifying that the party applying is the real resident in and occupier of the dwelling house sought to be licensed, and also certifying the true and real annual value of the same, with the premises occupied therewith, according to the best of their judgment and belief."

In extra parochial places licenses may be granted on the certificate of two inhabitant-householders of the required annual values.

Sect. 5. "Every overseer of the poor who shall refuse to grant a certificate of the rating or assessment of any rated house and premises, when demanded, or of any person having claimed to be rated in respect of any newly erected house not yet rated, or who shall falsely certify any house to be rated when the same was not duly rated at the time of the making and allowance of the last rate made and allowed for the relief of the poor, and every overseer or other person who shall falsely certify any person to be the real resident, holder, and occupier of any house, contrary to the fact, or falsely certify the rent or annual value at which any dwelling-house and premises shall now or will be rated, or the rent paid for the same, or the annual value thereof, or shall grant any certificate which shall in any other respect be wilfully false, shall forfeit twenty pounds."

Penalty on overseers refusing to grant certificates, and on overseers and other persons granting false certificates.

Sect. 6. "That every person who shall, for the purpose of obtaining for himself or enabling any other person to obtain a license to retail beer or cider, forge or counterfeit any certificate, or shall produce or make use of any certificate, knowing the same to be forged or counterfeit, or the matters certified therein or any of them to be false, shall forfeit fifty pounds; and every license for the retail of beer or cider obtained by any person on any such forged, counterfeit, or false certificate shall, on the conviction of such person, be void to all intents and purposes, and shall be so adjudged; and every person who shall be convicted of any of the said offences shall be disqualified from obtaining any license under the said recited acts or this act to retail beer or cider either to be drunk and consumed on the premises or off the premises.

Penalty on forging certificates, or using false certificates.

Licenses obtained by false certificates to be void, and the persons obtaining them disqualified.

(3.) License, by whom and how granted—Form, Duration, and Entry of—Entry of Premises with Excise.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 2, "Any and every such license which shall be taken out within the limits of the chief office of excise in London shall be granted under the hands and seals of two or more of the commissioners of excise for the time being, or of such persons as they the said commissioners of excise, or the major part of them for the time being, shall from time to time authorise, employ, or direct for that purpose; and any and every such license which shall be taken out in any part of England, not within the said limits, shall be granted under the respective hands and seals of the several collectors and supervisors of excise within their respective collections and districts; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of excise, or any two or more of them respectively, and for the person to be authorised, employed, or directed by the said commissioners or the major part of them, and also for all such collectors and supervisors, and they are hereby respectively authorised and required, within ten days after the application shall have been made for the same, and upon execution by the party and his surety or sureties of the bond hereinafter mentioned (ante, 65), and any time after upon the execution of such bond, to grant such license to the persons who shall apply for the same; the person so applying first paying for such license a duty of £2. 2*s.*, to be applied and accounted for as hereafter mentioned." [Which duty is likewise now regulated by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, post, 69] "And every such license shall be dated on the day when the same shall be granted, and shall expire at the end of twelve calendar months after the day on which such license shall be dated; and every such license shall be according to the form in the schedule annexed to this act (post), and shall be duly registered in the proper department of the excise; provided always, that no such license shall authorise or entitle the party licensed to receive any license to sell or retail wine or spirits, any thing in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary thereof notwithstanding: [or, by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 15, sweets or made wines, or meed, or metheglin:] and a list or register of every license so granted, specifying the name and place of abode of every person licensed and of his sureties respectively, and the name and description of the house mentioned in such license, shall be kept at the excise office with respect to all licenses granted by the commissioners of excise or any person authorised by them, and at the office or dwelling house of every collector and supervisor of excise in their and his respective collections and districts: and such list or register shall at all times be produced to and shall be open to the inspection and perusal of any magistrate of the county or place where such license shall be granted, and where such house shall be situate; and a copy of such list or register shall once in every calendar month be transmitted by every such collector or supervisor to the clerk of the magistrates for the district in which such license shall be granted; and any copy of or extract from such list or register, which shall or may be at any time required by the clerk to the magistrates, shall be given to him by such collector or supervisor whenever thereto required." Persons licensed to retail beer may also retail cider; but not vice versa.

And by the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 15, it is provided that "in every such license shall be specified whether the same is granted for the sale of cider and perry by retail to be drunk or consumed not in or upon the house or premises where sold, or for the retail of cider and perry to be drunk and consumed in or upon the house and premises where sold."

Such licenses to state particulars.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 9, "Every person whatever licensed to retail beer or cider under the said recited act or this act shall, in manner directed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 51, make entry with the officers of excise of every house, cellar, room, and place for storing, keeping or retailing beer or cider, on pain of forfeiting the penalties imposed by the said last-mentioned act for making use of any unentered room or place; and all beer and cider found in any such unentered house, cellar, room, or place shall be forfeited." (See "Excise," Vol. II.)

Persons licensed to make entry of premises with the excise.

(4.) Amount of Duty paid, and how accounted for.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 13, it is enacted "That from and after the passing of this act the duties payable on excise licenses for the selling of beer by retail under the provisions of the said recited act shall cease and determine, and that in lieu of such duties there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the licenses hereby authorised to be granted the duties following: (that is to say,)

Duties on beer licenses.

For and upon every license to be taken out by any person for the selling by retail of beer not to be drunk or consumed in or upon the house or premises where sold, the annual sum of one pound one shilling.

For and upon every license to be taken out by any person for the selling by retail of beer to be drunk or consumed in or upon the house or premises where sold, the annual sum of three pounds three shillings." [The 3 Vict. c. 17, adds 5*l* per cent. to the above duties]

Sect. 14. "The said last-mentioned duties shall be under the management of the commissioners of excise, and shall be raised, levied, collected, and recovered, and accounted for and paid in the same manner and by the same means, and under the same regulations and provisions, pains, penalties, and forfeitures, as are prescribed in the said recited act with respect to the duties

Such duties to be under the management of commissioners of excise, and to be recovered and accounted for under the provisions of recited act.

hereby repealed; all of which said regulations and provisions, pains, penalties, and forfeitures, shall apply to the duties hereby imposed, and shall be enforced in respect of the same as fully and effectually as if repeated and re-enacted in this act."

Duty to be under management of commissioners of excise, and carried to consolidated fund.

And by the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 3, "The duty by this act imposed on licenses to sell beer by retail shall be under the management of the commissioners of excise for the time being, and shall and may be respectively raised, levied, collected, answered, paid, and recovered in such and the like manner, and in or by any or either of the general or special means, ways or methods by which any other duties of excise on licenses are or may be raised, levied, collected, answered, paid, or recovered; and all the monies arising by the duties by this act imposed and made payable as aforesaid, the necessary charges of raising and accounting for the same excepted, shall from time to time be paid into the receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster, and the said money so paid into the receipt of the exchequer as aforesaid shall be carried to and made part of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

Duties on cider licenses.

As to the duties payable on licenses to sell cider and perry, see ante, 68.

(5.) Continuation of License on Death of Licensee.

On death of licensee, his executors or widow or child, may be authorised to sell for remainder of term of license.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 8, "Upon the death of any person whatever licensed to retail beer or cider under the said recited acts or this act before the expiration of the license, it shall be lawful for the person authorised to grant licenses to authorise and empower, by endorsement or otherwise, as the commissioners of excise shall direct, the executors or administrators, or the widow or child, of such deceased person, who shall be possessed of and occupy the dwelling-house and premises before used for such purpose, to continue to retail beer and cider in the same house and premises during the residue of the term for which such license was originally granted, without taking out any fresh license, or payment of any additional duty thereon; and also at the expiration of such license (in case the residue of the said term shall be less than three calendar months from the death of the person licensed) to grant a new license to such executors, administrators, or widow, on payment of the proper license duty, and entering into the usual bond."

(6.) License, when it becomes void or forfeited.

Penalty on forging certificates, or using false certificates.

Licenses obtained by false certificates to be void, and the persons obtaining them disqualified.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 6, "Every person who shall, for the purpose of obtaining for himself or enabling any other person to obtain a license to retail beer or cider, forge or counterfeit any certificate, or shall produce or make use of any certificate, knowing the same to be forged or counterfeit, or the matters certified therein or any of them to be false, shall forfeit fifty pounds; and every license for the retail of beer or cider obtained by any person, on any forged, counterfeit, or false certificate, shall, on the conviction of such person, be void to all intents and purposes, and shall be so adjudged; and every person who shall be convicted of any of the said offences shall be disqualified from obtaining any license under the said recited acts, or this act, to retail beer or cider either to be drunk and consumed on the premises or off the premises."

Licenses to be void on conviction of felony or of selling spirits without license.

Sect. 7. "That every person who shall hereafter be lawfully convicted of felony, or of selling spirits without license, shall for ever thereafter be disqualified from selling beer and cider by retail, and no license to sell beer and cider by retail under the said recited acts or this act shall be granted to any person who shall be so convicted as aforesaid; and if any such person shall, after having been so convicted as aforesaid, take out or have any license to sell beer or cider by retail under the said recited acts or this act, the same shall be void to all intents and purposes, and every person who shall, after being convicted as aforesaid, sell any beer or cider by retail, in any manner whatsoever, shall incur the penalty for so doing without license, and in all such cases in the prosecution for the recovery of such penalty a certificate from the clerk of the peace, or person acting as such, of any such conviction as aforesaid, shall on the trial in such prosecution be legal evidence thereof."

Certificate from clerk of the peace

2. License, &c. for, &c.

Sect. 10 enacts, "That on conviction of any such person licensed to retail beer or cider in any penalty for having wine or spirits or sweets in his possession, or for selling or retailing wine or spirits or sweets, the license of such person for retailing beer or cider shall become null and void, and shall be so adjudged.

of conviction to be evidence thereof.

License in case of conviction for selling or having wine, sweets, &c. to be void.

Sect. 17. "No person licensed to retail beer or cider under the said recited acts or this act shall forfeit his license for a first offence against the tenor or conditions of his license, except as hereinbefore provided; and no such person shall be deemed to have forfeited his license, on any conviction by any justices of the peace for any offence, unless such forfeiture shall be adjudged and declared by the justice or justices by whom such person shall be convicted of the offence in respect of which the forfeiture shall be incurred; and when any justices of the peace shall adjudge and declare the license of any person to be forfeited, such justices shall cause notice in writing to be immediately given to the commissioners of excise within the limits of the chief office of excise, or to the collector of excise out of such limits, of such adjudication."

No person to forfeit his license for a first offence; and no license to be void unless so adjudged.

Notice to the Excise.

By the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 16, (post, 78), the licenses of persons guilty of a third offence against the tenor of their license, may be adjudged forfeited and void.

Third offence.

By the 4 & 5 Will IV. c. 85, s. 8, "Every license for the sale of beer or cider by retail which shall be granted to any person who shall have made use of any such certificate as required by that act (ante, 66), in order to obtain the same, such person knowing such certificate to be forged or the matters therein certified to be false, shall be void to all intents and purposes."

Using false certificate.

(7.) Management and Regulation of licensed Houses.

(a) Descriptive Board to be put on Houses.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 6, "Every person who shall be licensed to sell beer, ale, and porter by retail, under the provisions of this act, shall cause to be painted, in letters three inches at least in length, in white upon a black ground, or in black upon a white ground, publicly visible and legible, upon a board to be placed over the door of the house or premises in which such person shall be licensed to sell beer by retail, the Christian and surname of the persons mentioned in such license, at full length, together with the words 'licensed to sell beer by retail;' and every such person shall preserve and keep up such name and words so painted as aforesaid during all the time that such person shall continue so licensed, upon pain that every person in any respect making default herein shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of ten pounds."

Descriptive boards to be put upon house.

And by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 18, "Every person who shall be licensed to sell beer, or cider or perry by retail, under the authority of the said recited act (1 Will. IV. c. 64), and this act, shall, on the board by the said act required to be placed over the door of every person licensed under the same, paint or cause to be painted and kept thereon, after the words 'licensed to sell beer or cider by retail,' the additional words 'not to be drunk on the premises,' or 'to be drunk on the premises,' as the case may be, on pain of forfeiting the penalty by the said act imposed for not having such board affixed and continued over the door."

The board over the door to state "not to be drunk on the premises," or, "to be drunk on the premises."

(b) Hours for opening and closing Houses.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 11, "it shall be lawful for any one justice acting for any county or place where any riot or tumult shall happen, or for any two or more justices where any riot or tumult may be expected to take place, to order or direct that every person licensed under this act, and keeping any house, situate within their respective jurisdictions, in or near the place where such riot or tumult shall happen or be expected to take place, shall close his house at any time which such justice or justices shall order or direct; and every such person who shall keep open his house at or after any hour at which such justices shall have so ordered or directed such house to be closed shall be taken and deemed to have not maintained good order and rule therein, and to be guilty of an offence against the tenor of the license granted to such person."

Form of conviction for.

From the case of Newman v. Hardwicke, 8 Ad. & Ell. 124, it would seem that a conviction under this section should set out the order of the justices, and state the particular time at which the beer-house was kept open.

Hours for opening and closing houses.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 15, "No person licensed to sell beer or cider by retail under the said recited acts (11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85,) or this act, shall have or keep his house open for the sale of beer or cider, nor shall sell or retail beer or cider, nor shall suffer any beer or cider to be drank or consumed in or at such house, at any time before the hour of five of the clock in the morning nor after twelve of the clock at night of any day in the week in the cities of London or Westminster, or within the boundaries of any of the boroughs of Marylebone, Finsbury, the Tower Hamlets, Lambeth, or Southwark, as defined by an act passed in the second and third years of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to settle and describe the Divisions of Counties, and the Limits of Cities and Boroughs in England and Wales, in so far as respects the Election of Members to serve in Parliament,' nor after eleven of the clock within any parish or place within the bills of mortality, or within any city, cinque port, town corporate, parish, or place, the population of which, according to the last parliamentary census, shall exceed two thousand five hundred, or within one mile, to be measured as aforesaid, (that is, by the nearest public street or path, sect. 1, ante, 63), from any polling place used at the last election for any town having the like population, and returning a member or members to parliament, nor after ten of the clock in the evening elsewhere, nor at any time before one of the clock in the afternoon, nor at any time during which the houses of licensed victuallers now are or hereafter shall be closed, on any Sunday, Good Friday, Christmas Day, or any day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving; and if any such person shall keep his house open for selling beer or cider, or shall sell or retail beer or cider, at any time other than as hereinbefore prescribed and directed, such person shall forfeit the sum of forty shillings for every offence, and every separate sale shall be deemed a separate offence."

2 & 3 W. 4, c 64. (See "Parliament," Vol. V.)

Penalty.

Public houses within the metropolitan police district not to be opened before one o'clock on Sundays, &c. &c.

By the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, no licensed victualler or other person shall open his house within the metropolitan police district, for the sale of wine, spirits, beer, or other fermented or distilled liquors, on Sundays, Christmas Day, and Good Friday, before the hour of one in the afternoon, except refreshment for travellers.

The 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 14, and the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 6, by which the hours for opening and closing beer-houses were formerly regulated, according to the order of the justices for that purpose, have been repealed by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, and these hours are now fixed by sect. 15 above cited.

Form of conviction for.

A conviction under 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, for keeping a house open for the sale of beer, and selling beer, and suffering it to be drunk on the premises, (which expressions are repeated in the above section of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61), at a time of day prohibited by an order of justices, and fining the party charged in a single penalty for "the offence," was held bad, as charging more than one distinct offence. (Newman v. Bendyshe, 10 Ad. & Ell. 11.)

Penalty for suffering beer to be drunk in the house at prohibited times.

The penalty under the above 15th section of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, it will be seen, is incurred by keeping the house open for selling, or for selling at any time other than the prescribed hour, and does not extend to suffering beer to be drunk or consumed in the house, but this latter offence would be punishable under sect. 15, post, 77, which imposes a general penalty where the acts give no specific penalty.

(c) Standard Measures to be used.

2. License, &c. for, &c.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 12, "Every person under this act licensed to sell beer by retail shall sell or otherwise dispose of all such beer by retail (except in quantities less than a half-pint) by the gallon, quart, pint, or half-pint measure sized according to the standard, and shall also retail the same in a vessel sized according to such standard, and in default thereof he shall for every such offence forfeit the illegal measure, and pay a sum not exceeding forty shillings, together with the costs of the conviction, to be recovered within thirty days next after that on which such offence was committed before two justices; and such penalty shall be over and above all penalties to which the offender may be liable under any other act." (See title "Weights and Measures," Vol. VI.)

Standard measures to be used.

Forfeiture and penalty for not using them.

(d) Officers of Excise and Constables when authorised to enter licensed Houses, and License to be produced before Magistrates if required.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 11, "It shall be lawful for any officer of excise, at all times during the hours in which any house licensed for the retail of beer or cider may be kept open, to enter into every house, cellar, room, or place entered for the storing, keeping, or retailing of beer or cider, and to make search for and seize all wine and spirits and sweets which may be found in any such house, cellar, room, or place, and to examine all beer or cider kept therein."

Officers of excise empowered to enter the premises of licensed beer retailers;

Sect. 12. "That it shall be lawful for any officer of excise, during the hours which any house is kept open for the sale of beer after the rate of one penny halfpenny or after a less rate the quart, to enter into every such house, cellar, room, or place for the keeping or retailing such beer, and to make search for and seize all wines, spirits, sweets, and all beer which by law they are not entitled to sell."

and also the houses of persons selling beer at the rate of 1½d. or less the quart.

And by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 7, "It shall be lawful for all constables and officers of police, and they are hereby authorised and empowered, to enter into all houses which are or shall be licensed to sell beer or spirituous liquors to be consumed upon the premises when and so often as such constables and officers shall think proper; and if any person having such license as aforesaid, or any servant or other person in his employ or by his direction, shall refuse to admit or shall not admit such constable or officer of police into such house or upon such premises, such person having such license shall for the first offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds, together with the costs of the conviction, to be recovered within twenty days next after that on which such offence was committed before one or more justices of the peace; and it shall be lawful for any two or more justices before whom any such person shall be convicted of such offence for the second time to adjudge (if they shall so think fit) that such offender shall be disqualified from selling beer, ale, porter, cider, or perry by retail for the space of two years next after such conviction, or for such shorter space of time as they may think proper."

Constables, &c. empowered to visit licensed houses.

Penalty on conviction.

Sect. 10. "In case any complaint shall be laid before two justices of the peace against any person licensed for any offence against the tenor of his license, or against this act or the said recited act, it shall be lawful for the said justices (if they shall think fit) to require such person to produce his license before them for their examination; and if such person shall wilfully neglect or refuse so to do he shall forfeit and pay for such offence such sum, not exceeding five pounds, as the said justices shall think proper; and such person shall and may be convicted, proceeded against, and dealt with for such offence in all respects in the same manner, mutatis mutandis, as is directed by the said recited act with regard to persons guilty of a first offence against the said act; and the penalty imposed for such offence shall be applied in the same manner as a penalty for a first offence against the said act is thereby directed to be applied."

Retailers compellable to produce their licenses on requisition of two magistrates.

Penalty

(e) Permitting Drunkenness or disorderly conduct in House—Adulterating Beer.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 13, "Every seller of beer, ale, and

2. License, &c. for, &c.

Retailer permitting drunkenness, &c. in house, penalty for;

porter by retail, having a license under the provisions of this act, who shall permit any person or persons to be guilty of drunkenness or disorderly conduct in the house or premises mentioned in such license, shall for every such offence forfeit the respective sums following; and every person who shall in any way transgress or neglect, or shall be a party in transgressing or neglecting, the conditions and provisions specified in such license, or shall allow such conditions or provisions to be in any way transgressed or neglected, in the house or premises so licensed, shall be deemed guilty of disorderly conduct; and or transgressing conditions of his license. (See form of license, post.)

every person so licensed who shall permit any such disorderly conduct, shall for the first offence forfeit any such sum, not less than forty shillings nor more than five pounds, as the justices before whom such retailer shall be convicted of such offence shall adjudge; and for the second such offence, any sum not less than five pounds nor more than ten pounds; and for the third such offence, any sum not less than twenty pounds nor more than fifty pounds; and it shall be lawful for the justices before whom any such conviction for such third offence shall take place to adjudge, if they shall so think fit, that such offender shall be disqualified from selling beer by retail for the space of two years next ensuing such conviction, and also (if they shall so think fit) to adjudge that no beer shall be sold by retail by any person in the house or premises mentioned in the license of such offender."

Third offence.

Adulterating, &c. beer,

"And if any person so licensed as aforesaid shall knowingly sell any beer, ale, or porter made otherwise than from malt and hops, or shall mix or cause to be mixed any drugs or other pernicious ingredients with any beer sold in his house or premises, or shall fraudulently dilute or in any way adulterate penalty at any and every house or place where he shall commit such offence; and if any person shall at any time, during any term in which it shall not be lawful for beer to be sold by retail on the premises of any offender, sell any beer by retail on such premises, knowing that it was not lawful to be sold, penalty for.

such offender shall forfeit any sum not less than ten pounds nor more than twenty pounds, as the convicting justices shall adjudge."

Having prohibited articles, penalty for.

Besides the penalty imposed for the adulteration of beer by this section, a beer-house keeper is also liable to the penalties imposed by the 56 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 2 (see post, 108), for having in his possession any of the prohibited articles therein specified, or any other article or preparation to be used as a substitute for malt or hops. (Att.-Gen. v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 378.)

(8.) Penalties for selling Beer, Cider, &c. without License.

Penalty on unlicensed persons selling beer and cider by retail to be drunk off the premises, 10*l.*

By stat. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 17, "Every person (not being duly licensed to sell beer, cider, and perry as the keeper of a common inn, ale-house, or victualling-house), who shall sell any beer, or cider, or perry by retail not to be drunk or consumed in or upon the house or premises where sold, without having an excise retail license in force authorising him so to do, shall forfeit ten pounds; and every person (not being duly licensed to sell beer, cider, and perry as the keeper of a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house), who shall sell any beer, cider, or perry by retail to be drunk or consumed in or upon the house or premises where sold, without having an excise retail license in force authorising him so to do, whether such person shall or shall not be licensed to sell beer to be drunk or consumed off the premises where sold, shall forfeit twenty pounds; which said penalties shall be sued for and recovered, mitigated and applied, by the same means, and under the same provisions as any other penalty may be sued for and recovered, mitigated and applied, under any law or laws of excise." (See Vol. II. title "Excise.")

2. License, &c. for, &c.

Sect. 4. "If any person licensed to sell beer or cider not to be consumed upon the premises shall, with intent to evade the provisions of this act, take or carry, or authorise or employ or permit or suffer any person to take or carry, any beer or cider out of or from the house or premises of such licensed person for the purpose of being sold on his account, or for his benefit or profit drunk or consumed in any other house, or in any tent, shed, or other building of any kind whatever belonging to such licensed person, or hired, used, or occupied by him, such beer or cider shall be deemed and taken to have been drunk or consumed upon the premises, and the person selling the same shall be subject to the like forfeitures and penalties as if such beer or cider had been actually drunk or consumed in any house or upon any premises licensed only for the sale thereof as aforesaid."

Permitting drinking beer in a neighbouring house or in any shed, &c. with intent to evade the provisions of the act, to be deemed drinking on the premises.

Sect. 19. "'And whereas doubts are entertained as to what is a selling of beer or cider or perry by retail;' be it therefore enacted, that every sale of any beer, or of any cider or perry, in any less quantity than four gallons and a half, shall be deemed and taken to be a selling by retail."

What is a retailing of beer, cider, or perry.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 13, "If any person, not being duly licensed to sell beer or cider, shall retail any beer or cider, either to be consumed in or upon the house or premises or off the premises where sold, or if any person shall sell any beer or cider to be consumed in or upon the house or premises where sold, without being duly licensed so to do, such person shall, in addition to any excise penalty to which he may thereby become subject, forfeit five pounds, such penalty to be recovered in the same manner as any other penalty (not being excise penalties) are by the said recited acts (11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85) or this act to be recovered, levied, and applied: Provided always, that no information or other proceeding for the recovery of the said penalty shall be exhibited or commenced except by and in the name of a constable or other officer of the peace."

Additional penalty on unlicensed persons selling beer or cider; to be sued for by a peace officer.

Sect. 7. If any person convicted of felony or of selling spirits without license shall, after being so convicted, take out or have any license to sell beer or cider by retail, the same shall be void, and every person who, after being so convicted, shall sell any beer or cider by retail in any manner whatsoever, shall incur the penalty for so doing without license, and in all such cases in the prosecution for the recovery of such penalty a certificate from the clerk of the peace, or person acting as such, of any such conviction shall be legal evidence thereof. (See ante, 70.)

Persons convicted of felony or of selling spirits without license if they sell beer incur the penalty of selling without license, though they may have taken out license for so doing.

(9.) Penalties for Persons Licensed to sell Beer, selling or having in their possession Wine, Spirits, or Sweets.

By statute 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 16, "No license to be granted under the said recited act and this act for the sale of beer or cider shall authorise any person to take out or hold any license for the sale of wine, spirits, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin; and if any person licensed under the said recited act and this act to sell beer or cider shall permit or suffer any wine or spirits, sweets or made wines, mead or metheglin, to be brought into his house or premises to be drunk or consumed there, or shall suffer any wine, spirits, sweets, mead or metheglin, to be drunk or consumed in his house or premises by any person whomsoever, such person shall, over and above any excise penalty or penalties to which he may be subject, forfeit twenty pounds, to be recovered, levied, mitigated, and applied in the same manner as other penalties (not being excise penalties) are by this act to be recovered, levied, mitigated, and applied."

Licenses under this act not to authorise persons to hold licenses for sale of wine.

Penalty on persons licensed under this act permitting wine or spirits to be consumed on the premises.

Sect 20. "And whereas doubts have been entertained whether persons licensed to sell beer or cider under the said act of the first year of his Majesty's reign, who shall sell spirits or wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, without being licensed so to do, are liable to the penalties ing spirits or wine without license.

imposed by the laws of excise for selling spirits or wine, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin without license; be it therefore declared and enacted, that all persons licensed under the said recited act and this act selling wine or spirits, or any sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, shall be liable to and shall incur all the penalties imposed by the laws of excise for selling spirits or wine, sweets or made wines, mead or metheglin, without license."

Penalty on persons licensed to sell beer or cider having wine, spirits, or sweets in their entered premises.

By stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 10, "If any person licensed to retail beer or cider under the said recited acts or this act shall receive into or keep or have in his possession, in any cellar, room, or place entered for storing, keeping, or retailing beer or cider, any wine or spirits or sweets, such person shall, in addition to all other penalties, forfeit fifty pounds, to be recovered and applied under the powers and provisions of the said acts of the seventh and eighth years of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Fourth, (c. 58,) and the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his said late Majesty King William the Fourth (c. 51); and all wine and spirits and sweets found in any such entered cellars, rooms, or places shall be forfeited; and on conviction of any such licensed person in any penalty for having wine or spirits or sweets in his possession, or for selling or retailing wine or spirits or sweets, the license of such person for retailing beer or cider shall become null and void, and shall be so adjudged." (See title "Excise," Vol. II.)

Wine, &c. to be forfeited.

License in such case to be void.

Search for wine, &c.

And sects. 11 and 12 authorise officers of excise to enter and search for and seize all such wine, spirits, and sweets. (Ante, 73.)

(10.) Proceedings for the Recovery of Penalties.

(a) What Justices may act.

Two justices sitting in petty sessions to act.

The 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 15 (post, 77), enacts, that all penalties shall be recovered before two justices acting in petty sessions in or for the division or place in which the beer-house is situate.

Within the metropolitan police district.

By the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, (the Metropolitan Police Act,) any one magistrate appointed under that statute may do alone any act "which by any law now in force or by any law, not containing an express enactment to the contrary, hereafter to be made, is or shall be directed to be done by more than one justice: provided that none of the said (metropolitan police) magistrates shall be competent to act as a justice of the peace either alone or with any other justice or justices in any thing which is to be done at a special or petty session of all the justices acting in the division, or by the justices of any of the said counties or liberties in quarter session assembled."

If justices of liberties, &c. do not attend sessions, county justices may act

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 23, it is enacted, that "Whenever at any session for any liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city or town corporate, there shall not be present at least two justices acting in and for any such liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city or town corporate, it shall be lawful for the justices acting in and for the county or counties adjoining to such liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city or town corporate, to act within such liberty or place, and with the justice or justices thereof who shall be present at any such sessions as aforesaid, for the purpose of hearing complaints as to offences against this act: any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Powers given to justices of counties not to extend to cinque ports.

Sect. 24. "Nothing herein contained shall extend to give the justices of the county or any division thereof any power or authority for the putting of the provisions of this act in execution within any of the cinque ports or either of the two ancient towns, or any of the corporate or other members or liberties of the cinque ports or two ancient towns, but that it shall be lawful for the justices of and for each of the principal cinque ports and two ancient towns, and the liberties thereof, and for the justices of and for the liberties thereof, and the corporate members, to act within the same respectively as they have been accustomed, and for them or any of them to act within each of the corporate members immediately belonging or subordinate to such principal cinque port or ancient town, with the justice or justices of each such corporate member, for the purpose of hearing complaints as to offences against this act in all such cases in which the justices of the county are hereinbefore empowered or authorised to act with the justice or justices of any liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city or town corporate."

2. License, &c. for, &c.

(b) Summons or Order, how served.

Service of summons or order.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 22, "No summons or order issued by any justice of the peace or other magistrate shall be deemed to be legally served unless it shall be served by some constable, special constable, police, or other peace officer."

(c) Information, how and by whom exhibited.

Information, how and by whom exhibited.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 13, (ante, 75,) no information or other proceeding for the recovery of the penalty incurred under that section shall be exhibited or commenced except by or in the name of a constable or other officer of the peace.

In case of appeal (post, 80) the justices may order the constable or other peace officer of the parish to carry on the proceedings.

With the above exception an information under these acts may be exhibited by any person whomsoever. (11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 15, infra.)

In Reg. v. Rawlins, (8 C. & P. 441,) Patteson, J., inclined to think that the information (as directed by the 15th sect. of the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, infra) need not be in writing, nor as it seems on oath. (See title "Conviction," post.)

(d) Evidence and Witnesses.

Evidence of conviction.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 7, (ante, 70,) on the prosecution for the recovery of a penalty under that section, a certificate from the clerk of the peace or person acting as such, of any such conviction as mentioned in that section, shall be legal evidence thereof.

Evidence of bond.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 19, (post, 80), the certificate of the commissioners of excise, or their officer or other person by this act authorised to grant a license, of the date of the bond, and the names and descriptions of the surety or sureties mentioned in that section, shall be sufficient evidence of such bond, and of the contents and execution thereof, against any surety or sureties.

Penalty on witnesses not attending.

Sect. 20. "Any person summoned as a witness to give evidence before any justices or sessions touching any of the matters aforesaid, either on the part of the complainant or of the person accused, who shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time and place for that purpose appointed, and who shall not make such reasonable excuse for such neglect or refusal as shall be admitted and allowed by such justices or sessions, or who appearing shall refuse to be examined on oath or affirmation and give evidence, shall on conviction before such justice forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding ten pounds." (See further, "Evidence," Vol. II.)

(e) Proceedings before Justices—Mitigation of Penalties—Conviction.

Penalties recoverable before two justices in petty sessions.

Limitation of prosecutions.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 15, "All penalties under this act, save and except the penalty hereinbefore mentioned for selling beer by any person not duly licensed, (ante, 74,) shall and may be recovered upon the information of any person whomsoever before two justices acting in petty sessions: and every such penalty shall be prosecuted and proceeded for within three calendar months next after the commission of the offence in respect of which such penalty shall be incurred; and every person licensed under this act who shall be convicted, before two justices so acting in and for the division or place in which shall be situate the house kept or theretofore kept by such person, of any offence against the tenor of the license to him granted under this act, or of any offence for which any penalty is imposed by this act, shall, unless proof be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices that such person had been theretofore convicted before two justices within the space of twelve calendar months next preceding of some offence against the tenor of his license or against this act, be adjudged by such justices to be guilty of a first offence against the provisions of this act, and to forfeit and pay any penalty by this act imposed for such offence, or if no specific penalty be imposed for such offence, then any sum not exceeding five pounds, together with the costs of the conviction; and if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices that such person had been previously convicted before two justices within the space of twelve calendar months next preceding of one such offence only, such person shall be adjudged by such justices to be guilty of a second offence against the provisions of this act, and to forfeit and pay any penalty by this act imposed for such offence, or if no specific penalty be so imposed, then any sum not exceeding ten pounds, together with the costs of the conviction; and if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices that such person had been previously convicted before two justices within the space of the eighteen calendar months next preceding of two such separate offences, and if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of the justices that such person so charged is guilty of the offence charged against him, such person shall be adjudged to be guilty of a third offence against the provisions of this act, and to forfeit and pay any penalty imposed by this act in respect of such offence, or if no such specific penalty shall be imposed, then to forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds, together with the costs of the conviction."

The like, for a second offence.

The like, for a third offence.

Form of conviction.

Sect. 25. "And, in order to prevent frivolous and vexatious appeals, a conviction in the form or to the effect following, mutatis mutandis, as the case may be, shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, without stating the case or the facts or evidence in any more particular manner." (See this form, post, 127.)

Conviction to be returned to sessions and filed.

By sect. 26, "The justices before whom any such conviction shall have been made shall return the same, or cause the same to be returned, to the next general session or quarter session of the peace, holden for the county or place wherein the offence shall have been committed, and such conviction shall be then and there delivered to the clerk of the peace or other person acting as such, to be by him filed or enrolled amongst the records of the said court; and the certificate of the clerk of the peace of such conviction, which he is hereby required to grant, on demand, upon payment of one shilling, shall be legal evidence of every such conviction."

Conviction not to be quashed for want of form.

Sect. 27. "No conviction under this act, nor any adjudication made upon appeal therefrom, shall be quashed for want of form; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and that there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same." (See post, title "Conviction.")

What a petty sessions.

Every meeting of two justices in one place for business constitutes in itself a "petty sessions," within sect. 15. (Reg. v. Rawlins, 8 C. & P. 439.) And such justices must be acting in and for that division or place in which the house is situate when the offence was committed. (Ib.)

Justices may mitigate penalties.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 16, "it shall be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace, when he or they shall see cause, to mitigate any penalty incurred for any offence committed against the said recited acts or this act; provided that where any conviction shall take place on any information exhibited under the laws of excise, such mitigated penalty shall not be less than one fourth part of the penalty."

(11.) Certiorari—Appeal, and Costs of Appeal.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 27, no conviction nor any adjudication made upon appeal therefrom shall be removed by writ of certiorari or otherwise into any of her Majesty's superior courts of record. (See title, "Certiorari," post.)

Appeal to quarter sessions on third offence.

Sect. 16. "It shall and may be lawful for the party convicted of any such third offence (sect. 15, ante, 77) to appeal to the general sessions or quarter sessions of the peace then next ensuing, unless such sessions shall be held within twelve days next after such conviction, and in that case to the then next subsequent sessions; and in such case the party so convicted shall before such justices so convicting forthwith enter into a recognizance, with two sufficient sureties, personally to appear at the said general session or quarter session, and to abide the judgment of the court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the court awarded; which recognizances such justices are hereby authorised to require and take; or, in failure of the party convicted entering into such recognizance, such conviction shall remain good and valid to all intents and purposes; and the said justices who shall take such recognizance from the party convicted are also hereby required to bind the person who shall make such charge in a recognizance to appear at such general or quarter sessions as aforesaid, then and there to give evidence against the person so charged, and in like manner to bind any other person who shall have any knowledge of the circumstances of such offence; and it shall be lawful for the said court of general session or quarter session to adjudge such person to be guilty of any such third offence against the provisions of this act, as the case may be, and such adjudication shall be final to all intents and purposes; and it shall be lawful for such court of general session or quarter session to punish such offender by fine not exceeding the sum of one hundred pounds, together with the costs of such appeal, or to adjudge the license granted to and held by or on behalf of such offender to be forfeited and void, or to adjudge that no beer shall be sold by retail in the house or premises mentioned in the license of such offender for the term of two years from the date of such adjudication, or to punish such offender by such fine as aforesaid, and to adjudge such premises to be disqualified for the sale of beer as aforesaid, and such license to be forfeited and void; and if such license shall be adjudged to be forfeited and void, it shall thenceforth be void accordingly; and whenever in such case or in any other case the license of such offender shall be adjudged to be void, such offender shall from and after such adjudication be deemed and taken to be incapable of selling beer, ale, or porter by retail, in any house kept by him, for the space of two years, to be computed from the time of such adjudication; and any license granted to such person during such term shall be void to all intents and purposes."

and declare license void;

no beer to be sold on the premises for a year;

license granted to offender void.

Costs of appeal, (see title "Costs," Vol. I.)

Sect. 17. "Whenever it shall happen that any appeal respecting which any recognizance shall be entered into in pursuance of this act shall be dismissed, or that the conviction appealed against shall be affirmed, or that such appeal shall be abandoned, it shall be lawful for the court to whom such appeal shall have been made or intended to be made, and such court is hereby required to adjudge and order that the party so having appealed or having entered into such recognizance shall pay to the justices before whom such recognizance shall have been entered into, or to whomsoever they shall appoint, such sum by way of costs as shall in the opinion of such court be sufficient to indemnify such justices from all costs and charges whatsoever to which such justices may have been put in consequence of the intention or declared intention of such party to appeal; and if such party shall refuse or neglect to pay forthwith such sum, it shall be lawful for the said court to adjudge and order that the party so refusing or neglecting shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to remain until such sum be paid, or for any time not exceeding six calendar months, unless such sum be sooner paid: and in every case in which the conviction so appealed against shall be reversed, it shall be lawful for such court (if it shall think fit) to adjudge and order that the treasurer of the county or place in and for which such justices whose judgment shall have been so reversed shall have acted on the occasion when they shall have given such judgment, shall pay to such justices, or whomsoever they shall appoint, such sum as shall in the opinion of such court be sufficient to indemnify such justices from all costs and charges whatsoever to which such justices may have been so put; and the said treasurer is hereby authorised to pay the same, which shall be allowed to him in his accounts."

Commitment in case of non-payment(a).

Costs where judgment reversed.

2. License, &c. for, &c.

Proceedings at session, when to be carried on by petty constable. (a)

Sect. 18. "In every case in which any appeal shall be made by any person convicted of any offence under the provisions of this act, to the general session or quarter session, it shall be lawful for the convicting justices, if no other fit and proper person shall appear to prosecute such charge and to carry on such proceedings as may be necessary to obtain at such session an adjudication thereon, to order that the constable or other peace officer of the parish or place in which shall be situate the house kept by the person charged shall carry on all proceedings necessary to obtain such adjudication as aforesaid, and to bind such constable or other peace officer in a sufficient recognizance so to do; and it shall be lawful for the justices before whom such offender shall have been convicted to order the treasurer of the county or place in and for which such justices shall then act to pay to such constable or other peace officer, and to the witness or witnesses on his behalf, such sum or sums of money as to the court shall appear to be sufficient to reimburse such constable or other peace officer, and such witness or witnesses respectively, the expenses that he or they shall have been severally put to in and about such prosecution, which order the clerk of the peace is hereby directed and required forthwith to make out and to deliver to such constable or other peace officer, or to such witness or witnesses; and the said treasurer is hereby authorised and required, upon sight of such order, forthwith to pay to such constable or other peace officer, or other person authorised to receive the same, such money as aforesaid, and the said treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts." (As to appeals in general, see post, "Appeal.")

Expenses of prosecution to be charged on county rates. (b).

(12.) Proceedings against Sureties.

The 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 4, (ante, 65) provides that the party taking out license shall enter into a bond with sureties.

Proceedings against sureties on non-payment of penalties.

Sect. 19. "In case any person licensed under this act shall be convicted of any offence against this act, and shall not pay the penalty incurred by such conviction, it shall be lawful for the justices convicting such offender, after the expiration of one calendar month next after such conviction, to summon any surety or sureties named in the bond entered into and executed by such person and his surety or sureties at the time of obtaining his license, to appear before the said justices, and show cause why the penalty mentioned in such bond should not be paid by such surety or sureties, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to pay any penalty incurred by the party licensed, or to satisfy so much of such penalty so incurred as shall remain unpaid, and in case any such surety shall not show any sufficient cause to the contrary, it shall be lawful for such justices to adjudge that such penalty, if not paid, or so much thereof as aforesaid, shall be paid by such surety within fourteen days; and in case such penalty, or so much thereof as aforesaid, shall not be paid within fourteen days, it shall be lawful for such justices, if they shall think fit, to issue their warrant, and to levy the amount of such penalty, or so much thereof as aforesaid, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such surety, together with the costs of such distress and sale; and the certificate of the commissioners of excise, or their officer, or other persons by this act authorised to grant any license, of the date of such bond, and the names and descriptions of the surety or sureties in such bond, shall be sufficient evidence of such bond, and of the contents and execution thereof, against any surety or sureties in any proceedings under this act."

(13.) Penalties, how levied and enforced.

Penalties may be levied by distress. (c)

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 21, "In every case in which under the authority of this act any justices shall adjudge that any offender shall pay

By sect. 22, "Any justices before whom any penalty shall be recovered under the provisions of this act shall award, if they shall think fit, any portion of the same, not in any case exceeding one moiety thereof, to the use of the prosecutor; and the remainder, or in case no part of such penalty shall be awarded to the prosecutor, then the whole of such penalty shall be awarded to be paid and shall be paid to the treasurer of the county within which such offence shall be committed, to be applied by the said treasurer towards defraying the expenses of such county, and in aid of the county rates of such county."

Application of penalties.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 10, ante, 61, the penalties under this act, where not otherwise directed, are to be recovered under the provisions of the former acts.

And by sect. 21, ante, 61, the powers, provisions, and penalties of the former acts, are to apply to persons licensed under this act.

(14.) Actions against Justices and others.

By 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 28, "Every action against any justice, constable, or other person, for or on account of any matter or thing whatsoever done or commanded by him in the execution of his duty or office under this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months after the cause of action or complaint shall have arisen, and not afterwards; and if any person shall be sued for any matter or thing which he shall have done in the execution of this act, he may plead the general issue and give the special matter in evidence."

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

III. License to sell Wine and Spirits, Beer, &c. in Inns or Public Houses.

What licenses requisite to keep an inn.

To enable a person to keep an inn, or (as it is now more generally called) a public house, and sell therein wine and spirits, beer, cider or perry, or other exciseable liquors, two licenses are necessary; first, a magistrates' license; and secondly, an excise license. Neither is operative alone, both together they become so. (Rex v. Drake, 1 Burn's J. 24th ed. 56; Rex v. Downes, 3 T. R. 560.)

Magistrates' license only here considered.

We shall in this place notice only the laws and regulations as to the magistrates' license; as to the license to be obtained from the excise, see post, "Excise," Vol. II. It may be as well to observe, that by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 17, no excise license can be granted until a magistrates' license has been obtained.

The 9 G. 4, c. 61.

The only act now in force regulating the licensing of alehouses by magistrates, for the selling therein of wine, spirits, beer, cider, perry, or other exciseable liquors, is the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, intituled, "An Act to regulate the granting of Licenses to Keepers of Inns, Alehouses, and Victualling Houses in England," (a) which commences by reciting the expediency of reducing into one act the laws relating to the licensing, by justices of the peace, of persons keeping or about to keep inns, alehouses and victualling-houses, to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises, in that part of the United Kingdom called England.

9 Geo. 4, c. 61. Commencement of act. Repeal of acts.

(1.) Repeal of Statutes prior to 9 Geo. IV. c. 61.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 35, the act is to commence on the 10th of October, 1828, next ensuing the passing thereof: and the section then repeals the statute 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 25; the 1 Jac. I. c. 9; the 4 Jac. I. c. 4 & 5; the 7 Jac. I c. 10, and so much of the 21 Jac. I. c. 7, s. 4, as provides that any person, being an alehouse keeper, and who shall be convicted of any offence against the said act, shall be disabled from keeping an alehouse for three years;(a) and the 1 Car. I. c. 4; the 3 Car. I. c. 3; and so much of the 9 Geo. II. c. 23, s. 14, 15, 20, as relates to the licensing of retailers of spirituous liquors, and to the conviction of persons selling liquors by retail without a licence, and to the summoning of excise officers for the more easy discovery of such offenders; and so much of the 24 Geo. II. c. 40, s. 24, as relates to the fees of justices' clerks; and so much of the 26 Geo. II. c. 13, s. 12, as prevents justices of the peace in certain cases from granting licenses; and the whole of the 26 Geo. II. c. 31; and so much of the 28 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 2, as explains a clause in the last-mentioned act; and so much of the 29 Geo. II. c. 12, s. 23, 24, as relates to continuing and renewing licenses; and so much of the 30 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 14, as imposes a penalty on the keepers of public houses for suffering gaming; and so much of the 5 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 20, 21, 22, as requires retailers of exciseable liquors to exhibit their licenses, and clerks of the peace to deliver lists of persons licensed, and altering the punishment of such retailers selling without a license; and the whole of the 32 Geo. III. c. 59; and so much of the 38 Geo. III. c. 54, s 13, as exempts from the foregoing penalty persons selling beer or ale above certain quantities; and the whole of the 39 Geo. III. c. 86; and so much of the 48 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 7, 10, as relates to the form of justices' licenses, and to justices' clerks' fees; and so much of the 4 Geo. IV. c. 125, s. 1—6, as alters the time for holding such meetings, and for giving notices of applying for licenses for houses not before licensed, "except only such parts of any of the said acts as repeal any former acts or parts of acts, and except also, that all licenses granted and recognizances entered into under the said acts hereby repealed, or any of them, or under the 3 Geo. IV. c. 77,(b) shall remain in full force and virtue until the end of the terms for which such licenses and recognizances respectively have been or shall be granted or entered into; and all offences against the tenor of the said licenses, or in breach of the conditions of such recognizances, and all offences committed against the said recited acts, or any of them, before the commencement of this act, shall and may be prosecuted, heard, determined, and punished, as if this act had not been made; and all such offences committed after the commencement of this act shall be prosecuted, heard, determined and punished under the provisions of this act."

Except such of acts as repeal former acts, and except as to subsisting licenses, &c.

(2.) The Places, &c. exempted from 9 Geo. IV. c. 61.

Act not to affect two Universities; nor the Vintners of London; nor to alter the time for licensing in London; nor any law of excise, nor to prohibit sale of beer at fairs.

Sect. 36. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend to alter or in any manner to affect any of the rights or privileges of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or the powers of the chancellors or vice-chancellors of the same, as by law possessed under the respective charters of the said Universities or otherwise; or the master, wardens, freemen, and commonalty of the Vintners of the city of London, but not to extend to those freemen of the said Company of Vintners who have obtained the same by redemption only; nor to alter the time (c) of granting licenses for keeping inns in the city of London provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall alter any law relating to the revenue of excise, except so far as the same is hereby expressly

(a) It would seem that the other provisions in this act against tippling, which see post, 112, are virtually repealed by the subsequent provisions of this act.

(b) Now expired.

(c) The magistrates of London must pursue the other regulations of this act relating to the manner and place of holding the meeting. See R. v. Downs, 3 Term Rep. 560; R. v. Justices of Surrey, 2 D. & R. Mag. Cas. 435.

Freemen of Vintners' Company subject to certain provisions within the metropolitan police district.

But by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 41, "After the passing of this act every person who by reason of his or her freedom of the mystery or craft of vintners of the city of London, or of any right or privilege of such mystery, shall claim to be entitled to sell foreign wine by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises within the metropolitan police district, without license, shall be subject to all the provisions of all acts made for the regulation of persons so licensed, (except those provisions which require or refer to the taking out of a license either from any justice of the peace or from the commissioners of excise,) and, in the case of any offence committed by him or her against the tenor of the license granted under the provisions of any act for the sale of exciseable liquors by retail to be drunk or consumed on the premises, shall be liable to be dealt with, proceeded against, and punished in like manner as if selling wine by license, and not by virtue of such claim or privilege."

(3.) Rules for Interpretation of 9 Geo. IV. c. 61.

Rules for interpretation of act, 9 Geo. 4, c. 61.

In order to remove doubts as to the meaning of certain words in this act, the 37th section of the act, after reciting to that effect, enacts, "That the word 'justice' shall be deemed to mean justice of the peace; and that the words 'treasurer of the county or place' shall be deemed to include any officer acting in such capacity, or charged with the receipt and expenditure of monies from and out of which the cost of public prosecutions have been usually defrayed; that the words 'peace officer' shall be deemed to include any petty constable, tithing-man, headborough, beadle, or bailiff; that the words 'parish officer' shall be deemed to include any churchwarden, or chapel-wardens, or overseers of the poor; and that the said words 'justice,' 'treasurer of the county or place,' 'peace officer,' parish officer,' and the words "high constable,' and the words 'petty constable,' and the words 'overseer of the poor,' and the words 'clerk of justices,' shall each be deemed to include any person acting as such, and any number of justices, treasurers, peace officers, parish officers, high constables, petty constables, overseers of the poor, and clerks of justices; and that the word 'person,' and the word 'party,' shall be deemed to include any number of persons and parties; and that the meaning of the aforesaid several words shall not be restricted, although the same may be subsequently referred to in the singular number and masculine gender only; and that the word 'notice,' and the word 'license,' and the word 'adjournment,' and the word 'day,' and the word 'time,' and the word 'house,' and the word 'place,' shall each be deemed to include any number of notices, licenses, adjournments, days, times, houses, or places; and that the word 'county,' and the words 'county or place,' shall be deemed severally to include any county, riding, division of the county of Lincoln, hundred, division of a county, liberty, division of a liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, cinque port, or town corporate; and the words 'division or place' shall be deemed to include any division of a county or riding, liberty, division of a liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, cinque port, or town corporate; and that the words 'parish or place' shall be deemed to include any township, hamlet, tithing, vill, extra-parochial place, or any place maintaining its own poor; and that the word 'inn' shall be deemed to include any inn, alehouse, or victualling-house; and that the words 'inn, alehouse, or victualling-house,' shall be deemed to include all houses in which shall be sold by retail any exciseable liquor, to be drunk or consumed on the premises; and that the words 'exciseable liquor' shall be deemed to include any ale, beer, or other fermented malt liquor, sweets, cider, perry, wine, or other spirituous liquor which now is or hereafter may be charged with duty either by customs or excise; and that the word 'penalty' shall be deemed to include any fine, penalty, or forfeiture of a pecuniary nature; and that the meaning of the said several words shall not be restricted, although the same may be subsequently referred to in the singular number only."

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

9 Geo. 4, c. 61.

(4.) Places which require the License.

Places which require a license.

It does not appear that a magistrates' license under this act of 9 Geo. IV. is required for the keeping of a house of any particular denomination, the necessity for such license depending on the sale or disposal for consideration of exciseable liquors by retail to be consumed in the house. If such liquors are so sold or disposed of by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises, such house is an inn, alehouse, or victualling-house, within the meaning of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, and requires a license. (See 1 Hawk. c. 78, s. 4; Hale, P. C. 146.)

It seems, indeed, that a house in which persons board and pay a sum certain in respect of their entertainment, whether by the day or week, or any longer period, without relation to any quantity of any exciseable liquor with which they may be supplied, does not require a license; and it has accordingly been determined on prior statutes, that houses at Epsom, where they take in lodgers and boarders, coming to drink the waters there during the season, and dress victuals, and sell them ale and beer and entertain their horses at 8*d.* a day, but sell to no other persons, are not inns nor alehouses requiring a magistrates' license. (Parker v. Flint, 12 Mod. 254; Salk. 287; Carth. 417; 1 Ld. Raym. 479, S. C.)

Universities.

We have already seen, (ante, 83,) the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 36, does not affect the two Universities.

Canteens.

The annual Mutiny Act generally enacts, that when any persons shall hold any canteens under proper authority of the Board of Ordnance, it shall be proper for any two justices within their respective jurisdictions to grant or transfer any beer, wine, or spirit license to such persons without regard to the time of year or to the notices or certificates required by an act in respect of such licences; and the commissioners of excise, or their proper officers, within their respective districts, shall also grant such licenses as aforesaid, and such persons so holding canteens and having such licenses may sell therein victuals and exciseable liquors as empowered by such excise license, without being subject to any penalty or forfeiture.

(5.) Who may obtain the License.

Who disqualified from having license.

At common law any person may keep an inn or alehouse, and by 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 1, infra, a license for selling wines and spirits, &c. may be granted to any one whom the magistrates may in their discretion deem fit and proper.

Sheriff's officers, &c.

But the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 16, enacts, "That no sheriff's officer, or officer executing the legal process of any court of justice in any county or place, shall be capable of receiving or using any license under this act; and that every license granted or transferred to any person exercising any such office shall be void to all intents and purposes."

When license void.

And sect. 21 provides, as a punishment for offences against the tenor of licenses, that "If the license of such offender shall be so (as therein mentioned) adjudged void, such offender shall, from and after such last-mentioned adjudication, be deemed and taken to be incapable of selling exciseable liquors by retail in any inn kept by him for the space of three years, to be computed from the time of such adjudication, and any license granted to such person during such term shall be void to all intents and purposes." See the section in full, post, p. 96.

No excise license to be granted, except to a person licensed under 9 Geo. IV. c. 61.

Sect. 17 enacts, "That no license for the sale of any exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises of the person licensed, shall be granted by the commissioners of excise, or by any officer of excise, to any person whatsoever, unless such person shall have previously obtained from the justices a license under this act, and which said license of such justices shall be retained by such person after being produced to the commissioners or officers of excise; and every license granted by the commissioners of excise, or by any officers of excise, contrary to this provision, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes."

Licensee may carry on the business for another person.

It may be here observed, that there is no enactment which prevents the licensee from carrying on the business for the benefit of another. (See Brooker v. Wood, 3 Nev. & Man. 596; 5 B. & Adol. 1052, S. C.)

(6.) Licensing Meeting, when and where and how held.

Licensing meetings.

It will be expedient to inquire as to the time when and place where a party is to apply for a license, before proceeding to point out the steps he is to take to obtain that license.

A general licensing meeting to be held annually.

The 1st sect. of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, enacts, "That in every division of every county and riding, and of every division of the county of Lincoln, and in every hundred of every county, not being within any such division, and in every liberty, division of every liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, and town corporate, in that part of the United Kingdom called England, there shall be annually holden a special session of the justices of the peace, (to be called the General Annual Licensing Meeting,) for the purpose of granting licenses to persons keeping or being about to keep inns, alehouses, and victualling-houses, to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises therein specified; and that such meetings shall be holden in the counties of Middlesex and Surrey within the first ten days of the month of March, and in every other county on some day between the twentieth day of August and the fourteenth day of September inclusive; and that it shall be lawful for the justices acting in and for such county or place, assembled at such meeting, or at any adjournment thereof, and not as hereinafter disqualified from acting, to grant licenses, for the purposes aforesaid, to such persons as they the said justices shall, in the execution of the powers herein contained, and in the exercise of their discretion, deem fit and proper." (a)

Time of holding in Middlesex and Surrey.

In other counties.

Licenses to be granted at such meeting.

Mode of convening meeting;

a petty session to appoint it.

By sect. 2, "In every such division or place as aforesaid there shall be holden, twenty-one days at the least before each such general annual licensing meeting, a petty session of the justices acting for such county or place, (b) the majority of whom then present shall, by a precept (c) under their hands, appoint the day, hour, and place, upon and in which such general annual licensing meeting for such division or place shall be holden; and shall direct such precept to the high constable of the division or place for which such meeting is to be holden, requiring him, within five days next ensuing that on which he shall have received such precept, to order (d) the several petty constables or other peace officers within his constablewick to affix or cause to be affixed on the door of the church or chapel, and where there shall be no church or chapel, on some other public and conspicuous place within their respective districts, a notice (e) of the day, hour, and place at which such

Notice of meeting.

(a) By the 26 Geo. II. c. 31, s. 4, (now repealed by above act,) no ale license could be granted but on the 1st September yearly, or within twenty days after; and by section 16, alehouses in cities and towns corporate were excepted; but by 3 Geo. IV. c. 77, s. 7, (now expired,) all general annual meetings for granting licenses as well in cities and towns corporate as in all other places in England, should be held in the month of September, yearly, it was held in R. v. Justices of Surrey, 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 435, that the effect of this clause was not to repeal the general provisions of the former statute, but to extend its operation to cities and towns corporate only.

(b) Under the prior act it was considered that any justice of a county going to the meeting in the division was, for the purposes of the act, (26 Geo. II. c. 31, s. 4,) a justice of division. R. v. Price, Cald. 305, per Ashton, J. See rules for interpretation of act, ante, 84.

meeting is appointed to be holden, and to give to or to leave at the dwelling-house of each and every justice acting for such division or place, and of each and every person keeping an inn, or who shall have given notice of his intention to keep an inn, and to apply for a license to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises, within their respective districts, a copy of such notice."

Adjournment.

As to the sessions for the transfer of licenses, see sect. 4, post, 90.

As to the manner and place of holding a petty session and the notices requisite to convene it, see post, "Sessions," Vol. V.

Manner and place of holding meeting must be public.

Lord Kenyon, in R. v. Downes, 3 Term Rep. 569, observed, that it was of importance to the public, that licenses of this sort should be granted openly and not by stealth, in order that they may have an opportunity of objecting to the granting of these licenses to particular persons on the ground of unfitness. And the license in that case having been granted by two magistrates at a private meeting, and which was also holden after the general meeting had passed; it was held illegal, and would not protect the party from the penalty for selling beer, &c. without a justices' license.

(7.) Proceedings by Party before applying for the License.

Notice to be given by applicant to keep an inn, not before kept as one.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 10, "Every person intending to apply for a license to sell exciseable liquor by retail, to be drunk or consumed in any house not theretofore kept as an inn, (a) shall affix or cause to be affixed a notice on the door of such house, and on the door of the church or chapel of the parish or place in which such house shall be situate, and where there shall be no church or chapel, on some other public and conspicuous place within such parish or place, on three several Sundays between the first day of January and the last day of February in the counties of Middlesex and Surrey, and elsewhere between the first day of June and the last day of July, at some time between the hours of ten in the forenoon and of four in the afternoon, and shall serve a copy of such notice upon one of the overseers of the poor, and upon one of the constables or other peace officers of the said parish or place, within the month of February in the counties of Middlesex and Surrey, and elsewhere within the month of July, prior to the general annual licensing meeting; and every such notice, and the copies thereof, shall be written in a fair and legible hand, or printed, and shall be according to the form in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked A. (b) and shall be signed by the party intending to make such application, or by his agent thereunto authorised, and shall set forth the situation of the house in a true and particular manner, and the christian and surname of the party applying, together with the place of his residence, and his trade or calling, during the six months previous to the time of serving such notice, and his intention to apply for a license to sell exciseable liquor by retail, to be drunk or consumed in such house or premises."

Form of notice.

Certificates.

The former enactments, (26 Geo. II. c. 31, s. 2,) and law relative to the obtaining of certificates from the parson, &c. is no longer in force, being repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61. The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 77, is expired. (See R. v. Young, 1 Burr. 556.)

(8.) What Justices to attend the Meeting—Proceedings at, to obtain License—Adjournment of Meeting.

We shall consider this branch of the subject in the following order; viz. as to what justices may act, or not,—the presence of the applicant,—the grant or refusal of the license,—and the adjournment of the meeting.

What justices may act.

We have already seen that the first section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, enacts, that the justices acting in and for the county or place wherein the meeting is held, not being disqualified from acting, may grant the required license as they in the execution of the act and in their discretion shall think fit, (ante, 86.)

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

9 Geo. 4, c. 61. What justices may not act.

All justices who are interested or who may be reasonably supposed to be so, are prohibited from acting in or being present at the meeting by the 6th section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, which enacts, "That no justice who shall be a common brewer, distiller, maker of malt for sale, or retailer of malt or of any exciseable liquor, or who shall be concerned in partnership with any common brewer, distiller, maker of malt for sale, or retailer of malt or of any exciseable liquor, shall act in or be present at any general annual licensing meeting, or at any adjournment thereof, or at any special session for granting or transferring licenses under this act, or shall take part in the discussion or adjudication of the justices upon any application for a license, or upon any appeal therefrom; and no justice shall act upon any of the aforesaid occasions, in the case of any house licensed or about to be licensed under this act, of which such justice shall be the owner, or for the owner of which he shall be manager or agent, or of any house being in whole or in part the property of any common brewer, distiller, maker of malt for sale, or retailer of malt or of any exciseable liquor, to whom such justice shall be, either by blood or by marriage, the father, son, or brother, or of whom such justice shall be the partner in any other trade or calling; and that every justice who, being hereby disqualified, shall knowingly or wilfully so offend, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to disqualify any justice, (not otherwise disqualified, and having no beneficial interest in the house licensed or about to be licensed under this act,) from acting on any of the occasions aforesaid, by reason of the legal estate in such house being vested in him as trustee for any person or persons, or for any charitable or public use or purpose whatsoever."

Penalty for acting.

County justices to act in corporate jurisdictions where not two qualified justices.

The county justices are by the 7th section of the act empowered to attend and act at the meeting where holden for a corporate or inferior jurisdiction, where there are not two justices present who are legally competent to act. The section enacts as follows: "That whenever at any of the meetings to be holden as aforesaid for any liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, or town corporate, there shall not be present at least two justices acting in and for any such liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, or town corporate, who are not disqualified, it shall be lawful for the justices acting in and for the county or counties adjoining to such liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, or town corporate, and not disqualified from acting, to act within such liberty or place, and with the justice or justices thereof, not as hereinbefore disqualified, who shall be present at any such meeting as aforesaid, for the purpose of granting or transferring licenses under, or of hearing complaints as to offences against this act; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary nothwithstanding."

But cinque ports exempted from this provision.

But by the 8th section the cinque ports are exempted from this last provision. The section enacts, "That nothing herein contained shall extend to give the justices of the county, or any division thereof, any power or authority for the putting of the provisions of this act in execution within any of the cinque ports or either of the two ancient towns, or any of the corporate or other members or liberties of the cinque ports or two ancient towns; but that it shall be lawful for the justices of and for each of the principal cinque ports and two ancient towns, and not as hereinbefore disqualified from acting, and none other, to act within and for the same, and the liberties thereof, not corporate, respectively, as they have been accustomed, and for them or any of them (not so as last aforesaid disqualified) to act within each of the corporate members immediately belonging or subordinate to such principal cinque port or ancient town, with the justice or justices of each such corporate member, (not so as last aforesaid disqualified,) for the purpose of granting or transferring licenses under, or of hearing complaints as to offences against this act, in all such cases in which the justices of the county are hereinbefore empowered or authorised to act with the justice or justices of any liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, or town corporate."

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

9 Geo. 4, c. 61. Where a concurrent jurisdiction.

When the county justices and justices of another jurisdiction have concurrent authority over the same place, whichever set first appoints a meeting for granting ale licenses for such place has so far assumed jurisdiction over that subject, that although it seems that the other set may join in that assembly, and act with them, they cannot appoint a subsequent separate meeting. If they do, and there grant licenses, not only are their proceedings illegal and void, but they are liable to be indicted, or a criminal information may sometimes be obtained against them. (R. v. Sainsbury, 4 Term Rep. 451.)

Publicity of meeting.

We have already seen the meeting must be public, and not in private, ante, 87. (R. v. Downes, 3 T. R. 569.)

Presence of applicant. When prevented by illness, &c.

Regularly the applicant should appear before the justices in person. The following provision, however, is to be found in 12th section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, dispensing with such presence in certain cases, viz. "That if any person intending to apply at the general annual licensing meeting, or at any adjournment thereof, or at any special session, for any license to be granted under the authority of this act, or for the transfer of any such license, shall be hindered by sickness or infirmity, or by any other reasonable cause, from attending in person at any such meeting, it shall be lawful for the justices there assembled to grant or transfer such license to such person so hindered from attending, and to deliver the same to any person then present, who shall be duly authorised by the person so hindered from attending to receive the same, proof being adduced to the satisfaction of such justices, who are hereby empowered to examine upon oath into the matter of such allegation, that such person is hindered from attending by good and sufficient cause."

Adjournment of annual meeting.

The 3d section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, gives a power of adjourning the general annual licensing meeting as follows: "That it shall be lawful for the justices acting at the general annual licensing meeting, and they are hereby required, to continue such meeting by adjournment to such day or days, and to such place or places within the division or place for which such meeting shall be holden, as such justices may deem most convenient and sufficient for enabling persons keeping inns within such division or place to apply for such license: provided nevertheless, that the adjourned meeting to be holden next after such general annual licensing meeting shall not be so holden in or upon any of the five days next ensuing that on which such general annual licensing meeting shall have been holden as aforesaid; and that every adjournment of the said general annual licensing meeting shall be holden within the month of March in the counties of Middlesex and Surrey, and of August or September in every other county."

When to be held.

Notice of adjournment.

A notice of the adjournment must be given, the 5th section of the act enacting, "That whenever the justices shall have ordered any such adjournment of the general annual licensing meeting, or shall have appointed such special sessions as aforesaid, the day, hour, and place for holding every such adjourned meeting, and every such special session, shall be appointed by precept of the majority of the said justices, directed to the high constable, requiring notices, (a) similar in form to those given at the general annual licensing meeting, to be affixed on the door of the church or chapel, or on some other public and conspicuous place, and to be served upon the same parties."

(9.) License, how granted, Form, Effect and Duration of.

Grant or refusal of license. Questions to be decided and license to be signed by majority of justices.

The 9th section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, enacts, "That when (at any of the meetings aforesaid) any question touching the granting, withholding, or transferring any license, or the fitness of the person applying for such license, or of the house intended to be kept by such person, shall arise, such question shall be determined by the majority of justices, not disqualified, who shall be present when such question shall arise; and every license granted under the authority of this act shall be signed by the majority of the justices not disqualified, who shall be present when such license shall be granted."

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

We shall hereafter see what discretion the magistrates may adopt in the grant or refusal of a license, and the remedies on an improper refusal, or for an improper grant. No condition should be annexed to the grant, post.

As to the fees for granting, see post, 93.

Form and duration of license.

The form and duration of the license are pointed out by the 13th section of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, which enacts, "That every license which shall be granted under the authority of this act shall be according to the form in the schedule hereunto annexed (marked C.(a)), and shall be in force in the counties of Middlesex and Surrey from the fifth day of April, and elsewhere from the tenth day of October, after the granting thereof, for one whole year thence respectively next ensuing, and no longer; and every license for the purposes aforesaid, which shall be granted at any other time or place, or in any other form than that hereby directed, except as hereinafter excepted, shall not entitle any person to obtain an excise license for selling exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises of the person licensed, and shall be utterly void to all intents and purposes."

No other license to entitle a party to excise license to retail exciseable liquors.

Where retail beer license is void by conviction, retail spirit license void also.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 23, where the retail beer license has become void by conviction, as mentioned in s. 22, ante, 64, the retail spirit license shall become void also. The enactment is, "That where the license for the sale of beer, cider, or perry by retail, to be drunk or consumed upon the house or premises of the person or persons to whom the same is granted, shall become void, and the person or persons thereupon disabled in such manner as beforementioned by this act; the license for the sale of any spirits, or foreign wine or sweets, or made wines or mead, or metheglin, by retail, to be drunk or consumed upon the house or premises thereupon granted, shall become null and void also to all intents and purposes; and in such case if the person or persons to whom the same respectively were granted shall sell any spirits, or any foreign wine, or any sweets, or made wines, or any mead, or metheglin respectively, by retail, to be drunk or consumed upon the house or premises after such conviction as aforesaid shall have taken place in manner beforementioned in this act, and every such license as aforesaid has thereby become void, such person or persons shall incur the penalty for selling spirits or foreign wines, or sweets or made wines, or mead or metheglin, to be consumed upon the premises, by retail, without license; and in all such cases, in the prosecution for the recovery of such penalty as aforesaid, such conviction shall be proved in such and the like manner as before specified by this act in a prosecution under similar circumstances for the sale of beer, cider, or perry, by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the house or premises without license."

Selling spirits, &c. after such conviction.

Penalty.

The 24th section of the same act points out in what cases, upon the expiration of a magistrate's license to keep a public house within the year, the proportional parts of duties on excise licenses are to be returned. (See "Excise," Vol. II.)

(10.) The Transfer of License and Grant of Fresh License in case of Removal, Death, or other Contingency.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 44. Empowering transfer of licenses by justices at petty sessions.

In order to facilitate the transfer of licenses at any time of the year, the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 44, intituled "An Act for the Transfer of Licenses and Regulation of Public Houses," (1st July, 1842,) enacts, "That from and after the passing of this act, at any petty session of justices of the peace holden in and for any division of every county and riding, and in any hundred of every county not being within such division, and in every liberty, city, town, or place within which any inn, alehouse, or victualling-house shall be situated, and for which the said justices shall be acting, at any time when no special session shall be holden for any such division, hundred, liberty, city, town, or place, it shall be lawful, in those cases where justices of the peace assembled at a special session are empowered, by an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act to regulate the granting of Licenses to Keepers of Inns, Alehouses, and Victualling-Houses in England," to transfer or grant licenses, before the expiration thereof, to sell exciseable liquors by retail in the same house or premises in respect of which any person had been theretofore duly licensed, for the majority of the justices then present, upon application made to them at any such petty session, by indorsement under their hands and seals on any license which shall have been granted pursuant to the provisions of the said act at any general licensing meeting, or at any adjournment thereof, to authorise (if they shall deem it proper so to do, after examining upon oath all necessary parties) any person not disqualified by the said act, to whom it shall be proposed at the time of such application to transfer or grant any such license, to use, exercise, and carry on the business of a licensed victualler at the same house and on the same premises, and there to sell such exciseable liquors as might theretofore have been lawfully sold and retailed therein; and thereupon it shall be lawful for the officer of excise empowered to transfer licenses by indorsement on the excise licenses required to be transferred to give the like authority to the persons so authorised by the magistrate or justices; and the authority so granted shall continue and be in force until the then next ensuing special session which shall be holden for the division, hundred, liberty, city, town, or place within which such house and premises shall be situated, and no longer; at which special session the justices then and there assembled, upon application made to them pursuant to the said act, touching any transfer or grant of license to the party or parties to whom such authority shall have been so given at petty sessions as aforesaid, shall hear and dispose of such application according to the provisions of the said act: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to empower any justices at petty sessions to give any such authority as aforesaid within any of the divisions assigned or to be assigned to any of the police courts already established or to be established within the metropolitan police district, except in the borough of Southwark; but that any such application as is hereinbefore directed to be made at petty sessions shall, when the house and premises in respect whereof any license shall have been obtained under the said act shall be situated within any of the said police court divisions, and not in the borough of Southwark, be made to one of the police magistrates sitting at any of the said courts, and such magistrate shall in his discretion grant such authority in the manner and for the time hereinafter mentioned: provided also, that any person or persons who shall be authorised, under the provisions of this act, to continue to carry on the business of a licensed victualler, shall, after the obtaining such authority, and so long as the same shall continue in force, be subject to all the powers, regulations, proceedings, penalties, and provisions declared by or contained in any act or acts in force touching the regulation, government, or control of licensed keepers of inns, alehouses, and victualling-houses, in like manner as if the same had been repealed and re-enacted, and that all penalties and forfeitures imposed by any such act or acts shall be applied as directed by the same respectively."

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 44.

By indorsement on the license.

Excise licenses also to be transferred to same person by indorsement.

To continue in force until the next special session.

The aforesaid provisions not to extend to the metropolitan police district, except Southwark.

And the application to be made to a magistrate of such district.

Transferee liable to all provisions and penalties of acts then in force.

Sect. 2. "That whenever it shall be proved to the satisfaction of any such magistrate or justices at petty session, upon any application made as aforesaid, that any license granted pursuant to the said act passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth has been lost or mislaid, it shall and may be lawful for the said magistrate or justices to receive a copy of such license, certified to be a true copy under the hand of the clerk to the licensing justices by whom the said license shall have been granted, and to make such indorsement thereon as he or they might make under the provisions of this act upon the original license; and such indorsement upon the copy so certified shall be as valid and effectual as if the same had been made upon the said license."

When licenses are lost a copy may be indorsed and considered valid.

Sect. 3. "That for every such certified copy and every such indorsement a fee of two shillings and sixpence, and no more, shall and may be demanded and taken."

Fee for indorsing the copy.

Sect. 4. "That no justice of the peace shall act upon any application which shall be so made at petty sessions as aforesaid who now is or shall be disqualified by law from acting in or being present at any general annual licensing meeting, or any adjournment thereof, or at any special session for granting or transferring licenses to sell exciseable liquors; and that every justice who, being so disqualified, shall wilfully offend against this provision, shall be liable to the same penalty and proceedings for the recovery thereof, as are specified and directed by the said act of the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth." (As to what justices are disqualified under the 9 Geo. IV. see ante, 88.)

Special sessions for the transfer of licenses.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 4, it is enacted, "That the justices assembled at the general or quarter session which shall be holden at Michaelmas next after the passing of this act, and at the general annual licensing meeting in every subsequent year, shall appoint not less than four nor more than eight special sessions, to be holden in the division or place for which each such meeting shall be holden, in the year next ensuing such general annual licensing meeting, at periods as near as may be equally distant; at which special session it shall be lawful for the justices then and there assembled, in the cases and in the manner and for the time hereinafter directed, to license such persons intending to keep inns theretofore kept by other persons being about to remove from such inns, as they the said justices shall, in the execution of the powers herein contained, and in the exercise of their discretion, deem fit and proper persons, under the provisions hereinafter enacted, to be licensed to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises."

Notice of application to transfer.

By sect. 11, "Every person holding a license under the authority of this act, or his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, being desirous to transfer such license to some other person, and intending to apply at the special session then next ensuing for permission so to do, shall, five days at the least prior to such special session, serve a notice of such his intention upon one of the overseers of the poor, and upon one of the constables or other peace officers of the parish or place in which the house kept by the person so holding such license is situate; and every such notice shall be written in a fair and legible hand, or printed, and shall be according to the form in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked B. [post, No. 31,] and shall be signed by the party intending to make such application, or by his agent thereunto authorised, and shall set forth the christian and surname of the person to whom it is intended that such license shall be transferred, together with the place of his residence, and his trade or calling, during the six months previous to the time of serving such notice."

Other proceedings.

Fresh licenses on compulsory change of tenancy by death, bankruptcy, &c.

In cases where there is a compulsory change of tenancy, as by death, bankruptcy, &c., or the tenant yields up the premises, or where the tenant about to quit has neglected to renew his license, the 14th section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, provides for the granting of fresh licenses. It is thereby enacted, "That if any person duly licensed under this act shall (before the expiration of such license) die, or shall be, by sickness or other infirmity, rendered incapable of keeping an inn, or shall become bankrupt, or shall take the benefit of any act for the relief of insolvent debtors; or if any person so licensed, or the heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns of any person so licensed, shall remove from or yield up the possession of the house specified in such license; or if the occupier of any such house, being about to quit the same, shall have wilfully omitted, or shall have neglected to apply, at the general annual licensing meeting, or at any adjournment thereof, for a license to continue to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed in such house; or if any house, being kept as an inn by any person duly licensed as aforesaid, shall be or be about to be pulled down or occupied under the provisions of any act for the improvement of the highways, or for any other public purpose; or shall be, by fire, tempest, or other unforeseen and unavoidable calamity, rendered unfit for the reception of travellers, and for the other legal purposes of an inn; it shall be lawful for the justices assembled as aforesaid at a special session, holden under the authority of this act, for the division or place in which the house so kept or having been kept shall be situate, in any one of the above-mentioned cases, and in such cases only, to grant to the heirs, executors, or administrators of the person so dying, or to the assigns of such person becoming incapable of keeping an inn, or to the assignee or assignees of such bankrupt or insolvent, or to any new tenant or occupier of any house having so become unoccupied, or to any person to whom such heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns shall by sale or otherwise have bonâ fide conveyed or otherwise made over his or their interest in the occupation and keeping of such house, a license to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed in such house, or the premises thereunto belonging; or to grant to the person whose house shall as aforesaid have been or shall be about to be pulled down or occupied for the improvement of the highways, or for any other public purpose, or have become unfit for the reception of travellers, or for the other legal purposes of an inn, and who shall open and keep as an inn some other fit and convenient house, a license to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed therein: provided always, that every such license shall continue in force only from the day on which it shall be granted until the fifth day of April or the tenth day of October then next ensuing, as the case may be: provided also, that every person intending to apply, in any of the above-mentioned cases, at any such special session for a license to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed in a house or premises thereunto belonging (in which exciseable liquors shall not have been sold by retail, to be drunk or consumed on the premises, by virtue of a license granted at the general annual licensing meeting next before such special session), shall, on some one Sunday within the six weeks next before such special session, at some time between the hours of ten in the forenoon and of four in the afternoon, affix or cause to be affixed on the door of such house, and on the door of the church or chapel of the parish or place in which such house shall be situate, and where there shall be no church or chapel, on some other public and conspicuous place within such parish or place, such and the like notice [see form, (No. 30,) post] as is hereinbefore directed to be affixed by every person intending to apply at the general annual licensing meeting for a license to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed in a house not heretofore kept as an inn, and shall in like manner serve copies of the said notice on one of the overseers of the poor, and on one of the constables or other peace officers of such parish or place."

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 15, "It shall be lawful for the clerk of the justices, as well at the general annual licensing meeting as also at any special session to be holden under this act, to demand and receive from every person to whom a license shall be granted under this act, for the trouble of such clerk, and for all expenses connected therewith, the sums following, and no more: videlicet, for the petty constable or other peace officer, for serving notices, and for all other services hereby required of such petty constable or other peace officer, the sum of one shilling; for the clerk of the justices, for the license, the sum of five shillings; and for preparing the precepts to be directed to the high constable, and notices to be delivered by the petty constable, as required by this act, the sum of one shilling and sixpence; and every such clerk, who shall demand or receive from any person for such respective fees in this behalf any greater sum or any thing of greater value than the sums hereinbefore specified, being in the whole the sum of seven shillings and sixpence, shall for every such offence, on conviction before one (12.) Penalty, &c. for selling Wine and Spirits, &c. without a Magistrates' License.

Penalty for selling ale, &c. without a justices' license.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 18, imposes a penalty on a party selling any exciseable liquor to be consumed on his premises, not being duly licensed. The following is the enactment, viz. "That every person who shall sell, barter, exchange, or for valuable consideration otherwise dispose of, any exciseable liquor by retail, to be drunk or consumed in his house or premises, or shall permit or suffer any exciseable liquor to be sold, bartered, exchanged, or otherwise disposed of for valuable consideration, by retail, to be drunk or consumed in his house or premises, without being duly licensed so to do; and that every person, being duly licensed, who shall sell, barter, exchange, or for valuable consideration otherwise dispose of, or shall permit or suffer to be sold, bartered, exchanged, or otherwise disposed of for valuable consideration, any exciseable liquor by retail, to be drunk or consumed in his house or premises, not being the house or premises specified in such license; shall respectively for every such offence, on conviction (a) before one justice, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty nor less than five pounds, together with the costs of the conviction: provided always, that no penalty for such sale, barter, exchange, or other disposal of any such liquor by retail without license, shall be incurred by the heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns of any person licensed under this act, who shall die, become bankrupt, or take the benefit of any act for the relief of insolvent debtors, before the expiration of his license, so as such sale, barter, exchange, or other disposal of such liquor, be made in the house or premises specified in such license, and take place prior to the special session then next ensuing, unless such special session shall be holden within fourteen days next after the death, bankruptcy, or insolvency of the said person, and in any such case to the special session which shall be holden next after such special session aforesaid."

Proviso in case of death, &c.

Penalty of 20*l.* under 35 Geo. 3, c. 113. (a)

The 35 Geo. III. c. 113, appears to be still in force, (b) and comprehends a greater punishment than the above provision, though now rarely if ever acted upon. It is not an excise law, and provides a penalty of £20 for selling exciseable liquors without a magistrates' license. (See R. v. Hanson, 4 Barn. & Ald. 519; R. v. Drake, 6 M. & Sel. 116.)

Party disabled from keeping alehouse.

The enactment is as follows:—Sect. 1. "If any person shall sell ale or beer, or any other exciseable liquors by retail, or shall permit or suffer any ale or beer or any other exciseable liquors to be sold by retail in his, her, or their house, out-house, or yard, garden, orchard, or other place in that part of Great Britain called England, the dominion of Wales and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, without being duly licensed so to do, and shall thereof be duly convicted, every such person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of (b) To make penalties cumulative, express words to that effect must be introduced into the act, as in 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 17, ante, 71; see Attorney General v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 378; Henderson v. Sherborn, 2 M. & W. 236, Rex v. The Trustees of the Northleach and Witney Roads, 5 B. & Ad. 978; Barrett v. The Stockton Railway Company, 2 *Scott, N. £20, and also the costs and expenses attending the conviction, to be levied and recovered as herein is directed (a), and on and after a second conviction for the like offence, shall also be rendered incapable of being thereafter licensed to keep an alehouse, or to sell ale or beer or other exciseable liquors by retail." 3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

The 17th section of this act contains a proviso similar to the one, ante, 84, as to selling beer, &c. in fairs. Fairs.

Sect. 14. Where it shall be proved to the satisfaction of such justice that such offender hath not been before convicted of any offence against this act, such justice may mitigate the penalty hereby imposed, (in case of such first offence, but not otherwise,) to not less than £10. Mitigation of penalty.

Sect. 15. Any inhabitant of any parish, township or place in which any such offence shall be committed, shall be deemed a competent witness. Inhabitant a witness.

Sect. 16. All penalties within this act shall be sued for and determined within six months after the offence is committed.(b) Limitation of prosecution.

In R. v. Drake, 6 M. & Sel. 116, it was held that the jurisdiction of justices under the 35 Geo. III. c. 113, upon an information for selling ale by retail without a license, was not taken away by the 48 Geo. III. c. 143.

In R. v. Downes, 3 Term Rep. 560, it was held, that a person who sold spirituous liquors without a license from two justices, was liable to the penalties of the 5 Geo. III. c. 46, though he had a license from the excise to retail spirituous liquors.

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 38, constables are not to be required to make presentments respecting unlicensed alehouses. Presentment by constable.

It has been held, that a brewer who delivered beer to be used in a particular public-house on the credit of a person not the licensed keeper of the house, may maintain an action against the latter for goods sold and delivered. (Brooker v. Wood, 3 Nev. & Man. 596; 5 B. & Adolph. 1052; Meux v. Humphries, 3 C. & P. 79; 1 M. & M. 132.) Selling beer to unlicensed person.

(13.) Penalty for not selling by Standard Measures.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 19, "Every person hereby licensed to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed in his house or premises, shall, if required, sell or otherwise dispose of all such liquors by retail therein, (except in quantities less that a half pint,) by the gallon, quart, pint, or half pint measure, sized according to the standard, and shall also, if required by any guest or customer purchasing such liquor, retail the same in a vessel sized according to such standard; and in default thereof he shall for every such offence forfeit the illegal measure, and pay a sum not exceeding forty shillings, together with the costs of the conviction, to be recovered within thirty days next after that on which such offence was committed, before any one justice; and such penalty shall be over and above all penalties to which the offender may be liable under any other act." (See 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 12, ante, 73.) Standard measures to be used.

(14.) Penalty for not closing Public Houses in Riots.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 20, "It shall be lawful for any two justices acting for any county or place where any riot or tumult shall happen or be expected to take place, to order or direct that every person licensed under this act, and keeping any house situate within their respective jurisdictions in or near the place where such riot or tumult shall happen or be expected to take place, Justices may order licensed houses to be closed during riots.

(a) See post, 99.

(b) A question has been raised without being decided, whether the penalty of keeping an alehouse without license be incurred by a person acting under a license which is void from an irregularity in the jurisdiction of the magistrates who granted it. The prevailing opinion seems to be in the affirmative of such question; but owing to a difference of opinion existing in the Court, the point was not determined in the case in which it arose, (Cald. 305, 306, n. 10; R. v. Bryan. Andr. 81; Paley on Con. by Dowling, 52.)

(See 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 11, ante, 71.)

(15.) Penalty and Punishment for Offences against the License.

Offences against license.

The license itself, the form of which will be found, post, No. 32, contains a prohibition against the commission of several offences therein specified, and the reader is referred to it to ascertain what those offences are.

First offence to be determined by two justices.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 21, enacts different degrees of punishment against publicans for offences against the tenor of their license. The enactment is as follows:—"That every person licensed under this act who shall be convicted before two justices acting in and for the division or place in which shall be situate the house kept or theretofore kept by such person, of any offence against the tenor of the license to him granted, shall, unless proof be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices, that such person had been theretofore convicted before two justices, within the space of the three years next preceding, of some offence against the tenor of the license subsisting at the time when such last-mentioned offence was committed, be adjudged (a) by such justices to be guilty of a first offence against the provisions of this act relative to the maintenance of good order and rule, (b) and to forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds, together with the costs of the conviction.

Penalty for second offence in three years to be determined by two justices.

"But if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices that such person had been previously convicted before two justices, within the space of the three years next preceding, of one offence only against the tenor of the license subsisting at the time when such last-mentioned offence was committed, such person shall be adjudged (c) by such justices to be guilty of a second offence against the provisions of this act as aforesaid, and to forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds, together with the costs of the conviction.

Penalty for third offence, consideration to be adjourned to next special sessions or to general meeting.

"But if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of such justices that such person had been previously convicted before two justices within the space of the three years next preceding, of two separate offences against the tenor of the licenses subsisting at the times when such last-mentioned offences were committed, it shall be lawful for the said justices, and they are hereby required, to adjourn the further consideration of the charge, so made against such person as aforesaid, to the special session to be then next holden under this act for the division or place in which shall be situate the house kept by such person, or to the general annual licensing meeting for the said division or place, if such meeting shall take place before any such special session shall be holden.

Summons to party charged.

"And such justices shall issue their summons to the person so charged, to appear at such special session or at such general annual licensing meeting, then and there to answer to the matter of such charge;

Recognizance by complainant and witness.

"And shall bind the person who shall make such charge, and any other person who shall have any knowledge of the circumstances thereof, in a sufficient recognizance to appear at such special session or at such general annual licensing meeting, then and there to prosecute and to give evidence upon such charge; and if proof shall be adduced to the satisfaction of the justices assembled at such special session or at such general annual licensing meeting, that such person so charged is guilty of the offence with which he is so charged,

(a) See form of conviction, post, (No. 33.)

(b) See the 20th section, supra, as to a magistrates' order to close the house in case of riot or tumult, the section enacting, that a disobedience of such order shall be deemed as a breach of good order and rule in the house.

such person shall be adjudged to be guilty of a third offence against the provisions of this act as aforesaid, and to forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding fifty pounds, together with the costs of the conviction.

9 Geo. 4, c. 61. Adjudication in case of third offence. Hearing of case may be adjourned to sessions.

"Provided always, that if at any time before the hearing of any such last-mentioned charge, the justices assembled as aforesaid shall in their discretion think fit to direct that the hearing of such charge shall be adjourned to the general or quarter session of the peace then next ensuing, there to be inquired of by a jury, or if the person so charged shall in writing under his hand request the said justices to direct that the hearing of such charge shall be so adjourned as aforesaid, the said justices are hereby required to direct that the hearing of such charge shall be so adjourned, provided that the person who shall have made such request shall, before such justices so assembled, forthwith enter into a recognizance with two sufficient sureties personally to appear at the said general or quarter session, and to try such charge and to abide the judgment of the Court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the Court awarded.

Recognizance by party accused and sureties to appear at session.

"And the said justices are hereby required to bind in a recognizance to appear at such general or quarter session as aforesaid, then and there to give evidence against the person so charged, the person who shall make such charge, and any other person who shall have any knowledge of the circumstance thereof.

Trial of third offence by jury.

"And it shall be lawful for the said Court of general or quarter session to direct a jury then and there duly impanelled to be sworn to inquire of the offence so charged to have been committed, and upon their verdict of 'guilty,' to adjudge such person to be guilty of a third offence against the provisions of this act as aforesaid, and such verdict and adjudication shall be final to all intents and purposes; and to punish such offender by fine, not exceeding the sum of one hundred pounds, or to adjudge the license granted to and held by or on behalf of such offender to be forfeited and void, or to punish such offender by such fine as aforesaid, and to adjudge such license to be forfeited and void, and if such license shall be adjudged to be forfeited and void, it shall thenceforth be void accordingly; and every excise license for selling any exciseable liquors by retail, then held by or on behalf of such offender, shall also be void; and if the license of such offender shall be so adjudged to be void, such offender shall from and after such last-mentioned adjudication be deemed and taken to be incapable of selling exciseable liquors by retail in any inn kept by him for the space of three years, to be computed from the time of such adjudication; and any license granted to such person during such term shall be void to all intents and purposes; provided also, that the Court may, upon sufficient cause shown, adjourn the hearing of such charge to the then next general or quarter session of the peace, when the same shall be finally determined."

Penalty or punishment on verdict of 'guilty.'

Sessions may adjourn hearing.

Proceedings at sessions on adjournment for third offence to be carried on by petty constable.

On an adjournment to the session on a charge of a third offence, the justices may order the constable or peace officer of the district to prosecute and allow him the expenses of the prosecution. The 22d section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, enacts, "that in every case in which the justices assembled at any special session or at any general annual licensing meeting shall direct that the charge against any person licensed under this act shall be adjourned to the general or quarter session, it shall be lawful for such justices, if no other fit and proper person shall appear to prosecute such charge, and to carry on such proceedings as may be necessary to obtain at such session an adjudication thereon, to order that the constable or other peace officer of the parish or place, in which shall be situate the house kept by the person so charged, shall carry on all proceedings necessary to obtain such adjudication as aforesaid, and to bind such constable or other peace officer in a sufficient recognizance so to do; and it shall be lawful for the justices, before whom such charge shall have been heard, to order the treasurer of the county or place in and for which such justices shall then act, to pay to such constable or other peace officer, and to the witness or witnesses on his behalf, such sum or sums of money as to the Court shall appear to be sufficient to reimburse such constable or other peace officer, and such witness or witnesses respectively, the expenses that he or they shall have been severally put to in and about such prosecution; which order the clerk of the peace is hereby directed and required forthwith to make out and deliver to such constable or other peace officer, or to such witness or witnesses; and the said treasurer is hereby authorised and required, upon sight of such order, forthwith to pay to such constable or other peace officer, or other person authorised to receive the same, such money as aforesaid; and the said treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

(16.) Compelling Attendance of Witnesses—Conviction—Defects in Commitment, &c.—Certiorari.

Penalty on witnesses not attending. (a)

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 23, "If any person shall be summoned as a witness to give evidence before any justice touching any of the matters aforesaid, either on the part of the complainant or of the person accused, and shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time and place for that purpose appointed, and who shall not make such reasonable excuse for such neglect or refusal as shall be admitted and allowed by such justice, or who appearing shall refuse to be examined on oath or affirmation and give evidence, every such person shall, on conviction before such justice, forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding ten pounds." (See the 35 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 10, post, 100.)

Conviction must be on oath.

Sect. 31. "Every conviction under this act shall be on the oath or oaths of one or more credible witness or witnesses; and any justice, not as hereinbefore disqualified, and acting in and for the county or place in which the offence complained of shall have been committed, is hereby authorised to administer the same."

Form of conviction. (b)

Sect. 32, "In order to prevent frivolous and vexatious appeals," enacts, "that a conviction in the form or to the effect following, mutatis mutandis, as the case may be, shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, without stating the case, or the facts or evidence, in any more particular manner; that is to say,

'—— } Be it remembered, that on this day of , in the year ,

Given under hand and seal the day and year above written.*'"

Conviction to be returned to sessions and filed.

Sect. 33. "Every justice before whom any such conviction shall have been made shall return the same, or cause it to be returned, to the next general or quarter session of the peace holden for the county or place wherein the offence shall have been committed; and it shall be then and there delivered to the clerk of the peace, or other person acting as such, to be by him filed or enrolled amongst the records of the said court; and the certificate of the clerk of the peace of such conviction, which he is thereby required to grant on demand upon payment of a fee of one shilling, shall be legal evidence of every such conviction."

Conviction or commitment not bad for want of form. (c)

No certiorari.

Sect. 34. "No conviction under this act, nor any adjudication made on appeal therefrom, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed, by writ of certiorari or otherwise, into any of his Majesty's superior courts of record; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect

(17.) PENALTIES HOW TO BE RECOVERED AND APPLIED.

Sect. 24. "Every penalty and forfeiture imposed by this act upon any justice may be sued for and recovered by action of debt in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster; and one moiety of every such penalty or forfeiture shall be paid to the use of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to him who shall sue for the same." (See s. 6, ante.) Penalties on justices, how recovered, &c.

Sect. 25. "In every case in which, under the authority of this act, any justice shall adjudge that any offender shall pay or cause to be paid any penalty, and such offender shall refuse or neglect forthwith, or within such period as such justice shall appoint, to pay such penalty and any costs which shall have been duly assessed and ascertained by such justice, it shall be lawful for such justice, if he shall think fit, to issue his warrant, and to levy the amount of such penalty and costs by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such offender, together with the costs of such distress and sale; and in every such case such offender, if in custody at the time that such warrant shall be so issued, shall be forthwith discharged; but if it shall appear to such justice that the goods and chattels of such offender are not sufficient whereon to levy such distress, together with the costs of such distress and sale, it shall be lawful for such justice to commit (b) the offender to the common gaol or to the house of correction of the county or place for which such justice shall be then acting, for any term not exceeding one calendar month, if the penalty shall not be above five pounds; for any term not exceeding three calendar months, if the penalty shall be above five pounds, and shall not be more than ten pounds; and for any term not exceeding six calendar months, if the penalty shall be above ten pounds: provided nevertheless, that whenever such offender shall have been committed to the common gaol or house of correction, in consequence of his not having duly paid such penalty and costs, such offender shall, if he pay or cause to be paid to the gaoler or keeper of the house of correction, or to whomsoever such justice shall have appointed, the penalty imposed, and costs, together with all the costs of the apprehension of him, and of the conveyance of him to the said gaol or house of correction, at any time previous to the expiration of the time for which such offender shall so have been committed, be forthwith discharged." Other penalties, how recovered. Distress. (a) Imprisonment. Discharge on payment of penalty.

Sect. 26. "It shall be lawful for any justice, before whom any penalty shall be recovered under the provisions of this act, to award, if he shall think fit, any portion of the same, not in any case exceeding one moiety thereof, to the use of the prosecutor, and the remainder to the treasurer of the county or place for which such justice shall then act; and the said treasurer shall place the same to the credit of such county or place, and shall duly account for the same." How penalties applied.

By stat. 35 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 2, 5, which, it would seem, is still in force, though rarely if ever acted on, one justice may hear and determine the offence in a summary way, and upon information exhibited, or complaint made to him, shall summon the party accused, and also the witnesses on either side; and upon appearance, or contempt by not appearing, shall proceed to hear the matter, and examine the witnesses on oath, and give judgment therein; and upon proof of the offence either by confession, or oath of one witness, may convict the party accused; and if he, being then present, shall not at the time, or if absent, within three days after notice, either personally served upon him, or left for him at the place where the offence was committed, pay the said penalty, together with the costs and expenses, to be ascertained by such justice, the same shall be levied by distress of the goods and chattels of such offender wheresoever found within the jurisdiction Penalties under 35 Geo. 3, c. 113, how recovered. of such justice, or in any entered place of such offender, in the like manner as directed by 27 Geo. II. c. 20, and 33 Geo. III. c. 55, as far as the same relates to the execution of warrants of distress, as fully as if the powers of the said acts had been repeated herein; and shall be applied half to the informer and half to the poor of the parish, township, or place in which, &c. in such manner as such justice shall direct; and if a return shall be made that sufficient distress cannot be found whereon to levy the penalty and costs as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of any county or place within whose jurisdiction the party offending shall be found, upon producing to him such warrant and return, (and if such justice shall be of any other county or place, then upon oath made of the handwriting of the justice granting such warrant, and of the truth of such return,) to commit such offender to the common gaol, or other prison within his jurisdiction, for any term not exceeding six nor less than three calendar months, unless such penalty and the costs of all proceedings upon the conviction and warrant be sooner paid.

Sale of distress.

Sect. 3. Provided, that on the request of the owner, such distress may be sold within the four days allowed by the said act of 27 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 3.

Allowance to persons executing warrants, &c.

Sect. 4. And there shall be allowed to the officer executing such warrant of distress, for the safe keeping of the goods distrained, such sum not exceeding 5*s.* per day, and for any assistant any sum not exceeding 2*s.* per day for each, as the convicting justice shall direct, on proof on oath that sufficient cause existed for calling in the aid and assistance of such person or persons.

What a legal notice to persons summoned.

Sect. 6. And after reciting that many persons carry on the trade of alehouse-keeper and victualler, and retailer of beer and ale, without license, and make entry of places for keeping the same by assumed or feigned names, and such beer and ale is frequently retailed in houses and places detached from their places of residence, whereby the law hath been evaded, it is enacted, "that in case any summons shall be issued by any justice for any person to appear and answer to any information or complaint for selling by retail any beer, ale, or other exciseable liquors, without license, the directing such summons to such person by the name in which he made such entry, or is usually known, whether the same be his real or assumed or feigned name, and leaving such summons at such house or place where such offence is stated in the information to have been committed, and affixing a copy thereof on the door or other conspicuous part on the outside thereof, (such service being proved on oath of the person who shall have so served and affixed up such summons and copy,) shall be deemed a sufficient notice or summons to all intents and purposes."

Sect. 10. "And if any person shall be summoned as a witness, and shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time and place appointed, without a reasonable excuse, (to be allowed by such justice,) or appearing shall refuse to be examined on oath and give evidence, he shall forfeit 10*l.*, to be levied by warrant of distress, [to be applied to the poor where such offence was committed, in such manner as such justice shall direct]; and for want of sufficient distress, such offender shall be committed by the said justice to the common gaol or other prison, for (not exceeding) six calendar months, unless such penalty shall be sooner paid."

Goods conveyed away may be distrained in thirty days wherever found.

Sect. 11. "And if any person, after service of any summons to appear to any charge of selling ale or beer or other exciseable liquors, without license, shall convey away any goods or chattels hereinbefore made liable to distress from the house or place wherein such offence shall have been committed, or belonging thereto, or occupied therewith, or which hath been entered as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the officer to whom such warrant is directed, or other person acting in his aid or assistance, within thirty days after such conveying away, to seize the same wherever they may be found, and dispose of them in such manner as if they had been distrained on the premises.

Warrants may be indorsed.

And if carried out of the jurisdiction of the justice, who originally issued the warrant, any justice of the county, city, liberty or place into which the same shall be conveyed, is required, on proof on oath of the handwriting of such justice originally signing such warrant, to indorse his name on the back thereof, which shall be sufficient authority to any person bringing such warrant, and to all other persons to whom the same was originally directed, to execute the same, and to proceed as if such goods had been seized within the jurisdiction of the justice who signed the original warrant."

(18.) Appeal.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 27, "Any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any act of any justice, done in or concerning the execution of this act, may appeal against such act to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace holden for the county or place wherein the cause of such complaint shall have arisen, unless such session shall be holden within twelve days next after such act shall have been done, and in that case to the next subsequent session holden as aforesaid, and not afterwards, provided that such person shall give to such justice notice in writing of his intention to appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, within five days next after such act shall have been done, and seven days at the least before such session, and shall within such five days enter into a recognizance, with two sufficient sureties, before a justice acting in and for such county or place as aforesaid, conditioned to appear at the said session, and to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the Court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the Court awarded; and upon such notice being given, and such recognizance being entered into, the justice before whom the same shall be entered into shall liberate such person if in custody for any offence in reference to which the act intended to be appealed against shall have been done; and the Court at such session shall hear and determine the matter of such appeal, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs, as to the said Court shall seem meet; and in case the act appealed against shall be the refusal to grant or to transfer any license, and the judgment under which such act was done be reversed, it shall be lawful for the said Court to grant or to transfer such license, in the same manner as if such license had been granted at the general annual licensing meeting, or had been transferred at a special session; and the judgment of the said Court shall be final and conclusive to all intents and purposes; and in case of the dismissal of such appeal, or of the affirmance of the judgment on which such act was done, and which was appealed against, the said Court shall adjudge and order the said judgment to be carried into execution, and costs awarded to be paid, and shall if necessary issue process for enforcing such order; provided that no justice shall act in the hearing or determination of any appeal to the general or quarter sessions as aforesaid from any act done by him in or concerning the execution of this act; provided also, that when any cause of complaint shall have arisen within any liberty, county of a city, county of a town, city, or town corporate, it shall be lawful for the person who shall think himself so as aforesaid aggrieved to appeal against any such act as aforesaid, if he shall think fit, to the quarter sessions of the county within or adjoining to which such liberty or place shall be situate, subject to all the provisions hereinbefore contained." Appeal against refusal to grant or transfer license.

Judgment of sessions final.

No justice to act on appeal who was a party to act complained of.

Appeal in limited jurisdiction may be to county sessions.

In Rex v. Justices of Middlesex, (3 B. & Ad. 938,) it was held that the words in the above clause "think himself aggrieved," mean a person immediately aggrieved, as by refusal of a license to himself, by fine, &c. and not one who is only consequently aggrieved: and therefore that where magistrates had granted a license to a party to open a public-house not before licensed, within a very short distance of a licensed public-house, the occupier of the latter house could not appeal against such grant.

If justices refuse a license to keep an inn an appeal lies to the quarter sessions against their determination under the above section, although they duly heard the application, and refused the license according to the discretion entrusted to them by the statute. (R. v. Reading Justices, 10 Law Jour. Rep. M. C. 126.)

of an offence against the tenor of his license, cannot be heard on appeal to the quarter sessions under the above section, unless he has served notice of such appeal on both the convicting justices And this, although at the time of giving notice the conviction had in fact been signed only by one justice at least, if there be no proof that the conviction so signed was communicated to the appellant before he gave notice, so that he might have been misled thereby. Reg. v. Cheshire, Justices, 11 Ad. & Ell. 139.)

No appeal lies to the sessions from a conviction for selling liquors without an excise license. (Rex v. Hanson, 4 B. & Ald. 519; ante, 94; post, "Excise," Vol. II.)

Witnesses may be bound over.

By sect. 28, "When any person shall have given notice of his intention to appeal as aforesaid, and shall have entered into recognizance as hereinbefore directed, it shall be lawful for the justice, before whom such recognizance shall have been entered into, to summon any person whose evidence shall appear to him to be material, and to require such person to be bound in recognizance to appear at the said general or quarter sessions, and to give evidence in such appeal; and in case any such person as aforesaid shall neglect or refuse to obey such summons, or shall refuse to enter into such recognizance, it shall be lawful for such justice as aforesaid to issue his warrant to apprehend such person so neglecting or refusing to obey such summons, and to bring him before such justice, and if such person shall continue to refuse to enter into such recognizance, to commit him to the common gaol or house of correction of the county or place for which such justice shall be then acting, there to remain until he shall enter into such recognizance, or shall be otherwise discharged by due course of law."

Consequences of refusal to obey summons or enter into recognizance.

Sect. 29. "In every case where notice of appeal against the judgment of any justice in or concerning the execution of this act shall have been given, and such appeal shall have been dismissed, or the judgment so appealed against shall have been affirmed, or such appeal shall have been abandoned, it shall be lawful for the Court to whom such appeal shall have been made or intended to be made, and such Court is hereby required, to adjudge and order that the party so having appealed, or given notice of his intention to appeal, shall pay to the justice to whom such notice shall have been given, or to whomsoever he shall appoint, such sum, by way of costs, as shall in the opinion of such Court be sufficient to idemnify such justice from all cost and charge whatsoever, to which such justice may have been put in consequence of his having had served upon him notice of the intention of such party to appeal; and if such party shall refuse or neglect forthwith to pay such sum, it shall be lawful for the said Court to adjudge and order that the party so refusing or neglecting shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to remain until such sum be paid; and that in every case in which the judgment so appealed against shall be reversed, it shall be lawful for such Court, if it shall think fit, to adjudge and order that the treasurer of the county or place in and for which such justice, whose judgment shall have been so reversed, shall have acted on the occasion when he shall have given such judgment, shall pay to such justice, or to whomsoever he shall appoint, such sum as shall, in the opinion of such Court, be sufficient to idemnify such justice from all costs and charges whatsoever to which such justice may have been so put; and the said treasurer is hereby authorised to pay the same, which shall be allowed to him in his accounts."

On default of payment appellant may be committed. (a)

If judgment reversed, justices indemnified against costs.

Appeal under 35 Geo. 3, c 113, to sessions.

By the 35 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 12, it is enacted, that if any person shall think himself aggrieved by the judgment of such justice, he may appeal against any such conviction to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace, (and such justice shall make known to such person at the time of such conviction the right to appeal,) unless such session be holden within six days next after such conviction, and in such case to the next subsequent sessions, and not afterwards; such person at the time of such conviction giving to such justice notice in writing of his intention to appeal, and also giving

And the judgment of such sessions shall be final and conclusive; and if the justices at such sessions shall adjudge such appeal to be frivolous or vexatious, they may give costs to the party aggrieved by such appeal, not exceeding 5*l.* in the whole.

(19.) Limitation of Actions against Justices, &c. and Plea.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 30, "Every action against any justice, constable, or other person, for or on account of any matter or thing whatsoever done or commanded by him in the execution of his duty or office under this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months after the cause of action of complaint shall have arisen, and not afterwards; and if any person shall be sued for any matter or thing which he shall have done in the execution of this act, he may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence." (See post, "Justices," Vol. III.)

Limitation of actions against justices.

General issue.

As to enactments of this kind, and as to the law of actions against magistrates in general, see post, "Justices," Vol. III.

(20.) Remedies on Refusal to grant License.

We have already noticed, (ante, 101,) the remedy which a party has by appeal in case of a refusal to grant or transfer license.

By appeal.

By Mandamus.]—It is discretionary in the justices whom they will license, and a mandamus will not lie to compel the justices to license any person; and on a conviction for selling exciseable liquors without license, the want of such license could only come in question, and not the reason why it was denied. (Giles's case, 2 Str. 881.) Therefore, even where affidavits were offered to be produced, of the justices declaring that they would grant no licenses to any of the inhabitants who signed a petition to the parliament for erecting a workhouse there; and that the person, on whose behalf the motion was made, had been a victualler in the town for above thirty-five years, the motion was refused. (1 Barnard. 402; Rex v. Young, 1 Burr. 556.)

By mandamus.

And in a late case a mandamus was refused to command justices to hear an application for an ale license, which they had refused, though it was suggested that their refusal proceeded from a mistaken view of their jurisdiction; et per curiam, "It being conceded that the magistrates have heard and determined upon this application for a license, which is a matter peculiarly for their consideration, we cannot grant a mandamus to them to re-hear what they have already determined." (Rex v. Licensing Justices of Ward of Farringdon Without, 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 365; and see a still later case, Rex v. Justices of Surrey, id. 435. See further, post, "Mandamus," Vol. V.)

By Action.]—An action is not maintainable against justices for refusing to grant a license for the same reason that a mandamus will not be awarded; that is, because the legislature had left the granting or refusing such license to the discretion of the justices, who are not responsible for errors in judgment; (Bassett v. Godscall, 3 Wilson, 121, 124;) and even if they acted maliciously or corruptly, no action would lie. (See 1 Salk. 306; Bushell's case, Vaughan, 138; Rex v. Whitwell, 5 T. R. 86.)

By action.

A party may indeed sue a magistrate in an action for money had and received, to recover back a fee improperly taken by the magistrate for granting a license, though such fee had uniformly been taken for fifty-seven years before, and no notice of action is necessary. (Morgan v. Palmer, 2 B. & Cress. 782; 4 D. & R. 483, S. C.; post, "Justices," Vol. III.)

By Indictment or Information.]—Where a magistrate acts in his office

By indictment or information.

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

with a partial, malicious, or corrupt motive, he is guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be proceeded against by indictment or criminal information in the Queen's Bench, which exercises a general supervision over all justices of the peace. And either of these modes of proceeding may be adopted where a magistrate partially, maliciously, or corruptly refuse to grant or transfer a publican's license, provided such improper refusal can be distinctly proved or plainly inferred from the circumstances under which the magistrate acted.

It is most usual to proceed in such a case by criminal information in preference to an indictment; but sometimes where there has been delay in the application, or a jury may be more fit to apply to than the Court, then an indictment should be the form of remedy. The general rules as to when an indictment or criminal information will lie against a justice of the peace, as also the mode of proceeding therein against him, and the consequences, will be found, post, "Justices," Vol. III.

Remedies for not granting.

In Rex v. Young and Pitts, (1 Burr. 556,) a motion was made for an information against the defendants, for arbitrarily, obstinately, and unreasonably refusing to grant a license to one Henry Day to keep an inn at Eversley, Wilts: Lord Mansfield, C. J., said, "It is certain that this court has no power or claim to review the reasons of justices of the peace, upon which they form their judgments in granting licenses, by way of appeal from their judgments, or over-ruling the discretion intrusted to them. But if it clearly appears that the justices have been partially, maliciously, or corruptly influenced in the exercise of this discretion, and have (consequently) abused the trust reposed in them, they are liable to prosecution by indictment or information; or even possibly by action, if the malice be very gross and injurious. If their judgment be wrong, yet their heart and intention pure, God forbid that they should be punished." And he declared that he should always lean towards favouring them; unless partiality, corruption, or malice clearly appeared. And having gone through all the particulars, both of the charge and of the defence, he concluded with declaring it as his opinion that there was not sufficient ground for a criminal charge against these justices. Dennison, J., said, "It must be clear and apparent partiality, or wilful misbehaviour, to induce the court to grant an information; not a mere error in judgment." And, by the court unanimously, the rule was discharged with costs.

Not so for mere error in judgment.

In Rex v. Athay, (2 Burr. 653,) on showing cause why a rule should not be made absolute, for an information against a justice for a misdemeanor in refusing to grant a license to one Francis Symes (who had been licensed for several preceding years) to sell ale, as usual, it appeared that one of the grounds upon which this rule had been obtained was, that the only reason why the license was refused him was his declining to pay a sum of money (viz. 5*l.*) which was claimed of him upon a distinct and collateral account, and which he denied to be due from him; the payment of which sum of money was (as he alleged) insisted upon by the justice, as a condition precedent to his granting the man a license. The court were unanimous, that the allegation appeared to be false in fact; but, at the same time, they declared explicitly that the justices have no sort of authority to annex any such conditions to the grant of these licenses.

Justices not to annex condition to license.

In Rex v. Williams and Davis, (3 Burr. 1317,) an information was granted against the defendants, justices of the peace for the borough of Penryn, for refusing to grant licenses to those alehouse-keepers who voted against their recommendation of candidates for members of parliament for that borough. It appeared that they had acted very grossly in this matter, having previously threatened to ruin these people, by not granting them licenses, in case they should vote against those candidates whose interest these justices themselves espoused, and having afterwards actually refused them licenses upon this account only. And Lord Mansfield declared that the court granted this information against the justices, not for the mere refusal to grant the licenses, (which they had a discretion to grant or refuse, as they should see to be right and proper,) but for the corrupt motive of such refusal, for their oppressive and unjust refusing to grant them, because the persons applying for them would not give their votes for members of parliament as the justices would have had them.

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

An information against the justices of the town of Nottingham, by Lord Hardwicke, for refusing to grant licenses for twenty public houses, to the occupiers of which licenses had been granted for several preceding years. It appearing that the persons who kept these houses had voted, at the last election for the town, for the candidates opposed to those whose interests the justices had espoused, his lordship said, "The abuse of such a discretionary power ought to be more severely punished than the abuse of a power which is not discretionary. It appears in this case to have been very grossly abused, for it is not probable that the occupiers of twenty houses should have all so misconducted themselves at the same time, as to render it improper to grant them licenses." (Rex v. Justices of Nottingham, Sayer's Rep. 216, 217.)

In Rex v. Temple, (1 Keb. 727,) an information was granted against a justice of the peace for extortion and compounding to give new licenses to unlawful alehouses, and taking away good ones, and for discharging recognizances for appearance at sessions.

In Rex v. Cornelius, (2 Stra. 1210,) an information was granted against Cornelius and another justice of the peace of a borough, for a misdemeanor in taking money for granting licenses to alehouse-keepers.

In Rex v. Hann and Price, Justices of the Peace for the Borough of Corfe Castle, (3 Burr. 1716,) on showing cause against an information which had been prayed for against the defendants, for a misdemeanor in the execution of their office, in refusing to grant a license to sell ale to one Ingram, an innkeeper in that borough, merely from a motive of resentment against him, for having espoused an opposite interest in the election for members of that borough; the defence was, that they did not act from any resentment or corrupt motive, but solely because Ingram was an improper person, and had kept a disorderly house, and continued to keep it after full notice to the contrary, and in particular that he encouraged gaming and cockfighting at his house. Lord Mansfield, C. J., said, "The court should never interpose against magistrates, unless they have acted from bad motives and malâ fide, especially in such a case as this, where they are intrusted with an absolute discretion: but for that very reason, this is the strongest case for the interposition of the court, if it appear that they have acted upon corrupt motives. If it did appear clearly that this man kept a disorderly house, it would be a reason against the court's interposing against the justices. But this does not clearly appear." And he declared it to be of very dangerous consequence to permit the due discretion of the justices to be influenced by considerations of this kind. The court made the rule absolute.

Defendants must appear personally to receive judgment.

Afterwards, these justices confessing themselves guilty of the information, it was moved for a rule to dispense with their personal appearance, on the undertaking of their clerk in court to answer for their fines. But the court upon full debate were unanimous in refusing the motion. The general doctrine laid down by the court was, that although such a motion was subject to the discretion of the court, either to grant or refuse it, where it was clear and certain that the punishment would not be corporal; yet it ought to be denied in every case where it was either probable or possible that the punishment would be corporal; and this for the example sake; as the notoriety of their being called up might deter others from the like offences. And finally, upon their appearance in court, the sentence was, that they should be committed for a month, fined 50*l.* each, and further imprisoned till the fine be paid. (Rex v. Hann and Price, 3 Burr. 1716, 1786.)

Time of applying for information, &c.

We shall hereafter, (post, "Justices," Vol. III.) consider as to the time when the application for a criminal information should be made, and the other proceedings relative thereto.

fusing it; for in the former case it may be productive of mischief to the whole community; in the latter, the grievance is only felt by the individual. (See R. v. Temple, 1 Keb. 727; R. v. Cornelius, 2 Stra. 1210.)

Information for.

In R. v. Holland and Forster, (1 T. R 692,) an information had been moved for against the defendants, who were justices for the county of Middlesex, for improperly granting an ale license to one Harrison, who had been refused one by the justices at their last general meeting, on account of misbehaviour. It appeared that the defendant Forster had been present at that general meeting at the time when the license was refused; but he had afterwards told the other defendant Holland, who was not present at the general meeting, that the only reason why a license had not been granted then was, that they might have an opportunity of inquiring into the character of Harrison, and had accordingly prevailed upon Holland, at a private meeting held by those two only, to join in granting a license. The court were clearly of opinion that an information should be granted against a justice as well for granting a license improperly, as for refusing one in the same manner: that it had already been done in the case of R. v. Filewood and another, E. T. 26 Geo. III. B. R.; and indeed the mischief of granting a license improperly was infinitely greater than that of refusing one; for in the former case it might be productive of injury to the whole community, while in the latter the grievance was felt only by the individual. That the only ground of these applications was the improper conduct of the magistrates. But as it appeared in this case that Holland, though not altogether blameless, had been deceived by Forster, they discharged the rule as to the former, upon his paying the costs of the application as against himself; and as to Forster, they granted the information.

In R. v. Bingham, Clerk, (1 Burn's J. 24th ed. 48, reported also by Mr. Gurney,) the defendant was convicted at Winchester Sum. Ass. 1813, of a conspiracy to defraud the revenue of certain stamp duties. It appeared in evidence at the trial that he was a justice of the peace, and one of those who attended on the general licensing day, when he obtained, through an improper influence, a license in order to enhance the value of some premises which were his own property. In pronouncing judgment, King's Bench, Nov. 26, 1813, Le Blanc, J., said, "The court does not go out of its way to cast reflections upon the conduct of those who are not before the court; but it would not discharge its duty if it did not declare, that it is not a proper exercise of the functions of any magistrates so to grant a license, when they know that no house exists to which that license is to be applied. The legislature has taken particular care that no person concerned in public houses or victualling houses, under the description of brewers or dealers in spirits, shall themselves take part in the granting of licenses, in order to guard against any improper influence in the granting of them, and it is subject to the same mischief and the same inconvenience that any person in the situation of a magistrate, being the owner of a house, which afterwards may be converted into a public house, should know and should consent to a license being kept on foot, which may ultimately tend to increase the value of his property, whenever that house may be conveyed to a person to whom the license may attach." The defendant was sentenced to be imprisoned in Winchester gaol for six calendar months, and Lord Ellenborough, C. J., directed the proceedings to be laid before the lord chancellor.

Indictment for.

If there be two sets of magistrates, as for a county and a borough, and having a co-ordinate jurisdiction in that borough, and one of the two sets appoint a meeting for granting alehouse licenses, and when the day arrives, refuse a license to an applicant for one; and then the other set of magistrates, having subsequently to the prior appointment, but before the first licensing day, appointed a future day for the same purpose, license on that day the person to whom on a former day a license had been refused, it is an indictable offence. (R. v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 451.) Et per Ashhurst, J., S. C., "There being no words of exclusion in the city charters, it follows as a consequence that the justices of the county have a concurrent jurisdiction in the borough of Southwark; if so, it also follows that the jurisdiction of holding the meeting directed by the 26 Geo. II. attached in those magistrates, who first gave notice of the meeting; and it was a breach of the law in the other magistrates to attempt to wrest this jurisdiction out of their hands; for what the law says shall not be done, it becomes illegal to do, and is therefore the subject-matter of an indictment, without the addition of any corrupt motives. And though the want of corruption may be an answer to an application for an information, which is made to the extraordinary jurisdiction of the court, yet it is no answer to an indictment, where the judges are bound by the strict rule of law."

3. Magistrates' License for, &c.

IV. Making and Selling Unwholesome Victuals.

A publican selling unwholesome wine or victuals may, it is said, be indicted for a misdemeanor at common law; and any person to whom the same has been sold may maintain an action against him for the injury done. (Rol. Ab. 95; and see 2 East's P. C. 822; 4 Bla. Com. 162; R. v. Southerton, 6 East, 133.)

Indictment for selling unwholesome victuals.

By stat. 21 Jac. I. c. 21, s. 2, (which repeals former statutes in this matter,) hostlers and innholders are prohibited from making any horse-bread, but bakers shall make it, and the assize shall be kept, and the weight be reasonable, after the price of the corn or grain in the markets adjoining.

Innkeepers' charges. Horse bread.

And they shall sell their horse-bread, and also their hay, oats, beans, pease, provender, and also all kinds of victual, both for man and beast, for reasonable gain, having respect to the prices for which they shall be sold in the markets adjoining, without taking any thing for litter.

Hay, oats, &c. to be sold for reasonable gain.

Sect. 3 enables them to make horse-bread when no baker dwells in the same town.

By sect. 4, if the horse-bread which any of the said hostlers or innholders make be not of due assize, or if any of them shall offend in any thing contrary to this act, the justices, sheriffs, and stewards in their leets may hear and determine, &c.; and for the first offence the hostler or innholder shall be fined; for the second offence be imprisoned for one month; and for the third offence shall stand upon the pillory; and for the fourth shall be forejudged for keeping any inn again.

Power of justices herein.

But the punishment of the pillory is abolished by 56 Geo. III. c. 138, except in cases of perjury and subornation of perjury; and in those cases also by the subsequent act of 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 23.

By the commission of the peace, two justices, one being of the quorum, may inquire of innholders, and of all and singular other persons, who shall offend in the abuse of weights and measures, or in the sale of victuals, against the form of the ordinances in that behalf made. (See post, "Sessions," Vol. V.)

Power of justices by the commission.

V. Brewing, Selling, &c. Unwholesome Beer.

By stat. 1 Will. III. s. 1, c. 24, s. 17, no common brewer or retailer of beer or ale shall use any molasses, coarse sugar, honey, or composition or extract of sugar, in the brewing or working of any beer or ale, upon the penalty of forfeiting the liquor, and also a penalty of 100*l*, half to the King, and half to him that shall sue in six months.

Using sugar, honey, &c in brewing, prohibited.

And by stat. 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 21, s. 34, if any common brewer or retailer of beer or ale shall use any molasses, coarse sugar, honey, or composition or extract of sugar, in the brewing, making, or working of any ale or beer; or if any common brewer shall receive into his custody any quantity of any of the said materials exceeding 10lb., he shall forfeit 100*l.*, to be recovered and mitigated as by the laws of excise.

And by sect. 20, the servant or other assisting therein shall forfeit 20*l.* in like manner, and in default of payment shall be imprisoned three months.

And by stat. 9 Anne, c. 12, s. 24, 26, no common brewer, innkeeper, or victualler, shall use any broom, wormwood, or any bitter ingredient, (to serve instead of hops,) in brewing or making any beer or ale for sale, (except infusing broom or wormwood, after it is brewed and tunned, to make broom or wormwood ale or beer,) on pain of 20*l.*, half to the king, and half to the prosecutor, to be levied as by the laws of excise.

Using wormwood, &c. in brewing.

5. Bad beer, &c.

Using unwholesome ingredients.

And by 12 Anne, stat. 1, c. 2, s. 32, no common brewer or retailer of beer or ale shall use any sugar, honey, foreign grains, Guinea pepper, essentia bina, coculus Indiæ, or any unwholesome ingredients in the brewing of beer or ale, or mix any of them therewith, on pain of 20*l.*, to be recovered and mitigated as by the laws of excise, half to the king, and half to him that shall sue.

And by 56 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 2, any dealer in or brewer or retailer of beer receiving or having in his custody or possession, or making, using or mixing with, or putting into any worts or beer, any liquor, extract, calx, or other material or preparation to darken the colour, or which has been or shall be used for that purpose, other than brown malt, ground or unground, as commonly used in brewing, or receiving or having in his custody or possession, or using or mixing with, or putting into any worts or beer any molasses, honey, liquorice, vitriol, quassia, coculus Indiæ, grains of paradise, Guinea pepper, or opium, or extract or preparation thereof or any article or preparation whatever, for or as a substitute for malt or hops, shall forfeit all such liquors, extract, calx, molasses, honey, vitriol, quassia, coculus Indiæ, grains of paradise, Guinea pepper, opium, extract, article and preparation; and also the worts and beer, together with the casks and other packages containing the same, (which shall be seized by the officer of excise,) and also for each and every such offence 260*l.* (See Attorney General v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 378.)

Mixing beer and adulterating.

Any common or other brewer, innkeeper, victualler, or retailer of beer or ale, mixing, or causing or suffering to be mixed in any vessel, tub, measure, or otherwise, any strong beer, ale or strong worts with any small beer or small worts or with water, after the gauge of such strong beer, ale, or strong worts by the officer of excise, shall for every offence forfeit 50*l.* (2 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 2; and vide 42 Geo. III. c. 38, s. 12.)

The wine, spirit, beer, and cider license, under the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, also contains a clause of forfeiture for fraudulently diluting or adulterating any exciseable liquor, or selling the same knowing them to have been fraudulently diluted or adulterated. (See the form of licence, post, No. 32.) And such an offence would be punishable under sect. 21, ante, 96, as an offence against the tenor of the license.

Contracts with brewers.

A contract to take beer from a particular house is not, it seems, illegal; (see Calvert v. Reid, 10 B. & Cress. 855;) but under a contract by the innkeeper that he should take all his beer from his landlord, a brewer, or pay an advanced rate, it seems, that if the landlord supplies the innkeeper with beer not of a fair merchantable quality, such as ought to be to the satisfaction of the customers, the innkeeper may deal with other brewers until better beer be tendered. (Holcomb v. Hewson, 2 Camp. N. P. 391, 392; Thornton v. Sherratt, 8 Taunt. Rep. 529.) In the latter case it was considered that contracts, by which brewers bind publicans to deal with them, are not to be favoured, as tending to prejudice the health of the subject. But if there be a contract to buy beer, the supply of bad beer only suspends the obligation, and on an offer of good beer it must be taken. (Id.)

A brewer who delivered beer to be used in a particular public-house on the credit of a person not the licensed keeper of the house, may sue the latter for goods sold and delivered. (Brooker v. Wood, 5 B. & Adol. 1052; overruling Meux v. Humphreys, 1 M. & M. 132.)

VI. Ale Measures.

What to be used.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 19, ante, 95, we have already seen that persons licensed under that act are to use standard measures in the sale of exciseable liquors; and the wine, spirit, beer, cider and perry license, under that statute, has a clause implying a forfeiture of it in case of selling by any measures not of the legal standard. (See form of license, post, No. 32.) And such an offence would be punishable under sect. 21, ante, 96, as an offence against the tenor of the license.

6. Ale measures.

Offence against the tenor of license.

By stat. 8 Eliz c. 9, the justices in Easter sessions yearly (and mayors in corporations) shall rate the price of all barrels, kilderkins, firkins, and other vessels to be sold for ale or beer to be uttered therein; and if any cooper shall not sell the same according to such rate, he shall forfeit 3*s.* 4*d.*, half to the king, and half to him that shall sue.

Justices to rate the price of vessels.

As to what is the standard measure and the law relating to ale measures in general, see post, "Weights and Measures," Vol. VI.

The measure itself.

An indictment will lie for selling ale in pots unsealed, although the statute appoints another method of proceeding; because measures are by the common law, and the statutes only direct the manner of ascertaining them. (2 Blackerby, 14.) But in such case the indictment must not be upon the statute, but at common law; and the offence ought to be laid, not for selling in pots unsealed, that being no offence at common law, but in pots wanting measure.

Indictment.

VII. Enhancing the Price of Victuals, Ale, &c.

By statute 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 15, if brewers conspired to sell their victuals but at certain prices, they were subject to severe penalties; but that provision is repealed by the 5 Geo. IV. c. 95.

Enhancing by conspiracy.

But by statute 2 Geo. III. c. 14, no brewer, innkeeper, victualler, or other retailer of strong beer or ale, shall be sued or molested by indictment, information, popular action, or otherwise, for advancing the price of strong beer or ale in a reasonable degree.

Conspiring to enhance the price of victuals might be an offence at common law. (See post, "Conspiracy.")

VIII. Keeping Disorderly House, or permitting Drunkenness, &c.; Harbouring Thieves, &c.; Offenders against Revenue Laws, &c.

All disorderly inns or alehouses, or other houses, are public nuisances, and may at common law, upon indictment, be suppressed, and the keepers of them fined. (4 Bla. Com. 167.)

Disorderly inns indictable.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 21, ante, 96, &c. imposes penalties for offences against the tenor of the license under that act; and which license contains clauses of forfeiture in case of knowingly permitting or suffering persons of notoriously bad character to assemble or meet together in the house, or permitting drunkenness or other disorderly conduct in the house or premises. (See form of license, No. 32, post.)

Offence against the tenor of the license. Forfeiture of license.

These provisions are extended to other houses of public resort within the metropolitan police district, by the 2 & 3 Vict c. 47, s. 44, which, after reciting that it is expedient that the provisions made by law for preventing disorderly conduct in the houses of licensed victuallers be extended to other houses of public resort, enacts, that every person who shall have or keep any house, shop, room, or place of public resort within the metropolitan police district, wherein provisions, liquors, or refreshments of any kind shall be sold or consumed, (whether the same shall be kept or retailed therein or procured elsewhere,) and who shall wilfully or knowingly permit drunkenness or other disorderly conduct in such house, shop, room, or place, or knowingly suffer any unlawful games, or any gaming whatsoever therein, or knowingly permit or suffer prostitutes or persons of notoriously bad character to meet together and remain therein, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty of not more than five pounds: provided always, that if the offender be a licensed victualler, or licensed to sell beer by retail to be drunk on the premises, this enactment shall not be construed to exempt him from the penalties or penal consequences to which he may be liable for committing an offence against Regulations of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, for the prevention of disorderly conduct, &c. in public houses to extend to other houses of public resort within the metropolitan police district.

8. Disorderly houses, &c.

the tenor of the license to him granted. (The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 94, s. 28, contains a similar enactment for the city of London.)

Harbouring thieves, &c. indictable.

The innkeeper who harbours or permits the resort of thieves or persons of scandalous reputation, or suffers frequent disorders in his house, is guilty of a misdemeanor at common law, for which he may be fined or imprisoned. (1 Hawk. c. 78; Hale's P. C. 146.)

Apprehending vagrants, &c.

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 13, any justice, on information on oath that any idle or disorderly person, or rogue or vagabond, or incorrigible rogue, is reasonably suspected to be harboured or concealed in any house kept or purporting to be kept for the reception, lodging, or entertainment of travellers, may, by warrant under his hand and seal, authorise any constable or other person or persons to enter at any time into such house and apprehend and bring before him or any other justice every such idle and disorderly person, rogue and vagabond, and incorrigible rogue, as shall be found therein. (See post, "Vagrant," Vol. VI.; and see also a clause in the Police Act, 3 Will. IV. c. 19, s. 31, post, "Police," Vol, V.)

Breaking open doors to suppress disorder.

It seems also at common law, if there be disorderly drinking or noise at an unseasonable time of night, especially in inns, taverns, or alehouses, the constable or his watch, demanding entrance and being refused, may break open the doors to see and suppress the disorder. (2 Hale's P. C. 95.)

Presentment by constable.

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 38, constables are not to be required to make presentments respecting unlicensed or disorderly alehouses.

For more concerning disorderly houses, see "Disorderly House," Vol. II. "Gaming," Vol. III.; "Police," "Riot," Vol. V.

Harbouring police officer.

By the 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 6, (the Metropolitan Police Act,) publicans harbouring police officers during their hours of duty are subject to a penalty of not more than 5*l.*, to be recovered before two justices (See post, "Police," Vol. V.)

Offenders against revenue laws.

As to the harbouring of offenders against the revenue laws, see 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 53, s. 29, post, "Excise," Vol. II.

IX. Holding Seditious Meetings.

Licenses of public houses, where unlawful clubs held, forfeited.

By stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 19, for the more effectually preventing seditious meetings, any two justices, upon evidence on oath that any meeting of any society or club hereby declared to be unlawful (i. e. societies or clubs calling themselves Spenceans or Spencean Philanthropists, and all other societies or clubs by whatever name called or known, who hold and profess the same objects and doctrines, 57 Geo. III. c. 19,) or any meeting for any seditious purpose, hath been held at any house, room, or place, licensed for the sale of ale, beer, wine, or spirituous liquors, with the knowledge and consent of the person keeping such house, &c. to adjudge the license for selling ale, &c. granted to the person keeping such house, &c. to be forfeited; and the person so keeping such house, &c. shall, from and after the day of the date of such adjudication and notice thereof given to him, be liable to all the penalties and forfeitures for any act done after that day which such person would be liable to if such license had expired or otherwise determined on that day. (See the enactment in full, post, "Riot," Vol. V.)

Seditious pamphlets.

By the 39th Geo. III. c. 79, s. 31, "Every place licensed for the sale of ale, &c. shall be deemed a place licensed for the reading of books, pamphlets, and other publications under this act, but any two justices of the jurisdiction, upon evidence on oath that books, pamphlets, and other publications of a seditious or immoral nature are usually distributed to be read at such place, may adjudge and declare the ale and spirit license forfeited, and the persons keeping such place shall afterwards be subject to all the penalties as though such licenses had expired or been otherwise determined. (See the act, post, "Riot," Vol. V.)

Forfeiture of license.

See further as to seditious meetings, post, "Riot," Vol. V.; "Treason," Vol. VI.

X. Closing Doors in Riots.

10. Closing doors in riots.

Closing doors of inns during riots.

We have already seen the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 20, empowers two justices to order the closing of doors of houses licensed under that act to be closed during riots, &c. ante, 95.

And if a publican, notwithstanding such order, keep his house open, he would be guilty of an offence against good order and rule, which is punishable under s. 21, ante, 96, as an offence against the tenor of his license.

We have also seen the 1 Will. IV. c. 64, s. 11, empowers one or more justices to order the closing of houses licensed under that act to be closed during riots, &c. ante, 71.

XI. Permitting Gaming, Music, Dancing, &c. in Inn.

Gaming.

The law relative to gaming-houses in general will here apply. (See post, "Gaming," Vol. II.) It may be as well to notice, however, that if the guests at an inn or tavern call for dice or tables, and for their recreation play with them, or if any neighbours play at bowls for their recreation or the like, these are not within the statute 33 Hen. VIII. c 9, s. 11, if the house is not kept for gaming, nor the gaming be for lucre or gain. (Dalt. c. 46.)

Permitting gaming in any licensed house is an offence against the terms of the license, and as such is punishable under sect. 21, ante, 96, (see form of license, No. 32, post.) It also involves a forfeiture of the license.

Permitting gaming in other houses of public resort within the metropolitan district is also punishable by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 47, s. 44, ante, 109.

Music, dancing, &c.

For the law relative to keeping houses for performance of music, dancing, and other entertainments in general, (see "Disorderly House," Vol. II.) It may be as well, however, here to notice, that by stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 2, any house, room, or garden, or other place kept for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind in London and Westminster, or within twenty miles thereof, without license from the last preceding Michaelmas quarter sessions, under the hands and seals of four or more justices there assembled, (except the theatres of Drury Lane, Covent Garden, and Haymarket, and other entertainments exercised by letters-patent or license of the Crown or of the Lord Chamberlain, s. 4,) shall be deemed a disorderly house or place, and the keeper thereof shall forfeit 100*l.* with full costs to him who shall sue (in six months) in any of the courts of Westminster, and be otherwise punishable as in case of disorderly houses; and the person who shall appear to act as master, or as having the management of such gaming-house or other disorderly house, shall be deemed a keeper thereof and liable as such; and it shall be lawful for any constable or other person, being authorised by warrant under the hand and seal of one justice, to enter such house or place, and to seize every person found therein, that they may be dealt with according to law. See this provision in full, post, "Disorderly House," Vol. II.

XII. Tippling in. Supplying Spirits to Children.

Former penalty on persons guilty of tippling.

Tippling is a species of drunkenness, and was provided against by the 21 Jac. I. c. 7, s. 2, which in effect enacted, that if any person or persons wheresoever his or their habitation or abiding, remained or continued drinking or tippling in any inn, victualling-house, or alehouse, and the same being viewed and seen by any mayor or other head officer, or justice or justices of the peace within their several limits, or duly proved in such manner as was directed by stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 9, (a) [i. e. since 21 Jac. I. c. 7, s. 1, 2, by the oath of one witness, or voluntary confession of the party; and after such confession his oath may be taken, and be sufficient proof against any other offending,] unless it was in such case or cases as was tolerated or excepted in

(a) Repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61.

12. Tippling, &c.

1 Jac. I. c. 9, s. 1 (a); (viz. labouring and handicraftsmen in cities and towns corporate and market towns; upon the usual working days, for one hour at dinner-time to take their diet in an alehouse; and labourers and workmen, which for the following of their work by the day or by the great, in any city, town corporate, market town, or village, shall for the time of their said continuing in work there, sojourn, lodge, or victual in any inn, alehouse, or other victualling-house, other than for urgent and necessary occasions, to be allowed by two justices of peace;) every person or persons so offending forfeited for every such offence the sum of 3*s.* 4*d.* to the use of the poor of the parish where the said offence was committed, to be levied by distress. And if any offender or offenders be not able to pay the said forfeiture, it shall and may be lawful for any mayor, bailiff, or other head officer, justice or justices of the peace, where any such conviction shall be, to punish the said offender or offenders by setting him, her, or them in the stocks for every such offence by the space of four hours."(b) But these provisions, it would seem, are now in effect repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61; and at all events the provisions in 1 Jac. I. c. 9, and 1 Car. I. c. 4, against publicans for suffering tippling in their houses, are repealed, see ante, 83.

Forfeiture of license.

The wine, spirit, beer, and cider license, under the 9 Geo IV. c. 61, contains a clause of forfeiture for wilfully or knowingly permitting drunkenness or other disorderly conduct in the inn or house. (See forms, (No. 32, 35,) post.)

The 24 Geo. II. c. 40, s. 12, post, 119, prohibits the recovery of small sums under 20*s.* for spirits.

Publicans within the metropolitan police district prohibited from supplying liquors to persons under sixteen years of age.

By the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 43, it is enacted, "That every person licensed to deal in exciseable liquors within the metropolitan police district, who shall knowingly supply any sort of distilled exciseable liquor to any boy or girl apparently under the age of sixteen years to be drunk upon the premises, shall be liable to a penalty not more than twenty shillings, and upon conviction of a second offence shall be liable to a penalty not more than forty shillings, and upon conviction of a third offence shall be liable to a penalty not more than five pounds." (The London Police Act, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 94, s. 27, contains a similar enactment.)

XIII. Drunkenness.

Punishable in Ecclesiastical Court.

Drunkenness is an offence for which a man may be punished in the Ecclesiastical Court, (c) as well as by justices of peace by statute.

Drunkenness no excuse for a crime.

He who is guilty of any crime whatever, through his voluntary drunkenness, shall be punished for it as much as if he had been sober (d) (1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 6.) It was indeed considered in R. v. Grindley, 1 Russ. C. & M 8, that though voluntary drunkenness cannot excuse from the commission of a crime, yet where, as upon a charge of murder, the material question is, whether an act was premeditated or done only with sudden heat and impulse, the fact of the party being intoxicated was a proper circumstance to be taken into consideration; but this decision, according to the recent case of R. v. Carroll, 7 Car. & P. 145, is not law.

(a) Repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61.

(b) This penalty and punishment is enacted by the 4 Jac. I. c 5, the 21 Jac. I. enacting that it shall be also imposed on persons offending against that act The 1 Jac. I c. 5, and 1 Car. I c. 4, are repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61. Before these two acts were repealed, it was held in Rex v. Dove, 3 B. & Ald 596, that a conviction against an alehouse keeper for suffering persons to tipple in his house, stating it to be on the oath of one witness, was bad, for not stating those persons were inhabitants or strangers, the 1 Car. I. c. 4, having required a conviction for suffering strangers to tipple to be on the oath of two witnesses.

(c) See Burn's Ecclesiastical Law, title "Drunkenness."

(d) There was a law in Greece, "that he who committed a crime when drunk should receive a double punishment," one for the crime itself, and the other for the ebriety which prompted him to commit it. (4 Bla. Com. 26.)

By stat. 21 Jac. I c. 7, s. 1, 3, incorporating the second section of 4 Jac. I. c. 5, every person who shall be drunk, and thereof shall be convicted before one justice, or mayor, on view, confession, or oath of one witness, shall forfeit for the first offence 5s., to be paid within one week after conviction to the churchwardens, who shall be accountable for the same to the use of the poor; and if he shall refuse or neglect to pay the same as aforesaid, it shall be levied by distress; and if the offender be not able to pay the said sum of 5s. he shall be committed to the stocks, there to remain by the space of six hours. (a).

13. Drunkenness.

Penalty for in general.

And by sect. 3, any person upon a second conviction of drunkenness shall be bounden with two sureties in one recognizance or obligation of 10*l.*, with condition to be thenceforth of good behaviour.

Second offence.

Lord Hale, speaking of stat. 34 Edw. III. c. 1, which gave justices power to bind malefactors to their good behaviour, generally, without any time limited, says, that it is not meant that the same shall be perpetual, but in the nature of bail, viz. to appear at such a day at their sessions, and in the meantime to be of good behaviour (2 Hale, 136. See further, post, "Surety," Vol. V.)

Binding to good behaviour.

By the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 58, drunkards found in any street or public thoroughfare within the Metropolitan Police District, and who when drunk shall be guilty of any riotous or indecent behaviour, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than 40s., or be committed, at the magistrate's discretion, to the house of correction for not more than seven days.

In the Metropolitan Police District.

Every person in his Majesty's pay in the navy, being guilty of drunkenness, shall incur such punishment as a court-martial shall think fit to impose. 22 Geo. II. c. 33, Art. 2, Navy. (See post, "Military Law," Vol. III.)

Navy.

As to the forfeiture of a publican's license for, see ante, 97.

Forfeiture of license.

A publican cannot recover for beer furnished to third persons by the order of an individual who has previously become intoxicated by drinking in his house. (Brandon v. Old, 3 C. & P. 440.)

Action for bill.

It would seem that drunkenness, if of that description as totally to deprive the drunkard of reason, is a ground for his avoiding a contract made by him while so drunk, although no fraud was practised upon him. (See Pitt v. Smith, 3 Camp. 33; Fenton v. Holloway, 1 Stark. 126; Sentance v. Poole, 3 C. & P 1, Chit. jun. Contracts, 140.)

When a defence.

XIV. Opening Houses, &c. on Sundays, Fast-days, &c.

The 21st section of the 9 Geo IV. c. 31, ante, 96, imposes penalties for offences against the tenor of the wine and spirit &c. license under that act; and in such license there is a clause of forfeiture for keeping open the house except for the reception of travellers, or permitting or suffering any beer or other exciseable liquor to be conveyed from or out of the premises during the usual hours of the morning and afternoon service in the church or chapel of the parish or place in which the house is situate, on Sundays, Christmas-day, or Good Friday; or not maintaining good order or rule therein. (See form of the license, post, No. 32.)

Offence against tenor of license.

The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 42, enacts, "That no licensed victualler or other person shall open his house, within the metropolitan police district for the sale of wine, spirits, beer, or other fermented or distilled liquors on Sundays, Christmas-day, and Good Friday, before the hour of one in the afternoon, except* refreshment for travellers." (The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 94, s. 26, contains a similar enactment for the city of London.)

Public houses in the metropolitan police district not to open before one o'clock on Sundays, &c.

* Sic.

The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 44, s. 5, enacts, "That no wines, spirits, or other exciseable liquors shall be sold by retail on board of any boat, steam boat, or other vessel which shall be moored or lying at anchor within the metropolitan police district, during the hours and times on Sundays, Good Friday, and Christmas-day on which licensed victuallers are by law obliged to keep their houses closed; and any master, steward, mistress or stewardess, or any other person on board any such boat, steam boat, or other vessel, who shall during those hours on Sundays, Good Friday, and Christmas-day in which the houses of licensed victuallers shall be closed, sell any wines, spirits, or other excise able liquors, in and on board such boat, steam boat, or other vessel, within the said district, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, which may be recovered before any magistrate of the metropolitan police courts, or if the offence shall be committed beyond the limits of any metropolitan police court established or to be established, before any two justices of the peace having jurisdiction therein, or shall, in the discretion of the magistrate or justices of the peace before whom the conviction shall take place, be imprisoned for any time not longer than one calendar month in any gaol or house of correction within his jurisdiction; and in every case of the adjudication of such pecuniary penalty, and nonpayment thereof, it shall be lawful for such magistrate or justices of the peace to commit the offender to such gaol or house of correction for a term not exceeding one calendar month, the imprisonment to cease on payment of the sum due; and such penalty shall be paid to the receiver of the metropolitan police, and be applied by him towards the expenses of the police courts established within the said district."

Indictment for.

It would be an offence at common law and indictable to keep open an inn on a Sunday, and suffer tippling and noise therein, if it amounted to a common nuisance (See "Nuisance," Vol V. and form of indictment, post, No. 46.)

The 21 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 1, prohibits, under penalties, the keeping open of inns, &c. for debating on Sundays. (See post, "Lord's-Day," Vol. III.)

XV. Quartering of Soldiers.

By the annual acts against mutiny and desertion, the constable, and in his default a justice of the peace, may quarter soldiers in inns, livery stables, alehouses, and victualling-houses; as is set forth more at large in title "Military Law" (Soldiers), Vol V.

By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 5, the terms of the license under that act for selling beer or cider by retail, to be drunk and consumed on the premises, all provisions for billeting officers and soldiers in victualling-houses, contained in any act for punishing mutiny and desertion, and for the better payment of the army and their quarters, are to extend and apply to the house and premises mentioned in the license. (See forms of the license, post, Nos. 3, 5.) But by sect. 5 the provisions are not to extend to persons not licensed to sell beer and cider to be consumed on the premises.

XVI. Liability of Innkeepers towards their Guests, &c.

(1.) Liability to receive guests.

Herein, first, of their liability to receive and entertain the guests; and, secondly, of their liability for the loss of goods.

(1.) Liability to receive and entertain Guests, &c.]—Innkeepers are bound by law to receive travellers, passengers, wayfaring men, and such like persons who come to their inns, and are also bound to protect the property of those guests. They have no option either to receive or reject guests; and as they cannot refuse to receive guests, so neither can they impose unreasonable terms on them. (Per Lord Kenyon, C J., Kirkman v. Shawcross, 6 T. R. 17.) And an innkeeper continues so liable, notwithstanding he has taken down the sign, provided he continue to carry on the inn as such (Palmer, 373.)

But although a traveller is entitled to reasonable accommodation in an inn, he is not entitled to select a particular apartment, or to insist on occupying a bedroom for the purpose of sitting up all night, so long as the innkeeper is willing and offers to furnish him with a proper room for that purpose. (Fell v. Knight, 8 Mee. & W. 269.)

Nor is an innkeeper bound to receive a guest when the inn is so full that it cannot conveniently hold him; nor is he liable for not receiving a guest, unless he be tendered a fair remuneration for his accommodation, for he is not bound to give him credit, or unless the tender has been dispensed with. (Fell v. Knight, 8 Mee. & W. 269.)

16. Innkeepers' liability.

Tender of remuneration.

This same liability attaches as to the reception of the travellers' horses, and he is bound to receive the horses of those travellers who choose only to put their horses in his stables and themselves resort elsewhere, unless his stable be already full. (Watbroke v. Griffith, Mo. 876, 877; Saunders v. Plummer, Or. Bridg. 227.)

Horses.

An innkeeper is also bound to receive whatever goods his guests bring with them; but he is not bound to receive the goods of one who purposes to deposit them with him and to go elsewhere; for as he reaps no profit from the deposit of goods, he is not bound to take them under his charge. (Id. Ibid. York v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 388.) It is no excuse for not receiving goods with the guest, that there are suspicious persons in the house. (Jones on B. 95, 96.)

Goods.

An innkeeper is not bound to furnish any guest who requires them with post horses, although he has taken out a license and has painted over his door "licensed to let post horses," and he may let or refuse them to whom he pleases. (Semble, Dicas v. Hides, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 247; Holt, C. N. P. 207, S. C.) But if the party does hire and the innkeeper agrees to let, he must so let them, if the fair price of the letting is tendered. (Massiter v. Cooper, 4 Esp. Rep. 260.)

To furnish post horses.

If one who keeps a common inn improperly refuse either to receive a traveller as a guest into his house, or to find him victuals or lodging upon his tendering him a reasonable price for the same, he is not only liable to render damages for the injury, in an action on the case, at the suit of the party grieved, but may also be indicted and fined at the suit of the king. (1 Hawk. c. 78, s. 2.) And it is said in 4 Bla. Com. 167, that inns being intended for the lodging and receipt of travellers, may be indicted, suppressed, and the innkeepers fined, if they refuse to entertain a traveller without a very sufficient cause. And in a recent case it was considered that an indictment lies against an innkeeper who refuses to receive a guest, he having room in his house at the time. And it is no defence for the innkeeper that the guest was travelling on a Sunday, and at an hour of the night after the innkeeper's family had gone to bed; nor is it any defence that the guest refused to tell his name and abode, as the innkeeper had no right to insist upon knowing those particulars; but if the guest come to the inn drunk, or behaves in an indecent or improper manner, the innkeeper is not bound to receive him. (R. v. Ivers, 7 Carr. & P. 213.)

Remedies for refusal to receive, &c.

The indictment should state the person refused was a traveller, otherwise it would be quashed; (R. v. Luellin, 12 Mod. 445;) stating his being a sick person would not do.

No action lies for a mere refusal to receive the traveller, unless some special damage attend such refusal, such as the traveller being compelled to go a distance elsewhere, &c. (See Bro. Ab. Action on the Case, 76; Godb. 346; Palm. 374.)

It is said that the innkeeper may be compelled by the constable of the town to receive and entertain a traveller as his guest; and that it is no way material whether he hath a sign before his door or not, if he make it his common business to entertain travellers. But how the officer may compel him may be a question: it seemeth that all the officer can do, is either to cause such alehouse to be suppressed, or else to present such offence at the assizes or sessions, so that such offender may be thereupon indicted. (Dalt. c. 7; see Bull. N. P. 73; Bennett v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273; R. v. Luellin, 12 Mod. 445; Newton v. Trigg, 1 Show. 270.)

(2.) Liability for Loss of Goods, &c.]—The innkeeper is not only bound to receive and entertain all travellers, and their horses and goods, as above mentioned, but is also liable for any loss or damage arising to such horses or goods while the traveller remains as a guest in the inn with the same. (1

(2.) Liability for loss of goods, &c.

16. Innkeepers' liability.

Rol. 2, l. 35, 37; 8 Co. 32; Burgess v. Clements, 4 M. & Sel. 310; Richmond v. Smith, 8 B. & Cress. 9; 3 M. & Ry. 235, S. C.)

The innkeeper is in fact in the nature of an insurer for the safety of the goods of his guest, and his liability in this respect is analogous to that of a common carrier, and is liable for any loss not occasioned by the act of God or the king's enemies. (Richmond v. Smith, supra, 9.)

He is thus liable for every kind of goods which the guest may have with him in that character as long as he continues his guest, as well for charters, obligations, bonds, &c. as for other property, although the stealing of such was not formerly a larceny; (Calye's case, 8 Rep. 33 a;) and he is thus liable for the loss of money, though kept in a purse or reticule by the owner; (Kent v. Shuckard, 2 B. & Adol. 803;) but this liability extends only to the horse and goods of the guest, and not to the person; therefore he is not liable for the battery of the guest, though committed by the innkeeper's servants. (Calye's case, 8 Rep. 33 a.)

Not liable for injury to person of guest.

Who a guest.

It is necessary to render the innkeeper thus liable that the party leaving the goods in the innkeeper's custody should at the time of the injury be a guest at the inn. One who goes casually to an inn and eats and drinks, or sleeps there, is a guest, although not a traveller; (York v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 388; Bennett v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273; Cro. Jac. 224;) so is one who remains at the end of his journey at an inn without a special contract, even for half a year. (Latch. 126, 127; Parker v. Flint, Holt, 366; 12 Mod. 255, S. C.)

Where the plaintiff's servant came to the inn, and desired to have the liberty of leaving the goods, which he could not dispose of in the market, until the next week, which proposal was rejected, whereupon he sat down in the inn as a guest, with the goods behind him, and, during the time, the goods were taken away; it was held, that although his request was not complied with, he was entitled to protection for his goods during the time he continued in the inn as a guest. (Bennett v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273.)

The party continues a guest though he goes to view the town for any time; (2 Cro. 189;) or goes out and says he will return at night; (White's case, Dyer, 158 b;) or is absent for two or three days, if the keeping the goods is beneficial to the innkeeper in the meantime, as a horse, &c. (1 Rol. 3, l. 20; 2 Cro. 189.)

The owner may sue for the loss of goods deposited in the inn by his servant, while the latter is a guest there, though he himself be not a guest; (Beedle v. Morris, Cro. Jac. 224; Bennet v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273; 1 Rol. Ab. 3, E. 7; 3 Bulstr. 270;) so if they be thus deposited by a party not his servant (1 Rol. Ab. 3, E. 6; Robinson v. Walter, 3 Bulstr. 270.)

Soldiers quartered upon innkeepers are guests, and entitled to the same protection as other guests. It has been said that a soldier is entitled to this protection during the first fourteen days only, and that he is afterwards to be considered as a lodger. But the case of Harland goes only to show that he is a guest, though he has resided fourteen days in the inn at which he was quartered, in opposition to an opinion before entertained that one ceased to be a guest after residing three days, and does not limit the soldier's privilege as a guest to the fourteenth day. (Harland's case, Clayton, 97; Com. Dig. Action on Case for Negligence, B. 1; Willcock on Alehouses, 54.)

Who not a guest.

On the other hand, if a man comes to an inn and delivers his horse to the hostler, and requires him to be put to pasture, which is done accordingly, and the horse is stolen, the innholder shall not answer for it. (Calye's case, 8 Rep. 32.)

Holt, C.J., doubted whether a man is a guest by setting up his horse at an inn, though he never went into the inn himself; but the other three justices held that such person is a guest by leaving his horse, as much as if he had staid himself, because the horse must be fed, by which the innkeeper has gain; otherwise if he had left a trunk, or a dead thing. (York v. Grindsone, 1 Salk. 388.)

So if a man comes to an inn with a hamper, in which he hath certain goods (to wit, hats, as the case was), and depart leaving it with the host, and two days after come again, and in the time of his absence this was stolen; he shall not have any action against the host, because he was not a guest at the time of the stealing, and the host had no benefit by the keeping thereof, and therefore shall not be charged for the loss thereof in his absence. (1 Rol. Abr. 2.)

16. Innkeepers' liability.

If one come to an inn, and make a previous contract for lodging for a set time, and do not eat or drink there, he is no guest, but a lodger, and so not under the innkeeper's protection; but if he eat and drink, or pay for his diet there, it is otherwise. (Parker v. Flint, 12 Mod. 255; Holt, 366, S. C.)

So if an attorney hire a chamber in an inn for a whole term, the host is not chargeable with any robbery in it, because the party is as it were a lessee. (Mod. 877; Latch. 127.)

If a person ask to have a room in the inn, to be used by him for the purposes of his trade or other special purposes, he does not hold such room as a guest. (Burgess v. Clements, 4 Maule & Sel. 306, post, 118.)

A person is not a guest who, having been invited by the innkeeper to sup as a friend, remains to sleep there on account of the lateness of the hour, for he is voluntarily received as a visitor in a private house, and not in respect of the innkeeper's liability to entertain him, for which he would be entitled to make his charge. (Calye's case, 8 Rep. 32 a.)

Delivery to innkeeper, how far necessary.

Although the guest doth not deliver his goods to the innholder to keep, nor acquaints him with them, yet if they be damaged, lost, or stolen, the innkeeper shall be charged. (Id. 33.)

It has been said that there must be quasi a committal to the innkeeper's custody, and that merely leaving a thing about the house does not constitute such committal. (Kitchen v. Hill, Lancaster Summer Assizes, 1828, cor. Hullock, B.)

But this as a general position appears incorrect, for it is clear that the goods need not be in the special keeping of the innkeeper to make him liable. (Per Buller, J., Bennett v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273.) He is certainly not liable for the loss of or damage to goods left by his guest in an improper part of the inn, as if valuable commodities be left openly in a court-yard: nor is he liable for goods cumbersome left very negligently by the guest in an exposed situation; as where a person brought packages of linen and left them in the waggon in an outer yard, after the innkeeper had told him that he would not be responsible for them unless he removed them into an inner yard. Nor is he liable for goods left in an open yard, or in a public room, after the innkeeper has informed the guest that he would not be liable for them unless placed in a particular place. (See Calye's case, 8 Rep. 33 a; Sanders v. Spencer, 3 Dyer, 266, pl. 9; Brande v. Glass, Mo. 158.)

Where an agreement.

The innkeeper is not liable for the other goods of his guest after an agreement between them that he should be answerable for such things only as should be delivered into the immediate custody of himself or his wife, whether made before or after he became a guest, for such an agreement is a waiver on the part of the guest of the general security which the common law has given; and if the guest practise a deceit upon the innkeeper by stating he has no goods, or less than he really has, he can recover only for such as he made known to him. (Brande v. Glass, Mo. 158.)

Deceit by guest.

Liability where innkeeper has not custody of the goods.

The innkeeper will be exonerated where the guest chooses to have his goods under his own care.

If a guest take upon himself the exclusive charge of the goods which he brings into the house of an innkeeper, he cannot afterwards charge the innkeeper with the loss. An innkeeper is not bound to furnish a shop to every guest who comes into his house; and if a guest takes exclusive possession of a room, which he uses as a warehouse or shop, he discharges the innkeeper from his common law liability. (Farnwall v. Packwood, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 247; Curtin v. Packwood, Holt's C. N. P. 209; Burgess v. Clements, 4 M. & Sel. 306.)

Where a person, originally coming as a guest, applied for a room for the purpose of exhibiting goods for sale, the use of which was granted to him by the innkeeper's wife, who at the same time told him, that there was a key in the door, and that he might lock it (which was equivalent to telling him that he must take charge of it), but which he neglected to do, and during the night a part of the goods were stolen; it was held, that the innkeeper was not responsible. (Burgess v. Clements, 4 M. & Sel. 306.)

Where a traveller went to an inn and desired to have his luggage taken into the commercial room to which he resorted, from whence it was stolen, it was held the innkeeper was responsible, although he proved that according to the usual practice of his house the luggage would have been deposited in the guest's bed room, and not in the commercial room, if no order had been given respecting it. Lord Tenterden, C. J. said, "It appears that the plaintiff went to the defendant's inn as a guest, taking certain goods with him. It was the habit of the servants of that inn to place the goods of their customers in their bed-rooms, but the plaintiff chose to have the package in question carried into the room to which travellers in general resorted. It is clear that at common law, when a traveller brings goods to an inn, the landlord is responsible for them; and if it had been intended by the defendant not to be responsible unless his guests chose to have their goods placed in their bed rooms, or some other place selected by him, he should have said so. In this respect I think the situation of the landlord was precisely analogous to that of a carrier." (Richmond v. Smith, 8 B. & Cres. 9.)

An innkeeper on a fair day, upon being asked by a traveller, then driving a gig of which he was owner, "Whether he had room for the horse?" put the horse into the stable of the inn, received the traveller with some goods into the inn, and placed the gig in the open street, without the inn yard, where he was accustomed to place the carriages of his guests on fair days. The gig having been stolen from thence, it was held, that the innkeeper was answerable. (Jones v. Tyler, 1 Adol. & Ell. 522.)

When not liable by refusing to take charge of goods.

If an innkeeper bid his guest take the key of his chamber, and lock the door, and tell him that he will not take the charge of the goods, yet if they be stolen he shall be answerable, because he is charged by law for all things which come to his inn; and he cannot discharge himself by such or the like words. (Dalt. c. 56; Blackerby, 169.)

But if it be proved that the guest accepted the key, and took on himself the care of his goods, it is for the jury to determine whether this evidence of his receiving the key proves that he did it animo custodiendi, and with a purpose of exempting the innkeeper, or whether he took it merely because the landlord forced it on him, or for the sake of securing greater privacy, in order to prevent persons from intruding themselves into his room. (Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J.; Burgess v. Clements, 4 M. & Sel. 310, 311.)

If the innkeeper be desirous of locking up the goods, saying he cannot otherwise warrant them, and the guest refuses, he is not liable, per curiam. (Sanders v. Spencer, 3 Dyer, 266 b.) If the innkeeper's house be full, he is not liable for refusing to take the goods, per curiam. (White's case, 2 Dyer, 158 b.; 1 Rol. 3, l. 45.)

Liable though an infant, &c. ill or absent, &c.

The innkeeper is thus liable, though he be of non-sane memory and the guest knows it; (1 Rol. R. 2, l. 40; Cross v. Andrews, Cro. Eliz. 622;) or though he be an infant. (Id. sed vid. 1 Rol. 2, l. 43.)

The innkeeper is liable although ill at the time and incapable of attending to his affairs, for he is bound to retain servants to secure the goods of his guest when incapable of doing so himself; for the same reason he is liable though absent when the guest arrived, or though he was obliged to go elsewhere after the guest arrived. (Cross v. Andrews, Cro. Eliz. 622; 1 Rol. Abr. 4 G. 3, 4.)

When liable where goods stolen by guest's servant.

It seems an innkeeper is not liable for damage occasioned by the misconduct of his guest or the guest's servant, and if goods be stolen, lost, or injured by the servant of the guest, or by any person introduced into the inn by the guest. (Calye's case, 8 Rep. 33 a; Yelv. 162; Com. Dig. Action on Case for Negligence, B. 1, 2.)

Guests stealing goods.

A guest in a common inn, rising in the night-time, and carrying goods out of his chamber into another room, and from thence to the stable, intending to ride away with them, is guilty of felony: for the least removal of the thing taken from the place where it was before, is a sufficient asportation for this purpose. (Dalt. c. 40, s. 87; 1 Hawk. c. 33, s 18; see "Larceny," Vol. III.)

16. Innkeepers' liability.

If the chamber of the guest at an inn be forced open and his goods stolen, the burglary must be laid in the dwelling-house of the landlord. (1 Hale, 557; R. v Prosser, 2 East, 502.)

Burglary.

XVII. Rights of Innkeeper to Remuneration, Lien, &c., and herein of the Tippling Act.

Herein, first, of his remuneration; secondly, his remedy for it by lien; and thirdly, his remedy for it by action.

(1.) Remuneration, amount of, &c.]—An innkeeper is not entitled to greater charges than what are reasonable. In deciding as to what is reasonable, not only the intrinsic value of the goods must be taken into estimation, but also the trouble and risk which the innkeeper takes upon himself in his character of innkeeper. (Newton v. Trigg, 1 Show. 268; Carth. 150.) It has indeed been said that an innkeeper cannot fix his own prices, and that the Court of Queen's Bench or the judges of assize may set them. (Id. 1 Bulstr. 109.)

(1.) Remuneration, amount of, &c.

If an innkeeper be guilty of a gross over-charge in his bill, the guest may tender him a reasonable amount, or the innkeeper may be indicted and fined for his extortion. (Kirkman v. Shawcross, 6 T. R. 7; Johnson's case, Cro. Jac. 610; see ante, 109.)

Extortion.

Sale of Spirits under 20*s.* &c.]—By the 24 Geo. II. c. 40, s. 12, it is enacted, "No person shall recover any sum of money, debt, or demand on account of spirituous liquors, unless it shall bonâ fide have been contracted at one time to the amount of 20*s.* or upwards; nor shall any particular article in any account for distilled spirituous liquors be allowed where the liquors delivered at one time shall not amount to the full value of 20*s.* at the least, and that without fraud or covin, and where no part of the liquors so sold shall have been returned or be agreed to be returned directly or indirectly; and if any retailer, with or without license, shall take any pawn by way of security for payment of any money for such spirituous liquors or strong waters, he shall forfeit 40*s.* for every pawn or pledge so taken, to be levied by warrant of one justice, half to the poor and half to the informer, and the owner shall have such remedy for recovering such pawn or the value thereof as if it had never been pledged."

Sale of spirits, &c. under 20s. at a time.

Penalty for taking pawn for.

Under this act it has been decided that an innkeeper cannot recover the amount of the items in his bill for spirits or spirits mixed with water, unless each item is for spirits furnished at one time to the amount of 20*s.* although forming items in a bill for a dinner, and that furnished not to the defendant but to others at his request. (Gilpin v. Rendle, 1 Selw. N. P. 55; Burnyeat v. Hutchinson, 5 B. & Ald. 241.)

If an innkeeper or other person sell two sorts of spirits at the same time to an amount above 20*s.*, he may recover the price, although the amount of each species of spirits be under 20*s.* (Owens v. Porter, 4 C. & P. 367; et per Bosanquet, J., S. C.) "The object of the act seems to have been, that if a number of articles each under 20*s.* are delivered at different times, it should not be lawful to charge them in one item so as to make them amount to more than 20*s.*

The act applies to all sales of spirits unless delivered in quantities amounting to more than 20*s.* in value at one time, and though the sale be to a person living in the hotel, or to a person not the consumer. (Burnyeat v. Hutchinson, 5 B. & Ald. 241.) Therefore the price of spirits sold in quantities less than to the required amount of 20*s.* by a spirit merchant to a publican, to be consumed, not by the publican himself, but by his customers, cannot be recovered in an action. (Hughes v. Done, 1 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 294.)

In a case where the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in different sums in respect of spirituous liquors so furnished and other goods, and the plaintiff being indebted to the defendant in the less sum, they agreed on a balance, the Court held that this balance might be recovered, for the defendant was to be taken to have paid the amount due for spirituous liquors in setting off against the plaintiff's account generally what was due from the plaintiff to him, (which appeared to have been more than the charge for spirits); and on the ground that though the plaintiff had originally no action to recover a debt so incurred, it being reasonable that defendant should pay it; had he paid it in money he could not have recovered back the amount, and such allowance in the account stated (which was not to be referred to the legal rather than to the illegal demand) was equivalent to payment. (Dawson v. Remnant, 6 Esp. 24.)

It has been held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover on a bill of exchange, which the defendant had accepted in part in respect of money lent and in part for a debt for spirits furnished in small quantities, although the residue of the consideration was good. (Scott v. Gillimore, 3 Taunt. 226; and see Gaitskill v. Greathead, 1 D. & R. 359, 360; and Spencer v. Smith, 3 Camp. 9.)

A publican cannot sue for beer, &c., furnished to a party already intoxicated, or knowingly to a party to enable him to become so. (Ante, 113.)

Lien for remuneration.

(2.) Remedy for Remuneration by Lien.]—An innkeeper may detain the goods of the guest who eats, till payment; and he may do so without any agreement for that purpose, for the law annexes such a condition without the express agreement of the parties, as it would be hard to oblige him to sue for every little debt; and a greater hardship, that he might not be able to find who was his guest. But an innkeeper, although he has a lien on the goods, has none on the person of his guest, and cannot therefore detain him for any reckoning due, nor has he any right to take any of his clothes off his person as security for the same. (Sunbolf v. Alford, 3 Mee. & W. 248.)

In trover for a horse in an innkeeper's hands, denial is no evidence of conversion, unless the plaintiff tender what the horse has eaten out: and the jury is to judge if sufficient were tendered. (Bull. N. P. 45; 2 Show. 161.)

But a horse committed to an innkeeper may be detained only for his own meat, and not for the meat of the guest, or of any other horse: for the chattels in such case are only in the custody of the law for the debt that arises from the thing itself, and not for any other debt due from the same party: for the law is open for all such debts, and doth not admit private persons to take reprisals. (Bac. Abr. Inns, D.; 14 Vin. Abr. 438; 1 Bulstr. 237; Rosse v. Bramstead, 2 Rol. 438.) But the cases relied on for the correctness of this last proposition do not seem to support it, and the lien of an innkeeper appears to extend to all the goods of his guest which the guest has at the inn for all his expenses incurred there. (See Story on Bailments, 311, Am. edit. 1840.)

It should seem, however, that an innkeeper may detain the goods of the guest for his bill, although there be no distinct charge for lodging and taking care of them. And in Proctor v. Nicholson, 7 Car. & P. 87, it was held that an innkeeper has a lien on the goods of his guest for board and lodging and wine supplied to such guest, by the guest's order, whatever may be the amount, provided the guest be possessed of his reason and not an infant. Also that he has a lien for money lent to his guest, if it was agreed between them at the time of the loans that the guest's goods should be a security for the sum lent.

The innkeeper may detain a horse for his food though it be left with him against its real owner's consent, if the innkeeper receive it without knowing that fact, and this, though the horse were stolen; for the innkeeper is not obliged to consider who is the owner, but only whether he who brings him is his guest or not. (See Shipwith v. ———, 1 Bulstr. 170; Robinson v. Walter, 1 Rol. Rep. 449; York v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 368; York v. Greenhaugh, 2 Ld. Raym. 866.) In Johnson v. Hill, 3 Stark. 172, where A. under the colour of a legal proceeding, having wrongfully seized the horse of B., took it to an inn, where it was kept for several days. The landlord refused to deliver up the horse to B. upon a demand made soon after the delivery to him, but a few days afterwards offered to give up the horse to B. on being paid ten shillings for the keep. The chief justice was of opinion that if the landlord knew at the time the horse was delivered into his custody, that A. was not the owner of the property, but a mere wrong doer, he made himself a party to the wrongful act of A., and could not insist on any recompence for keeping the horse; and this being left to the jury, they found for B. the plaintiff. But he has no lien on a horse placed in his stable for the amount of its keep, unless it be placed there by a guest. And if a person be stopped with a horse under suspicious circumstances, and the horse be placed at any inn by the police, the innkeeper has no lien on the horse for its keep; and if an auctioneer, by the direction of the innkeeper, sell the horse for its keep, he is liable to be sued in trover by the owners of the horse. (Binns v. Pigot, 9 C. & P. 208.)

17. Innkeepers' rights.

He may detain the guest's horse for the amount due in respect of it, whether in the stable or at pasture. (York v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 388; Newton v. Trigg, 1 Show. 268; 2 Rol. Abr. 85.)

But if an innkeeper previously agree to give the guest credit for his entertainment he cannot detain his horse or goods, as the innkeeper then relies on the personal responsibility of his guest. (Jones v. Thurlow, 8 Mod. 172.)

The innkeeper is entitled to feed the horse during the time of its detention, and to charge the amount in account for which he detains it; and even where a man desired the innkeeper to let his horse have no more food, it was held liable to a detainer notwithstanding. (Gilbert v. Berkeley, Skin. 648, pl. 6; Holt, 366.)

If a horse committed to an innkeeper be detained by him for his meat, and the owner take him away, the innkeeper must make fresh pursuit after him, and retake him; otherwise the custody of him is lost, for he cannot retake him at any other time; for if a distress be rescued, and the party upon fresh pursuit do not retake it, the distress is lost. (2 Rol. Rep. 238.)

But if a horse be committed to an hostler, who detains him for his meat, and afterwards the owner agree that he shall detain him till he be satisfied; here he hath not only the custody of him as a distress, but also the property in him as a pledge; and if the owner take it from him, he may not only retake it upon fresh pursuit, but wherever he meets it; because he had a property by such agreement, and a man that hath a property may retake his own wherever he meets it. (2 Rol. Rep. 238.)

If the horse be once taken out with the consent of the innkeeper, he loses his lien thereon for the keep up to that time. (Jones v. Pearl, Stra. 556.)

The 11 & 12 Will. III. c. 15, s. 2, which prevented the innkeeper from detaining the goods for his bill, and allowing him only to bring his action in case of his selling ale, &c., in unmarked pots, or refusing to give his bill in writing, &c., appears to be repealed by the 5 Geo. IV. c. 74, s. 23.

Goods detained not to be used or sold.

An innkeeper who detains a horse for his meat cannot use him except for keeping him in health, or sell him, because he detains him as in custody of the law; and by consequence the detention must be in the nature of a distress, which cannot be used by the distrainer. (See Bac. Abr. Inns, D.) But it is said by Popham, C. J., (Yel. 67,) that if a man bring his horse to an inn, and leave him there in the stable without any special agreement as to what he is to pay, the innkeeper is not bound to deliver the horse until the owner has defrayed his charge for the horse, but he may justify the detainer of the horse for his food and keeping, and after the horse has eat as much as he is worth, the innkeeper, upon a reasonable appraisement, may sell him, and it is a good sale in law. But if there be a special agreement that the owner of the horse shall pay a certain sum for the keep; in that case, although the horse eat out double his price, the innkeeper cannot sell him. (Sed vid. Judson v. Etheridge, 1 C. & M. 743; and Chase v. Westmore, 5 M. & Sel. 180.)

Except by custom in London and Exeter.

But by the custom of London and Exeter, if a man commit a horse to an hostler, and he eat out the price of his head, the hostler may take him as his own, upon the reasonable appraisement of four of his neighbours; which was, it seems, a custom arising from the abundance of traffic with strangers, that could not be known, to charge them with the action. But the innkeeper hath no power to sell the horse, by the general custom of the realm. (Bac. Abr. Inns, D.; Jones v. Thurlow, 8 Mod. 172.)

17. Innkeepers' rights.

So in the case of Jones v. Pearle, (1 Stra. 557.) In trover for three horses, the defendant pleaded that he kept a public inn at Glastonbury, and that the plaintiff was a carrier, and used to set up his horses there; and 36*l.* being due to him for keeping the horses, which was more than they were worth, he detained and sold them, as well he might: but on demurrer, judgment was given for the plaintiff, an innkeeper having no power to sell horses, except by special custom, as in the city of London; and, besides, when the horses had been once out, the power of detaining them for what was due before did not subsist at their coming in again.

(3.) Remedy by action.

(3.) Remedy for Remuneration by Action.]—The innkeeper may sustain an action of assumpsit or debt for the amount of his bill, and this notwithstanding he detains the goods as a lien. (Watbroke v. Griffiths, Mod. 876; Yelv. 67.)

If several persons dine together at a tavern they are primâ facie jointly liable for the whole bill, and not merely each for his own share; but each of the officers of a regimental mess is only separately liable for his own share. (3 Campb. 51, 53, 168; 2 Campb. 640.)

XVIII. Privileges and Disqualification of Innkeepers.

Under Turnpike Acts.

No trustee or commissioner of the turnpike roads may act while he keeps a victualling house or other house of public entertainment, or sells wine, cider, beer, ale, spirituous or other strong liquors by retail, under a penalty of 50*l.* for every offence. (3 Geo. IV. c. 126, s. 64; post, "Highways," "Turnpike," Vol. III.)

No person selling wine, ale, spirituous liquors, or provisions by retail, shall be capable of holding any place of profit under any trustees or commissioners of any turnpike road. (3 Geo. IV. c. 126, s. 75.)

Constable.

The 3 Geo. IV. c. 77, s. 19, which prohibited innkeepers from being constables, &c. is now expired; but it is said, per Holt, C. J. (Anon. 6 Mod. 42,) that no alehouse keeper should be a constable; (and see Rex v. Rice, 1 Ld. Raym. 138.)

Sheriff's officer.

If a person licensed under the 1 Will. IV. c. 64, or 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, or 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, ante, 63, become a sheriff's officer, &c. he will forfeit his license.

(a) The form given in the schedule of the act contains a clause prohibiting the sale of beer between certain hours therein named, which is omitted in the copy of the license here given. The section of the act under which that clause was inserted has been repealed by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, and other provisions substituted; (ante, 72;) and the form of license now used by the excise does not appear to contain any such prohibition. It leaves, therefore, the offence to be punished under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 15, (ante, 72.)

(b) It would seem that since the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, s. 5, ante, 114, this provision as to the billetting of soldiers is to be omitted in the license to sell beer or cider not to be drunk or consumed on the premises.

(c) The act gives this form, see ante, 65.

(d) The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 85, gives this form, (see ante, 68.) The clause in the license prohibiting the sale of beer within certain hours, is here also omitted for the reasons stated in note (a), supra.

(23.) Notice, &c. of appeal.

To and , justices of the peace acting in and for the Western division of , in the county of , and such other justices of the peace acting in and for the said division in the said county, as were present at a petty sessions held at , in and for the division aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, on the day of , A. D. .

Whereas by an order made by you or some of you on the said day of , at the said petty sessions of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the said division in the county aforesaid, holden at aforesaid, you or some of you did under colour of an Act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled, "An Act to amend an Act passed in the first year of the reign of his present Majesty, to permit the general Sale of Beer and Cider by Retail in England," order, fix, and appoint, that in the working days of the week the hours of opening all such houses and premises in which beer and cider should be sold under the said Act within the town of W., and parishes of B., C., D., H., N. S., S., and W. F., within the Western division of aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, should be six o'clock in the morning from the 10th day of October then next until the 25th day of March following; and five o'clock in the morning from the 25th day of March then next until the 9th day of October then next following; and that the hour of closing the same should be nine o'clock at night from the said 10th day of October then next until the said 25th day of March following; and ten o'clock at night from the said 26th day of March then next until the said 9th day of October thence next following. And this is to give you, and each and every of you, notice, that I, A. B. residing at the town of W. in the parish of B. in the county aforesaid, retail brewer, and having a house and premises situate at W. aforesaid, licensed to sell beer under the said Act, and selling beer by retail therein, being a party aggrieved by the said order, do intend to appeal against such order to the justices of the peace in the next quarter sessions assembled and to be holden in and for the said county at . And take notice that I am a party aggrieved by the said order, amongst other reasons, on account of the short space of time during which I am thereby allowed to keep open my aforesaid house and premises, so that thereby I have many less opportunities for selling my beer and my sale and profits are greatly diminished. Dated this day of , A. D. 18 .

Yours, &c.

B. there situate, being a common tippling-house, did openly sell and utter and cause to be sold and uttered ale and beer and other liquors to divers idle and ill-disposed persons, whose names to the jurors aforesaid are as yet unknown, and that the said A. B. on the said, &c. and on divers other days, during the time of divine service on each respective day, at, &c., in his said dwelling-house, did unlawfully and wilfully permit and suffer divers idle and ill-disposed persons, whose names to the jurors aforesaid are as yet unknown, to remain and continue drinking and tippling, to the common nuisance of her Majesty's liege subjects, to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our said Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

Alias Dictus.

THE term alias dictus is used for the term "otherwise" in describing a defendant in an indictment or information where he has gone by two or more different names. Though usual, it is not necessary thus to describe the defendant. What comes under the alias dictus is not traversable. (See further, post, "Indictment," Vol. III.)

Alibi.

THIS term is used to express that defence in a criminal prosecution where the party accused, in order to prove that he could not have committed the crime charged upon him, offers evidence that he was in a different place at the time of its commission.

Who are.

AN alien, generally speaking, is one born in a foreign country, out of the allegiance of the king. (4 Bla. Com. 372.) (b)

(a) As to aliens in general see 1 Chit. Com. Law, 131 to 168; Tucker's Remarks on the Naturalization Bill.

(b) Natural-born subjects are persons born within the allegiance, power, or protection of the crown of England, which terms embrace not only persons born within the dominions of his Majesty or of his homagers, and the children of subjects in the service of the King abroad, and the King's children, and the heirs of the crown, all of whom are natural-born subjects by the common law, but also, under various statutes (viz. 7 Ann. c. 5; 4 Geo. II. c. 21; 13 Geo. III. c. 27,) all persons, though born abroad, whose fathers, or grandfathers by the father's side, were natural born subjects at common law, unless the father or paternal grandfather, through whom the claim is made, was at the time of the birth of such children liable, in case of his return into this country, to the penalties of treason or felony, or was in the actual service of any foreign prince then at enmity with the crown of England, excepting always, for the benefit both of the common law and of the statutes, those artificers and manufacturers who are declared aliens by 5 Geo. I. c. 27; see 1 Chit. Com. Law, 117, 119, 130. Artificers, however, may now go abroad, 5 Geo. IV. c. 97.

Persons born in transmarine territories belonging to the King of England in any other right than that of the English crown, as, for instance, the Hanoverians and persons doing service to the King as officers of such transmarine territories, are not natural-born subjects, see Craw v. Ramsey, Vaughan, 286.

A child born out of the allegiance of the crown of England is not entitled to be deemed a natural-born subject unless the father be at the time of the birth of the child not a subject only but a subject by birth. Therefore children born in the United States of America since the recognition of their independence, of parents born there before that time, and continuing to reside there afterwards, are aliens, and cannot inherit lands here. Doe d. Thomas v. Acklam, 2 Barn. & Cres. 779; 4 D. & R. 394, S. C.

But children born in America since the recognition of their independence, of parents who resided there before, but who were natural-born British subjects, and at the time of the separation of the two countries adhered to the British government, are not aliens, and are capable of inheriting lands here. (Doe d. Auchmuty v. Mulcaster, 5 B. & C. 771; 8 D. & R. 593, S. C.; and see Doe d. Birtwistle v. Vardill, 8 D. & R. 185. 1. Observations as to.

Jealousy against.

The common law of this country has always been jealous of foreigners; from the Conquest till upwards of 200 years afterwards, it does not appear that strangers were permitted to reside in England even on account of commerce beyond a limited time, except by a special warrant, for they were considered only as sojourners coming to a fair or market, and were obliged to employ their landlords as brokers to buy and sell their commodities; and we find that one stranger was often arrested for the debt or punished for the misdemeanor of another, as if all strangers were to be looked upon as a people with whom the English were in a state of perpetual war, and therefore might make reprisals on the first they could lay hands on. (Tucker's Remarks on Naturalization Bill, 2, 3, 13, 15; 2 Inst. 204; Rymer's Fœdera, Vols. I. II. III. IV.; Anderson's History of Commerce, 237, 242)

The privileges and disabilities of aliens, which will be here noticed, are—As respects the registration of them, their expulsion from and detention in this kingdom; and—As respects their offences and trial, and qualifications as jurors and witnesses.

II. Regulations as to Registration of Aliens, and their Expulsion from and Detention in this Country.

6 Will. 4, c. 11.

7 Geo. 4, c. 51, repealed.

By stat. 6 Will. IV. c. 11, intituled, "An Act for the Registration of Aliens, and to repeal an Act passed in the Seventh Year of the Reign of his late Majesty for that purpose," [19th May, 1836,] reciting, "Whereas in the seventh year of the reign of his late majesty an act was passed, intituled 'An Act for the Registration of Aliens:' and whereas it is expedient that the said act should be repealed, and that provisions in respect of aliens should be made in lieu of the regulations therein contained: it is therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the said act shall be and is hereby repealed."

Masters of vessels arriving from foreign parts to declare what aliens are on board or have landed from their vessels.

Sect. 2. "The master of every vessel which, after the commencement of this act, shall arrive in this realm from foreign parts, shall immediately on his arrival declare in writing, to the chief officer of the customs at the port of arrival, whether there is, to the best of his knowledge, any alien on board his vessel, and whether any alien hath, to his knowledge, landed therefrom at any place within this realm, and shall in his said declaration specify the number of aliens (if any) on board his vessel, or who have, to his knowledge, landed therefrom, and their names, rank, occupation, and description, as far as he shall be informed thereof; and if the master of any such vessel shall refuse or neglect to make such declaration, or shall wilfully make a false declaration, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and the further sum of ten pounds for each alien who shall have been on board at the time of the arrival of such vessel, or who shall have, to his knowledge, landed therefrom within this realm, whom such master shall wilfully have refused or neglected to declare; and in case such master shall neglect or refuse forthwith to pay such penalty, it shall be lawful for any officer of the customs, and he is hereby required, to detain such vessel until the same shall be paid: provided always, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend to any mariner actually employed in the navigation of such vessel during the time that such mariner shall remain so actually employed."

Penalty for omission of declaration.

Not to extend to foreign mariners navigating the vessel.

Alien on arrival from abroad to declare his name, description, &c. and produce his passport.

Sect. 3. "Every alien who shall after the commencement of this act arrive in any part of the United Kingdom from foreign parts, shall immediately after such arrival present and show to the chief officer of the customs at the port of debarkation, for his inspection, any passport which may be in his or her possession, and declare in writing to such chief officer, or verbally make to him a declaration, to be by him reduced into writing, of the day and place of his or her landing, and of his or her name, and shall also declare to what country he or she belongs, and is subject, and the country and place from whence he or she shall then have come; which declaration shall be made in or reduced into such form as shall be approved by one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and if any such alien coming into this realm shall neglect or refuse to present and show any passport which may be in his or her possession, or if he or she shall neglect or refuse to make such declaration, he or she shall forfeit the sum of two pounds."

2. Registration of, &c.

6 Will. 4, c. 11.

Sect. 4. "The officer of the customs to whom such passport shall be shown and declaration made, shall immediately register such declaration in a book to be kept by him for that purpose (in which book certificates shall be printed in blank, and counterparts thereof, in such form as shall be approved by one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state), and shall insert therein the several particulars by this act required in proper columns, in both parts thereof, and shall deliver one part thereof to the alien who shall have made such declaration."

Officer of customs to register the declaration, and deliver a certificate to the alien.

Sect. 5. "The chief officer of the customs in every port shall within two days transmit a true copy of the declaration of every master of a vessel, and a true copy of every such certificate, if in Great Britain, to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, and if such alien shall have arrived from any foreign country in Ireland, he shall transmit a true copy of such declaration and of such certificate to the chief secretary for Ireland."

Officer of customs to transmit declaration, &c. to secretary of state.

Certificate of alien departing the realm to be transmitted to secretary of state.

Sect. 6. "Any alien about to depart from this realm shall, before his or her embarkation, deliver any certificate which he or she shall have received under the provisions of this act to the chief officer of the customs at the port of departure, who shall insert therein that such alien hath departed this realm, and shall forthwith transmit the same to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, or to the chief secretary for Ireland, as the case may be, in the like manner as hereinbefore is directed in respect to the certificate given to an alien on his or her arrival in this realm."

Sect. 7. "If any certificate issued to any alien by virtue of this act shall be lost, mislaid, or destroyed, and such alien shall produce to one of his majesty's justices of the peace proof thereof, and shall make it appear to the satisfaction of such justice that he or she hath duly conformed with this act, it shall be lawful for such justice, and he is hereby required to testify the same under his hand, and such alien shall thereupon be entitled to receive from one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, or from the chief secretary for Ireland, as the case may be, a fresh certificate, which shall be of the like force and effect as the certificate so lost, mislaid, or destroyed."

New certificates to be issued in lieu of such as are lost.

Sect. 8. "All certificates hereinbefore required to be given shall be given without fee or reward whatsoever, and every person who shall take any fee or reward of any alien or other person, for any certificate, or any other matter or thing done under this act, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of twenty pounds; and every officer of the customs who shall refuse or neglect to make such entry as aforesaid, or grant any certificate thereon, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, or shall knowingly make any false entry, or neglect to transmit the copy thereof, or to transmit any declaration of the master of a vessel, or any declaration of departure, in manner directed by this act, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of twenty pounds."

Certificate to be granted without fee. Penalty.

Sect. 9. "If any person shall wilfully make or transmit any false declaration, or shall wilfully forge, counterfeit, or alter, or cause to be forged, counterfeited, or altered, or shall utter, knowing the same to be forged, counterfeited, or altered, any declaration or certificate hereby directed, or shall obtain any such certificate under any other name or description than the true name and description of the alien intended to be named and described, without disclosing to the person granting such certificate, the true name and description of such alien, or shall falsely pretend to be the person intended to be named and described in any such certificate, every person so offending shall, upon conviction thereof before two justices, either forfeit any sum not exceeding one hundred pounds, or be imprisoned for any time not exceeding three calendar months, at the discretion of such justices."

Penalty for forging certificates, &c.

Sect. 10. "All offences against this act shall be prosecuted within six calendar months after the offence committed; and all such offences shall be prosecuted before two or more justices of the peace of the place where the Prosecution of offences.

2. Registration of, &c.

offence shall be committed, who are required, in default of payment of any pecuniary penalty, to commit the offender to the common gaol for any time not exceeding one calendar month, unless the penalty shall be sooner paid, where such penalty shall not exceed the sum of twenty pounds, and forthwith to report to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, or to chief secretary for Ireland, as the case may require, the conviction of every offender under this act, and the punishment to which he is adjudged; and no writ of certiorari or of advocation or suspension shall be allowed to remove the proceedings of any justices touching the cases aforesaid, or to supersede or suspend execution or other proceeding thereupon."

Not to affect foreign ministers or their servants; nor aliens who have been resident three years, and obtained certificate thereof; nor aliens under fourteen years of age.

Sect. 11. "Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall affect any foreign ambassador or other public minister duly authorised, nor any domestic servant of any such foreign ambassador or public minister, registered as such according to law, or being actually attendant upon such ambassador or minister; nor any alien who shall have been continually residing within this realm for three years next before the passing of this act, or who shall hereafter at any time complete such residence of three years, and who shall have obtained from one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, or from the chief secretary for Ireland, a certificate thereof: nor any alien in respect of any act done or omitted to be done, who shall be under the age of fourteen years at the time when such act was so done or omitted to be done: provided always, that if any question shall arise whether any person alleged to be an alien, and to be subject to the provisions of this act, is an alien or not, or is or is not subject to the said provisions or any of them, the proof that such person is, or by law is to be deemed to be, a natural-born subject of his majesty, or a denizen of this kingdom, or a naturalized subject, or that such person, if an alien, is not subject to the provisions of this act or any of them, by reason of any exception contained in this act or otherwise, shall lie on the person so alleged to be an alien and to be subject to the provisions of this act."

Commencement of act.

Sect. 12. "This act shall commence and take effect from and after the first day of July in the present year."

III. Offences and Trial and Disqualification of, as Jurors, &c.

Offences by, in this country.

Aliens and denizens committing offences here are subject to the same laws and punishments as natural-born subjects; and it is no answer to an indictment, that the act charged against them is not an offence in their own country. (Reg. v. Esop, 7 C. & P. 456.) But such a circumstance would be taken into consideration in mitigation of punishment An alien residing here may be indicted for high treason if he aid even his own countrymen in acts of hostility to this country (1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 5.) But aliens who in an hostile manner invade this kingdom, whether their king is at war or peace with it, and whether they come by themselves or in company with English traitors, cannot be punished as traitors, but must be dealt with by martial law. (1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 6; 3 Inst. 11.)

Offence abroad.

In R. v. Depardo, (1 Taunt. 26; R. & R. C. C. 134, S. C.) it was held, that a manslaughter committed in China by an alien enemy who had been a prisoner of war, and was then acting as a mariner on board an English merchant ship, on an Englishman, cannot be tried here under an admiralty commission issued in pursuance of the 33 Hen. VIII. c. 23, and 43 Geo. III. c. 11, s. 6. (Ante, 51.) The prisoner in that case was tried at the Old Bailey Sessions, October, 1807, under a special commission issued by virtue of the statutes 33 Hen. VIII. c. 23, and 43 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 6, upon an indictment which charged that he the said Antonio Depardo on the 30th of November, 47 Geo. III. &c. with force and arms at Canton in China, in parts beyond the sea without England, in and upon one William Burne in the peace, &c. feloniously did make an assault, &c., and with a certain knife, of the value, &c., then and there feloniously did strike, stab and thrust, giving to the said William Burne, then and there, &c. one mortal wound, &c. of which said mortal wound he the said William Burne on the said 30th of November, 47 Geo. III. aforesaid, in Canton in China aforesaid, in part beyond the sea without England, did die; and so the jurors, &c. did say that the said Antonio Depardo him the said William Burne in manner and form aforesaid did kill and slay, against the peace, &c. It appeared in evidence that Antonio Depardo was a Spaniard, and had been a prisoner of war on board the Blenheim, and that whilst abroad he volunteered on board a ship called the Alnwick Castle, an Indiaman then lying at the Prince of Wales's Island, (which is under the dominion of his Majesty,) and received the usual bounty. The prisoner who had served about three months on board the Indiaman received on the day before he committed the offence charged in the indictment a part of his pay. The deceased was an Englishman, and a mariner serving on board the same ship as the prisoner. At the time of committing the offence the Alnwick Castle was lying near Canton, in a part of the Canton river, about one-third of a mile in width, within the tideway, at the distance of about eighty miles from the sea. The prisoner went on shore with others of the crew, and there mortally wounded the deceased, who was afterwards carried on board the ship, where he died the following day. The prisoner was found guilty, but the learned judge entertaining some doubts whether the prisoner was liable to be tried here under the statutes 33 Hen. VIII. c. 23, and 43 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 6, reserved the case for the opinion of the judges. In Michaelmas term, 1807, this case was argued before the judges by Burrough for the prisoner, and Abbott for the crown. No judgment was given, but the prisoner was discharged. 3. Offences, &c. Jurors.

A person who steals goods in France cannot be tried in England for the offence, though he be found in possession of the stolen property here. (Rex v. Madge, 9 Car. & P. 29.)

Aliens and denizens, besides the ordinary species of jury, are entitled, except in treason, to demand another description of jury, which by the humanity of the law is given them, viz. a jury de medietate linguæ. (4 Bla. Com. 352.) In this respect the 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 47, enacts that "in all inquests that are taken against aliens, half the jury shall be aliens, if so many are to be found within the town or place where the trial is had, and if not, so many as the sheriff is able to procure, and the alien juror need not produce any freehold or other qualification required by the act in other cases." If an alien neglect to claim this advantage before the jury are sworn, he can take no exception in any subsequent stage of the proceedings. (The Abbot of Westminster v. The Executors of Clerke, 1 Dyer, 28 a; Rex v. D'Eon, 1 Bla. Rep. 517. See further 1 Chit. C. L. 525; post, title "Jurors," Vol. III.) Jury on trial of.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 3, provides, "That no man not being a natural-born subject of the king is or shall be qualified to serve on juries or inquests, except only in the cases thereinafter expressly provided for," (viz. of juries de medietate linguæ, sect. 47, infra.) Disqualification of, as jurors.

An alien may be a witness. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 28; post, "Evidence," Vol. II.) Witness.

The 14 & 15 Hen. VIII. c. 2, prohibits an alien from taking an apprentice. (See post, "Apprentices.") Apprentice.

Allegiance.

ALLEGIANCE is the natural, and lawful, and faithful obedience which every subject owes to his prince. It is either perpetual where one is a subject born, or where one hath the right of a subject by naturalization, &c. or it is temporary by reason of residence in the king's dominions. To subjects born it is an incident inseparable, and as soon as born they owe by birthright obedience to their sovereign, and it cannot be confined to any kingdom, but follows the subject wherever he goeth. The subjects are hence called liege What.

Allegiance.

people and are bound by this allegiance to go with the king to his wars as well within as without the kingdom. (See 1 Bl. Com. 366, &c.; 1 Inst. 129; 2 Inst. 741; Calvin's case, 7 Co. 4; Toml. Dict. 'Allegiance.' See post "Treason," Vol. V.)

Oath of allegiance.

By the common law all persons above the age of twelve years were required to take the oath of allegiance in courts-leet, and there are several statutes requiring such oath to be taken. (See post, "Oaths," Vol. V.; "Leet," Vol. III.)

Almanac.

What, and effect of, in evidence.

THE almanac is part of the law of the land, having been established by different statutes, and the courts must take judicial notice of it; (Reg. v. Dyer, 6 Mod. 41; Brough v. Perkins, id. 81; 1 Leon. 242; Brough v. Parkings, 2 Ld. Raym. 994; Page v. Fawcett, Cro. Eliz. 227;) and will be good evidence to prove when a particular day happened. (Id.)

The almanac to go by in such cases is that annexed to the Common Prayer Book, in which it is incorporated. (Brough v. Perkins, 6 Mod. 81; see further, post, "Time," Vol. VI.)

Stamp duties as to, repealed.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 57, repeals the stamp duties as to almanacs or calendars, or any book or pamphlet serving the purpose of an almanac or calendar.

Alteration of Proceedings, see post, "Amendment."

Ambassadors.

What.

AN Ambassador is a person sent by one sovereign to another with authority, and letters of credence, to treat on affairs of state. (4 Inst. 143.)

Protection of.

Ambassadors may, by a precaution, be warned not to come to the place where sent, and if they then do it they shall be taken for enemies; but being once admitted even with enemies in arms they shall have the protection of the laws of nations and be preserved as princes. (Moll. 146.) If a banished man be sent as an ambassador to the place from whence he is banished he may not be detained or molested there. (4 Inst. 153.)

But if he be not received or admitted as ambassador he has no privilege as such, and an ambassador may be refused in respect of him by whom sent, or in respect of the person sent, as if he is notoriously flagitious, or if he be disagreeable to the state to which he is sent. An ambassador ought not however to be refused without cause. See Grotius and Molloy, cited Com. Dig. title Ambassador.

Offences by

If a foreign ambassador commits any crime here, which is contra jus gentium, as treason, felony, &c. or any other crime against the law of nations, he loseth the privilege of an ambassador, and is subject to punishment as a private alien; and he need not be remanded to his sovereign but of curtesy. (Danv. Abr. 327.) But if a thing be only malum prohibitum by an act of parliament, private law, or custom of the realm, and it is not contra jus gentium, an ambassador shall not be bound by them; (4 Inst. 153;) and it is said ambassadors may be excused of practices against the state where they reside (except it be in point of conspiracy, which is against the law of nations,) because it doth not appear whether they have it in mandatis, and then they are excused by necessity of obedience. (Bac. Max. 26; Toml. Dict. 'Ambassador,' by Granger; 1 Bla. Com. 253.)

The killing an ambassador has been adjudged high treason. (3 Inst. 8.) Ambassadors.

Some ambassadors are allowed by concession to have jurisdiction over their own families, and their houses permitted to be sanctuaries; but where persons who have greatly offended fly to their houses, after demand and refusal to deliver them up, they may be taken from thence. (4 Inst. 162.) Killing of. Privilege of.

Amendment.

OF Proceedings in General.]—Whatever at common law may be amended in civil cases, may be also amended in criminal cases. (Reg v. Tutchin, 1 Salk. 51.) In general. At common law.

With respect to judicial acts or papers there can be no doubt that they are amendable for any mistake therein, at any time before they become matters of record, and that of common right and not by virtue of any statute. (Anon. 1 Salk. 47; Bondfield v. Milner, 2 Burr. 1099.) Thus the Court may alter their own judgment any time in the same term in which it is passed, and either pass another or remedy a defect in the former. (R. v. Price, 6 East, 328; R. v. Justices of Leicestershire, 1 M. & Sel. 442; R. v. Hoskins, 2 Lord Raym. 968.) Judicial acts.

And the justices at sessions may amend their judgment during the same sessions, because in consideration of law their sitting is but one day; but not at any subsequent period, unless they professedly adjourn, which they may do. (South Cadbury v. Bradden, 2 Salk. 606; Bac. Abr. Court of Sessions.) At sessions.

But no amendment can be made by any authority when once the term or session is over, and the judgment solemnly entered on the record. Even when judgment on appeal has been pronounced erroneously by a mistake of the chairman, the justices cannot rectify it afterwards, even with the assent of the whole number who were present, nor can the Court of Queen's Bench assist them. A clear illustration of this principle arose out of the decision of an appeal against an order of removal at the Berks Easter Sessions, 1828. The majority of the justices voted for confirming the order, in which opinion the chairman concurred; but in pronouncing the judgment of the Court he, by mistake, delivered it thus, "The order is quashed," which was entered accordingly by the clerk of the peace. This mistake, which was in the mere pronouncing of the judgment, was not discovered till a subsequent part of the same day, when the sessions had regularly closed. Mr. Shepherd afterwards moved the Court of Queen's Bench on the affidavit of the justices themselves, for a mandamus to rehear the appeal, or to correct the judgment by the chairman's notes; but the Court of Queen's Bench held that they had no power to interfere, and the judgment remained as entered. (Talfourd's Dickenson's Sessions, 434, and note; R. v. Walcot, 4 Mod. 395.)

In a late case, however, the Court of Queen's Bench granted a mandamus to justices to amend the record of a game conviction, by setting out the evidence on which it was founded as near as possible in the words used by the witness. (R. v. Warnford, 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 511; and see R. v. Allen, cited id.)

Mere ministerial acts may at any time be amended; (Faulkner's case, 1 Ministerial acts.

In general.

Saund. 249, 50, c. n. 1; Philips v. Smith, 1 Stra. 136;) and any matter not of record may be amended by the record, if a mistake has arisen in the former. (R. v. Hayes, 2 Ld. Raym. 1519; R. v. Ellames, Rep. temp. Hardw. 43; 1 Barnard. 31.)

By statute. Of defects in form in judgments or orders of Justices.

By the 5 Geo. II. c. 15, "On all appeals to the sessions against the judgments or orders of any justices of the peace, the sessions shall cause any defect of form that shall be found in any such judgments or orders to be rectified and amended without any costs to the parties concerned, and after such amendment shall proceed to hear, examine, and consider the truth and merits of all matters concerning such judgments or orders, and examine proofs relating thereto, and make such determinations as if there had not been any defect or want of form."

Upon this statute it has been holden, that if an order of removal be defective on the face of it—in any matter of substance—as if it omit the statement that the removal is upon the complaint of the parish officers; or omit the statement that the pauper was actually chargeable; or omit to show the jurisdiction of the removing justices; the sessions cannot amend, even by facts proved before them, and the order must be quashed. (R. v. Great Bedwin, Burr. Set. Ca. 163.) But the substitution of the name of one parish for the other, obviously by the mistake of the clerk, as where an order, after an adjudication that the settlement was Huggershall, directed the pauper to be carried to Harrow, has been holden amendable within the statute; and therefore the sessions, in the case alluded to, amended the order, and confirmed it according to the obvious intention of the magistrates. (R. v. Harrow on the Hill, 2 Bott, 706.) And in a late case, where an order of removal was directed to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of L., and it appeared that L. was a vill and had no churchwardens, it was held that the defect was mere matter of form, and might be amended by the justices under the above act. (R. v. Inhabitants of Amlwch, 3 D. & R. Mag. Cas. 303.)

Other statutes allow amendments in some cases, though after the proceedings to be amended have become matters of record, as the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 19, ante, 3; 9 Geo. IV. c. 15, infra.

By justices.

Sometimes statutes allow justices of the peace to amend proceedings drawn up by them, though this is rarely so. A justice may draw up his conviction in a more formal way than that in which he had at first shaped it, before he returns it to the sessions, or on certiorari, (Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 21,) but this is not allowed in case of an order, (R. v. Cheshire, 5 B. & Ad. 439,) or a warrant of commitment, (Hutchinson v. Lowndes, 4 B. & Ad. 118.) But it seems questionable whether any such difference as that alluded to now exists between a conviction and an order. (Reg. v. Radnorshire, Justices of, 9 Dowl. 90.)

A party convicted in a penalty under an act against smuggling (3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 53) was committed to gaol by warrant of the convicting justices till he should pay the forfeiture. The act (s. 90) empowers justices to amend any such conviction or warrant of commitment, whether before or after conviction. Four days after the committal, the warrant (which was defective in point of law) was withdrawn from the gaoler's possession, and another substituted; it did not appear by whom. The second warrant was of the same date, and signed and sealed by the same justices as the first, and did not materially vary from it, except that in the recital of the conviction certain cordage was said to be adapted for "slinging" casks, instead of "slinging or sinking;" and the name of the place at which the party was said to have been detained for his offence was altered. The above facts, and copies of the warrants, being returned on certiorari and habeas corpus: held, that the Court could not presume, either from the facts returned or from the warrants, that the second warrant was substituted by the justices as an amendment of the first, in pursuance of the authority given them by the act. The prisoner was discharged. (In the matter of Elmy and Sawyer, 1 Adol. & Ell. 843.)

It would appear that a justice of the peace may draw up a corrected record of a summary conviction, after he has returned one record of it to the quarter sessions; but he cannot do so in a case where the first conviction has been brought up by certiorari, and quashed. Where a prisoner has been brought up by a writ of habeas corpus, and discharged, on the ground of the insufficiency of the conviction, as appearing by the recital in the warrant of commitment, the conviction itself not having been brought up by the crown, and the certiorari having been taken away from the prisoner by statute, such proceeding is equivalent to a quashing of the first conviction, and a justice of the peace cannot afterwards draw up another formal one. (Chaney v. Payne, 1 Ad. & Ell. (N.S.) 712.) In general.

The 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 17, allows amendments by justices of the peace of any information, conviction, or warrant of commitment for any offence under that act which relates to the excise and customs, post, "Excise," Vol. II. Excise.

As to amendments of poor rates, post, "Poor," Vol. IV. Poor rates.

Of Indictments.]—Indictments stand upon the same principles with respect to amendment as those to which all pleadings are subject at common law. (Wilkes's case, 4 Burr. 2569; 6 Mod. 268; 1 Hawk. c. 5, s. 97.)(a) And as the indictment is the finding of a jury upon oath, it cannot be amended by the Court, unless under the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 19, ante, 3, or under Lord Tenterden's act, 9 Geo. IV. c. 15, without the concurrence of the grand inquest, by whom it is presented, and this before they are discharged. (Id.) Indictments.

To this rule, however, there is an exception in the case of indictments removed from London, because by the charters of that city only the substance of the record can be removed from it, and the original remains a certain guide for the amendment. (Anon. 1 Keb. 252; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 97; Bac. Ab. Indictment, (11).) And it is the common practice for the grand jury to consent at the time they are sworn that the Court should amend matters of form, altering no matters of substance; and mere informalities may, therefore, be amended by the Court before the commencement of the trial (id.); though it was formerly the practice to award process to the grand jury to come into Court and amend them. (Id. Cro. C. C. 44.)

As to the amendment of indictments in cases of pleas in abatement, under the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 19, see ante, 3. On pleas in abatement.

The 9 Geo IV. c. 15, entitled, "An Act to prevent a Failure of Justice by reason of Variances between Records and Writings produced in Evidence in support thereof," after reciting that "great expense is often incurred, and delay or failure of justice takes place at trials, by reason of variances between writing produced in evidence and the recital or setting forth thereof upon the record on which the trial is had, in matters not material to the merits of the case, and such record cannot now in any case be amended at the trial, and in some cases cannot be amended at any time," enacts, "that it shall and may be lawful for every Court of record holding plea in civil actions, any judge sitting at nisi prius, and any Court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery in England, Wales, the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and Ireland, if such Court or judge shall see fit so to do, to cause the record on which any trial may be pending before any such judge or Court in any civil action, or in any indictment or information for any misdemeanor, when any variance shall appear between any matter in writing or in print, produced in evidence, and the recital or setting forth thereof upon the record whereon the trial is pending, to be forthwith amended in such particular, by some officer of the Court, on payment of such costs (if any) to the other party as such judge or Court shall think reasonable; and thereupon the trial shall proceed as if no such variance had appeared; and in case such trial shall be had at nisi prius, the On variances in writings by 9 Geo. 4, c. 15. In indictments for misdemeanors.

(a) By the express provision of the statutes of amendment (14 Edw. III. c. 6, and 8 Hen. VI. c. 12,) cases of treason and felony are excepted from their operation. It has been considered that the exception extends virtually to all criminal prosecutions, and that the proceedings in such cases are amendable according to the rules and practice of the common law only. See the cases above cited. But this seems questionable. (See Rex v. Hockenhall, 3 Mod. 167; and see 1 Stark. C. L. 254.)

order for the amendment shall be indorsed on the postea and returned together with the record; and thereupon the papers, rolls, and other records of the court from which such record issued shall be amended accordingly."

To what criminal cases that act applies.

As it has been held that the Court of quarter session is not, according to technical acceptation, a Court of oyer and terminer, (1 Hale, 165,) it seems that this act gives no power of amendment to the sessions, and that on a variance at the sessions the defendant must still be acquitted. (Talfourd's Dickenson's Sessions, 353.)

The act, it will be seen, does not apply to indictments for felony.

The act applies to those cases only in which a written instrument is professed to be set out, (Ryder v. Malbon, 3 C. & P. 594; Webb v. Hill, 3 C. & P. 485,) and only to verbal defects in such instruments, and not to omissions by which the substance of the instrument is changed. (Rutherford v. Evans, 4 C. & P. 79; Jelf v. Oriel; 4 C. & P. 22, 24; M. & M. 253.) The date of a bill has been amended under this act, (Barting v. Scott, 4 C. & P. 24,) and where a judgment was stated to be record of the wrong Court. (Briant v. Eicke, Moo. & M. 357.) But where an indictment for perjury, assigned on an affidavit made for the purpose of setting aside a judgment, alleged that the judgment was entered up, "in or as of Trinity Term, 5 Will. IV." and on an examined copy of the record being produced, it appeared that the day on which judgment was signed was entered on the margin according to the new rules; this was considered a fatal variance, and an amendment was refused. (Rex v. Cooke, 7 C. & P. 359.) In another case, on a charge of perjury, alleged to have been committed before commissioners for the examination of witnesses in Chancery suit, the indictment averred that four commissioners named in the commission were commanded to examine the witnesses; but the commission when produced appeared to authorise the commissioners, "or any two or three" of them, to examine the witnesses. The variance was held fatal, and an amendment refused. (Reg. v. Hewins, 9 C. & P. 786.) It has been said that amendments under the act should be made very sparingly in criminal cases. (Rex v. Cooke, 7 C. & P. 550.)

Mistakes in caption, &c. of indictment.

A mistake in the caption of an indictment may be amended at any time, it being a mere ministerial act. (See 1 Ch. C. L. 335.) But where a rule has been obtained calling on a town-clerk to show cause, why the caption of an indictment which had been removed into the Queen's Bench should not be amended by the insertion of the names of all the grand jurors, so that it might appear that twenty-eight instead of twenty-three jurors had been sworn, the town-clerk having sworn that he had no minutes whereupon to make the amendment: the rule was discharged, there being nothing safe to amend by. (Rex v. Marsh, 1 Jur. 38.) The entry roll and record of nisi prius have been altered to make them agree with the amended caption after the term in which the certiorari was returned, and even after a general verdict of guilty. (Rex v. Darley, 4 East, 175.) If the original indictment be right, and the clerk enters it on the wrong plea roll, it may be amended. (Reg. v. Tutchin, 6 Mod. 281; Tufton's case, Cro. Car. 144.)

Inquisitions.

The caption of an inquisition cannot be amended after it is filed; (2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 97; but see 1 Stark. C. L. 261;) and as to amending coroners' inquisitions, see Rex v. Evett, 6 B. & Cres. 247; 9 D. & R. 237, S.C.; post, "Coroner," Vol. II.

Criminal informations.

Of Criminal Informations.]—Criminal informations, which are not found upon the oath of a jury, may be amended by the Court, and even by a single judge at chambers, at any time before trial; (Rex v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527; Rex v. Lewis, 12 Mod. 229; Rex v. Charlesworth, 2 Stra. 871; Rex v. Holland, 4 T. R. 457; 1 Ch. C. L. 298, 868;) and a mere clerical error in the caption, and not the body of the information, may be rectified even after verdict. (Rex v. Hockenhall, 3 Mod. 169; supra.) And the reason assigned for this difference between indictments and informations is, that the latter are originally framed by an officer of the crown, while the former are the accusations of a number of men sworn to inquire and to decide according to evidence. (Rex v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2569.)

The amendment may be extensive and material. (Rex v. Pewterus, Rep. t. Hardw. 203; Rex v. Green, id. 209; 3 Anst. 714.) Of Informations, &c.

As to the amendment of informations on pleas in abatement, see ante, 3, and as to the amendment of on variances in written instruments, ante, 147.

When the amendment is made before a judge at his chambers, the prosecutor must apply for a summons to show cause why the alteration should not be effected. (4 Burr. 2528.) On this the judge will issue a summons in the cause, directed to the defendant's clerk in Court, agent, attorney, or solicitor, requiring him to attend him at his house or chambers, and show cause why the specific amendment should not be made. (Id.) But though he is thus desired to attend, his consent is not requisite. And the judge will proceed to make an order that the information be amended, by making the proper alteration in the part it is thought proper to alter. (4 Burr. 2528.) (a)

An information in rem may be amended by the Crown after plea pleaded, by adding additional counts, although a recognizance has been entered into by the bail to pay the costs occasioned by the claim, such recognizance having been entered into before the information filed. (Att.-Gen. v. Smith, 5 Mee. & W. 372.) Information in rem.

Of Pleas.]—Pleas are amendable at common law before they are filed upon record; (Rex v. Knowles, 1 Salk. 47; Com. Dig. Amendment, (2 C. 1);) but when once they are entered on the roll, they can only be altered by virtue of some legislative provision. (Rex v. Knowles, 1 Salk. 47; Bondfield v. Milner, 2 Burr. 1099.) Pleas in abatement to an indictment for a misdemeanor are not amendable. (Rex v. Cooke, 2 B. & Cres. 871; 4 D. & R. 592, S. C.) Pleas.

Of Issues, Continuances, &c.]—Evident misprisions in mere matters of form, either in the joining of issue or setting out the process, are amendable at common law. (1 Stark. C. L. 245.) A discontinuance, however, is not amendable in any criminal prosecution, and a distringas corpora juratorum, tested on the 24th, when the venire facias was returnable on the 23rd, was held to be such a discontinuance that even in a civil case it could not have been cured by the 8 Hen. VI. c. 12. (Rex v. Tutchin, 6 Mod. 269; 1 Ld. Raym. 1061; Deacon, C. Dig. 33.) Issues, continuances, &c.

Of Verdicts, &c.]—A verdict may be corrected from the notes of the judge or clerk of assize or minutes signed by the jury. (Gibson's case, Douglas, 375; Rex v. Hazel, 1 Leach, 368; Rex v. Hayes, 2 Stra. 344.) And it has been lately decided that though a verdict of "not guilty" be recorded, yet if it appear promptly that it is not according to the intention of the jury, it may be vacated and set right. (Rex v. Parkin, 1 R. & M. 45.) But if there be no notes of the judge, &c. or other document to amend by, the amendment will not be allowed. (Reg. v. Virrier, 12 Ad. & Ell. 317.) Verdict, &c.

Any omission in the sentence passed upon the defendant may be remedied by the judge going again into Court during the assizes and then passing the proper judgment. for the sentence may be amended or altered at any time during the continuance of the same assizes. (Rex v. Fletcher, Russ. & R. C. C. 58.) Judgment.

A judgment once recorded cannot, as we have seen, ante, 145, be amended.

Of Return to Habeas Corpus.]—The Court may, in its discretion, allow the return to a writ of habeas corpus to be amended after it has been returned. (Reg. v. Batcheldor, re Canadian Prisoners, 1 Per. & D. 516, and see Re Clarke, 6 Jurist, 757.) Habeas corpus.

(a) See form of rule to show cause why the return to a writ of certiorari and caption of indictment should not be amended, 4 Chit. C. L. 196; also a form of rule absolute for amending the caption, id. 197.

Annuity. (a)

What.

AN Annuity, in its general meaning, is an annual payment of a certain sum of money granted to another for life, for years, or in fee, to be received of the grantor or his heirs, so that no freehold be charged therewith, whereof a man shall never have assize or other action, but a writ of annuity. (Terms de la Ley, 44; Co. Lit. 144 b.) In an annuity the principal is gone for ever, and is satisfied by periodical payments. (Winter v. Moulsley, 2 B. & Ald. 806.)

Regulations as to.

To guard against the fraudulent and oppressive practices of usurious money lenders exercised on young heirs and other necessitous persons entitled to property in expectancy, the legislature found it necessary to interpose by the 17 Geo. III. c. 26, now repealed by the 53 Geo. III. c. 141; and since the latter act, the 3 Geo. IV. c. 92, and 7 Geo. IV. c. 75, have been passed,

(a) As to annuities in general see Hunt on Annuities; Com. Dig. Annuity; stat. 33 Geo. III. c. 14, as to the Royal Exchange Assurance Annuity Company; and 39 Geo. III. c. 83, as to the Globe Insurance Company.

explaining and furthering the provisions thereof. (See 1 Chit. Col. Stat. p. 22.)

53 Geo. 3, c. 141.

The 53 Geo. III. c. 141, s. 8, enacts, "That all contracts for the purchase of any annuity or rent-charge with any person being under the age of twenty-one years shall be and remain utterly void, any attempt to confirm the same after such person shall have attained the age of twenty-one years notwithstanding. And that if any person shall either in person, by letter, agent, or otherwise howsoever, procure, engage, solicit, or ask any person being under the age of twenty-one years to grant or attempt to grant any annuity or rent-charge, or to execute any bond, deed, or other instrument for securing the same, or shall advance or procure or treat for any money to be advanced to any person under the age of twenty-one years, upon consideration of any annuity or rent-charge to be secured or granted by such infant after he or she shall have attained his or her age of twenty-one years, or shall induce or solicit or procure any infant, upon any treaty or transaction for money advanced or to be advanced, to make oath or to give his or her word of honour or solemn promise that he or she will not plead infancy, or make any other defence against the demand of any such annuity or rent-charge, or the repayment of the money advanced to him or her when under age, or that when he or she comes of age he or she will confirm or ratify or in any way substantiate any annuity or rent-charge; every such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being thereof lawfully convicted in any court of excise, oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery, shall and may be punished for the said offence by fine, imprisonment, or other corporal punishment as the Court shall think fit to award."

Contracts for purchase of annuities by persons under age void.

Endeavouring to induce infants to grant annuities.

Misdemeanor.

The 9th section of the same act enacts, "That all and every solicitors and solicitor, scriveners and scrivener, brokers and broker, and other persons or person, who from and after the passing of this act shall ask, demand, accept or receive directly or indirectly any sum or sums of money, or any other kind of gratuity or reward, for the soliciting or procuring the loan, and for the brokerage of any money that shall be actually and bonâ fide advanced and paid as and for the price or consideration of any such annuity or rent-charge, over and above the sum of ten shillings for every one hundred pounds so actually and bonâ fide advanced and paid, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor; and being convicted of such offence in any court of assize, oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery, shall and may for every such offence be punished by fine and imprisonment, or one of them, at the discretion of the Court; and that the person or persons who shall have paid or given any sum or sums of money, gratuity, or reward, shall be deemed a competent witness or witnesses to prove the same."

Acting as solicitors, &c. in such cases.

Misdemeanor.

Witnesses.

On an indictment under this latter section, it is not necessary to prove that the defendant took the exact sum laid in the indictment, though it be not laid under a videlicet. (Rex v. Gillham, 6 T. R. 265; 1 Esp. 285; see form of indictment, id.

Indictment for, &c.

On the trial of such an indictment it must be left to the jury to consider, whether the excess of 10*s.* in the £100 were really taken as a fair charge for drawing the writings, &c. or whether it was not so taken as a device to avoid the statute. (Rex v. Gillham, 6 T. R. 265.)

By stat. 29 Geo. III. c. 41, s. 27, and other acts respecting life annuities, oath of an annuitant's life may be made before a justice of the peace, who shall give a certificate thereof without fee or stamp duty, in order to entitle such person to receive his annuity.

Oath, &c. of annuitant's life.

By sect. 2 of stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 53, passed to amend the acts of 48 Geo. III. c. 142; 49 Geo. III. c. 64; and 52 Geo. III. c. 129, for enabling the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt to grant life annuities, it is enacted, "That in case any person who shall have been named as a nominee, on the continuance of whose life any annuity is to depend, shall after his or her nomination become resident in any kingdom or state in Europe in amity with his Majesty, or if he or she shall become resident in any other kingdom, state, or place beyond the seas, then and in every such case a certificate that such nominee was living on the day specified therein, (being some day after any annuity depending upon his or her life shall have become due,) granted under the hand and seal of the chief magistrate of any city, town, or place, or any other magistrate acting at the time as such, or for and in the place of any such chief magistrate where such nominee may be then living, shall be deemed sufficient and effectual for proving the continuance of the life of such nominee, and for the purpose of enabling the person entitled to the annuity dependent upon the life of such nominee to receive the same; provided no British minister, or consul, or governor, or person acting as such, shall be resident in such city, town, or place, although a British minister, or consul, or governor, or person acting as such may be resident in the kingdom, state, or settlement wherein such nominee shall be then living."

Identity to be verified by affidavit, &c.

Sect. 3. "To every such certificate as aforesaid there shall be affixed an affidavit or solemn affirmation made before any justice of the peace or magistrate in England or Scotland respectively, or if in Ireland before one of the barons of the exchequer there, by the person or persons entitled to the said annuity, or by the person applying to receive the same on his, her, or their behalf, that the matters contained in such certificate are, to the best of his or her belief, true; and that the person described or certified therein is the nominee or one of the nominees on whose life or lives the annuity whereof such half-yearly or other payment shall be claimed doth depend."

Appeal.

What.

THE term Appeal is used in two senses:

To sessions, &c.

First, it signifies a complaint and removal to a superior court of the judgment of an inferior one, being in the nature of a writ of error, and in this sense it is used when applied to the removal of orders or convictions of justices out of sessions to the judgment of the court of sessions. In this sense it differs from the remedy by certiorari, not being, as the latter is, a common law right for the purpose of obtaining the judgment of a superior tribunal, but a qualified right given only by the special provisions of a statute.

Appeals of murder, &c.

Secondly, it signifies an accusation by a private individual against another for some heinous offence, demanding punishment on account of the particular injury suffered, rather than for the offence against the public.

This latter mode of appeal had fallen entirely into disuse until the case of Ashford v. Thornton, in 1818, 1 Barn. & Ald. 405, where full information may be gained on the subject. This case occasioned the passing of the 59 Geo. III. c. 46, which abolishes all appeals of treason, murder, felony or other offences.

Abolished.

We will now notice the general law and practice relative to appeals in the first sense under the following order. As to appeals in particular cases, see the various titles throughout this work.

I. When it lies in general, and parties to, 153.

II. When Justices to inform Party of his Right to, 154.

III. To what Sessions, 154.

IV. Preliminary Steps; as 1st, Notice of, 159; 2d, Recognizance, &c. 163; 3d, Entering of Petition and Order for Hearing, 163; 4th, Effect of not taking such Steps, 163.

V. Hearing and Trial, 165; Judgment, 167; and Adjournment, 172.

VI. Entering and Respiting of, and Notice of Trial after same, 173.

VII. Costs, 175.

VIII. Forms, 176.

I. When it lies in general, and Parties to.

Only lies when given by statute.

An appeal, as we have already seen, ante, p. 152, is not, like a certiorari, a common law right; it lies only where it is expressly given by statute. (R. v. Cashiobury, 3 Dowl. & Ryl. Mag. Ca. 485; R. v. Hanson, 4 Barn. & Ald. 521; R. v. Justices of Oxfordshire, 1 Maule & Selw. 448.) On the other hand, a certiorari always lies unless expressly taken away. (Id.)

Must be expressly given.

The right of appeal must be given by express enactment, and cannot be extended by an equitable construction to cases not distinctly enumerated in the statute. (R. v. Justices of Surrey, 2 T. R. 509; R. v. Stock, 8 Ad. & E. 405; 3 N. & P. 420, S. C.; R. v. Recorder of Ipswich, 8 Dowl. 103; R. v. Justices of Warwickshire, 2 Jurist, 543, Q. B.; R. v. Justices of Yorkshire, West Riding, 1 Ad. & E. (N. S.) 325; 4 Per. & D. 688, S. C.; Paley on Conv. by Dowling, 268, 269.)

But a right of appeal given generally by a statute cannot be defeated by inference; therefore, where an appeal was given against any matter not declared by a statute final and conclusive, and it was enacted that certain accounts should not be binding unless allowed by justices; an appeal was held to lie against such allowance. (R. v. Justices of Cumberland, 1 Dowl. & Ryl. Mag. Ca. 240; 1 B. & Cres. 64, S. C.)

As to the right of appeal under a subsequent statute, making the enactments of prior statutes applicable thereto, see R. v. Liverpool (Mayor), 3 D. & R. 275; R. v. Stock, supra; and R. v. Justices of Yorkshire, West Riding, supra; and post, "Excise," Vol. II.)

Sometimes expressly excluded.

In some cases the legislature has expressly excluded the right of appeal, and it has been held, that if an order of commitment be excepted out of the appeal clause, as there must be a conviction apparent in the commitment, the conviction is not the subject of appeal. (R. v. Justices of Staffordshire, 12 East, 572.)

In the recent amendments of the criminal law, a power of appeal is given when on summary conviction the sum adjudged to be paid shall exceed 5*l.*, or the imprisonment adjudged shall exceed one calendar month, or the conviction take place before one justice. (See the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 38, post, "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. V.; and the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 72, post, "Larceny," Vol. III.)

For particular cases in which the right of appeal is given, see the various titles throughout this work.

Who appellant.

The party to whom the right of appeal is given, is termed the appellant.

Who respondent.

The statute giving the right of appeal sometimes points out the party who is to be the respondent: when this is not the case, the party to whom the statute directs the notice of appeal to be given, is usually the respondent. (Post, 161.)

Who a "party aggrieved."

If a statute gives a right of appeal to a "person who shall think himself aggrieved," those words mean a person who is immediately aggrieved by the act done, and not to one who is consequentially aggrieved. (See R. v. Justices of Middlesex, 3 B. & Adol. 938; post, 161.)

If trustees are enabled by a local act to sue or be sued in the name of one of them, he may appeal under the words "party grieved," though not personally aggrieved; and notice of appeal and recognizance may be given and entered into by him only. (R. v. Justices of Surrey, 5 Ad. & E. 701, n.)

3. To what Sessions.

II. When Justices to inform Party of his Right of Appeal.

When justices to inform party of his right of appeal.

In general there is no enactment requiring any information, by justices or others, to be given to a party of his right to appeal, and he is bound to know the law in this respect, or else lose the benefit of it.

Where a statute in general terms requires the justices to make known to a party his right to appeal, it is necessary that they should inform him of the steps he should adopt towards enforcing his right; as of his giving them a notice in writing, as well as entering into a recognizance. (See per Lord Kenyon, R. v. Leeds, 1 T. R. 583.)

But the necessity for this minute information may be waived, as in R. v. Justices of West Riding of Yorkshire, 3 M. & Sel. 493, where a defendant had been convicted by two justices for an offence against the 17 Geo. III. c. 56, s. 14; by section 20 of which the justices are bound to make known to the defendant, at the time of conviction, his right to appeal at the next general quarter sessions, and it appearing from the return to a mandamus that the justices had in fact made known to the defendant his right to appeal, whereupon he waved any intention of appealing by replying to them that he thought he had better pay the penalty: the Court held, that the justices need not have gone on to inform him of the necessary steps to be taken in order to appeal. And Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "How could it be necessary for the convicting magistrate to proceed after the party had signified to them that he did not mean to appeal? The argument is founded upon a supposed necessity of engrafting the observance of all the provisions of the statute as they apply to another state of things, as was the case in R. v. Justices of Leeds, 4 T. R. 583, into this case, where the same reason for their observance does not exist. All that the statute positively requires is, that the justices shall make known to the person convicted his right to appeal—they did so; and if he had thereupon gone on to signify his intention to appeal, non liquet, that they would not also have proceeded to make known to him the further steps that were to be taken by him; but why should they do so nugatory an act as to inform him what he must do to appeal, and to enforce his right, after he had declined appealing and waved his right." (See 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 72; id. c. 30, s. 38.)

III. To what Sessions.

To what sessions appeal to be made.

The statute in general points out the sessions to which the appeal is to be made. The appeal usually given by the legislature is not to the next general sessions, if there be such sessions holden distinct from the quarter sessions, but to the next quarter sessions. (R. v. Justices of London, 15 East, 632.)

As to place.

As to Place.]—An appeal from a conviction by justices of a particular franchise must be to the sessions held for that franchise, and not to the general quarter sessions for the county. In the case of a conviction under 22 Car. II. c. 1, s. 6, which directs an appeal "to the judgment of the justices of peace in the next quarter sessions;" it was held, that an appeal from the conviction of corporation magistrates must be to the sessions of the borough. (South Moulton case, Skin. 122; Burr. 592, S. C.) As to appeals against orders of removal of the poor, post, see title "Poor," Vol. IV.; and Talfourd's Duck. Sessions, 632.

When no time fixed.

As to Time.]—If there be no time pointed out by the statute as to when the appeal must be made, it must be made in a reasonable time. (R. v. Justices of Oxfordshire, 1 Maule & Sel 418; R. v. Justices of Gloucestershire, 3 M. & Sel. 127; R. v. Justices of Herts, 3 M. & Sel. 459; post, 160.)

To next sessions.

The time for the appeal is in general limited to the next sessions after the conviction or act to be appealed against, or else to the sessions which shall be held after so many days from the conviction or act done.

3. To what Sessions.

From what time such session is to be reckoned.

Many difficult questions have arisen as to what time the term next session is to be calculated from—generally speaking, it means the next practicable session after the principal act done; (see R. v. Justices of Essex, 1 B. & Ald. 210; R. v. Hendon, 2 D. & R. 249; 1 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 245, S. C.; R. v. Justices of Sussex, 15 East, 206; R. v. Thackwell, 6 D. & R. 61; 4 B. & C. 62; 3 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 121, S. C.; R. v. Justices of Suffolk, 8 Dowl. 618; R. v. Justices of Cornwall, 6 Ad. & Ell. 894; R. v. Justices of Cheshire, 1 Dowl. N. S. 570;) but as no fixed rule can be well laid down, it is best to refer to the following decisions thereon.

Against a "judgment."

Under a statutory provision, giving an appeal from a conviction to the next quarter sessions, the sessions next after the conviction are intended, and not the sessions next after the execution or levying of the penalty. (Roper v. Hyde, 1 Term Rep. 414.) This case arose on an appeal against a conviction on the (now repealed) 24 Geo. III. c. 31, for not entering horses liable to duty. Et per Ashhurst, J., "The words of the act are decisive, for it says, 'If any person shall find himself aggrieved by the judgment of any such justice, &c., he may appeal to the justices at the next general quarter sessions;' therefore the plaintiff should have appealed to the sessions next after the judgment." Et per Buller, J. "The cases relative to appeals against orders of removal are very distinguishable from the present. All orders of removal are ex parte proceedings, and the other party cannot know any thing of them till the actual removal, but this conviction is more like a judgment of this Court than an order of removal. The grievance to the party is the judgment, and not the execution. A writ of error will lie before execution, and an appeal is in the nature of a writ of error; it complains of the judgment. If a contrary construction prevailed, it would be such a snare to magistrates that they could never be safe, for the justices do not issue their warrants of execution till they know whether an appeal will be brought or not; and they could never know when the party found himself aggrieved, if he were not to appeal to the next sessions after the conviction." (Id.)

Against a conviction.

Where an appeal was given within three months after conviction, the party has three months to signify his intention of appealing, and is not bound to appeal to the sessions which occurred within that time. The statute does not require the appeal to be lodged within this time, for that could not in some instances be done, as more than three months often intervene between the Epiphany and Easter Sessions. (R. v. Middlesex, 6 M. & Sel. 279.)

Against "cause of complaint."

The time from whence the right to appeal commences, where the act limits it after the "cause of complaint" arises, may be collected from the following decision:—By the late General Highway Act, 13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 80, an appeal was given upon giving notice "within six days after the cause of the complaint arises." In R. v. Devon, 1 M. & Sel. 411, it was determined that the levy under, and not the signing of, the warrant of distress, was "the cause of complaint;" and therefore where a person assessed under this act had refused to pay, and a warrant of distress was signed and granted by two justices on the 4th of December, which was executed on the 12th, and the party thereupon gave notice of appeal within six days after the 12th of December, the sessions dismissed the appeal. But Lord Ellenborough ruled, upon a motion for a mandamus, that the party had appealed in time, it being within six days after he was actually damnified: "It is not necessary he should appeal on the warrant, for non liquet, that it would be proceeded upon."

The appeal clause in the Turnpike Act, 4 Geo. IV. c. 95, s. 87, (now repealed,) is very similar; and where, under this statute, the justices made an order on the surveyor of a township to perform certain statute duty on a turnpike road, and to pay to the turnpike surveyor part of the composition, it was held that the order of the magistrates was not complete until the surveyor of the township was in possession of the order, and that the cause of complaint arose when the order was served; and the notice of appeal being given within six days after the service, a mandamus was issued to compel the sessions to hear it. Bayley, J., observed, "That parties are often present in Court when rules are pronounced, but they are not bound to take notice of them until they are served. The surveyor may or may not be present when this order is made, and it is desirable that the practice should be uniform when he attends and when not. If he does not attend, he cannot state the matter of appeal as required till he is served with the order." (R. v. Lancashire Justices, 8 B. & C. 595; 2 Man. & R. 519, S. C.)

Again, in further illustration of this: on an appeal under an act for the inclosure of certain lands in Middlesex, passed with a clause giving an appeal in the usual terms, "within six months from the time when the cause of complaint shall have arisen," the commissioner, at a meeting under the act, holden on the 18th of June, 1818, showed the map to the present appellant, with the allotment marked out upon it, which he, the commissioner, had assigned to him, the appellant. The latter raised some objections to it, and desired the commissioner to reconsider it. He did so, but did not think fit to make any alteration, and having received no further application, on the 28th of August following sent a formal notice to the appellant that the land remained allotted to him according to the map exhibited to him on the 18th of June previous, and on the same day the said allotment was accordingly staked out by command of the said commissioner. According to the particular act, as well as the General Act of Inclosure, no allotment ought to be made till the roads have been set out, and the roads in this case could not be staked out till the end of July, because the crops were on the ground. The appeal was lodged on the 9th of January, and respited till the 29th of April, when it was opposed on the ground of not having been lodged in time, i. e. within six months from the cause of complaint arising; and the justices dismissed the appeal on this ground: but on motion for a mandamus to compel the justices to enter continuances and hear the appeal, the Court of Queen's Bench thought "there was no actual setting out of the allotment in this case, according to the true construction of the act, till something was actually done founded upon the plan," and made the rule absolute. (R. v. Justices of Middlesex, Talfourd's Dick. Sess. 637; and 1 Chit. R. 367. And see R. v. Nockolds, 3 Nev. & M. 334; 1 Ad. & Ell. 245, S. C.)

Against "thing done."

In a private inclosure act power was given to the commissioners to set out land in a certain proportion in lieu of tithes to the vicar, with the following clause of appeal—"and if any persons shall think themselves aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of this act, they may appeal to any general quarter session of the peace for the county, &c. within six calendar months after such cause of complaint shall have arisen." The commissioners made an allotment upon the map, which the vicar inspected in November, 1812, and appointed an agent, who attended a subsequent meeting, when an alteration was made, which such agent approved, and it was understood at the meeting, where such agent so concurred, that all objections were reconciled, and the allotments definitively settled. In November, 1813, the commissioners gave notice that all tithes were to cease from the 29th of September last preceding. The vicar, being dissatisfied, entered an appeal against the commissioners' allotment at the Epiphany sessions, 1814, being within six calendar months from the date of the notice of the commissioners above-mentioned; this came on to be heard at the following Easter session, but was dismissed as being out of time. The question was, from what period the "grievance commenced." The Court of Queen's Bench were of opinion, that the notice of the commissioners of the time from which the tithes were to cease was the commencement of the vicar's grievance, and therefore that the appeal being within six months from that period was in time. (R. v. Justices of Gloucetershire, 3 M. & Sel. 127; Talfourd's Dick. Sessions, 639; and see R. v. Nockolds, 3 Nev. & M. 334, 1 Ad. & Ell. 245.) See further as to what is a "thing done" in pursuance of an act, Smith v. Shaw, 10 Barn. & C. 277; Reg. v. Kelk, 1 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 660.

Against any "act done."

By the 3 Geo. IV. c. 33, s. 7, (which related to remedies against the hundred, but now repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27,) any person aggrieved by any act done under that act might appeal, &c. Where a party so grieved applied to the proper sessions, and they, after hearing the case and evidence, dismissed the complaint, not on the merits, but on a supposed want of jurisdiction, the court held that this was an act done, against which an appeal would lie. But the opinion was founded on the peculiar provisions and language of that act, and must not be considered as a precedent in any other case. (R. v. Tucker, 5 D. & R. 534; 3 B. & C. 544; see also Blakemore, v. Glamorgan Canal Company, 3 Y. & J. 60.)

3. To what Sessions.

Where by a local act the management of the parish poor was vested in the churchwardens, overseers, governors and directors of the poor, and an appeal to them was given to any person thinking himself aggrieved by any thing to be done by virtue of the act, and if the appellant should be not satisfied with their determination, then an appeal was given to the quarter sessions, and a parishioner having applied for relief against a rate to the churchwardens, overseers, governors, and directors, they, at a meeting, resolved to take no further notice of his application; it was held, as they had not come to any determination on the subject-matter of his complaint, the parishioner could not appeal to the quarter sessions, but that he ought to have first applied for a mandamus to compel the churchwardens, overseers, governors, and directors to hear the appeal. (R. v. Justices of Kent, 9 B. & C. 283.)

Against "a determination."

By 13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 19, (now repealed,) an appeal was given against orders of justices for stopping up roads, "to the parties aggrieved by any such orders or proceedings had," &c. and the question was, the precise period from which the grievance was to be estimated, and whether the terminus à quo for an appeal was to be reckoned from the time of the order or from the time of the actual stoppage in consequence of that order. The Court of Queen's Bench held, that an appeal to the session after the actual obstruction of the road was too late, the parties aggrieved having had notice of the order in sufficient time to have appealed to a previous session. (R. v. Justices of Pembrokeshire, 2 East's R. 213; see also R. v. Justices of Buckinghamshire, 3 M. & Sel. 230.)

Against "order or proceeding" had.

Again, in another case decided under the above act: two justices in a special session, the 20th of June, made an order for a public footway to be diverted and turned. On the 4th of July they made another order for the old footway to be stopped up. Appeal at the next Michaelmas quarter session, the Midsummer quarter session having been holden on the 11th of July. The justices dismissed the appeal, conceiving that the time within which it was to be made was to be reckoned from the date of the first order, which was for diverting the way. But it was contended, in support of the motion for a mandamus to compel the justices to hear the appeal, that the grievance commenced only at the time of the order for stopping up the old footway, not from that of the order for making the new one, and of that opinion was the Court of Queen's Bench. (R. v. Justices of Herts, 3 M. & Sel. 459; Talfourd's Dick. Sessions, 637.)

The next sessions for appealing against an overseer's accounts, are the next practicable sessions after the accounts have been published; that is, after they have been deposited with the churchwardens and overseers for public inspection, and the fact of depositing bonâ fide made known. (R. v. Watts, 7 Ad & Ell. 461; 2 Nev. & Per. 367, S. C.)

Against "overseers' accounts."

We have already stated, ante, p. 155, that where an act directs an appeal to be to the "next session," it in general means the next practicable session, and in illustration of this rule the following cases may be referred to.

When the appeal is to be to the next practicable session.

In a case, decided before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, where a motion was made for a mandamus to hear an appeal from an order of removal, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. said, "'next session,' in all cases, means next practicable session. In this case the distance between the respondent and appellant parishes was twenty-four miles, the appellant parish was distant from the county town thirty-seven miles, only two days intervened between the services of the notice and the day of the session being holden, and one of those was Sunday, which no man is obliged to devote to secular purposes, and without so doing in this case, there could not be sufficient time for all that was necessary to be done. As to entering an appeal for the mere purpose of respiting, which it is said might have been done, it is only increasing unnecessary expense. The next subsequent session, therefore, in this case was the next practicable session." (R. v. Justices of Essex, 1 B. & Ald. 210.)

So in a case, also decided before the passing of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76,

where an order of removal had been made by two justices on the 22d of September, but the pauper was not removed till the 5th of October. Hull, the place to which the pauper had been removed from Whitley, is sixty miles from Northallerton, where the session began on the 6th of October; at that session no appeal was entered, and at the Epiphany session following, which began on the 12th of January following, the parish charged offered an appeal; the justices refused to hear it, thinking themselves bound by the words of the statute, which says, "that persons aggrieved may appeal to the justices of the peace at the next quarter sessions." On motion for a mandamus to receive the appeal, the court said, "that by next session the statute of Car. II. must have meant the next possible session; and that here it was impossible for the appellants to lodge their appeal at the Michaelmas session." (R. v. Justices of Yorkshire, W. R., Dougl. 183; R. v. Justices of West Riding of Yorkshire, 4 M. & Sel. 327.)

In a case under the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, where an order of removal was served on the 18th March. The parish to which the order was directed came to the determination to appeal against it on the 4th of April. On the 8th, the sessions were held. And by the practice of the sessions seven days' notice of appeal was required; Williams, J., held, that the Midsummer sessions following were the next practicable sessions for the purpose of appealing; for the parish, under sect. 79 of the above act, on the 18th March, had twenty-one days to judge whether it would appeal against the order; within which time, viz. on the 4th April, they resolved to do so; when they were too late to give the seven days' notice for the April sessions. (Rex v. Justices of Herefordshire, 8 Dowl. 638. See post, title "Poor," Vol. IV.)

Where overseers' accounts, allowed by two justices, were delivered to the successors so late that they could not appeal to the next sessions, it was holden, that an appeal to the next practicable sessions was in time, and that the justices might then respite the appeal, though the respondents objected to the delay. (R. v. Thackwell and others, 4 B. & C. 62; 6 D. & R. 61, S. C.; R. v. Watts, 7 Ad. & E. 461; 2 Nev. & Per. 367, S. C.)

Only one intervening day between the publication of a poor rate and the next immediate quarter session is not sufficient for an effectual notice of appeal. (R. v. Justices of Sussex, 15 East, 206; and R. v. Justices of Dorsetshire, 15 East, 200.)

Before some recent decisions it was thought necessary to enter and respite the appeal at the next sessions after the making of the order, &c., though such sessions were not the "next practicable sessions." However a more sensible rule has now been adopted; and in R. v. Justices of Southampton, (6 M. & Sel. 394); in R. v. Justices of Devon, (4 Man. & R. 148); and R. v. Justices of Kent, (3 Man. & R. 15; 8 B. & C. 639, and in notis,) it was determined that it was not necessary to enter and adjourn an appeal against an order served too late to comply with the notices required by the sessions to try the appeal. Lord Tenterden, C. J., observed, the entry for the mere purpose of adjournment is a useless act, and only occasions unnecessary expense; and as to inconvenience which may result from this rule, viz. that the removing parish may not know of the intention to appeal till within eight days of the following sessions, his Lordship said, if it proved an inconvenience, the sessions may require longer notices in such circumstances. (See also R. v. Justices of Suffolk, 8 Dowl. 618; R. v. Justices of Herefordshire, 8 Dowl. 638.) These cases overrule that of R. v. Herefordshire, 3 T. R. 504, where Lord Kenyon said the appeal ought to have been entered and adjourned.

IV. Preliminary Steps before Trial.

And herein of—1. The notice of appeal. 2. The recognizance. 3. The entry of the appeal; and 4. The effect of not taking necessary preliminary steps.

(1.) Notice of Appeal.

4. Preliminary Steps. Notice.

Notice of appeal.

When necessary.]—The statute which allows an appeal usually directs that a notice of the party's intention to appeal shall be previously given either to the justices or to the complainant, or to both; but unless expressly required, a notice of appeal does not appear absolutely necessary. (R. v. Justices of Essex, 4 Barn. & Ald. 276, infra.)

When necessary.

When the statute expressly requires a notice of appeal to be given, no practice of the sessions can do away with the necessity of such notice as prescribed by the act. (R. v. Justices of Lincolnshire, 3 B. & C. 548; 5 D. & R. 347, S. C.; R. v. Justices of Staffordshire, 4 Ad. & El. 842, 6 Nev. & Man. 477, S. C.; R. v. Justices of West Riding of Yorkshire, 4 B. & Ad. 685.)

When not.

It is material also to observe, that where the statute giving the appeal directs the appellant to enter into recognizances, but requires no notice, it is not necessary to give the notice required by the sessions. Thus, where an order of sessions required, "that all notices of appeal made to the court shall be given by the parties eight days before the sessions begin," and a person convicted under 55 Geo. III. c. 29, entered into the recognizance to prosecute his appeal required by the statute, which statute required no notice, it was held that the order of sessions required the eight days' notice to be given only in those cases where some notice is prescribed by the statute; and that the recognizance was equivalent to notice. Holroyd, J., added, "It appears, that if the conviction is made more than six days before the sessions, the party grieved must appeal to the next sessions. Suppose it, then, made seven days before the sessions, he must appeal to those sessions, and yet cannot give the notice prescribed by the sessions." (R. v. Justices of Kent, 6 M. & Sel. 258.)

Therefore on a rule for a mandamus to hear the appeal of a defendant against the conviction of a magistrate under the (now repealed) 50 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 4, called the Stage Coach Act, by which the defendant was convicted in a penalty for carrying more luggage than is allowed by the act; the defendant had, within fourteen days, entered into a recognizance, as required by the act, to prosecute his appeal against the conviction, and had given notice of appeal to the magistrate, but not to the informer; by the practice of the sessions for the county of Essex, eight days' notice of appeal is required to be given, in all cases, by the appellant to the respondent; it was objected at the sessions that the practice not having been complied with in this particular, the appellant was not entitled to be heard, and the sessions allowed the objection, and dismissed the appeal; it was contended that the entering into the recognizance before the magistrate dispensed with the necessity of giving notice of appeal. Sed per Bailey, J. "I am of opinion that the sessions ought to have heard this appeal. Wherever the legislature has deemed a notice of appeal to be necessary, they have in express terms prescribed such notice; but here, by the 50 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 25, it is expressly provided, 'that any party aggrieved by the conviction, who shall within fourteen days enter into a recognizance to appear at the next sessions, shall be at liberty to appeal at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for the county.' The act of parliament, therefore, does not require any notice of appeal; and inasmuch as the party convicted had entered into a recognizance to prosecute his appeal at the next sessions, the informer must have known that it was the intention of the party convicted to appeal, and any further notice was therefore unnecessary. I think therefore that this rule ought to be made absolute." The rule was accordingly made absolute. (R. v. Justices of Essex, 4 B. & Ald. 276; and see R. v. Milnrow, 5 M. & Selw. 248.)

When to be in writing.

When Notice to be in Writing.]—The statute giving the appeal, and requiring a notice of it, in general directs such notice to be in writing; but unless it expressly so requires it, a verbal notice is sufficient. And the term "reasonable notice" does not of itself require a written one. (a) (Post, 160.)

(a) Where by the statute the notice must be in writing, it seems that a printed notice would be sufficient. By the Statute of Frauds a memorandum in writing is

4. Preliminary Steps Notice.

In a case on the 49 Geo. III. c. 68, in a matter of bastardy, the reputed father had entered into the recognizance required by section 5 of that act, but had given no written notice of appeal. At the sessions he offered to prove that he had given a parol notice to the affiliating justices of his intention to appeal, and of the cause and matter of such appeal, but the sessions would not allow such notice to be proved, and dismissed the appeal. On showing cause against a rule nisi for a mandamus to the sessions to enter continuances and hear the appeal, Bayley, J., observed, "I am of opinion that in this case the sessions ought to have received the evidence of the parol notice of appeal which was tendered by the appellant. It may be convenient that a notice of appeal, particularly where it is a notice of the cause and matter of the appeal, should be in writing, and in many cases the statute giving the appeal requires that there should be a written notice: but we cannot say that a notice in writing is necessary where it is not required to be in writing by the clause in the statute which directs a notice to be given. An appeal is usually allowed by statute on certain conditions; and when one of those conditions is, that the party appealing shall give a notice of his appeal, it would be to add a further condition, if we were to hold that such notice must be in writing." Rule absolute. (R. v. Justices of Salop, 4 B. & Ald. 626; and see R. v. Justices of Lincolnshire, 3 B. & Cres. 548; 5 Dowl. & Ryl. 347, S. C.; R. v. Justices of Yorkshire (re Bower), 4 B. & Adol. 685; 2 Nev. & M. 390, S. C.; infra.)

Time of notice. Reasonable time.

Time of Notice.]—Where the statute requires a notice of appeal without specifying the time when such notice is to be given, it implies a reasonable notice. The reasonableness of such notice as to being in time is for the justices at sessions to decide on. Thus in R. v. Justices of Surrey, (1 Dowl. & Ryl. 160; 1 Dowl. & Ry. Mag. Ca. 64; 5 B. & Ald. 539, S. C.) the defendant was convicted on the 6th of November, 1821, under the 12 Geo. II. c. 28, for gaming, and entered into recognizances to appeal against the conviction to the next quarter sessions. It was sworn on the one side, and denied by the other, that at the time of entering into recognizances his attorney gave a verbal notice to the informer of his intention to appeal. The defendant attended in order to prosecute his appeal at the last January sessions, when there having been no notice of appeal in writing, the court refused to hear the appeal. The 5th section of the act giving the appeal states, that "persons aggrieved may appeal, giving reasonable notice to the prosecutor and entering into recognizances," &c. In support of a rule for a mandamus to enter continuances and hear the appeal, it was contended that the sessions were to judge what was a reasonable notice of appeal, and they were of opinion that it must be a notice in writing. Sed per Abbott, C. J., "We are of opinion that where a statute requires reasonable notice to be given, it does not necessarily mean that the notice should be in writing, but only that as to time or number of days it should be reasonable. Here, however, as the fact is disputed, we shall only grant a mandamus to the justices, commanding them to examine whether reasonable verbal notice has been given, and in that case to enter continuances and hear the appeal. The reasonableness of such notice in point of time is certainly for the justices to decide. It is not our province to decide upon affidavits whether reasonable notice was given in point of time, that is for the sessions to determine." (See also R. v. Watts, 7 Adol. & El. 461.)

The question as to what is a reasonable notice must necessarily depend on the facts of each particular case, and no general rule can be laid down as to it.

required to be signed by the party to be charged; and in Schneider v. Norris it appeared that the defendant (the vendor) wrote the vendee's name on a blank form, on which the defendant's name was printed, and this was held to be a sufficient signing by defendant; and Le Blanc, J., said, if it had been stamped with his own name that would be sufficient. (2 M. & Sel. 286, see also Saunderson v. Jackson, 2 B. & P. 238.) The celebrated Abjuration Act was stamped by William III. with his name, as he was too feeble to write. (Cox's Marlborough.)

But although the sessions have a discretion to exercise in deciding what is a reasonable time for giving the notice, still the Court of Queen's Bench have a kind of visitatorial jurisdiction over them, in the exercise of such a discretionary power; and if they exercise such power in an improper manner, the Court of Queen's Bench will interfere. (R. v. Justices of Wilts, 10 East, 404.) Where the sessions dismissed an appeal without hearing it, on the ground that they had no authority to try it for want of a sufficient length of notice to the respondents according to a new rule of practice promulgated two sessions before, but then first acted upon, and which was not known to the appellant's attorney, who had given the former usual notice, the Court of Queen's Bench granted a mandamus to the sessions to enter continuances and hear the appeal. (Id.)

4. Preliminary Steps. Notice.

Sometimes the statute requires immediate notice to be given. Thus by the now repealed (a) Malicious Trespass Act, 1 Geo IV. c. 56, s. 5, an appeal is given to the party convicted "on giving immediate notice of such appeal," &c. Where a defendant convicted on this statute did not give notice of appeal until seven days after the date of the conviction, the Court held that this was not such a prompt compliance with the terms of the statute as to justify the sessions in entertaining the appeal, although the Court would not say that the word "immediate" must be construed so strictly as to require the notice to be given forthwith on conviction. (R v. Justices of Huntingdonshire, 5 D. & R. 588; 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 594, S. C.; and see R. v. Justices of Worcester, 7 Dowl. 789, post, 163.)

Immediate notice.

If an act of parliament requires that the person aggrieved shall give a certain number of clear days' notice of appeal or a certain number of days' notice of appeal at least, before the quarter sessions of his intention to appeal, this means a number of perfect intervening days between the act done and the first day of the sessions; (R. v. Justices of Herefordshire, 1 Nev. & M. 331; 3 B. & Ald. 581; R. v. Justices of Shropshire, infra, and see Roberts v. Stacey, 13 East, 21;) and it would seem that this is the case though the word "clear" or the words "at least," be not made use of in the act. (See R. v. Justices of Shropshire, 8 Ad. & E. 173; 1 P. & D. 249, S. C., per Littledale, J.; Mitchell v. Foster, 4 P. & D. 150; 9 Dowl. 527, S. C.;) but this must be considered questionable; (see R. v. Justices of West Riding of Yorkshire, 4 B. & Ad. 685; and "Time," Vol. VI. p. 260.)

Computation of days in notice.

The remaining points as to the time of the notice with reference to the sessions to which the appeal is to be made will be found, ante, p. 154 to 158.

Notice by whom, and to whom given.]—The statute points out the parties by and to whom the notice of appeal is to be given. If several have a joint grievance they may join in giving the notice. (See R. v. White, 4 Term Rep. 771; R. v. Justices of Sussex, 15 East, 206.) And where three defendants were convicted on a joint hearing, and gave a joint notice of appeal, it was held sufficient, though three separate convictions were returned to the sessions. (R. v. Oxfordshire Justices, 12 Law J. Rep. (N. S.) M. C. 40.)

By and to whom given.

An enclosure act gave to the party aggrieved a right of appeal for any thing done in pursuance of that act, or of the (recited) General Inclosure Act, on giving to the commissioner and to the parties concerned ten days' notice in writing: notice of appeal against an order ascertaining the boundaries between two townships was served on the commissioner, but not on the lady of the manor, who was a party materially interested in the question, because the commissioner had (as was alleged) committed a great error in ascertaining the boundaries of the parish to be inclosed, and had included within his boundary a considerable part of an adjoining manor belonging to a Mrs. S. At the sessions it was proposed to respite the hearing of the appeal which had been entered; but as the notice was insufficient, none having been given to the lady of the manor, the justices determined it could not be entered or heard. A mandamus being applied for to enter continuances and to hear the appeal, the Court of Queen's Bench were unanimous in opinion

"Parties concerned."

(a) Repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27. But re-enacted in other words by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30. See post, "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. III.

4. Preliminary Steps. Notice.

that the justices had acted right, and the mandamus ought not to issue. The notice of appeal was insufficient. The party who appeals is bound to give eight days' notice by the general act to the commissioner, by the local act ten days' notice to the commissioner, and also to the parties concerned. The latter therefore so far supersedes the provisions of the former, and it would be a great hardship if the party concerned were bound by a notice to the commissioner alone. "Party concerned" includes parties directly interested in the soil, which in this case the lady of the manor was, and therefore entitled to notice, which she had not received. (R. v. Justices of Lancashire, 1 B. & A. 630.)

"To justices."

Where a statute required that the notice should be given to the convicting justices, it was held that it must be given to all of them; (R. v. Justices of Cheshire, 11 Ad. & Ell. 139; 3 Per. & D. 23, n., S. C., overruling R. v. Justices of Staffordshire, 4 Ad. & El. 842; R. v. Sillifant, id. 354;) and this although at the time of giving the notice, the conviction had in fact been signed only by one justice, to whom the notice had been given; there being no proof that the conviction so signed was communicated to the appellant, before he gave the notice, so that he might have been misled thereby.

See further, post, 173, as to the entering and respiting.

Contents of notice. Grounds of appeal.

Contents of Notice.]—If the statute does not expressly require it, the notice need not state the grounds for the appeal; otherwise it must, and this in a specific manner, so that the objections raised may be known to the justices and parties concerned before hearing the appeal. (See R. v. Justices of Westmoreland, 10 B. & Cres. 226.)

Where, however, the facts which constitute the ground of appeal are more within the knowledge of the respondents than the appellants, the notice need not be so explicit. (R. v. Justices of Carnarvonshire, 1 Gale & D. 423.)

A notice of appeal against a conviction under the 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 4, of a party as a rogue and vagabond, for obscenely exposing his person in a place of public resort, with intent to insult a female, stating as the grounds of such appeal, that the appellant was not guilty of the said offence, is sufficient, the appeal being against defendant's conviction on the merits, and not a mere matter of form. (R. v. Justices of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 1 B. & Ad. 933.)

Whether the statement of the grounds of appeal contains sufficient particularity is for the sessions to determine; and where they have decided it to be insufficient to let the appellants into their case, the Court of Queen's Bench will not grant a mandamus to enter continuances and hear the appeal. (R. v. The Justices of Kesteven, 13 Law J. (N. S.) Mag. Ca. 78, overruling R. v. The Justices of Carnarvon, 2 Q. B. 325, and R. v. Justices of West Riding, id. 331.)

Where the grounds of appeal must, by statute, be stated in the notice, none besides those fairly included in its terms can be entered into at the sessions, or in the Court of Queen's Bench, though apparent on the face of the case sent up. (R. v. Inhabitants of Stafford, 1 Nev. & Per. 414, &c.)

A statute which prevents a party from going into or giving evidence, on the hearing of the appeal, of any other grounds of appeal than those set forth in his notice, extends to objections apparent upon the face of the order so appealed against. (See R. v. Inhabitants of Withernwick, 6 Ad. & Ell. 273; Rex v. Inhabitants of Bromyard, 8 B. & C. 240; 2 Man. & Ry. 280, S. C.)

If the appellant unnecessarily states in his notice, as causes of appeal, a fact or ground which does not exist, the court of sessions ought to adjourn the appeal, if they think the respondents have been misled by the terms of the notice, or otherwise to hear it. (R. v. Justices of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, supra.)

It has been decided under the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, (the Poor Law Act,) that where an appeal has been simply entered and respited at the sessions, a fresh statement of the grounds of appeal may be served. (R. v. The Justices of Derbyshire, note (b), to R. v. Kimbolton, 6 Ad. & E. 612.) But where on the hearing of an appeal against an order of removal, the bench, being equally divided, adjourned the case to the next sessions; the Court held, that the appellants could not after such adjournment serve a fresh statement of their grounds of appeal. (R. v. Arlecdon (Inhabs. of), 11 Ad. & E. 87; 3 P. & D. 93; post, "Poor.")

When notice given by a party aggrieved.

Where a statute gives a right of appeal against acts done in pursuance thereof to parties aggrieved by such acts, the notice of appeal must state that the appellant is a party aggrieved by the act of which he complains, or state that from which it follows of necessity that he is so. (R. v. Justices of West Riding of Yorkshire, 1 M. & R. Mag. Ca. 215; R. v. Justices of Essex, 7 Dowl. & Ryl. 658; 3 Dowl. & Ryl. Mag. Ca. 483; 5 B. & Cres. 431, S. C.; R. v. Blackawton, 10 B. & Cres. 792; R v. Bond, 6 Ad. & Ell. 905.) In a notice of appeal against an order for stopping up a footway (under the now repealed 55 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 3,) it sufficiently appears that the appellant is the party aggrieved, if it be stated that he and his tenants, occupiers of a farm and lands near the said way, and who have heretofore used, and have a right to use it, and also other persons, and the public will be put to great inconvenience. (R. v. Justices of West Riding of Yorkshire, (in the matter of Bower,) 4 B. & Adol. 685; 2 Nev. & M. 390.)

4. Preliminary Steps. Recognizance, &c.

If the notice be given by or to parish officers, it seems that they may be described as churchwardens and overseers, without naming them. (Talf. Dick. Sessions, 645.)

When by or to parish officers.

But if the appeal is given to the holder of a particular office, the notice must state the appellant to be such holder. (Id.)

When to holder of an office.

As to notices of appeal in particular cases, see the various titles throughout this work.

See the form of the notice in general, post, No. 1.

Abandoning Notice.]—It seems that a notice of appeal may be abandoned, and a fresh one given, provided it is in proper time, supposing it to be the first notice. (R. v. Justices of Middlesex, 9 Dowl. 163; R. v. Justices of West Riding of Yorkshire, 3 T. R. 776; Paley, Conv. 285; and see R. v. Justices of Cheshire, 1 Dowl. N. S. 570.)

Abandoning notice.

(2.) The Recognizance.

It is required, in many cases, that the party appealing shall enter into a recognizance with sureties, conditioned to try the appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court thereon, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded. The terms in which this recognizance is to be given must depend upon the statute requiring it.

Recognizance.

It is sufficient if the recognizance be verbally acknowledged within the time fixed by the statute for entering into it, and it may be perfected afterwards. (R. v. Justices of St. Alban's, 8 Ad. & Ell. 932; 1 Per. & D. 148, S. C.)

Where the statute requires that the recognizance shall be entered into "forthwith" after notice of appeal, it must be entered into within a reasonable time after such notice. (R. v. Justices of Worcester, 7 Dowl. 789.)

Where the recognizance was required to be entered into as above, but was not entered into until nine days after the notice was given, and no cause was assigned for the delay; it was held, that the recognizance was entered into too late. (Id.)

See form of recognizance, post, 176, and as to recognizances in general, post, tit. "Recognizance," Vol. V.

(3.) Entering and Petition of, and Order for Hearing Appeal.

Before trial, and within the time limited by the practice of the sessions, the party appealing must enter the appeal with the clerk of the peace.

Entry and petition of appeal.

By the practice of the Middlesex sessions, a petition to the justices for the hearing of the appeal is usual, and it is also usual at such sessions to obtain an order for the hearing. But in most counties this petition and order are dispensed with, and it would seem that as an appeal is a matter of right, there can be no ground in any case to require either of them.

As to entering and respiting appeals, see post, 173.

4. Preliminary Steps before Trial.

Effect of not taking necessary preliminary steps.

If the appeal, as is usually the case, is given only on certain conditions, such as the giving notice, entering into recognizance, or the like, the sessions cannot enter or receive the appeal, or otherwise deal with it, if such conditions have not been complied with; and if dismissed for such reason, the right of appeal is gone, and cannot be renewed at any other sessions. R. v. Justices of Oxfordshire, 1 M. & Sel. 446; R. v. Justices of Carnarvon, 4 B. & Ald. 86; R. v. Lambeth, 3 D. & R. 340; 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 26, S. C.; R. v. Bond, 6 Ad. & Ell. 905; Paley on Conv. 283, by Dowl. post, 172, 173.)

Where a conviction on 16 Geo. III. c. 30, made the 13th July, was appealed against to the next Michaelmas sessions, and the party entered into a proper recognizance, but neglected to give any notice of appeal, conformably to the appeal clause, which gave an appeal to the sessions next after twenty-one days from the conviction, "the appellant giving six days' notice," which last words were considered as imperative, and not merely directory, the justices at the first sessions adjourned the appeal, and at the following sessions it was dismissed on the objection of want of notice, and it was held by the Court of Queen's Bench, that the want of notice was a decisive objection to the first appeal, and that the sessions had not even authority to adjourn it on account of its never having been properly entered; for the court said, the sessions having no jurisdiction for want of notice could not acquire to themselves a jurisdiction by an act of their own; the power of adjournment is only where the sessions cannot conveniently hear the appeal after it has been duly entered. (R. v. Justices of Oxfordshire, 1 M. & Sel. 448; see R. v. Justices of Lancashire, 5 D. & R 347; 3 B. & Cres. 548, post.)

So where a statute gave an appeal from a conviction by a justice to any quarter sessions to be holden within six months from such conviction, on condition that the appellant should give ten days' notice of his intention to appeal, and enter into a recognizance within four days after such notice, an appeal was lodged at the first sessions after a conviction, the sessions discharged it without entering into the merits, for want of proof that the recognizance was entered into within four days of the notice given. At the following sessions, and within the six months of the conviction, a second appeal was lodged, which the court refused to hear. Upon a motion for a mandamus to compel the sessions to receive such second appeal, it was held, that the first judgment was conclusive, and that no second appeal could be brought against the same conviction, (on a local act, 17 Geo. III. c. 106,) for it was held, that after the appeal was lodged and adjudged by the justices at sessions to be informal, they were functi officio, and could not take cognizance of the second appeal. And Mr. J. Buller said, "The act certainly only gives a right of appealing once, and the parties having had one appeal are bound by that. If the question had rested solely on the notice of appeal for the first sessions which happened, and nothing further had been done, I should not have thought the parties bound by it, for the act gives the power of appealing within a certain time with these two requisites, viz. that the appellant must give ten days' notice, and within four days after enter into a recognizance. When the party, therefore, found out his mistake, he might have stopped there, but he persisted in going on with his appeal, and brought it before the court, and took their judgment upon it; the appellant jurisdiction was therefore fully exercised, and though it was originally in the option of the parties whether they would appeal to the first or second sessions which took place within the six months, yet, having made their election to appeal to the first, they must abide by the judgment there given. (R. v. Justices of Yorkshire, 3 T. R. 776.)

But if the statute giving the appeal only enact that the appellant shall not be heard in support of his appeal, unless he give notice of it, or the like, the sessions have jurisdiction over the appeal, though no notice have been given; (R. v. Justices of Cheshire, 8 Ad. & Ell. 398;) and may therefore receive and adjourn it. (R. v. Inhabitants of Kimbolton, 6 Ad. & Ell. 603; post, 172.

5. Hearing and Trial of.

V. Hearing and Trial. Judgment. Adjournment, &c.

(1.) Hearing and Trial.

As to the petition and order for hearing of the appeal which is adopted at some sessions, see ante, 163. Practice as to hearing.

Appeals are usually called on for hearing in the order in which they stand in the paper of the clerk of the peace, which should be that in which they are entered. This, however, appears to be mere matter of arrangement in the discretion of the Court, who may take the appeals in any order which the general convenience of the public, or particular circumstances, may seem to them to dictate. (Talfourd's Dick. Sessions, 649.)

In general a preference is given to foreign appeals.

There seems to be no general rule requiring the personal attendance of the appellant, and the necessity for this depends in a great measure upon the practice of each sessions respectively. In an appeal against a conviction on the stage coach act, 50 Geo. III. c. 48, it was resolved by the quarter sessions for the county of Essex, that the appellant must be present at the hearing of his appeal. (R. v. Cracklin, Mich. 1822.) The like practice seems to prevail at the Middlesex sessions, and the same reason which requires that the appellant should be present applies equally to the former. (Paley, Conv. by Dowling, 290, n. (1).) Personal appearance of appellant and respondent.

Where an order of justices was affirmed on appeal by the sessions, without hearing, owing to the absence of the appellant's attorney, and the sessions refused to re-open the appeal, except on the terms of payment of full costs, the Court of Queen's Bench refused to interfere by mandamus. (R. v. Justices of Lancashire, 2 Jurist, 468, B. C.)

The first step after the appeal is called on, is that the appellant should prove that he has performed the conditions (if any) precedent to his right of appeal; as that he has given notice of the appeal, and entered into a recognizance, or the like. (Ante, 158.) In default of the above proof the sessions have no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. (Ante, 163.) But it seems, however, that the respondent may waive proof of the above. (R. v. Justices of Herts, 4 Barn. & Adol. 561; see Talfourd's Dick. Sessions, 650.) Proof to give sessions jurisdiction.

Where notice of appeal was given against a poor-rate, and the respondents attended at the sessions, and prayed a respite, alleging that they had not had time to prepare their defence to the matters stated as grounds of appeal, the appellant opposed the respite, but it was granted, no notice of appeal having been proved, or expressly admitted. An order of respite was made out, embodying the grounds of appeal stated in the notice; it was held, that at the following sessions the appellant was entitled to be heard without proving any notice of appeal. (R. v. The Justices of Hertfordshire, 1 Nev. & M. 331; 4 B. & Adol 561.)

The court of sessions are to say whether reasonable notice of appeal has been given, and they are to judge what notice is reasonable where the statute does not require any particular time for such notice; but where the statute does so require it, the sessions must be concluded by the statute; (see R. v. Justices of Norfolk, 3 Nev. & M. 55; 5 B. & Adol. 990.)

If the appeal be against an order of justices, the order should be produced by the appellants, or its non-production accounted for in the usual way, and some other evidence of it be given. This is a necessary preliminary to the appeal; and if the sessions act wrong in receiving improper evidence of the order, the Court will interfere by a writ of mandamus. (R. v. Justices of Sussex, 9 Dowl. 125.)

The appeal having thus been regularly brought before the sessions, they should proceed to hear the same.

If the sessions improperly refuse to hear the appeal, the Court of Queen's Bench will compel them to do so by a writ of mandamus; (R. v. Inhabitants of Frieston, 5 B. & Adol. 597; R. v. Justices of Carnarvon, 1 Gale & D. 423; R. v. Justices of Sussex, 9 Dowl. 125; R. v. Justices of Cheshire, 8 Dowl. 616; Sessions improperly dismissing appeal.

5. Hearing and Trial of.

R. v. Justices of Gloucestershire, 1 B. & Adol. 1; (where one witness had been examined on the appeal before the objection as to the jurisdiction was taken;) R. v. Justices of Cumberland, 4 Ad. & Ell. 695; (where part of the appeal had been heard;) and see R. v. Justices of Carnarvon, 4 B. & Ald. 86.) And it seems that the Court of Queen's Bench will, upon granting the mandamus, take into their consideration the evidence given before the sessions. (R. v. Justices of Cheshire, supra.)

The mandamus should be applied for promptly. (R. v. Justices of the West Riding, 1 Gale & D. 706.)

When appeal dismissed subject to a case.

If the sessions dismiss the appeal subject to a case, which the applicants for the case do not take up to the Court of Queen's Bench, that Court will not, at the applicant's instance, grant a mandamus to enter continuances and hear the appeal. (R. v. Justices of the West Riding, 1 Ad. & Ell. 607; R. v. Justices of Suffolk, 6 Ad. & Ell. 109; 1 Nev. & Per. 306, S. C.; R. v. Justices of Northampton, 6 Ad. & Ell. 111.)

Where sessions rightly refuse to hear appeal, but for insufficient reasons.

If the sessions rightly refuse to hear the appeal, the Court of Queen's Bench will not compel them to hear it, upon the ground that they so refused for insufficient reasons. (R. v. Justices of the West Riding, 1 Gale & D. 630.)

Proceedings on hearing.

It may be as well here to state that in some cases the appellant cannot, by the statute giving the appeal, go into any ground of appeal not stated in his notice, (post, 162); but when this is not the case the appellant may be allowed to travel out of it, provided it has not misled the respondent, in which case the sessions should sometimes adjourn the appeal. (R. v. Justices of Westmoreland, 10 B. & Cres. 226; ante, 162.)

Formal objections to conviction to be stated at once.

Where the appeal is against a conviction, the clerk of the peace first reads the conviction which has been returned by the convicting justices.(a) If any Sessions only to take notice of record of conviction returned by justices.

(a) The sessions can only take notice of the record of the conviction returned by the magistrate. Thus a conviction on 48 Geo. III. c. 74, s. 13, having been appealed against, the magistrate returned to the session a record of conviction, signed and sealed the 5th June, 1811, setting forth that the appellant on such a day was, on the complaint of Isaac Mann, convicted, &c. It appeared on the trial of the appeal, that at the time of the conviction an instrument bearing the same date was regularly signed and sealed by the magistrates, stating that the defendant on the same day was, on the complaint of W. Bourne and Isaac Ottley, convicted, &c. A copy of this latter instrument had been delivered by the justice's clerk to the defendant, written on the back of the information, which information thereby appeared to be that of Isaac Mann, and not of W. Bourne and J. Ottley, who were in fact the witnesses, and not the informers. This copy was produced by the appellant at the sessions, but the Court refused to let it be filed. They, however, took notice of it as a memorandum or minute of the conviction, and ordered that which was returned on parchment by the magistrate, and filed, to be quashed, because of its variance from the above minute. This order of the sessions having been removed by certiorari, a rule was obtained for quashing it, which in effect was to set up again the conviction returned by the magistrates. Upon argument, the Court of Queen's Bench considered the conviction returned to the session by the magistrate as the only one of which the sessions could take notice, and that, consequently, they had done wrong in quashing it on account of the manifest mistake in the copy or memorandum produced by the appellant. (R. v. Allen, 15 East, 333, 346.) It was said by the Court upon that occasion, that if the justice had done wrong in returning an improper conviction to the sessions, he would be punishable; but it clearly appeared that the copy delivered to the appellant was drawn up in the form he received it by mere mistake, for it was drawn up on the back of the information of the very person who was the true informer. (R. v. Allen, 15 East, 333, 346.) And the Court agreed, in this case, that as the defendant had chosen to stand upon the objection which he had taken, he had avoided entering into the merits of the case upon the appeal; and they therefore refused to send the case down again to be heard upon the merits. (See Paley, Conv. 288; post, 169, 171.)

If therefore the magistrate, in order to sustain the conviction, should mistake the evidence or other proceedings before him, the remedy is by motion founded on affidavit to the Court of Queen's Bench for a mandamus to compel the magistrate to state the whole of the evidence adduced before him correctly in his convicobjections arise on the face of the conviction, the appellant usually begins, and he is bound to state all his objections thereto at once, in order that they may be met on the other side, for it would be endless if each objection were to be discussed and decided seriatim.

5. Hearing and Trial of.

Who to begin.

Should the objections to the form of the conviction be overruled, or none be taken in limine, the respondent, or his counsel, opens his case upon the merits, and calls his witnesses; and he is not confined to such witnesses as were examined below. (See infra.) Such witnesses may be cross-examined.

Appellant's answer.

If the Court thinks the case thus opened and proved requires an answer, the appellant then opens his case and calls his witnesses, with the like liberty of calling fresh evidence, in addition to what he may have relied upon on the hearing of the information.

Respondent's reply.

As soon as his own case is closed, the respondent has a general reply upon the whole case, if, indeed, the appellant calls witnesses; but if the appellant calls no witnesses, the case is closed by the appellant's, or his counsel's, address.

Fresh evidence on.

Both parties are at liberty to examine all competent witnesses on their behalf, without regard to whether they have been examined before or not, unless it is provided by statute, (as by the 48 Geo. III. c. 74, s. 15,) that upon the appeal the same witnesses, and no other, shall be re-examined. (Breedon v. Gill, 1 Ld. Raym. 219, which was a conviction on the malt act.) And this rule extends to appeals to the commissioners of appeals in matters of excise. (R. v. Commissioners of Appeal in Matters of Excise, 3 M. & Sel. 133; see R. v. Jeffery, 2 D. & R. 860; 1 D & R. Mag. Ca. 455; 1 B. & C. 604, S. C.; Paley, Conv. by Dowling, 290, n. 1; post, "Excise," Vol. II.) See as to appeals against orders of removal, post, "Poor," Vol. II.

On a case sent back to the sessions to be restated, they may receive further evidence. (R. v. Blovam, 3 Nev. & M. 385; 1 Ad. & El. 386; see R. v. Justices of Suffolk, 1 B & Ald. 645. See post, 169.)

(2.) Judgment on, and how far conclusive.

Practice as to.

When the case and proceedings are closed, the chairman collects the opinion of the justices, and pronounces that of the majority for confirming or quashing the order, conviction, or rate, which is the subject of the appeal.

Who may vote. Justices who made the order.

In giving this judgment, the justices who made the order (Case of Fixham tithing, 2 Salk. 407) have no right to vote.

Magistrates interested in appeal.

Also magistrates interested in the appeal have no right to vote. If they do, the Court of Queen's Bench will quash the order of sessions, though there be a statutory clause taking away the writ of certiorari. (R. v. The Cheltenham Commissioners, 1 Ad. & El. N. S. 467; 1 Gale & D. 167, S. C.; Charte v. Kennington, 2 Str. 1173; R. v. Yarpole, 4 T. R. 71; R. v. Gudridge, 5 B. & C. 459.)

A paving act empowered commissioners to lay rates, giving to parties aggrieved an appeal to the quarter sessions, whose order was to be final; and no order, rate, &c., was to be removed by certiorari. On appeal against a rate, the respondents objected to the admission of certain evidence; the sessions, by a majority of eleven magistrates to eight, held the evidence admissible. three of the eleven magistrates were partners in a company to which belonged certain premises assessed to the rate in the name of the occupier. The sessions quashed the rate; held that, a question in the cause having been decided by a court improperly constituted, on account of the interest of the three magistrates, the clause prohibiting certiorari did not operate; and the Court of Queen's Bench had the order of sessions brought up by certiorari, and quashed it on affidavit of the above facts; although the affidavits did not satisfy the Court that the magistrates had acted partially. (R. v. Cheltenham Commissioners, supra. See post, "Certiorari" and "Sessions.")

tion, pursuant to 3 Geo. IV. c. 23. (In the matter of Rix, 4 D. & R. 352; 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 249, S. C.)

If, indeed, a magistrate wilfully misstate material evidence, he will be subject to a criminal information or indictment. (R. v. Barker, 1 East, 186. See post, "Conviction," and "Justices.")

4. Hearing and Trial of.

Lord Denman, in giving his judgment in this case, said, "A difficulty does certainly arise from the case of R. v. Justices of Monmouthshire, (8 B. & C. 137,) reported in Messrs. Manning and Ryland's Reports as R. v. The Inhabitants of Uske; (2 Man. & R. 172;) but, in comparing these reports, and looking at the account of the case in Burn's Justice, (vol. iv. p. 919, 28th edit. (see post, Vol. IV.,) which appears to be compiled from the two, it is clear that Lord Tenterden was not sanctioning the voting by a magistrate in a case where he had an interest. It seems that the party applying for the certiorari wanted to quash the order of removal. The sessions at the trial of the appeal had made an order of adjournment, two magistrates having previously voted for the respondent parish, and two for the appellants; one of the former being a rated inhabitant of the respondent parish. The party applying for the certiorari contended that this was, in law, a decision for the appellant parish, because the vote of the interested magistrate could not be considered as any vote; and that consequently the sessions had no power to adjourn the appeal after such a decision. They, therefore, proposed to quash both the order of removal and the order of adjournment. Lord Tenterden then, after protesting against a magistrate's voting where he is interested, refused to quash the order of adjournment, because, as to that, the Court of Queen's Bench could not sit in error on a decision of the Court below in a matter within its jurisdiction; and, as to the order of removal, there had clearly been no valid decision of the sessions against it, and this Court could not make one. Therefore neither branch of the rule which it was proposed to make on the orders being brought up could have been granted. But this is a very different thing from refusing to interfere for the purpose of preventing a decision taking effect in which an interested magistrate has participated."

But it seems that interested magistrates may vote with the consent of the parties to the appeal. (Id.)

See post, title "Sessions," as to the order of sessions being invalid, when the majority would have been the same way if the interested magistrates had not voted; and generally as to the effect of interested magistrates voting.

The court of Queen's Bench, in the above case of R. v. The Cheltenham Commissioners, on quashing the order of sessions, granted a rule nisi for a mandamus commanding the sessions to hear the appeal.

Chairman.

The chairman has the same right to vote as any other justice present; but he has no casting or double vote to give, in case the numbers, including his own vote, shall be equal. In case of equal division, it seems that the proper course is for the Court to order the appeal to stand adjourned till the next sessions; and it has been said, that it is the duty of the clerk of the peace so to enter it. (See R. v. The Justices of Leicestershire, 1 M. & Sel. 412.) But this doctrine has been disputed in a recent case of R. v. Justices of Monmouthshire, (4 B. & C. 844; 7 D. & R. 334, S. C.;) in which it was contended that, as the respondents, in case of removal, are bound to support the order, they fail to do so, when the Court does not decide with them, and consequently the order must, on equal division, be quashed. (And see R. v. Inhabitants of Fladbury, 10 Ad. & Ell. 706; 2 Per. & D. 471, S. C.) On this point the Court gave no opinion, and probably would not have disturbed the law as generally understood and acted upon, in consequence of the ingenious reasonings of the counsel, but the Court clearly held that the bench at sessions, having, on an equal division, given judgment that the order should be quashed, that judgment so given, even if erroneous, could not be reviewed by the Court of Queen's Bench, as no case had been reserved for their opinion. (Talf. Dick. Sess. 660, 661.)

Where a case from the quarter sessions stated, that the justices being equally divided in opinion, the chairman gave a casting vote in favour of the order, which was confirmed accordingly; that on the following day the appellant's counsel protested against the legality of the decision; that the question was then argued on both sides, and that the justices then present "determined to adhere to" the former decision; the Court of Queen's Bench held, that, although the proceeding on the first day was irregular, they could not assume that the judgment on the second day was not a judgment upon the merits. (R. v. Inhabitants of Fladbury, supra.)

5. Hearing and Trial of.

Sessions not bound to give reasons or make special entries.

The Court of Queen's Bench cannot compel the sessions by mandamus to give their reasons for their judgment, or make any special entries on their record. (R. v. Justices of Devon, 1 Chit. Rep. 34, 164; R. v. Justices of Worcestershire, id. 649; Exparte Morgan, 2 Chit. 250; R. v. Commissioners of Flockwold Inclosure, id. 251; R. v. Justices of Wilts, id. 257; post, "Sessions," Vol. V.)

See post, "Poor," Vol. IV, as to the sessions making a special entry when an order of removal is quashed for want of form, in order to prevent their judgment being conclusive upon a subsequent appeal.

Special case.

If the right to a certiorari is not expressly taken away, the sessions may remit a case, on proved or admitted facts, to the Court of Queen's Bench, and this is usually done on doubtful and difficult questions. (See post, title "Certiorari," and "Sessions," Vol. V.)

The Court refused to hear a case sent up by the quarter sessions, which concluded thus, "If the Court of Queen's Bench shall be of opinion, &c., then the order to be confirmed; but if the Court shall be of a contrary opinion, then the appeal to stand respited until the next sessions after the judgment of the Court," because the sessions had at the same time asked the Court to decide the case, and had reserved the power of afterwards deciding it themselves. (Reg. v. Inhabitants of Wistow, 1 Gale & D. 681.)

If the sessions quash the conviction for matter of form, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench upon the validity of the objection, and it appears to the Court when the conviction is returned that there is no defect of form; the Court will send the case back to be heard on its merits. (R. v. Ridgway, 1 D. & R. 132; 1 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 38; 5 B. & Ald. 527, S. C. See the case in full, post, 171; and see R. v. Inhabitants of Arlecdon, 11 Ad. & Ell. 87; but see ante, 166, n.)

Where an order of justices has been quashed on appeal, subject to a case, and the Court of Queen's Bench directs the case to be restated, the sessions have no jurisdiction to hear evidence thereon, or to confirm or quash the order without a notice by one of the parties to the other of an intention to proceed at such sessions, which notice may in such a case be given by the respondents. (R. v. Barnes, 2 Gale & D. 233.)

Serving a copy of the rule of the Court of Queen's Bench, directing the case to be restated, will not dispense with such service of a notice. (Id.; see ante, 167.)

Where the quarter sessions have dismissed an appeal upon a point of practice subject to a case, which the applicants for the case have not brought up, the Court of Queen's Bench will not, at their instance, grant a mandamus to enter continuances and hear the appeal. (Ante, 166.)

Where the sessions refused to hear or respite an appeal against an order of removal, upon the ground that notice of the grounds of appeal had not been given as required by the statute, and confirmed the order subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench on a special case, &c., and subsequently, at the same sessions, upon a motion of course made by the appellants, an order was made permitting the same appeal to be entered a second time, to be tried at the next general quarter sessions of the peace; at which sessions the justices dismissed the appeal when they found out that it was the same one that they had previously dismissed, subject to a case, which had not been taken up; the Court of Queen's Bench held, upon a case reserved, that they had rightly done so. (R. v. Inhabitants of Oundle, 2 Gale & D. 77.)

No delegation of authority of session allowed.

The session cannot delegate the decision of an appeal to another. However, by the consent of the parties or their attornies, the sessions may hand over the consideration of the matter in dispute to third persons, or to a committee of their own body, in order to report to them; and may adopt the report, and make an order accordingly, without further exercising their own judgment. (Talf. Dick. Sess. 656, citing R. v. Justices of Northampton, Cald. Sett. Cas. 30; R. v. Natland, Burr. Sett. Cas. 793; (cited 5 Tyr. R. 1056; 2 C. M. & R. 377, S. C.;) R. v. Harding, 2 Salk. 477. See post, 175, and post, "Sessions.")

When decision of sessions conclusive.

The judgment of sessions upon the appeal, when they have jurisdiction,

5. Hearing and Trial of.

though erroneous, is conclusive, and the Court of Queen's Bench has no jurisdiction to review their judgment, except on a case sent up for its consideration; and therefore where the sessions, having heard the witnesses on one side, had refused to hear those on the other side, on the ground that their testimony had been prefaced by observations on the part of the advocate, contrary to their usual practice, the Court refused to grant a mandamus to rehear the appeal. (R. v. Justices of Carnarvon, 4 B. & Ald. 86.) On that occasion Bayley, J., said, "There is no instance, I believe, which can be found in which this Court has interfered by mandamus to direct the justices to rehear an appeal which they have once already heard. In this case they entered into the consideration of this appeal, and after having heard it, they have decided that the respondents ought not to be allowed to call witnesses in reply. It is possible, that in that decision they may have been wrong; but it seems to me that we are not at liberty to enter into that question, as no case has been sent up for our consideration. If we were to do so, we would constitute this Court a court of appeal from the quarter sessions, and we should have applications continually made to us to overturn their determinations, on the ground of the improper reception or rejection of evidence, and be called upon to review their judgment, although no case has been sent to us for that purpose. It is the duty of sessions to hear and decide, and if they entertain any doubts, to submit them to this Court; but where they do not desire our interference we have no jurisdiction; (and see R. v. Inhabitants of Frieston, 5 B. & Adol. 597, infra; R. v. Allen, 15 East, 333; R. v. Justices of ———, 1 Ch. Rep. 164; R. v. Farrington, 4 D. & R. 735; 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 365, S.C.; R. v. Justices of Monmouth, 7 D. & R. 334; 3 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 410; 4 B. & Cres. 844; 8 B. & Cres. 137, S. C.; R. v. Justices of Kent, 9 B. & Cres. 283; R. v. All Saints, Stamford, 1 Jurist, 52; Exparte Inhabitants of Broseley, 7 Ad. & Ell. 423; R. v. Justices of Cheshire, 8 Ad. & Ell. 398; 1 Per. & D. 88, S.C.; R. v. Justices of West Riding, 1 Ad. & Ell. (N. S.) 624; 1 Gale & D. 198.)

In R. v. Justices of Cambridgeshire, (1 D. & R. 325; 1 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 86, S. C.: and see R. v. Pratt, 7 Ad. & Ell. 27; 2 Nev. & Per. 102, S.C.) the defendant B. D. having been convicted of forcibly passing a turnpike-gate without paying tolls, the sessions on appeal rejected evidence to show that the gate had been unlawfully erected, and the Court of Queen's Bench refused a mandamus to compel the sessions to receive such evidence, the admissibility of it being exclusively a question for the justices. The Court also refused to issue a mandamus to the sessions to hear an original complaint, touching the conduct of the trustees in the erection of the gate, leaving the party to proceed by indictment for the nuisance, or by an action of trespass, if his passage was obstructed.

When not.

Though the decision of the sessions on the hearing of the appeal, where they have jurisdiction, is conclusive, yet, as we have seen, ante, 165, if the sessions improperly refuse to hear it, the Court of Queen's Bench will compel them to do so by a writ of mandamus. And so if the sessions hear an appeal where they have no jurisdiction to do so, their decision is not conclusive. (Post "Sessions," Vol. V.)

It may be as well here to mention, that in a case of malversation, the Court of Queen's Bench will set aside the judgment of the sessions; and this though there be a statute taking away the writ of certiorari. (R. v. Cheltenham, 11 Ad. & Ell. 467; 1 Gale & D. 167, S. C.; post, "Certiorari," and "Sessions," Vol. V.)

Practice of, when conclusive.

The Court of Queen's Bench will not interfere with the established practice of the sessions, unless it appears to be manifestly wrong or unjust. (R. v. Justices of Essex, 2 Chit. 385; R. v. Justices of Sussex, 6 M. & Sel. 57; R. v. Justices of Monmouthshire, 3 D. P. C. 306, post; see R v. Justices of Bucks, 6 D. & R. 142; 3 D. & R. M. C. 23; and R. v. Justices of Yorkshire, W. R., 6 Jurist, 531, Q. B., from which case it would seem that a rule of the sessions, requiring that on entry of an appeal against an order of removal the original order shall be filed, is invalid.

On appeal against an order of removal, both parties attended at sessions, full notice of appeal having been given, and no countermand. The appellants then moved to enter the appeal, and to respite it, on the ground of a material witness being absent. The sessions refused to comply with the motion, unless on payment of the costs of the day, which it was their practice to require in such cases; and the appeal was not entered. On a motion for a mandamus, the Court of Queen's Bench held, that the sessions had exercised a proper discretion in refusing to respite, and that their not having entered the appeal was immaterial. (R. v. Justices of Monmouthshire, 1 B. & Adol. 895.)

5. Hearing and Trial of.

Where, by the practice of the sessions, eight days' notice of appeal was required at the first sessions against an order of removal, but fourteen days' notice of an adjourned appeal, and an appeal was dismissed for want of sufficient notice for the adjourned sessions, the Court refused to interfere with the practice. (3 D. P. C. 306.)

But if the sessions depart from the usual practice in refusing to hear the appeal, the Court of Queen's Bench will interfere; and in R. v. Justices of Wilts, (4 Man. & R. 401; 8 B. & Cres. 380,) on an appeal under the 17 Geo. II. c. 38, s. 4, a mandamus was granted on the ground that the sessions had departed from the usual practice, in refusing to hear the appeal at the second sessions after the making of the rate; and the appeal could not properly have been tried at the former sessions, when it was entered, no notice having been given, though it was not adjourned on that ground. (See R. v. Justices of Gloucestershire, 3 D. P. C. 298.)

By statute, parties were enabled in certain cases to appeal to the quarter sessions for a particular district, giving ten days' notice. The act said nothing as to further notice in the event of such appeal being respited, nor did it appear that there was any rule of practice on the subject at those sessions. An appeal under the statute, of which due notice had been given, was respited, and came on at a subsequent sessions, pursuant to the respite. The appellant was called upon to prove that he had given notice of trial of the respited appeal, and on his failing to do so, the appeal was dismissed: Held, that the sessions were wrong in requiring such notice, and that the case was one in which this Court might overrule their decision. Mandamus granted to hear the appeal. (R. v. Justices of W. R. Yorkshire; Bower v. Accounts of the Commissioners of Meltham Inclosure, 5 B. & Adol. 667; and see R. v. Justices of Staffordshire, 4 Ad. & Ell. 842; and post, 175.)

If conviction improperly quashed for form, the decision is not conclusive.

Where the sessions quash a conviction for matter of form only, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench upon the validity of the objection, and it appears to the Court, when the conviction is returned by certiorari, that there is no defect of form, they will send the case back to be heard on the merits. See ante, 169. In R. v. Ridgway, 5 B. & Ald. 527; 1 D. & R. 132; 1 D. & R. M. C. 38, S. C., the defendant had been convicted by two justices on the stat. 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 106, s. 4, of attending a meeting of journeymen bleachers, held for the purpose of maintaining, supporting, continuing, and carrying on a combination for the purpose of obtaining an advance of wages. On appeal the sessions quashed the conviction, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench as to its sufficiency in point of form. The conviction having been removed by certiorari, and a rule nisi obtained for quashing the order of sessions and sending the case back to be heard on the merits; on showing cause, it was contended, that the Court had no jurisdiction to quash the order of sessions; for assuming the Court below to have come to an erroneous decision, still the defendant having been acquitted in point of form, that acquittal was conclusive in his favour, from analogy to the rule in other criminal cases, and therefore he could not be put in jeopardy a second time for the same offence. The quashing the conviction is to all intents and purposes an acquittal. This is a criminal conviction against the defendant, and the question is, whether the Court will entertain a motion which in its consequences may subject him to a second trial for the same offence. In all cases of felony, an acquittal is a bar to further proceedings against the party; and even in cases of misdemeanor, where the defendant has been acquitted in consequence of a mere clerical objection, still it has been held that no new trial can be had. In this case the defendant has been in fact acquitted, whether properly or not is not the question. In R v. Allen, 15 East, 333; R. v. Redfearne, 4 T. R. 273; and R. v. Cook, 3 T. R. 519, cases had been reserved on facts, and in the two latter the conviction had been affirmed by the sessions; sed per Abbott, C. J. "I am not aware of any case in which the point now contended for has been decided; I have a perfect recollection of cases having occurred formerly in which orders of removal have been quashed for form by the quarter sessions, subject to the opinion of this Court whether the original order was right. Where the justices have declared that they have quashed for form, then in such cases this Court has considered whether the form was incorrect; now here the justices have declared that they have quashed this conviction for form, subject to our opinion upon the matter. Is there any distinction between this case in principle and those cases to which I have alluded?"

It was then said, in the same case, that many cases of the description alluded to had occurred, but there is a main distinction between orders of removal and convictions on penal statutes. In the former, if the order of removal be irregular and is quashed for irregularity, a fresh order of removal may be made out, for as between two contending parishes an order of removal quashed for want of form would not prevent a fresh removal, and in such cases a special entry is made by the clerk of the peace that the order is quashed for form. In such cases the matter of form has been remitted for the opinion of this Court. But there is no analogy between an order of removal of a pauper and a conviction on a penal statute. No penal consequences attach to the former, and therefore there can be no harm in this Court reviewing the decision of the sessions; but a case has never yet occurred in which this Court has interfered to set the sessions right in a criminal matter where the decision of the justices was in favour of the defendant. Sed per Abbott, C. J. "I am clearly of opinion that we are bound, in the exercise of our judicial authority, to quash this order of sessions, if, upon the face of it, it appear to be founded on an insufficient ground; and I should be of the same opinion whether the sessions had or had not specially asked our opinion upon the question. Supposing no case to have been reserved by the sessions, but that their order and the original conviction on which it was founded had been brought before us by certiorari, it would be our duty to read the order, and if we saw by the terms of it that they had quashed the conviction for informality or insufficiency, then to read the conviction, and if we found it not to be informal, then to send it back for re-hearing upon the merits. No injustice can arise to the defendant by our sending this case back to the sessions, for as his appeal against the original conviction was entered within the time limited by the act, no subsequent delay can bar him from being heard on that appeal upon the merits."

The Court in that case being of opinion that there was no informality in the conviction, quashed the order of sessions, and sent the case back to be heard on the merits.

(3.) Adjournment of Hearing.

Power of.

The sessions may adjourn the hearing of the appeal if they think fit, and they have power so to do, though the statute directs them to determine the matter. (R. v. Justices of Wiltshire, 13 East, 352; R. v. Justices of Westmoreland, 10 B. & Cres. 226; R. v. Inhabitants of Kimbolton, 6 Ad. & Ell. 603.)

The occasion for adjourning the hearing is in the discretion of the sessions, depending on the facts of the case, except in the case presently mentioned. (R. v. Justices of Staffordshire, 2 Dowl. N. S. 353.) And if they refuse to adjourn it, the Court of Queen's Bench cannot compel them to do so. (Id.)

Adjournment only proper on regular appeal.

Though the power of adjournment is inherent in the sessions for their own convenience in hearing the appeal, or for any other good cause, as the absence of a witness, &c. that power can only be exercised on appeals regularly brought before them, that is to say, where all the conditions as to notice, &c. which are the acts of the party appealing, have been observed. (Paley, Conv. 287; R. v. Inhabitants of Kimbolton, 6 Ad. & Ell. 603; see the cases, ante, 163.)

On appeals against orders of removal under the poor laws, the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 8, directs, that if it shall appear to the justices that reasonable time of notice was not given, they shall adjourn the appeal to the next quarter sessions, and then and there finally hear and determine the same. This enactment gives the justices discretionary power to decide, if reasonable notice has been given; if what they consider reasonable notice has not been given, they must adjourn the appeal to the next sessions. (R. v. Justices of Monmouthshire, 3 Dowl P. C. 306; R. v. Justices of Bucks, 3 East, 342; R. v. Justices of Shropshire, 7 East, 549; R. v. Justices of Suffolk, 8 Dowl. 618; R. v. Inhabitants of Kimbolton, 6 Ad. & Ell. 603.) The appeal can, it seems, only be adjourned once by virtue of that statute. (See further, "Poor," Vol. IV.)

5. Hearing and Trial of.

The appeal should not be adjourned later than to the next original sessions. (2 Hawk. 68; R. v. Grince, 19 Vin. 358; and see Thurston v. Slatford, Lutw. 911.)

To what sessions.

If a regular notice of appeal has been given for one sessions, and the appeal be adjourned at the instance of the appellants, after hearing counsel on both sides, it is not necessary to give a strictly regular notice of trial for the following sessions. (R. v. Justices of Gloucestershire, 3 Dowl. P. C. 298; and post, 174.)

Notice, in case of.

A rule and practice of the quarter sessions, that in all cases of appeal, not otherwise directed by law, ten days' notice in writing shall be given by appellants to respondents, and that in cases of respited appeals the like notice shall be given, unless there be any agreement between the parties to the contrary, are not applicable to the case of an appeal adjourned to the next sessions at the instance and for the accommodation of respondents; and, therefore, where an appeal having been so adjourned the justices dismissed it at the next sessions, because the appellant had not given notice of his intention to prosecute at the sessions, the Court granted a mandamus to the justices to hear the same. (R. v. Justices of Lindsey, 6 M. & Sel. 379.)

And where an appeal after hearing at one sessions was adjourned until the following sessions in consequence of an equal division of opinion on the bench, it was held that no fresh notice of trial was necessary for the following sessions, although by the general practice of the sessions a fresh notice of trial is required when an appeal is respited. (R. v. Justices of Buckinghamshire, 6 D. & R. 142; 3 D & R. Mag. Ca. 23, S. C.)

See ante, 162, as to serving a fresh statement of the grounds of appeal, after the appeal has been adjourned.

VI. Entering and Respiting Appeal, and Notice of Trial after same.

See ante, 165, and as to the practice of calling on appeals.

Calling on.

Before an appeal can be entered or respited the appellant must prove that he has performed the conditions precedent, if any, to his right to appeal; as that he has given notice of the appeal, or the like. (See ante, 158, 165.)

When appeal to be entered.

If a statute gives a party a right of appeal, but enacts that it shall not be brought, received, or heard, unless notice be given a certain number of days before the next sessions, and a recognizance entered into also, if the party omit to give such notice, and enter into a recognizance before those sessions, the sessions have no power to enter and respite the appeal, and a notice or recognizance for any adjourned sessions would not be sufficient; and this, whatever the practice of the sessions might be, the statute expressly requiring a notice and recognizance within a specified time, and for a particular sessions. (R. v. Justices of Lancashire, 3 B. & Cres. 548; 5 D. & R. 347, S. C., decided on the 49 Geo. III. c. 68, relating to bastards.)

But where the statute giving the appeal only enacts, that a party shall not be heard in support of it, unless some act be done, as the grounds of appeal served, and such act be not done; this does not prevent the sessions entering and respiting the appeal. (R. v. Inhabitants of Kimbolton, 6 Ad. & Ell. 603; 1 Nev. & Per. 606, S. C.; ante, 164.)

6. Entering and Respiting.

Where an appellant parish gave notice before Michaelmas sessions, that they would at those sessions enter and respite and try their appeal with effect at the following sessions, and in the mean time a negociation had taken place with the respondents as to the settlement of the pauper, but without any determination; it was held to be necessary to give a fresh notice of appeal for the following sessions, to entitle the appellant to be heard. (R. v. Justices of Essex, 2 Chit. R. 385.)

When such notice requisite.

The practice of the sessions is not distinctly stated, but appears to have been the foundation of the judgment. (Talf. Dick. Sessions, 648, n. (u.)

Where the sessions refused to hear or respite an appeal against an order of removal, upon the ground that notice of the grounds of appeal had not been given as required by the statute, and confirmed the order, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench, on a special case, &c., and subsequently at the same sessions, upon a motion of course made by the appellants, an order was made, permitting the same appeal to be entered a second time, to be tried at the next general quarter sessions of the peace; at which sessions the justices dismissed the appeal, when they found out that it was the same one that they had previously dismissed, subject to a case, which had not been taken up; the Court of Queen's Bench held, upon a case reserved, that they had rightly done so. (R. v. Inhabitants of Oundle, 2 Gale & D. 77.)

We have seen, ante, 158, that where the order or conviction, &c. is made so short a time before the sessions, that it is impossible, either by reason of the insufficiency of the time for giving the notice of appeal required by the sessions or otherwise, to try the appeal at the next sessions, it is not necessary to enter and respite the appeal at such sessions, but the appellant may pass them by, and give notice for, and enter and try his appeal at the following sessions.

Practice of sessions as to entering appeal, and notice of trial after same.

The practice of the particular sessions at which the appeal is made must, as regards the entering and respiting the appeal, and giving notice of trial after the same, in all cases be conformed to, unless it be manifestly wrong or unjust.

If a statute gives a party a right of appeal on entering into a recognizance, and does not require a notice of appeal, he may enter his appeal and get it respited at the next sessions, having previously entered into such recognizance, without notice to the other side; but after the appeal has been respited, the usual notice of trying it, as required by the practice of the sessions, must be given, otherwise the sessions will be authorised in dismissing it altogether.

Thus in the case of R. v. Justices of Salop, 2 B. & Ald. 694, on showing cause against a rule nisi for a mandamus to the sessions to enter continuances and hear the appeal of one J. R. against the conviction of a magistrate under 52 Geo. III. c. 93, sched. L. rule 12, it appeared that the defendant had been convicted in the penalty of 10*l.* for using greyhounds for the purpose of killing a hare, not having taken out a certificate. Immediately upon his conviction he entered into the recognizance required by the act to prosecute his appeal against it at the next January sessions. At those sessions he accordingly entered his appeal, and it was respited by the Court. At the following sessions he again appeared for the purpose of trying the appeal, but it being objected that there had not been eight days' notice given to the convicting justice, as was required by the rule of the sessions, the sessions dismissed the appeal and confirmed the conviction. In support of the rule for the mandamus, R. v. Justices of Leeds, 4 T. R. 583, was relied on, and it was contended that the entering into the recognizance before the justice dispensed with the necessity of giving the usual notice to him of trying the appeal. But per Abbott, C. J., "It was, perhaps, sufficient for the party to entitle himself to enter his appeal at the January sessions that he had given the security required by the act, although no notice of appeal had been given by him, but when once he had entered his appeal, he was bound to conform to the practice of the sessions. It was therefore necessary for him to have given the usual notice of trying his respited appeal at the Easter sessions, and not having done so, the sessions were authorised in dismissing the appeal altogether."

When not.

But it is not necessary to give a notice of trying a respited appeal, unless it be required by the practice of the sessions. (R. v. Lambeth, 3 D. & R. 340; 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 26, S. C.; see also R. v. Justices of Gloucestershire, 3 Dowl. P. C. 298.) In R. v. Lambeth, supra, an appeal was entered at the Easter, and respited until the Midsummer sessions, and on the 24*th of June* a copy of the order of respite was served on the respondents without any notice of trial, and the respondents appeared at the following sessions in July; it was held that the sessions were bound to hear the appeal, though no other notice of trying the appeal had been given than the service of the order of respite.

6. Entering and Respiting.

By statute parties were enabled in certain cases to appeal to the quarter sessions for a particular district, giving ten days' notice. The act said nothing as to further notice in the event of such appeal being respited, nor did it appear that there was any rule of practice on the subject at those sessions. An appeal under the statute, of which due notice had been given, was respited, and came on a subsequent sessions pursuant to the respite. The appellant was called upon to prove that he had given notice of trial of the respited appeal, and on his failing to do so, the appeal was dismissed: Held, that the sessions were wrong in requiring such notice, and that the case was one in which the Court of Queen's Bench might overrule their decision. A mandamus was granted to hear the appeal. (R. v. Justices of the W. R. of Yorkshire, 3 Nev. & M. 86; Bower v. Accounts of Commissioners of Meltham Inclosure, 5 B. & Ad. 667; ante, 171.)

The Court of Sessions should be uniform in their rules of practice, and should rather lean to the hearing of appeals than to dismissing them on technical grounds. See per Denman, C. J., in R. v. Justices of Norfolk, 3 Nev. & Man. 86; 5 B. & Adol. 922.

See post, "Poor," as to the effect of superseding an order of removal before and after an appeal against it has been entered at the sessions.

VII. Costs.

Costs.

The power to give costs is not incident to the authority of the sessions, nor does it exist at common law, and therefore costs can never be given unless by the words of the statute under which the justices are acting.

Whenever the sessions grant costs, they must ascertain the costs by their order, (Ex-parte Holloway, 1 Dowl. P. C. 26,) for they have no power to grant costs generally, like the courts at Westminster, to be afterwards taxed by the proper officer; they may direct the clerk of the peace to ascertain and report to them the items of the expenditure, which may be the grounds of their decision, but they must themselves determine the sum to be paid.

Therefore it has been held that the recorder of a municipal sessions may, on ordering costs, refer the taxation of the amount to an officer of the Court; but that such taxation must be adopted by him during the continuance of the same sessions. (Reg. v. Long, 1 Ad. & El. N. S. 740; 1 Gale & D. 367, S. C.; Selwood v. Mount, 1 Ad. & El. N. S. 726; 1 Gale & D. 358, S. C.)

An order for payment of costs, when made, cannot be enforced by attachment, but the party disobeying it, after it has been personally served on him, will be liable to be indicted for a misdemeanor, and punished for his contempt by imprisonment and fine. (Talf. Dick. Sessions, 664; see further, post, title "Costs," Vol. I.; "Order," Vol. V.)

At some sessions the practice is to allow the party succeeding on the appeal only 40*s.* costs; and sometimes the practice is, where notice of appeal is given and not countermanded, to refuse the appellant leave to enter and respite his appeal, unless he agree to pay the costs of the day. (See R. v. Justices of Monmouthshire, 1 B. & Adol. 895.)

8. Forms.

Construction of the words "heard and determined."

Where an appeal against a poor-rate was entered at the Midsummer sessions, and respited until the Michaelmas sessions, and then further respited, at the instance of the appellant, till the Epiphany sessions, four days previously to which the respondents gave notice that they would not oppose the appeal, and the appeal was accordingly allowed without opposition; it was held, that the appellant was entitled to costs as upon an appeal, which had been "heard and determined," within the meaning of 17 Geo. III. c. 38, s. 4. (R. v. Cawston, 4 D. & R. 445; 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 269, S. C.; R. v. Essex, 8 T. R. 588; Ex-parte Holloway, 1 Dowl. P. C. 26; and R. v. Justices of Cambridge, 2 Ad. & Ell. 374.)

(5.) Judgment of affirmance of the sessions on an appeal against a conviction. (a)

Lincolnshire, parts of Holland. } AT a general quarter sessions of the peace of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, held by proclamation at Spalding, in and for the parts of Holland, within the county of Lincoln, on Monday the day of , in the year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady the now Queen Victoria, and in the year of our Lord , before A. B., C. D., E. F., and others, their fellows, the justices of our said Lady the Queen, assigned to keep the peace of our said Lady the Queen, within the parts of Holland aforesaid, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses and other misdemeanors, done and committed within the said parts in the said county, and one of whom is of the quorum.

And afterwards by adjournment, (to wit,) at Boston, in and for the said parts, on in the year of the reign aforesaid, before G. H., I. K., L. M., and others, their fellows, also the justices of our said Lady the Queen, assigned to keep the peace of our said Lady the Queen, within the parts of Holland aforesaid, and also to hear and determine as aforesaid, within the said parts in the said county, and one of whom is also of the quorum.

At the same court so held at Boston, on the day and year aforesaid, J. W. of , in the parts of Holland, in the county of Lincoln, farmer, entered his appeal to and against a conviction, under the hand and seal of A. D. Esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the parts of Holland aforesaid, dated and made the day of , 1843, [here state the offence as in the conviction;] and by which said conviction he the said A. D. did adjudge that the said J. W. should for the said offence forfeit the sum of two pounds, together with the sum of seventeen shillings for costs, and did order that the said sums should be paid by the said J. W. on or before the day of last, and that in default of payment on or before that day, he the said A. D. did by the said conviction adjudge the said J. W. to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the House of Correction at Shirbeck Quarter, in the parts of Holland, in the county of Lincoln aforesaid, for the space of two calendar months, unless the said sums should be sooner paid, and that the said A. D. did, in and by the said conviction, direct that the said sum of two pounds should be paid to P. S., being one of the overseers of the poor of the said parish of Leverton, to be by him applied according to the directions of the statute in such case made and provided; and that the sum of seventeen shillings for costs shall be paid to the said J. J., the informant, on whose information the said complaint was founded. [Let this agree with the conviction.]

Now therefore at the said Court so holden as aforesaid by adjournment at Boston as aforesaid, upon hearing of the said appeal, it is now here ordered and adjudged by the said court that the said conviction be, and the same is hereby in all things affirmed, and it is also now here by the same Court further ordered and adjudged that the said J. W. be dealt with and punished according to the said conviction, and also that he the said J. W. do and shall pay to the said J. J., the said informant and the respondent in the said appeal, the sum of £ , the amount of the costs sustained by the said J. J., and by him incurred by reason of the said appeal, and now by the said Court here adjudged to be paid to him by the said J. W., according to the statute in such case made and provided. [See as to the power to give costs, &c. ante, 175.]

Appearance.

On indictments for felony.

IT is a rule that no one can be tried on an indictment for a felony unless he appear in person. Also, in criminal cases, where an act of parliament requires it, and on an attachment, the defendant must, in general, appear in person. (2 Hawk. P. C. c. 22, s. 1.)

(a) It must appear from an order of sessions that they had jurisdiction over the subject matter of it. (R. v. Spackman, 1 Gale & D. 619; see post, "Sessions.) Therefore an order of quarter sessions, on appeal against an account of overseers, is bad if it does not appear, either by express averment or necessary intendment, to relate to the annual account; for otherwise it may relate to the quarterly account, which the overseers are directed to render by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 47, and in respect of which there is no appeal to the quarter sessions. (R. v. Spackman, supra.)

Appearance.

On indictments for misdemeanors.

On an indictment or information for a crime less than felony, the defendant may, by favour of the court, appear by attorney, and this he may do as well before plea pleaded as afterwards until conviction. (Bacon's case, 1 Lev. 146; Keilw. 165.)

And in case of mayhem, even though it is stated to be done feloniously in the indictment, the defendant need not personally attend, but may cause his plea to be delivered in the office; (R. v. Haddock, 2 Stra. 1101; R. v. Hales, id. 816;) and a clerk in court may confess an indictment for his client in his absence. (Anon. 6 Mod. 16.)

Infants.

Where infants are prosecuted for misdemeanors, it is the constant practice for them to appear by attorney in the crown office, though in civil cases they must defend by guardian. (Reg. v. Tanner, 2 Ld. Raym. 1284.)

In outlawry.

In order to reverse an outlawry before conviction on an indictment for a misdemeanor, the defendant may appear by attorney, though he cannot do so on a prosecution for a felony; (Com. Dig. Attorney, (B. 6); 4 W. & M. c. 18;) or when he is taken for a contempt, or on a cepi corpus upon an exigent. (Id.)

Where prosecutor may enter appearance for defendant.

By the 48 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 1, if a person in custody under a warrant or writ of capias, founded on an indictment in the Court of Queen's Bench, (which can only be for a misdemeanor,) shall not cause an appearance and plea or demurrer to be entered for himself within eight days after copy of the indictment delivered with notice to plead in eight days, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor to cause an appearance and plea of not guilty to be entered for him, and to proceed to trial as if he were actually present.

What information for penalties not within the act.

An information for penalties under the game law is not an information within the stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 58: and therefore where the prosecutor had entered an appearance and a plea of not guilty for the defendant, the Court set aside such verdict for irregularity; et per Abbott, C. J. "It is quite clear that the statute does not apply to an information brought for penalties on the game laws. It enacts, 'that when any person shall be charged with an offence for which he may be prosecuted by indictment or information in his Majesty's Court of K. B.' It therefore contemplates offences over which this Court has exclusive jurisdiction by indictment or information. Now, penalties under the game laws may be recovered by information not only in this Court but in the other Courts in Westminster Hall. I think the statute applies only to such offences as the Court of King's Bench may exclusively entertain when prosecuted by indictment or information at the suit of the king." (Davies v. Bint, 3 B. & Cres. 586; 5 D. & R. 353, S. C.)

Apprentices.

THE term "Apprentice" is derived from the French word apprendre, to learn. In R. v. Eccleston, 2 East, 289, Lord Ellenborough said, that where the contract was that the master should teach the other a trade, and the latter was to do nothing ulterior to the employment in that trade, it was a contract apprendre in the true sense of the word, and constituted an apprenticeship. (And see R. v. Rainham, 1 East, 531; R. v. St. Margaret's, Lynn, 4 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 260; R. v. Combe, 2 Man. & R. 30; 8 B. & Cres. 82; R. v. Tipton, 4 Man. & R. 703; 9 B & Cres. 888; R. v. Nether Nutsford, 1 B. & Adol. 726; R. v. Crediton, 2 B. & Adol. 493; post, 186.) Definition.

The policy of the apprentice laws has been always much questioned, and thought injurious to the community. (See Chit. Appr. L. 1 to 22.) And the legislature, by the 54 Geo. III. c. 96, in repealing some of the provisions of the 5 Eliz. c. 4, abolished the necessity of apprenticeships for the purposes of exercising trades, except in those corporate towns where there were immemorial customs, or where there were bye laws of a corporation or company, imposing some particular restraints as to apprenticeships. And now, by the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 14, such customs or bye laws controlling trades, except in London, are abolished. Impolicy of laws.

Apprenticeships, therefore, are now, in general, absolutely requisite only for the purpose of obtaining settlements under the poor laws. When necessary.

We will divide our considerations on the law of apprentices as follows:— Division of subject.

Apprentices in General.

I. Who may take an Apprentice.

At Common Law.]—At common law any person capable of making a contract may take an apprentice. Who may take, at common law.

It seems the master may be an infant. (R. v. St. Petrox, 4 Term. R. 196; 2 Bott, 377, S. C.; Cald. 444.) But a master under twenty-four years of age, and not a housekeeper, could not, before the 54 Geo. III., maintain an action for harbouring his apprentice. (Gye v. Felton, 4 Taunt. 876; Smedley v. Gooden, 3 M. & Sel. 189; post, "Poor," Vol. IV.) Infants.

The binding of an apprentice to a feme covert is void. (R. v. Guildford, 2 Chit. R. 284.) Feme covert.

If the binding be bonâ fide, the condition of the master is immaterial, nor need he exercise any trade, art or mystery. (R. v. St. Margaret's Lincoln, 1 Bott, 610; Burr. S. C. 713, 728.) Trade of master immaterial.

By Statute.]—Previous to the 54 Geo. III. c. 96, s. 2, it was enacted by stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 25, that every person being a householder, and having and using half a plough-land in tillage, might take an apprentice above the age of ten years, and under eighteen, to serve in husbandry till twenty-one at the least, or till twenty-four, as the parties could agree. Old statutory provisions as to who may take. Husbandmen.

By sect. 26 of 5 Eliz. c. 4, every person being a householder, and twenty-four years old at the least, dwelling in any city or town corporate, and exercising any art, mystery, or manual occupation there, might retain the son of a freeman, not occupying husbandry, nor being a labourer and inhabiting in the same, or in any other city or town corporate, to serve and be bound as an apprentice, after the custom and order of the city of London, for seven years at the least, so as such apprenticeship did not expire before the apprentice shall be twenty-four years of age. Tradesmen in towns corporate.

Sect. 40. The citizens of London and Norwich might take and have apprentices as before that act.

Sect. 28. Every person being a householder, and twenty-four years old at the least, and not occupying husbandry, nor being a labourer, dwelling in any market town not corporate, and exercising any art, mystery, or manual occupation, might have to apprentice the child or children of any other artificer, not occupying husbandry, nor being a labourer, inhabiting in the same or any other such market town in the same shire. Tradesmen in market towns not corporate.

Sect. 30. Any person using the art of a smith, wheelwright, ploughwright, millwright, carpenter, rough-mason, plaisterer, sawyer, lime-burner, brick-maker, bricklayer, tyler, slater, helier, tyle-maker, linenweaver, turner, Particular trades in any place.

1. Who may take.

cooper, miller, earthen-potter, woollen-weaver, weaving household cloth only, fuller, otherwise called tucker or walker, burner of oare and woad-ashes, thatcher or shingler, wheresoever he should dwell, might take the son of any person as an apprentice, albeit his parents had no land.

Repeal of part of the above provisions.

But now stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 96, s. 2, reciting, "That by the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 25, 30, 41, divers rules and regulations were enacted respecting the qualifications of persons entitled to take and become apprentices, and the term of years for which such apprentices shall be bound, and as to the mode of binding such apprentices, and it was also enacted by the same statute, that all indentures, covenants, promises, and bargains of and for the having, taking, or keeping of any apprentice, otherwise thereafter to be made or taken than is by the said statute limited, ordained, and appointed, should be clearly void in law to all intents and purposes; and that every person that should from thenceforth take or newly retain any apprentice contrary to the tenor and true meaning of the said act, should forfeit and lose for every apprentice so by him taken the sum of 10*l*, and that it is expedient that so much of the said recited act should be repealed;" enacts, "that so much of the said recited act shall be, and the same is hereby repealed, and that it shall and may be lawful for any person to take or retain or become an apprentice, though not according to the provisions of the said act; and that indentures, deeds, and agreements in writing, entered into for that purpose, which would be otherwise valid and effectual, shall be valid and effectual in law, the repeal of so much of the said act, as is herein last above recited, notwithstanding."

Any person may now take.

It seems evident from the words of this act that the whole of the 25, 30, and 41 sections of the 5 Eliz. c. 4, are repealed thereby.

Justices may determine complaints.

Sect 3 enacts, "That any justice or justices of the peace may hear and determine any complaints that may arise respecting any apprenticeships, in like manner as if they had been made under the act hereby in part repealed."

Proviso as to customs or bye laws, &c. in London.

Sect. 4. Provided "this act or any thing herein contained shall not extend, or be construed to extend, to defeat, alter, or prejudice the custom and order of the city of London concerning apprentices, or the ancient custom, usages, privileges, or franchises of the said city, or of any other city, town, corporation, or company, lawfully constituted, or the citizens and freemen thereof; or any bye-law or regulation of any corporation or company lawfully constituted."

Exclusive rights of trading abolished.

But the Municipal Corporation Act, 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 14, abolishes exclusive rights of trading in corporate cities and places, except in London.

Any person, therefore, capable of doing so at common law, may in general now take an apprentice, notwithstanding the statute of Elizabeth.

Aliens.

The 14 and 15 Hen. VIII. c. 2, however, prohibits any alien or denizen from taking an apprentice upon pain of forfeiting 10*l*., half to the king and half to the informer; but this does not seem to invalidate the indenture. (See Moore, 411; Chit. App. 24.)

Sea apprentices.

As to Sea Apprentices, see post, "Seamen," Vol. V.

Apprenticeship void if in contravention of a statute.

If a statute prohibits a particular person from taking an apprentice, any contract of apprenticeship in contravention of that statute will be void, and not merely voidable. (See R. v. Gravesend, 3 B. & Adol. 240.)

II. Who are capable of being bound.

By common law.

By Common Law.]—By common law any person may bind himself an apprentice.

Adults.

An adult may legally bind himself as an apprentice, in order to enable himself to set up in trade, and may thereby gain a settlement, but in this case he must execute the indenture himself, or he cannot be deemed an apprentice. (R. v. Inhabitants of Ripon, 9 East, 295; see Smedley v. Gooden, 3 M. & Sel. 189, post, 183.)

Infants.

An infant, even without his parent's consent (and it seems of any age), may voluntarily bind himself, an indenture of apprenticeship being considered for his benefit, and he will be subject to the jurisdiction of the magistrate, under the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 43. (R. v. Arundel, 5 M. & Selw. 257; Newberry v. St. Mary's, Reading, 2 Bott, 363; R. v. Saltren, Cald. 444; 1 Bott, 717; R. v. Joltern, 1 Bott, 613; Foley, 154; 6 T. R. 556, 652; R. v. Annesley, 3 B. & Ald. 584; post, "Poor," Vol. IV.)

2. Who are capable of being bound.

But where a statute prohibits the taking of an apprentice under a certain age, and a child under that age is notwithstanding taken as such, the binding will be wholly void, and not merely voidable. (R. v. Hipswell, 8 B. & Cres 466.)

And if an infant were of so tender an age that he is incompetent to learn or otherwise unfit for the apprenticeship, a justice of the peace might, in his discretion, think it right to dissolve the contract and discharge him.

It may be also observed, that no action can be brought against an infant apprentice on his covenant to serve; (Gylbert v. Fletcher, Cro. Car. 179; Com. Dig. Justice of Peace, B. 55; R. v. Inhabitants of Cromford, 8 East, 26;) nor can he be sued in equity; (1 Equ. Ca. Ab. 6;) and though the statute 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 42, 43, expressly enacts that the apprentice shall be bound as if he had been of full age, yet it has been held that this only subjects him to the jurisdiction of the magistrates in case of misbehaviour, &c., and not to an action for the breach of his covenant. (Gylbert v. Fletcher, Cro. Car. 179; 1 Bott, 527.)

In London there is a custom that an infant, of the age of fourteen or upwards, shall be bound by his indenture, and he is liable to be sued on his covenant in any Court. (Moore, 135; Bac. Ab. Master and Servant, (B.); Com. Dig. London, n. 2; Pulling's Laws of London, 482.)

An infant apprentice may be sued for a tort unconnected with a contract (Jennings v. Rundall, 8 T. R. 335), and semble, assumpsit or debt lies against him for money he has embezzled. (Bristowe v. Eastman, Peake's N. P. C. 223; 1 Esp. 172, S. C.)

By Statute.]—We have already seen, ante, 181, the provisions of the 5 Eliz. c. 4, which pointed out what persons might be bound apprentices, and that these are in effect repealed by the 54 Geo. III. c. 96, s. 2, which allows any person to become an apprentice, though not according to the statute of Eliz.

By statute.

In Smedley v. Gooden, 3 M. & Sel. 189, it was held that the 5 Eliz. c. 4, related only to such persons who bound themselves as apprentices as were under age, and not to adults.

III. Number allowed.

At common law the master may take any number of apprentices.

By stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 33, 39, 45, every person that shall have three apprentices in any the crafts of a clothmaker, fuller, sheerman, weaver, tailor, or shoemaker, shall keep one journeyman; and for every other apprentice above three, one other journeyman, on pain of 10*l.*; half to the King, and half to him that shall sue in the sessions or other court of record; or if it is in a town corporate, then to be applied as by the charter.

Number restrained in certain cases.

By stat. 1 Jac. I. c. 17, s. 3, 5, no hatmaker shall have above two apprentices at one time, nor those for any less term than seven years, on pain of 5*l.* a month; half to the King, and half to him that shall sue in any court of record: but this not to extend to his own son, in his own house, so as he be bound by indenture for seven years, and his term not to expire before he be twenty-two years of age.

Hatmakers.

By stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 5, s. 18, weavers of stuffs in Norfolk and Norwich, that shall employ two apprentices, shall also employ two journeymen; and no master shall have above two apprentices, or any week boy to weave in the said trade, on pain of 5*l.* a month to the King.

Weavers of stuffs in Norfolk, &c.

An apprenticeship in contravention of these acts, or other such enactments, would be void. (See R. v. Gravesend, 3 B. & Adol. 240.)

4. Who are compellable to be bound.

IV. Who are compellable to be bound.

In general.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 35, "If any person shall be required by any householder, having and using half a plough-land at the least in tillage, to be an apprentice, and to serve in husbandry, or in any other kind of art, mystery or science before expressed, and shall refuse so to do, that then upon the complaint of such housekeeper made to one justice of the peace of the county wherein the said refusal is or shall be made, or of such householder inhabiting in any city, town corporate or market-town, to the mayor, bailiffs or head officer of the said city, town corporate or market-town, if any such refusal shall there be, they shall have full power and authority by virtue hereof, to send for the same person so refusing: and if the said justice, or the said mayor or head officer, shall think the said person meet and convenient to serve as an apprentice in that art, labour, science or mystery, wherein he shall be so then required to serve, that then the said justice, or the said mayor or head officer, shall have power and authority by virtue hereof, if the said person refuse to be bound as an apprentice, to commit him unto ward, there to remain until he be contented, and will be bounden to serve as an apprentice should serve, according to the true intent and meaning of this present act."

At what age.

By sect. 36, "No person shall by force or colour of this statute be bounden to enter into any apprenticeship, other than such as be under the age of twenty-one years."

But now since the 54 Geo. III. c. 96, s. 2, the above directions about the value of the parent's estate, and such like, are immaterial.

V. Apprentices, how to be bound.

Herein of—1st, The Description of the Instrument;—2d, The Contents of it;—3d, The Execution of it;—4th, The Stamp;—5th, The Memorandum to be printed on the Indenture;—and, 6th, The Enrolment of the Indenture.

(1.) Description of Instrument.

Description of instrument at common law.

At common law, no particular description of instrument is requisite to create an agreement of apprenticeship between the contracting parties.

By statute.

Need not now be by indenture to exercise a trade.

The statute of 5 Eliz. c. 4, required the binding of an apprentice to be by indenture for the purpose of exercising trades. But now by the 54 Geo. III. (a) c. 96, s. 2, this appears no longer absolutely necessary for that purpose, the latter act enacting that it shall be lawful for any person to take or retain, or become an apprentice, though not according to the 25th, 30th, and 41st sections of the statute of Elizabeth, and that indentures, deeds, and agreements in writing, entered into for that purpose, which would be otherwise invalid and ineffectual, shall be valid and effectual in law; with a proviso, however, that such enactment shall not affect the immemorial customs of towns or bye-laws of corporations, &c.

But though by the operation of this statute, the binding need not be by

(a) Before the passing of this act of 54 Geo. III. it was held, under the stat. of Eliz. that no one could be bound an apprentice, so as to render the apprenticeship available, without deed; (Int. Parish Caston and Aicles, 1 Salk. 68; 2 Ld. Raym. 1117; 3 Esp. 189;) and such deed must have been by indenture, (except to gain a settlement, (31 Geo. II. c. 11,) and a deed-poll was not sufficient, although it contained the words "this indenture witnesseth." (Smith v. Birch, 1 Sess. Ca. 284; 1 Bott, 528, S. C.) And a mere agreement to execute an indenture was unavailable; (R. v. Stratton, Burr. 272; Bott, 530, S. C.;) as a memorandum written in the leaf of a parish book; (R. v. Ditchingham, Nol. 169; 4 T. R. 769, S. C.;) and this, though a service of seven years had been performed under it. (Id.) deed, for the purpose of exercising a trade, it is nevertheless in most cases advisable it should be so. 5. How bound.

In order to gain a settlement, the instrument of apprenticeship must be by deed (see 3 W. & M. c. 11, s. 8), though it need not be indented, 31 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 1, (see R. v. Ditchingham, 4 T. R. 770,) title "Poor," Vol. IV. No parol binding would be sufficient. (See R. v. Mawman, Burr. S. C. 290; 1 Bott. 531; R. v. Ditchingham, 4 T. R. 769; R. v. Shipton, 2 Mun. & Ry. 217; 8 B. & Cres. 88, S. C.) To gain a settlement.

If the binding be, as is usual, for more than a year, by the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, 29 Car. II. c. 3, it will not in general be available unless it be in writing, signed by the party to be charged therewith, or his agent, the same being a contract not to be performed within a year. (See Bracegirdle v. Heald, 1 B. & Ald. 722; Snelling v. Lord Huntingfield, 1 C. M. & R. 20; Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 109.) Statute of Frauds.

(2.) Contents of Instrument.

The date is immaterial, but if the binding be by deed, the 35th section of the stat. 8 Anne, c. 9, directs that the indenture shall be dated on the day of execution; but the 45th section does not appear to invalidate an indenture on account of the non-observance of this regulation. The indenture should not be antedated, but the parties will not be precluded from showing that the deed was executed on a day different to that on which it is dated. (4 East, 477.) An indenture antedated two years, in order to evade the provisions of 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 31, is void. (Reg. v. Barmston, Inhabitants of, 7 Ad. & Ell. 858; 3 Nev. & P. 167, S. C.) Date of instrument.

Formerly it was necessary to describe the apprentice in the instrument of binding expressly as such; (Cald. 367; 2 Bott, 222; Chesterfield's case, 2 Salk. 479;) but this is not now necessary; (R. v. Laindon, 8 T. R. 379; R. v. Rainham, 1 East, 531; R. v. Inhabitants of Eccleston, 2 East, 298;) and this notwithstanding the 54 Geo. III. c. 96. In some cases, however, from the non-insertion of the word "apprentice," the instrument might be construed to be a hiring as a servant, and not an apprenticeship, and it is therefore always best to insert the word. (R. v. Coltishall, Nol. Rep. 214. See infra.) Statement of parties to.

The apprentice and master must be named as parties to the instrument. Service under the deed by the infant is not such an adoption of the deed as will cure the omission. (See R. v. Cromford, infra.)

As to the consequences of not stating the true consideration as provided for by the stamp acts, see title "Poor," Vol. IV. Statement of consideration.

As we have already seen, ante, 181, that part of the statute of Elizabeth which requires seven years' apprenticeship previous to setting up in trade, is repealed by the 54 Geo. III. c. 96, and no term of apprenticeship is now, in general, necessary to set up a trade, except in London. Term of binding.

Previous to this act of 54 Geo. III. an indenture for less than seven years was voidable, at the election of the parties; (Guppy v. Jennings, 1 Anst. 256;) though a binding for a less time would confer a settlement. (1 Bott, 530, 541; 2 id. 370.) The deed was never considered absolutely void. (R. v. St. Nicholas, Norwich, Burr. 91; 2 Stra. 1066; Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13; Grant v. Welchman, id. 207; Gye v. Felton, 4 Taunt. 876; and see R. v. St. Gregory, 2 Ad. & Ell. 99; and more fully, title "Poor," Vol IV.) (a)

(a) But this doctrine appears very questionable. The 41st section of the 5 Eliz. declares the indenture to be void in law to all intents and purposes; and where similar words have been used in other statutes, the instruments have been adjudged to be absolutely void. One statute (56 Geo. III. c. 139,) enacted that no indenture shall be valid and effectual; another (28 Geo. III. c. 4,) that all indentures should be absolutely void in law; and another (8 Ann. c. 9, s. 32,) that all deeds should be void and not available for any purpose, unless certain provisions were complied with. Under each of these statutes it has been

5. How bound.

An apprenticeship to two masters, to serve them consecutively in two distinct trades, is valid, and will confer a settlement. (R. v. Louth, 1 M. & R. Mag. Ca. 238; 2 M. & R. 273; 8 B. & Cres. 247, S. C. more fully noticed title "Poor," Vol. IV.)

What stipulations make a contract of apprenticeship.

It is necessary for the purposes of settlement, that the master and apprentice should be named as parties to the deed, and that the former stipulate to instruct and the latter to learn; (Chesterfield's case, 2 Salk. 479; R. v. Inhabitants of Cromford, 8 East, 26;) and if there be no stipulation to serve, there will be no apprenticeship. Indeed, the contract may be invalid for all purposes; and it was held, in Lees v. Whitcomb, (5 Bingh. 34; 2 M. & P. 86, S. C.,) that a written promise by a party, "to remain with the plaintiff for two years for the purpose of learning his business," was invalid for want of mutuality, it not appearing from the mandamus that the plaintiff was bound to retain or teach the defendant during any part of that period. (See Sykes v. Dixon, 1 P. & D. 463.)

If from the whole instrument it appears that the parties contemplated the relation of master and servant, although it contains terms of a contract of apprenticeship, it will not be a perfect contract of apprenticeship, so as to confer a settlement by apprenticeship. (R. v. Tipton, 9 B. & Cres. 888; R. v. Inhabitants of Billinghay, 5 Ad. & Ell. 676.)

On the other hand, where the parties appear from the instrument to have contemplated, above all other things, a contract of master and apprentice, the contract must be deemed to be one of apprenticeship. (See R. v. St. Margaret's, King's Lynn, 6 B. & Cres. 97; R. v. Combe, 8 id. 82; R. v. Tipton, 9 B. & C. 888; R. v. Edingdale, 10 B. & Cres. 739; R. v. Nether Knutsford, 1 B. & Adol. 726; R. v. Crediton, 2 B. & Adol. 493; R. v. Newton, 3 Nev. & M. 306; 1 Ad. & Ell. 238.) All of which cases, and the law upon this subject, being more peculiarly applicable to the question of Settlements, will be found fully noticed, post, title "Poor," Vol. IV.

Form of covenant.

It is not necessary that the covenants of the parent or friend should be introduced into the deed by any particular form of words. The covenant of the apprentice, as well as that of his parent or friend, may be created by any words which import a stipulation that he shall serve; (Moore, 135;) and the usual concluding words, "and for the true performance of all and every the said covenants, each of the said parties bindeth himself to the other," amount to a covenant by all the parties who execute the indenture, for the due performance of those covenants which may be applicable to their respective situations. (Branch v. Ewington, Dougl. 518.)

(3.) Execution of the Instrument.

Execution of instrument.

In order to bind a party, so as to proceed against him for a breach of the instrument of apprenticeship, he must have executed the same.

And before the 54 Geo. III. c. 96, for the purposes of trade, to make a valid apprenticeship, the apprentice himself, whether an infant or an adult, must have executed the indenture. (See R. v. Cromford, 8 East, 25; R. v. Chesterfield, 1 Bott, 527; R. v. Ripon, 9 East, 295.) But this is no longer necessary for that purpose, though it is in order to gain a settlement. (R. v. Arnesby, 3 B. & Ald. 584.)

decided that no settlement ever can be gained under instruments thus declared void. (R. v. Stoke Damerel, 1 Man. & R. 458; 7 B. & C. 563; R. v. Hipswell, 2 Man. & R. 474; 8 B. & C. 466; R. v. Chipping Norton, 5 B. & Ald. 412.) But where a statute, incorporating guardians of the poor of a certain district, enacted that it should be lawful for the corporation to bind out apprentices for any number of years, "provided such child be not bound for a longer term than until he or she shall have attained the age of twenty-two, if a boy, and twenty, if a girl," it was held, that an indenture, by which a boy fifteen and a half was bound for seven years, was voidable only and not void; and that, therefore, a settlement might be gained under it. (R. v. St. Gregory, Canterbury, 4 Nev. & M. 137; 2 Adol. & Ell. 99.)

The execution of the indenture or a counterpart by the master was never necessary, either for the purposes of trade or settlement; (R. v. Fleet, Cald. 31; 2 Bott, 371, S. C.; R. v. St. Peters on the Hill, 2 Bott, 367;) but it is necessary in order to sue him for a breach thereof. 5. How bound.

Where money was given by will to trustees for the purpose of putting out poor boys as apprentices, and the trustees having put a boy out and given a premium of £20 with him, the indenture stated them, as well as the boy and master, to be parties, but it was in fact executed by the boy and master only, and not by the trustees; the indenture was held notwithstanding valid. (R. v. Quainton, 2 M. & Sel. 338; Bott, 16.)

An indenture having been prepared for binding a boy apprentice, the apprentice and his father, being unable to write, desired a third person to write their names opposite two of the seals, and he did so. The indenture was not read to them. The apprentice immediately afterwards took the indenture to the master and left it with him; and afterwards stated that when he did so he considered himself bound; and he went into service under the indenture: It was held, that the indenture was sufficiently executed and delivered. (R v. Inhabitants of Longnor, 4 B. & Ad. 647; 1 Nev. & M. 576, S. C.)

By an act of parliament all persons seised of land of the annual value of 30*l.* in the hundred of Stow, were incorporated by the name of the guardians of the poor within the hundred of Stow, in the county of Suffolk, and were to have a common seal, and the poor of the hundred were to be placed under the management of the corporation, and the directors and acting guardians, whom the corporation were authorised to appoint in the manner therein mentioned, were empowered, with the consent of two justices, to bind any poor child under their management apprentice, in like manner as churchwardens and overseers of the poor, with assent of the justices of the place, were then by law empowered so to do. By indenture the directors and acting guardians of the poor of the hundred of Stow, with the consent of two justices, bound out a poor boy under their management an apprentice for one year, and affixed to the indenture the common seal of the corporation, but it was not otherwise executed by the directors and acting guardians: It was held, that the indenture was invalid. (R. v. Inhabitants of Haughley, 4 B. & Adol. 650; 1 Nev. & M. 525, S. C.)

(4.) Premium and Duty paid, and Stamp on Instrument.

As regards the premium and duty paid on the instrument of apprenticeship, and the stamp regulations with respect thereto, see the same fully noticed post, title "Poor," Vol. IV. as to Settlements.

(5.) Memorandum to be printed on printed Indenture.

By the 5 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 19, "all printed indentures shall have the following memorandum printed under the same, viz. 'The indenture, covenant, article, or contract, must bear date the day it is executed; and what money or other thing is given or contracted for with the clerk or apprentice must be inserted in words at length; and the duty paid to the stamp office if in London, or within the weekly bills of mortality, within one month after the execution, and if in the country and out of the said bills of mortality, within two months, to a distributor of the stamps or his substitute; otherwise the indenture will be void, the master or mistress forfeit 50*l.* and another penalty, and the apprentice be disabled to follow his trade or to be made free.' And if any printer, stationer, or other person shall sell or cause to be sold any such indenture, covenant, &c. without such notice or memorandum being printed under the same, he shall forfeit 10*l.* in like manner." Memorandum to be printed on printed indenture. Penalty on printer for omission.

The effect of this clause is merely to impose a penalty on printers and others selling printed indentures not having the required notice. But it does Effect of enactment.

5. How bound. not operate to make the indenture void in the cases specified in the memorandum to be printed. (Rex v. Harrington, 6 Nev. & M. 165.)

(6.) Enrolment of Indenture.

Enrolment of indentures in London.

By the custom of London (and before the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 14, of other corporate places), the indenture of apprenticeship ought to be enrolled. In London it should be enrolled before the chamberlain within a year; and if it be not so enrolled, upon a petition to the mayor and aldermen a scire facias may be issued to the master to show cause why the indenture has not been enrolled; and if it was through the master's default, the apprentice may sue out his indenture, and be discharged; but it is otherwise if it was through the default of the apprentice, as if he could not come to present himself before the chamberlain, &c.; for they cannot be enrolled unless the apprentice be in Court and acknowledge them. (Bac. Ab. Master and Servant, (A. 2); Roll. Rep. 305; Com. Dig. London, (N. 2); Pulling's Laws of London, 60, 482, 483.) However, it is said, that if the apprentice refuse to appear to have the indenture enrolled, the master may record the indenture, which will be tantamount. (Priv. Lond. 305; Com. Dig. London, (N. 2).)

If the indenture be enrolled, then in an action by the master against the apprentice, it will not be necessary to prove the execution of the deed by the defendant, but otherwise it will. (Skin. 579.) But in no case the omission to enrol can be taken advantage of by the defendant in an action by a third person; (Barber v. Dennis, 6 Mod. 69;) and it has been held, that the custom of London, that an infant who binds himself apprentice shall be liable to be sued, does not extend to an infant bound to a waterman, because the Company of Watermen are but a voluntary society, and being free of that does not make one free of London. (Id.)

Where, by the constitution of a corporation, the indenture ought by custom to have been enrolled within a specified time from the date, the Court of Queen's Bench, by mandamus, compelled the proper officer to enrol it, it not appearing that the apprentice was not bound according to the constitution of the corporation. (R. v. Marshall, 2 T. R. 2; Peake's Cas. 159.)

A bye-law of a corporation, requiring the indentures to be enrolled, has been held so far complied with as not to deprive the apprentice of the benefits accruing from his service where it is only marked by the town clerk as registered, and is not actually enrolled. (R. v. Mayor of Cambridge, 2 Chit. Rep. 144.)

As to the enrolment of indentures in sea service apprentices, see post, "Seamen," Vol. V.

VI. Rights and Liabilities of Master and Parent.

Rights and liabilities of master and parent.

And herein of the Rights—1st. Of the Master for Breach of the Contract; —2. Of the Parent for Breach of Contract;—3d. Of the Apprentice for Breach of Contract;—4th. Of the Master to the Services and Earnings of the Apprentice;—5th. Of the Master in case of harbouring or enticing away the Apprentice; 6th. Of the Master to control and protect the Apprentice; —7th. Of the Liabilities of the Master for misusing the Apprentice;—and, lastly, Concerning the Crimes of an Apprentice.

Master's rights.

(1.) Master's Rights for Breach of Contract.

For breach of contract.

If the apprentice absent himself or neglect his duty, or commit any other breach of the stipulations agreed to be performed by him, the master may support an action against the parent or other person who has by the instrument of apprenticeship agreed for the due performance of such stipulations. (Branch v. Ewington, Doug. 518; Whitley v. Loftus, 8 Mod. 190; Cuming v. Hill, 3 Barn. & Ald. 59; Hughes v. Humphreys, 6 B. & Cres. 686; 9 D. & R. 715, S. C.)

But there is no remedy by action against the apprentice himself if he be an infant; (Gylbert v. Fletcher, Cro. Car. 179, ante, 182;) though, indeed, by the custom of London, an infant is liable to be sued in any court for a breach of his covenant. (Ante, 182.) In ordinary cases the only course is to resort to the magistrates to compel the performance of his duty, as hereafter stated.

6. Rights and Liabilities of Master and Parent.

Parish officers are not in general liable for the breaches of covenant in parish indentures, as they do not in general covenant.

What a breach.

Covenant lies against the father, for the apprentice not accounting. (Elwes v. Vaughan, 1 Lutw. 386.) And in such an action, a request to account need not be stated. The breach in a joint action against a father and son may be assigned against the latter only. (Whitley v. Loftus, 8 Mod. 190; 1 Bott, 528, S. C.) In this latter case, in the indenture of apprenticeship, the father covenanted to pay the apprenticeship-money; the son covenanted to account for his master's goods; and in the conclusion, the father and son each bound themselves for the due performance of all covenants and agreements therein. Per Curiam: "The end of binding the father was to answer the wrong which might be done by his son, and he must answer for any; and the covenant that each did bind himself must be so, where the son is bound to perform the thing for which the covenant was made; and this clause is usually inserted that the covenants may be taken distributively, to wit, that each of the covenantors should perform his part; and this makes the covenant of the son bind the father, who covenanted for him as well as for himself."

So in the case of Branch v. Ewington, Doug. 518; 1 Bott, 535, S. C., which was an action of covenant by the master against the father of the apprentice; the indenture was in the common form of the statute, and for the true performance of all and every the covenants each of the said parties bound himself to the other. The breach assigned was, that the apprentice had absented himself from the service. Lord Mansfield, C. J., said, nothing was clearer than that the father was bound for the performance of the covenants by the son.

So the refusal of the infant on coming of age to fulfil the term of apprenticeship is no answer to an action against the parent or other contracting party for him. Thus, in Cuming v. Hill, 3 B. & Ald. 59, which was an action of covenant on the indenture of apprenticeship, in the common form, by the master against the father of the apprentice, the breach assigned was, that the apprentice had absented himself from the service. Plea, that the apprentice, at the time of making the indenture, was an infant of the age of seventeen years; and that on the 20th October, 1818, he attained his full age of twenty-one years, until which time he faithfully served the plaintiff, according to the meaning of the indenture; and after he had attained the age of twenty-one years, he, on the 21st October, 1818, made void the indenture, and quitted the service of the plaintiff, as it was lawful to do under the statute 5 Elizabeth. To this plea there was a general demurrer. Abraham, in support of the demurrer, cited Branch v. Ewington, 2 Dougl. 518, supra; and Bayley, contrà, being then called upon by the Court, admitted that he could not support the plea. Abbott, C. J. "I am of opinion that the father is liable to this action; he covenants that the son shall faithfully serve; the avoidance of the apprenticeship by the son during the term cannot discharge the father's covenant. The indenture of apprenticeship has existed in this form for more than a century, and has been in universal use. A construction has been put upon the instrument in a court of law, in the case cited from Douglas. I do not see any reason to doubt the propriety of that decision, and I think, therefore, upon principle as well as upon authority, that the defendant is answerable in this action." Bayley, J. "I may bind myself that A. B. shall do an act, although it is in his option whether he will do it or not. The father here binds himself that the son shall serve seven years. It is no answer to an action brought against the father, for the breach of that covenant, for him to say that it was in the option of the son whether he would serve or not. If the son does not choose to do that which the father covenanted he should do, the covenant is then broken, and the father is liable." The other judges concurred. Judgment for plaintiff.

The covenants of the master and father or apprentice are independent covenants, and the performance of the one does not form a condition precedent to the performance of the other; therefore it is no answer to an action by the master against the parent, that the master neglected to perform some other part of the indenture, which did not prevent the son or parent's performance of the covenant, the breach of which is complained of. (See Winston v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 460; 2 D. & R. 465, S. C.; Hughes v. Humphreys, 6 B. & C. 680; 9 D. & R. 715, S. C.; post, 205.)

Where an apprentice ran away, and enlisted, the master, though refusing to receive him, was held not compellable to return any part of the premium. Thus in Cuff v. Brown and others, 5 Price, 297, where a bill for 100*l.*, payable at the end of three years, was given upon entering into an agreement for the articling of an apprentice for the term of five years at the end of three years, and the deed was executed immediately for a term of eight years; but before the end of the three years, the apprentice of his own accord, and without any misconduct on the part of the master, ran away and enlisted for a soldier. Upon his return, after some time, and offering to renew his services, the master was at first inclined to do so, but on hearing of some other of his misconduct refused to receive him, and upon the bill being put in suit by a bonâ fide holder, the court refused to grant an injunction; the premium was a consideration applying to and extending over the whole term of eight years; and as the master performed his contract until it was put an end to by the apprentice, he was entitled to the money arising from the note, as much as if the premium had been paid in money. Upon the objection that the deed was not according to the agreement, the court held, that there was no contradiction between them.

What an unlawful absenting.

With respect to what is a sufficient unlawful absenting to constitute a breach of the contract, it is not every little occasional absence, (though they may be the subject of reprehension,) that will constitute an unlawful absenting. Therefore, it has been held, that the apprentice's staying on a Sunday evening half-an-hour beyond the time allowed him, was not such an unlawful absenting as would enable his master to sue for a breach of the covenant. (Wright v. Gihon, 3 C. & P. 583.)

Where indenture void.

If the indenture be void or voidable there is no remedy by action against any party thereto; (1 Anstr. 256; Burney v. Jennings, 6 Esp. Rep. 8;) though the magistrates would have jurisdiction over the apprentice himself if he surreptitiously and without previous notice absconded from the service. (Cald. 26; 1 Bott, 530; Ashcroft v. Bertles, 6 T. R. 652.)

Where apprenticeship put an end to.

License.

If the contract of apprenticeship has been put an end to, that would form an answer to any alleged breach subsequent to that time. (See post, 196 to 202, as to what is a termination of the apprenticeship.) A parol license to quit the service will not absolutely put an end to a deed of apprenticeship, and the master is at liberty to recall that license, within a reasonable time after, during the term. (See post, 197.)

(2.) Parent's Rights for Breach of Contract.

Rights of parent for master's breach of contract.

If the master be guilty of the non-observance of any of the duties pointed out by the contract of apprenticeship, he is liable to an action thereon, at the suit of the infant, or parent or party with whom he contracts.

What a breach.

The master does not covenant that the apprentice shall stay and learn, and is not liable for his not doing so. (See Hughes v. Humphreys, 9 D. & R. 715; S. C. 6 B. & C. 687, infra.)

We have already seen that the covenants of the master and father and son are mutual and independent of each other, and that the performance of the one does not form a condition precedent to the performance of the other; and in illustration of this rule, the following cases may be referred to.

In an action on an indenture of apprenticeship, the master pleaded that the apprentice refused to obey his orders, and left his house, saying, he would not return again. To which plea it was replied, that afterwards the apprentice returned and offered to obey his commands, but the master would not take him. The court held, that if the apprentice had under those circumstances stopped away an unreasonable time, which ought to have been stated in the rejoinder, the master would have been justified in not taking him back, but that he was not at liberty to turn away, or to refuse to admit his apprentice into his house for misconduct in absenting himself for a few days, but should have sued him by cross-action on his covenants. (Winston v. Linn, 1 B. & Cres. 460; 2 D. & R. 465, S. C.; and see 5 Price, 297, ante, 189.)

6. Rights and Liabilities of Master and Parent.

So in an action of covenant by the father against the master for not teaching and providing for the apprentice. Plea, that up to a certain time defendant did teach, &c., and that then the apprentice, without leave, &c. quitted the defendant's service, and never returned. Replication, that on, &c. defendant refused then or at any other time to receive back the apprentice, and therefore discharged him from his service. Rejoinder, that the apprentice enlisted as a soldier, and that plaintiff never requested defendant to receive back the apprentice when he was able to return to the service. Surrejoinder, that soon after the apprentice enlisted, defendant refused then or at any other time to take him back, and wholly discharged him from his service. It was held, on demurrer, that the sur-rejoinder was bad, not being a sufficient answer to the rejoinder, and that the plea was good, as it disclosed sufficient excuse for the non-performance of the defendant's covenant. (Hughes v. Humphreys, 6 B. & Cres. 680; 9 D. & R. 715, S. C.)

If the apprentice be unwell, and there be any probability of his recovery, so as to be able at all to attend to his emplyment, the master must provide for him, for the master takes him for better for worse, and is to provide for him in sickness and in health; (R. v. Inhabitants of Hales Owen, 1 Stra. 99; 1 Bott, 574;) aliter, if the apprentice be an idiot and incapable of learning. (Id.)

As to the rights of the master and apprentice in case of the death of the master, see post, 199.

In case of death.

The master is not liable on the indenture, if he has not executed or if it be not duly stamped. (See Aldridge v. Ewen, 3 Esp. 188.)

Where indenture not executed or stamped.

(3.) Rights of Apprentice for Breach of Contract.

The rights of an apprentice for a breach of the contract of apprenticeship may be collected from the previous observations as to the rights of the master and parent. He has a right to sue his master in case of non-observance of any of the covenants expressed in the deed.

Rights of apprentice on breach of contract.

The apprentice is not, as we have seen, ante, 182, liable to any action for the non-performance of any stipulations in the indenture whilst he continues an infant, nor afterwards if he disaffirms the contract on coming of age, unless by the custom of London.

As to his rights in case of ill-usage, see post, 201, 203.

(4.) Rights of Master to Services and Earnings of Apprentice.

As an incident to the right of the master to the service of his apprentice, he is entitled to all the earnings and gains which an apprentice may acquire by his labour either in the service of another or in an employment on his own account. (Anon. 12 Mod. 415; Packington v. Chepton Beauchamp, 1 Stra. 582.)

Rights to services and earnings of apprentices.

It is not material to such right of the master whether the apprentice be legally an apprentice or not, it is sufficient to maintain an action if he be so de facto. Thus in the case of Barber v. Dennis, (1 Salk. 98; 6 Mod, 69, S. C.;) the widow of a waterman, who, as was said, by the usage of Watermen's Hall, may take an apprentice, had her apprentice taken from her and put on board a Queen's ship, where he earned two tickets, which came to the defendant's hands, and for which the mistress brought trover; it was argued, that the action would well lie if the apprentice were a legal apprentice, for his possession would be that of his master, and whatever he earned would go to his master. But it was objected, that this supposed apprentice was no legal apprentice pursuant to the act of Elizabeth, and if he were not a legal apprentice the plaintiff had no title. But Lord Chief Justice Holt said, he would understand him an apprentice or servant de facto, and that would suffice against their being wrong doers. In the report in Salkeld the word "servant" is not mentioned. And indeed an action could not have been brought for a servant's wages, either on board or elsewhere, for a master cannot bring an action (Co. Lit. 117 a) for the wages of his servant; though for those of an apprentice he may, because the time of the apprentice is the time of his master, and what is earned by the apprentice is considered as belonging to the master, per Lord Hardwick. (1 Bur. Set. Cas. 91.)

6. Rights and Liabilities of Master and Parent.

In the case of Thompson v. Havelock, (1 Campb. 527,) it was held, that if the master of a ship gave a part of his personal services to one who is not the owner, for a stipulated sum, and the latter pay this into the hands of the owner, the master cannot recover it from him. And Lord Ellenborough said, "Is it to be contended that a servant, who has engaged to devote the whole of his time and his attention to my concerns, may hire out his services or part of them to another? It would have been a different thing if the owner had been suing for this money, but I am clearly of opinion that, at all events, the present plaintiff has no right to it. Under this contract he must have been taken from superintending the defendant's ship, and I do not know how far it might go if such earnings were recoverable in a court of justice. No man should be allowed to have an interest against his duty. I will assume that the plaintiff obtained as high a freight as possible for his owners, and that his services to government were meritorious, still there would be no security in any department of life or business if servants could legally let themselves out in whole or in part. My opinion on the subject is quite decisive; if it be doubted, I beg that a bill of exceptions may be tendered." (1 Campb. 529, n.) In a very learned note of Mr. Hargrave upon the villeinage maxim, quicquid acquiritur servo acquiritur domino, he states it as his opinion, that a master cannot maintain an action for the earnings of his servants (although he may for those of his apprentice) where the service has been without his privity, as the master's proper remedy in all cases except those in which the servant is intentionally employed on his master's account, seems to be an action either against the employer for loss of service if he knew of the first retainer, or against the servant himself for breach of his contract. (Co. Lit. 117 a, (1).) But the master may retain the earnings of his servant when once paid into his hands, as he is equitably entitled to them, and his right can least of all be controverted by the servant. (Barber v. Dennis, 6 Mod. 69; Anon. 12 Mod. 415; Treswell v. Middleton, Cro. Jac. 653; 15 Vin. Abr. Master and Servant (O. 2); 1 Campb. 529, n.)

The prize money gained by an apprentice serving on board a letter of marque ship, does not belong to the master of the apprentice, the usage being proved to be, that such money is the property of the apprentice. Ashurst, J., dissentiente. (Carson v. Watts, 3 Dougl. 350.)

Where the property acquired by the apprentice is some specific chattel, the remedy for it is trover. Where it is money, assumpsit or debt for money had and received will lie. (Skin. 579.) Where wages or other remuneration are claimed for the personal services of the apprentice, the form of action may be assumpsit or debt for work and labour. (Lightly v. Clouston, 1 Taunt. 112; Foster v. Stewart, 3 M. & Sel. 191.)

In either of these actions the execution of the indenture must be proved. (Skin. 579.)

A Court of equity will not in general relieve against the claim of the master for prize money, however large, acquired by an apprentice who has deserted his service; but Lord Hardwicke said, that if a case came before him in equity, where the master, instead of instructing his apprentice in the particular business his parents intended, encouraged and induced him to go to sea and to a different course of life, he should incline to relieve the apprentice against the master's legal right. (1 Ves. 48.)

6. Rights and Liabilities of Master and Parent.

It is observed by Mr. Hargrave, Co. Litt. 117 a, n. 1, that in the 31 Geo. II. c. 10, one object of which is to regulate the pay of seamen in the royal navy, there is a provision that in particular cases the master shall not be entitled to the wages of his apprentice; and that from the 17th section of the 2 & 3 Ann. c. 6, it seems as if the framers of that law doubted whether the master of an apprentice who goes into the royal navy would be entitled to his wages without an express provision.

In cases of impressment of apprentices it is sufficient notice to the captain of the vessel (to render him liable to the master for the wages of the apprentice in case of his subsequent detention) that the apprentice told him that he was such. (Eades v. Vandeput, 5 East, 39, n. a.; 4 Dougl. 1.)

Amount of damages for injury to apprentice.

In an action for permanently injuring the hand of an apprentice, whereby loss of service accrued, the master may recover for the prospective damage, and is not limited to the loss up to the time of the commencement of the action; for the damage alone is not the cause of action, but the illegal act and the damage together; and the master could not bring a fresh action as often as fresh damage resulted. (Hodsoll v. Stallbrass, 3 Per. & D. 200; 11 Ad. & Ell. 301; 9 Car. & P. 63; 8 Dowl. 482, S. C.)

(5.) Rights of Master in case of Enticing away and Harbouring an Apprentice.

Enticing away apprentices.

An action on the case lies by the master for enticing away his servant or apprentice; (R. v. Daniel, 6 Mod. 182; Reevely v. Mainwaring, 3 Burr. 1306; Gunter v. Astor, 4 Moore, 12;) but not an indictment; (id.;) nor does trespass, unless, indeed, the taking were by force. (Id.; Reg. v. Daniel, 1 Salk, 380; 2 Ld. Raym. 1116, S. C.; 3 Salk. 391; Holt, 346.)

If there be no valid and binding contract of service or apprenticeship between the master and apprentice, at the time of the enticing and harbouring, it would seem the action would not lie, though indeed the particular decisions on this head, prior to the 54 Geo. III. c. 96, which repeals part of the 5 Eliz. c. 4, will not now be applicable. (See F. N. B. 168; Westerdell v. Dale, 7 T. R. 310, 314; Keane v. Boycott, 2 H. Bla. 511.) An apprenticeship de facto would always suffice as against a wrongdoer, though there were no legal apprenticeship. (Barber v. Dennis, 6 Mod. 69; 1 Salk. 68, S. C.; see ante, 191.)

An action lies for harbouring a servant or apprentice without any evidence of the defendant's having enticed him away. (See Ashcroft v. Bertles, 6 T. R. 652.) In such action, however, plaintiff must be prepared to show that the defendant harboured the servant or apprentice after the regular notice of the service or apprenticeship, and a requisition to the defendant to deliver him up, or not to harbour him any longer. (See R. v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 745; Fawcett v. Blawes, 2 Lev. 63; Peake, C. N. P. 55; Dinsmore v. Greenbank, Willes, 582.) What is a sufficient notice, see Eades v. Vandeput, (5 East, 39, supra).

As to when the master may waive the tort and sue in assumpsit, see ante, p. 191.

There must be some damage, per quod servitium amisit, proved. (Ex parte Lansdowne, 5 East, 39; Bird v. Randall, Burr. 1352.) The measure of damages is not to be ascertained at the actual loss plaintiff sustained at the time, but for the injury done by causing the apprentice to leave plaintiff's employment. (Guntor v. Astor, 4 Moore, 12.)

(6.) Right of Master to control and protect the Apprentice.

Right to correct apprentice.

The master has more authority over an apprentice than over a common servant, for he may legally correct his apprentice for negligence or other misbehaviour, provided it be done with moderation; whereas if the master or his wife beat any other servant, it is a good cause for departure and action. (1 Bla. Com. 428; F. N. B. 168; 1 Hawk. c. 176.) But in cases of gross misconduct, it is better for the master to apply to a justice of the peace or the sessions, to discharge or punish the apprentice, than to take the law into his own hands. He cannot delegate this authority to another. (9 Co. 76.)

6. Rights and Liabilities of Master and Parent.

Where a master in correcting his apprentice happens to occasion his death, it shall be deemed homicide by misadventure; yet if in his correction he be so barbarous as to exceed all bounds of moderation, and thereby occasion the apprentice's death, it is manslaughter at least; and if he make use of an instrument improper for correction, and apparently endangering the apprentice's life, it is murder. (1 Hawk. c. 29, s. 5. See "Homicide," Vol. III.)

Right to turn him away.

By the custom of London a freeman may turn away an apprentice for gaming. (2 Vern. 291.) But if an apprentice marries without the privity of his master, yet that will not justify his turning him away, but he must take his remedy on the covenant; (2 Vern. 492;) nor can he turn him away on account of his having been absent for a short time, or other breach of covenant; (Winston v. Linn, 1 B. & Cres. 460; 2 D. & R. 765, S. C.; 6 B. & Cres. 680; 9 D. & R. 715, S. C. ante, p. 189, 190;) nor on account of his being sick or so lame as to be unable to work. (R. v. Inhabitants of Hales Owen, 1 Stra. 99; post, 203.)

In any case he cannot send or take the apprentice out of the kingdom; (Hob. 139; Bac. Abr. Mast. & Serv. (E.);) or to a different part of the kingdom to serve another master. (R. v. St. Paul, Bedford, 6 T. R. 454, post, 203.)

Right to custody of his person.

It does not appear that the master is entitled to the custody of the person of his apprentice. If the apprentice has been voluntarily impressed, the master is not entitled to a habeas corpus to bring up his body; (Ex parte Lansdowne, 5 East, 38; R. v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 745;) and if an apprentice leaves his master and enters into the service of another, the first master cannot sue out a habeas corpus, though the apprentice may; (R. v. Reynolds, 6 T. R. 497;) or the chief justice may issue his warrant to bring the apprentice before him. (1 Leach, C. L. 233; R. v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 745.)

If the apprentice depart out of his master's service and the master happen after to lay hold of him, yet the master may not in this case beat or forcibly compel his apprentice against his will to return or tarry with him, or to do his service, but either he must complain to the justice of the departure or he may bring an action against the parent on his covenant. (Dalt. c. 121, p. 281, 282.)

To defend his person.

As incident to the right of the master to the service of his apprentice, he may justify such a battery as is necessary in his defence. (Rol. Abr. 546, D. pl. 2; Bac. Abr. Mast. & Serv. (P.); post, "Assault," Vol. I.)

(7.) Liability of Master for Misusing Apprentice.

Misusing apprentice.

We have already seen how far the master will be liable for a breach of his contract, ante, p. 190, or for improperly correcting his apprentice, ante, 193.

Under the provisions of the 5 Eliz. c. 4, and 20 Geo. II. c. 19, if the master neglect to instruct, or shall misuse or evil treat his apprentice, or the apprentice shall have just cause to complain, the justices at sessions may discharge the apprentice and have a power of ordering a restitution of the premium; see further post, p. 202, 206, and 1 Saund. 313, n.)

And by 20 Geo. II. c. 19, two justices of the peace are authorised, in the case of a parish apprentice, or any other, where more than 5*l.* (increased to 25*l.* by 4 Geo. IV. c. 29) has not been paid as a premium, to discharge the apprentice in case the master has been guilty of any misusage, refusal of necessary provisions, cruelty, or other illtreatment towards his apprentice. (See further, post, p. 206, 210.)

But the justices cannot administer punishment to masters for their faults, but only discharge their apprentices. (Hawkesworth's case, 1 Saund. 316.)

Independently of the terms of the indenture, and the power of the magistrates, if the master, without cause, beat or ill-use his apprentice, an action may be supported against him; and an indictment at common law may be supported against a master for not providing sufficient food for an apprentice or servant of tender years and under his dominion or control, whereby the infant becomes sick. (R. v. Ridley, 2 Camp. 650; Russ. & R. C. C. 20; see forms of indictment, post, (Nos. 16, 17).) 6. Rights and Liabilities of Master and Parent.

In the indictment against Elizabeth Ridley, (2 Camp. 650,) there was no averment that the child was of tender years, and under the control of the defendant; and as no evidence could be given of actual ill-usage, by exposure to the weather or otherwise, the prosecutor consented to an acquittal; for Mr. Justice Lawrence held, that unless the servant was of tender years, and under the control of the party, the neglect to supply her with food would be a mere breach of contract; and, as she might leave the service, remonstrate, or complain to a magistrate, no indictment could be supported; but he thought that if the infant be of tender years, and so under the dominion of the defendant as to be unable to take any steps to relieve herself, a nonfeazance respecting her would be an indictable offence. And this would appear from the case in which it has been holden murder in a master, if his apprentice die for want of food. (1 Leach, 137.) And in the case of R. v. Friend and Wife, (Russ. & R. C. C. 20,) it was held an indictable offence to neglect to supply necessaries to a child, servant, or apprentice, whom a person is bound by duty or contract to provide for, if such child, &c. be of tender years, and unable to provide for itself. The allegation, therefore, of the child, &c. being of tender years, and of inability to provide for himself, is material. (Id. And see "Children," Vol. I.; and "Homicide," Vol. III.)

(8.) Crimes of Apprentices.

At common law, an apprentice, without any regard to age, might be guilty of felony, in feloniously taking away the goods of his master, though they were goods under his charge, as a shepherd, &c.; and may, at this day, for any such offence, be indicted as for a felony at common law; (1 Hale's P. C. 505, 666; 2 East's P. C. 562;) but at common law, if a man had delivered goods to his apprentice to keep or carry for him, and he carried them away animo furandi, this was considered only a breach of trust, and not felony. This, however, was altered by some subsequent statutes, as to apprentices above eighteen years old, and by others of above fifteen. (See 21 Hen. VIII. c. 7; 27 Hen. VIII. c. 17; 12 Ann. c. 7; these are repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27; but the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, still makes the offence a felony. See post, "Larceny," Vol. III.) Crimes of Apprentices.

If an apprentice, representing himself not to be one, enlist in the army and obtain money on that account, he may be indicted as a cheat. (2 East's P. C. 822; post, "Cheat," Vol. I.)

Although an infant is not liable for money received by him for the plaintiff's use under a contract express or implied, yet, where he wrongfully embezzles money, he may sometimes be sued for money had and received. (Bristowe v. Eastman, 1 Esp. Rep. 172; Peake, N. P. C. 223, ante, 182.)

VII. Assigning and turning over Apprentices.

The apprenticeship is a personal trust and confidence imposed on the master, so that the master cannot of his own will, either at law or equity, assign it over to another. (Coventry v. Woodhall, Hob. 134; Bac. Abr. Master and Servant, (E.)) Moreover, the person of a man is not, in strict law, assignable; (Baxter v. Burfield, 2 Stra. 1266; 1 Bott, 581; R. v. East Bridgeford, Burr. 133; 1 Bott, 581, S. C.;) and an award that an apprentice shall be assigned is void. (Horne v. Blake, 2 Stra. 1267.) Cannot be assigned in general.

Even justices, though they have power on complaint to discharge an apprentice, cannot turn him over to a fresh master, that being beyond their By justices.

7. Assigning of.

jurisdiction. (R. v. Barnes, 1 Stra. 48; Bac. Abr. Master and Servant, (E.); post, 202, 206.)

May by consent.

By consent of all parties the apprentice may be assigned; but the master assigning, and the apprentice himself consenting, will not make him an apprentice to the assignee within the 5 Eliz c. 4. (Dalt. c. 58, p. 143; R. v. Channel, 1 Bott, 578; 3 Keb. 519, S. C.)

In London.

By the custom of London a freeman may turn over his apprentice to another freeman, and such master shall have the same benefit of the apprentice's covenant, as shall the parent or apprentice of the covenants on the part of the master, as if he had been originally bound to him. (March. 3; R. v. ——, 1 Keb. 255; Com. Dig. London; Pulling's Laws of London, 482.)

To gain a settlement.

But though indentures of apprenticeship be not assignable in strict law, yet for the purposes of gaining a settlement at least, such assignment is not void, but voidable only, and amounts to a contract between the two masters; so that it is good by way of covenant, but not as an assignment to pass an interest; like the case of assigning a bond, which, though it be not assignable in point of interest, yet it is a covenant that the assignee shall receive the money to his own use. (Caister v. Eccles, 1 Ld. Raym. 683; 1 Bott, 580. See further post, "Poor," Vol. IV.)

As to an apprenticeship to two masters, see ante, 185.

Stamps.

The assignment requires a stamp; for it is not within the exemption of stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 184, which clearly refers to the case of a hiring. Where, by indenture of apprenticeship, the apprentice agreed to serve for five and a half years, but at the end of two years he was transferred to a new master, to serve him as apprentice for the remainder of the term of five and a half years, with a stipulation, that, for certain considerations, his new master should provide for him during one year longer than the original term, and the assignment had only a stamp of 1*l.* affixed to it; it was held that this was sufficient, and that the deed of transfer did not require an additional stamp for the new term of one year. (Morris v. Cox, 9 Dowl. 661; 3 Scott, N. R. 216, S. C.; R. v. St. Paul's, Bedford, 6 T. R. 452. See the schedule of the Stamp Act, post, "Poor," Vol. IV.)

VIII. Dissolution of Apprenticeships.

Dissolution of apprenticeship, how.

A Dissolution of the Apprenticeships may take place either, 1st. By Consent; 2dly. By Effluxion of Time, or by coming of Age; 3dly. By Death; 4thly. By Bankruptcy or Insolvency; 5thly. By Misconduct; or 6thly. By the Interference of Justices, &c.

(1.) By Consent.

By consent.

It is a general rule that the parties to a contract, whether under seal or otherwise, may by mutual consent cancel it, unless sometimes where an interest in real property has passed. (Roe d. Earl of Berkeley v. Abp. of York, 6 East, 94; 4 Cruise, 369.)

To cancel an indenture of apprenticeship, the consent of all the parties to the binding should be obtained. (Burr. 562, 766.) If the apprentice be an infant, his master cannot discharge the indentures, at all events by his consent alone; (R. v. Austrey, Burr. S. C. 441; 2 Bott, 404; R. v. Inhabitants of Hindringham, 6 T. R. 557; see R. v. Gwinear, 3 Nev. & M. 297; S. C. 1 Ad. & Ell. 153;) but it may perhaps be done by his father's consent, or that of any other person having the legal superintendence of his minority; (R. v. St. Mary Kallender, Burr. 274; 2 Bott, 402, S. C.; R. v. Weddington, Burr. 766; 2 Bott, 406, S. C.;) and it seems an infant may consent to the discharge, if it is clearly for his benefit, as where his master runs away in debt; (R. v. Mountsorrel, 3 M. & Sel. 460;) but this benefit must clearly appear. (R. v. Wigston, 3 B. & C. 484; 5 D. & R. 339, S. C.)

8. Dissolution of Apprenticeships.

How and what amounts to.

In order to discharge the indentures, they should be actually cancelled, or mutually exchanged or given up, or at least something done and acted upon animo cancellandi, which the law considers as an equivalent to a cancellation. (R. v. Spawnton, Burr. 801; Cald 126; R. v. Parish of the Holy Trinity, 3 T. R. 605; Roe d. Earl of Berkeley v. Apb. of York, 6 East, 89.) Lord Mansfield was of opinion, in R. v. Inhabitants of Harberton, 1 T. R. 139, that it would have been more convenient if the Court had never gone further than to inquire whether the indentures had been actually cancelled or delivered up.

A verbal or written agreement to cancel does not cancel a deed, the agreement should be by deed. (R. v. Oakhampton, 1 Dick. J. 91; R. v. Bow, 4 M. & Sell. 383; 2 Ld. Raym. 1116.)

Where an agreement has been entered into by the mother of the apprentice and the master to separate, but the indenture remained in the hands of a third party, and was never delivered up or applied for, it was held, that such agreement was not sufficient to put an end to the first apprenticeship. (R. v. Skeffington, 3 B. & Ald. 382; and see R. v. Inhabitants of Harberton, 1 T. R. 139; R. v. Inhabitants of Bow, 4 M. & Sel. 383.)

The cancelling must be effected by the original master, and cannot be so by a third person, whom the apprentice may be serving at the time, without the consent of the master. (1 Bott, 613.)

Where a master received money of an apprentice of full age to vacate his indentures, and gave the apprentice a discharge, but kept the indentures uncancelled, it was held the apprenticeship was dissolved. (R. v. Justices of Devonshire, Cald. 32.)

On the other hand, where the apprentice agreed to pay 7*l.* to the master, who was to keep the indentures till that sum was paid, the master all that time keeping a control over the apprentice, the indenture was held not cancelled. (R. v. Chipping Warden, 8 T. R. 109.) So where a boy bound out by a parish as an apprentice in husbandry, till he should be twenty-one years of age, served the master first in husbandry and afterwards as a miner; he then left his master, and went to live with his own father, (who was a miner,) and worked with his father at the same mine at which he had worked with his master. The master afterwards agreed with the father that the apprentice should remain with the father, and the indenture be given up on a subsequent day, upon the payment of a sum of money. On the day appointed, which was before the passing of stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 139, the money was paid, and the indenture given up to the father. The son was then under age. He worked with the father as a miner till his majority, when the indenture was given up to him by his father. From his first coming to his father, the father had received his wages and maintained him: it was held, that even supposing the parties to have had power to dissolve the apprenticeship, and to have intended to do so, it was not dissolved till the money was paid; and that a residence of forty days between the making of the agreement and the payment of the money, was a residence under the apprenticeship, and conferred a settlement. (R. v. Inhabitants of Gwinear, 1 Ad. & Ell. 152; 3 Nev. & M. 297, S. C.) So an agreement to let off the apprentice for a guinea, which was not paid. (R. v. Shebbear, 1 East, 73 a.) So where, by indorsement on a deed of apprenticeship, the master agreed to cancel it, provided the apprentice "made no engagement or entered into any person's service in the town of N.;" it was held, that his setting up a trade there was a breach of the condition, and that, therefore, the deed of apprenticeship remained uncancelled. (Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13.)

It has been laid down, that an apprentice, a minor, by entering as a volunteer in her Majesty's service, with his master's consent, does not thereby dissolve the apprenticeship; (R. v. Hindringham, 6 T. R. 557; see 6 B. & Cres. 620; 9 D. & R. 715, S. C.;) nor does he so by serving with one who covenants to indemnify the first master. (R. v. Charles, Burr. 706.)

An agreement between a master and a parish apprentice, that the apprentice shall work when he pleases on his own account, and pay the master so much a week in satisfaction of his service, is not a dissolution of the indentures; (R. v. Offerton, 1 Bott, 611;) nor are the indentures of a parish apprentice cancelled by being delivered up by the son of the master to whom he was bound; (R. v. Nolton, 1 Bott, 609;) and although the master, after three years' service, tell the apprentice to go about his business and work for himself, and he accordingly works with other persons for the remainder of the term, and applies the money he earns to his own use without his master's requiring him to account, or knowing where he was, yet if the indentures are neither cancelled or delivered up, there is no dissolution of the apprenticeship. (R. v. St. Luke's, Burr. 542; 1 Bott, 608, S. C.)

8. Dissolution of Apprenticeships.

When a contract of apprenticeship may be treated as rescinded.

Defendant agreed with plaintiff's father to receive plaintiff (who was a minor) into his service on trial, and to take him an apprentice if he approved it. Plaintiff went and worked for defendant nearly two years. Several applications were made during that time by the father, to take him on paying 10*l.*: this was agreed to; but defendant shortly after quarrelled with plaintiff, and told him to go home about his business. Plaintiff went home, and on the father applying to the defendant for an explanation, the latter told him to go and do his worst. The father then caused a letter to be written to defendant by his attorney, requiring him either to take plaintiff as his apprentice, or recompense him for his work, but no satisfactory answer was given, and plaintiff, by his next friend, brought an action to recover compensation for his service. The judge put it to the jury on these facts, whether or not the defendant's conduct was such as warranted the father in considering the contract for an apprenticeship as rescinded; and he further stated, that if they thought it was, they were to give plaintiff such compensation for his work as they thought proper. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, with damages, by way of compensation for his services; and the Court held this direction was right. (Phillips v. Jones, 1 Ad. & Ell. 333.)

In another case, A. placed his son with B., a chemist and druggist, who intended to pass his examination at Apothecaries' Hall, but was delayed in so doing by ill health. It was intended that A.'s son should be apprenticed to B., but he stayed for five years with B., having his board and lodging, and being taught the business of a chemist and druggist, and he then left B., and was never apprenticed to him. Under these circumstances it was considered, that to entitle B. to recover for the board, lodging and teaching of A.'s son, the jury must be satisfied that A.'s son was placed with B. upon an agreement or understanding that B. was to be paid for his board and lodging and for teaching him. But that if the jury were not so satisfied, or if they thought that A.'s son was not to be paid for till B. had passed his examination at Apothecaries' Hall, and that A.'s son was then to be apprenticed to B. as an apothecary, then B. was not entitled to recover anything for the board and lodging and teaching during the five years. (Attwaters v. Courtney, 1 Car. & M. 51.) Where the apprenticeship was to two partners, it was made a question, but not decided, in a recent case, whether a dissolution of the partnership puts an end to the apprenticeship. See Lloyd v. Blackburn, 9 M. & W. 363.

See further as to vacating an apprenticeship, post, title, "Poor," Vol. IV.

(2.) By Effluxion of Time, or by Apprentice coming of Age

By effluxion of time.

It is scarcely necessary to observe, that on the expiration of the term of the apprenticeship agreed on by the indenture, the same is dissolved.

By infant's coming of age.

We have already seen that no action lies against an infant for a breach of the indenture of apprenticeship during his infancy, ante, 182; besides this, the apprentice has the power, in some cases, of determining the contract on his coming of age. By some regulations relative to parish apprentices, they are not bound to serve after they are of age, post, 213. In other cases, also, of voluntary bindings, though the apprentice himself may have executed the indenture, it has been considered that he is free from all liability to serve the instant he comes of age; and in the case of Ex parte Davis, (5 T. R 715,) Lord Kenyon said, "it is clear that the apprentice must be discharged · every indenture of an infant is voidable at his election, and in such cases the master trusts to the covenant of those who engaged for the infant. Where the binding is under the authority of an act of parliament, that does away the power of electing to vacate the indenture. But I know of no act which prohibits the party, in a case like the present, to make such election upon coming of age. According to the argument of the counsel against the rule, an infant, who improvidently bound himself to the age of fifty or upwards, would be bound to serve till that time, but it is impossible to support such a proposition. This apprentice ought not to have been bound longer than till he was twenty-one, and we ought now to discharge her." The other judges concurred.

8. Dissolution of Apprenticeships.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 36, however, it is enacted, "that no person who shall be of full age shall be compellable to enter into any apprenticeship:" yet the 26th and 28th sections appear to require that the apprenticeship shall not determine till the age of twenty-four; (and see the observations in R. v. Inhabitants of St. John, Bedwardine, 5 B. & Adol. 173; 2 Nev. & M. 86, S. C.;) and the 13th section enacts, "that apprentices shall be bound for the years in the indentures contained;" and the 18th Geo. III. c. 47, which enacts, "that no parish apprentices shall be bound to serve after they are of age," does not extend to any other description of apprentices.

How disaffirmance by infant to be made.

It has been held, that the apprentice, when he intends dissolving the contract on his coming of age, ought regularly to declare his intention to dissolve it, and not to absent himself in a surreptitious manner; (1 Nolan, 348; Ashcroft v. Bertles, 6 T. R. 645; Cald. 26; and see Goode v. Harrison, 5 Barn. & Ald. 147;) sed vide Ex parte Gill, (7 East, 376,) where the Court observed, that if an apprentice, when brought before a magistrate, show that he is of age, and that, therefore, he absented himself from his master's service, and they disregard such defence and commit him, he has his remedy against them.

As an adult is bound by his contract with an infant, (Holt v. Clarencieux, 2 Stra. 937,) the master himself cannot, without the concurrence of the apprentice, put an end to the apprenticeship on account of the apprentice having come of age. and if a person of full age bind himself apprentice for a term, he could not legally vacate his contract. (R. v. Ripon, 9 East, 295; Williams v. Brown, 3 B. & P. 69.)

(3.) By Death.

By death of master covenant to instruct dissolved.

It hath been said that if the master die, the apprentice goes to the executor or administrator to be maintained, if there be assets; but the executor or administrator may bind him to another master for the remaining part of his time. But in the case of R. v. Peck (1 Salk. 68; and see ante, p. 195), Eyre, J., held that an apprenticeship is a personal trust between the master and servant, and determines by the death of either of them; and by the death of either of them the end and design of the apprenticeship cannot be obtained, and it may be the executor is of another trade. He admitted that covenant would lie against the executor; but in that there is no inconvenience, because the executor may make his defence by pleading no assets, or debts of a higher nature. Holt, C. J., said, that by the custom of London, the executor shall put the apprentice to another master of the same trade; and that in other places it would be very hard to construe the death of a master to be a discharge of the covenants; he said it had been held that the covenant for instruction failed, but that he still continues an apprentice with the executor as to maintenance. For the interest of a master in his apprentice is a mere personal trust: and the indentures not being assignable in his lifetime, except by custom, and with the consent of the apprentice, the master's executors cannot claim his services, neither can they maintain debt on a bond for performance of the covenant of the indenture, unless his executors be named; (and see Barter v. Burfield, 1 Bott, P. L. 581; 2 Str. 1266, S. C.) (a)

(a) The words in Cro. Eliz. 553, are these: Covenant lies against an executor in every case, although he be not named; unless it be on such a covenant as is to be performed by the person of the testator, which they cannot perform. (Hyde v. Dean of Windsor, Cro. Eliz. 553.)

8. Dissolution of Apprenticeships.

But not covenant to provide necessaries.

If the master has also covenanted to find him in meat, drink, and clothes, and other necessaries during the time, it has been held, that his death does not dispense with this condition, but his executors are at common law bound to perform it, as far as they have assets. (Wadsworth v. Gye, Sid. 216; 1 Keb. 761, 820, S. C.; Walker v. Hull, 1 Lev. 177.)

Where two masters.

Where an apprentice is bound to two masters, on the death of one he becomes the apprentice of the survivor. (R. v. St. Martin, Exeter, 1 Burr. & W. 69.)

In London.

By the custom of London it is said, that in case of the master's dying, the executor must put the apprentice to another master of the same trade. (R. v. Peck, 1 Salk. 66; Mayor, &c. of Winton v. Wilks, id. 204; 2 Ld. Raym. 1129, S. C.; March. 3; Bowchier v. Coster, 1 Keb. 250; Bohun, Priv. London, 339; Pulling's Laws of London, 482.)

Settlement.

And for the purposes of settlement it has been held, that the executor, or even a widow, before taking out administration, may continue the relation of master and apprentice. (1 Nolan, 350; R. v. Inhabitants of East Bridgford, 2 Stra. 1115; Cald. 62; post, "Poor," Vol. IV.)

Parish or sea apprentice.

As to the effect of the death of the master in the case of a parish apprentice, see post, "Apprentices, Parish;" in the case of Sea Service, post, "Apprentices, Sea Service."

Return of premium.

In some cases the Court of Chancery have interfered to compel the executors of the master to return a part of the premium. Thus in Soam v. Bowden and Eyles, M. 30 Geo. II., Canc. Finch. Rep. 396, the master received with the apprentice 250*l.* and died within two years, the apprentice having for that time been employed only in inferior affairs. It was decreed, after debts on specialties paid, that the executors repay the 250*l.* as a debt due on simple contract, deducting after the rate of 20*l.* a year for the maintenance of the apprentice during the time he lived with his master; (and see 1 Bott, 563; 1 Vern. 460; Bac. Abr. Mast. & Serv. (E.) See post, 205.)

(4.) By Bankruptcy or Insolvency.

By bankruptcy of master.

The bankruptcy or insolvency of the master did not formerly, it seems, release him from his obligation to instruct and maintain the apprentice, or justify the apprentice in misbehaving or absenting himself; (Inhabitants of Buckington v. Inhabitants of St. Michael, Lebington, 2 Ld. Raym. 1352; 1 Stra. 582, S. C.; Parish of Buckington v. Parish of Shepton Bechamp, 8 Mod. 235;) and formerly an apprentice who had paid a premium, and whose master became bankrupt before the apprenticeship expired, could only come in as a creditor, and prove for a proportionate part of his apprentice fee; (Ex parte Sandley, 1 Atk. 149;) although the commissioners, instead of this, usually recommended it to the creditors to allow him a gross sum out of the estate, in order to apprentice him to another master. (Barwell v. Ward, 1 Atk. 259.)

Return of premium.

But now, by stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 49, "Where any person shall be an apprentice to a bankrupt at the time of issuing of the commission against him, the issuing of such commission shall be and enure as a complete discharge of the indenture or indentures whereby such apprentice was bound to such bankrupt; and if any sum shall have been really and bonâ fide paid by or on the behalf of such apprentice to the bankrupt as an apprentice fee, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, upon proof thereof, to order any sum to be paid to or for the use of such apprentice which they shall think reasonable, regard being had in estimating such sum to the amount of the sum so paid by or on behalf of such apprentice to the bankrupt, and to the time during which such apprentice shall have resided with the bankrupt previous to the issuing of the commission."

A fiat of bankruptcy having issued against the master of an apprentice, but which was afterwards annulled by means of a composition between the bankrupt and his creditors: it was held, that the indentures of apprenticeship were discharged. (Allen v. Costa, 1 Beav. 274.)

Where the apprentice fee was paid under an agreement for the apprenticeship, but from mere inattention no indenture had in fact been executed, it was held to be a case within the section of the statute. (Ex parte Haynes, 2 Glyn & J. 122.) 8. Dissolution of Apprenticeships.

And where at the time of the bankruptcy the father of an apprentice was indebted to the bankrupt in 200*l.* for an apprentice fee for his son, who had been apprenticed two years, the Court of Review on petition allowed 100*l.* to be retained. (Exp. Soames, 3 Deac. & C. 320.)

Allowance for salary.

And by sect. 48 of the same statute, "Where any bankrupt shall have been indebted, at the time of issuing the commission against him, to any servant or clerk of such bankrupt, in respect of the wages or salary of such servant or clerk, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, upon proof thereof, to order so much as shall be so due as aforesaid, not exceeding six months' wages or salary, to be paid to such servant or clerk out of the estate of such bankrupt, and such servant or clerk shall be at liberty to prove under the commission for any sum not exceeding such last-mentioned amount."

By discharge under Insolvent Act.

There are not, it appears, any provisions in the Insolvent Act which discharge an apprenticeship contract.

The 32 Geo. III. c. 57, s. 8, authorising the discharge, &c., of apprentices, where the master becomes insolvent, &c., only relates to parish apprentices. See post, "Apprentices, Parish."

(5.) By Misconduct.

By misconduct of master.

The misconduct of the master cannot of itself avoid an indenture of apprenticeship, and the only remedy at common law is by action on the indenture. We shall, however, hereafter see that it will be a ground for a magistrate's ordering it to be cancelled. (Post, 203.)

Of apprentice or parent.

It has been indeed said, that the misconduct of the apprentice or parent is a ground for the master's dissolving the indenture of apprenticeship; (Shepherd v. Maidstone, 10 Mod. 144;) but inasmuch as the covenants of each party are independent covenants, this doctrine seems very questionable, and cannot, perhaps, be supported. (See Winston v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 460; 2 D. & R. 465, S. C. ante, p. 189; also Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13; 1 Roll. Ab. 124; Cornwallis v. Savery, 2 Burr. 773; Hughes v. Humphreys, 6 B. & C. 680; 9 D. & R. 715, S. C.)

It is clear that an apprentice cannot avoid his indenture by his own delinquency; (Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13;) which was an action of trespass against two justices, for committing an apprentice to the house of correction under the authority of 20 Geo. II. (post, 210) for running away. The indenture was for less than four years, and it was insisted that it was a void indenture; but the Court of Queen's Bench were clearly of opinion, that such indentures were only voidable and not void, that under the circumstances of the case the apprentice attempted to avoid them only by taking advantage of his own misconduct, which misconduct was the subject of this ex parte punishment.

(6.) By Award, or by Justices, or by Queen's Bench.

By award.

An apprenticeship may also be put an end to by means of a reference and award, as appears from the case of Green v. Waring, 1 Bla. Rep. 475.

By justices.

The contract may be determined by the magistrates, in consequence of an application to one of them, founded on gross misconduct on the part of the master or of the apprentice; but as this is only a part of the general jurisdiction of justices of the peace over apprentices, given to them by statute, it will be considered in the next section.

Jurisdiction of Queen's Bench.

An apprentice had at the age of eighteen bound himself till twenty-five; after he was twenty-one years of age, he had, at the suit of his master, been committed upon a conviction before two magistrates, on 20 Geo. II. c. 19, for absenting himself from his service. The case of M. A. Davis was cited in support of a motion for a habeas corpus to bring up the apprentice. Upon the return to the writ, the conviction was set out, and upon the face of it there appeared no objection to have been made by the apprentice, when before the magistrates, on the ground of his right of election to continue after he came of age. The Court remanded him, the conviction appearing regular; and said that the Court of Queen's Bench had no authority to direct the discharge of the apprentice from his indentures, and that in R. v. Davis the report was mistaken in that respect. Lawrence, J., said he did not know of a habeas corpus to discharge an apprentice from indentures. How can this Court undertake to discharge men from their covenants upon a habeas corpus? (Ex parte Gill, 7 East, 376; 1 Bott, 718; post, 206.)

8. Dissolution of Apprenticeships.

It is suggested, that in Davis's case, she was in the care or custody of some person, and that the habeas corpus was to bring her up to be discharged. (3 Smith's Rep. 372.)

IX. Jurisdiction of Justices and Sessions in Disputes between Masters and Apprentices.

Justices' jurisdiction in disputes.

And herein of the Jurisdiction of Justices—1st. In Apprenticeships on compulsory Bindings, &c. under stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4;—2nd. In Apprenticeships where no Premium, or not more than 25*l.* Premium, is paid.

(1.) Apprenticeships on compulsory Bindings, &c. under Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4.

As to apprenticeships in general.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 35, a single magistrate is constituted a mediator between the disputing parties; and if they submit to his decision, it will be binding; but if the master will not, the magistrate cannot settle the dispute, but must take a bond from the master to appear at the next sessions, at which four at least of the justices shall, if they think meet, discharge the apprentice from his apprenticeship, or punish him. So that the single magistrate has merely an authority to endeavour to settle the matter amicably between the parties; but in case of a disagreement by the master, the parties must resort to the sessions, who indeed may be applied to in the first instance. (See 1 Saund. 316, n.) In practice, proceedings under this statute are rarely resorted to; they are generally adopted under the provisions of the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, or 33 Geo. III. c. 55. (Post, 206, 207, 210.)

Differences to be heard by one justice.

The following are the words of that enactment—"If any such master shall misuse or evil intreat his apprentice, or that the said apprentice shall have any just cause to complain, or the apprentice do not his duty to his master, then the said master or apprentice being aggrieved, and having cause to complain, shall repair unto one justice of peace within the said county, or to the mayor or other head officer of the city, town corporate, market town, or other place where the said master dwelleth, who shall by his wisdom and discretion take such order (a) and direction between the said master and his apprentice, as the equity of the cause shall require; and if for want of good conformity in the said master, the said justice of peace or the said mayor or other head officer cannot compound and agree the matter between him and his apprentice, then the said justice, or the said mayor or other head officer, shall take bond of the said master to appear at the next sessions then to be holden in the said county, or within the said city, town corporate or market town, to be before the justices of the said county, or the mayor or head officer of the said town corporate or market town, if the said master dwell within any such; and upon his appearance and hearing of the matter before the said justices, or the said mayor or other head officer, if it be thought meet unto them to discharge the said apprentice of his apprenticehood, that then the said justices, or four of them at the least, whereof one to be of the quorum; or the said mayor or other head officer, with the assent of three other of his brethren, or men of best reputation within the said city, town corporate or market town, shall have power by authority hereof, in writing (b) under their hands and seals, to pronounce and declare, that they have discharged the said apprentice of his apprenticehood, and the cause thereof; and the said writing so being made and enrolled by the clerk of the peace or town clerk, amongst the records that he keepeth, shall be a sufficient discharge for the said apprentice against his master, his executors and administrators; the indenture of the said apprenticehood, or any law or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding. And if the default shall be found to be in the apprentice, then the said justices, or the said mayor or other head officer, with the assistance aforesaid, shall cause such due correction and punishment to be ministered unto him, as by their wisdom and discretion shall be thought meet."

or may correct him.

By 54 Geo. III. c. 96, s. 3, ante, 181, it is enacted that justices may determine complaints respecting apprentices as heretofore.

If any such Master.]—This clause of the statute extends not only to those apprentices mentioned therein, but also to all manner of apprentices, wherever bound, or to whatever trade they are bound, though indeed there were formerly doubts on this point. (R. v. Collingbourne, 2 Ld. Raym. 1410; 1 Stra. 663, S. C.; 1 Bott, 573.)

To what apprenticeships the statute extends.

And even if the master be a freeman of the city of London, and the indentures are enrolled in London, the sessions for the county of Middlesex have jurisdiction to discharge the apprentice, notwithstanding the saving in section 40 of the act as to privileges of London. (Id.; post, 204.)

But it seems that the enactment does not apply to cases where a premium is given with the apprentice, but only to compulsory bindings without premiums. (Per Alderson, B., in East v. Pell, 4 M. & W. 665.)

Shall misuse or evil intreat his Apprentice.]—An apprentice to a surgeon was sent by his master to the East Indies; it was adjudged that the master cannot compel his apprentice to go beyond the sea, except the master go with him; but he may send him to any part of England. (Coventry v. Windall, Brownl. 67; 1 Bott, 569, S. C.; ante, p. 194.)

Causes of complaint against master.

But otherwise, if it be expressly agreed, or the nature of the apprenticeship doth import it; as if the master be a merchant adventurer, or sailor. (Hob. 134, S. C.)

Neglect on the part of the master to instruct his apprentice in the mysteries of that trade, which he was bound to him to learn, is a sufficient cause for justice's interference, and of discharge. (R. v. Amies, 1 Bott, 574.)

An apprentice was discharged, the master having used him unkindly, and refusing to provide for and entertain him; but by the Court:—This is not a good ground for the discharge; for there is a power to oblige the master to receive and entertain the apprentice; using him unkindly is too loose. (R. v. Eastman, 2 Str. 1014; 1 Bott, 575, S. C.)

Or the Apprentice do not his Duty to his Master.]—An order reciting that Joseph Higgen was bound out by indenture, as the statute requires, to John Parks, and being lame and having the king's evil, and in the opinion of surgeons incurable, therefore the justices discharged the master from his apprentice. It was moved to confirm the order, because the master cannot now have the end of the binding, which was the service of his apprentice. But the order was quashed by the Court, for the master takes the apprentice for better and worse, and is to provide for him in sickness and in health. (R. v. Hales Owen, 1 Str. 99; 1 Bott, 572, S. C.; ante, p. 194.)

Causes of complaint against apprentice.

However, where a boy was put apprentice, and after three years' service he plainly appeared to be an idiot, incapable of learning the trade, this defect was holden to be good cause of discharge. (Anon. 1 Bott, 570; Skin. 98.)

The statute extends to all kinds of bad and disorderly behaviour on the part of the apprentice. (See Hawkesworth v. Hillary, 1 Saund. 314.)

Shall repair unto one Justice.]—It has been doubted, by Holt, C. J. in 1 Salk. 67, whether the sessions had an original jurisdiction to discharge an apprentice without a previous application to a single justice, but this doubt has been removed by the following cases:

Application to magistrate.

R. v. Johnson, 1 Salk. 68. Exception was taken to an order for discharging an apprentice, that the complaint was made originally at sessions,

The sessions have an original jurisdiction.

9. Jurisdiction of Justices, &c.

without any previous application to a single justice out of sessions. Holt, C. J., delivered the opinion of the Court, that the order was good; if it had been a new question, he should have held that the prior application to some justice out of sessions was necessary; but after so many orders affirmed in this Court, which have been otherwise, it is too late to unsettle that now.

And in R. v. Davie, 2 Str. 704, the Court agreed, that it is a point not now to be disputed, that the sessions hath an original jurisdiction to discharge apprentices. And Lord Hardwicke, C. J., in the case of Arglis v. Heasman, (Cas. temp. Hardw. 101,) held that this determination was right: for the application which the act directs to be made to a private justice seems to mean only to arbitrate and accommodate the dispute. The statute says, if he cannot compound the matter, he is to take bond for the parties' appearance at the sessions, so that they are not to take it by appeal. (And see R. v. Gill, 1 Str. 143.)

This authority, however, must be exercised at a general session. (Anon. Skin. 98; 1 Bott, 570, 578.)

Application to mayor or other officer.

Or to the Mayor or other Head Officer]—(R. v. Collingbourne, 1 Str. 663; 2 Ld. Raym. 1410, S. C.) An order of sessions was made at Hicks's Hall for the discharge of an apprentice to a freeman of the city of London, and who was bound and enrolled there. And the order being removed into the Queen's Bench, the question was, whether the court of sessions at Hicks's Hall hath any jurisdiction to discharge an apprentice to a freeman of London (especially as there is a saving in the act of the custom of the city of London), or whether he ought not to be discharged by the mayor's court only. It appeared that the apprentice lived with his master out of the city of London, and within the jurisdiction of the justices of Middlesex. To this exception it was answered, that the statute doth not regard where the binding or enrolling is, but gives the jurisdiction expressly to the justices where the master lives; and if this did not belong to the justices of Middlesex, where the master lives, there would be a failure of justice; for neither the chamberlain, nor any other city magistrate, has power to compel the master's appearance before them. The Court affirmed the order of discharge, and said they would not take away the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, but only give concurrent jurisdiction to the justices for the county. And it would be very inconvenient to have apprentices to a freeman of London, who are bound there, and who live in distant counties, obliged to come up to the mayor's court to get themselves discharged; and the words of the statute are very plain; for they give the jurisdiction to the justices where the master dwelleth.

Order of justice for discharge of apprentice must be by deed.

Who shall by his wisdom and discretion take such order and direction between the Master and Apprentice as the equity of the case shall require.]—Hereupon the justice, if he see cause, may, by consent of the master, discharge the apprentice from his apprenticeship: but this must not be by a verbal discharge; for the apprentice being bound by deed cannot be discharged but by deed, that is, by order under the hand and seal of the justice. (Dalt. c. 58, p. 141; Reg. v. Daniel, 6 Mod. 182; 2 Ld. Raym. 1117, S. C.; ante, 196.)

In case master will not conform to justice's recommendation.

If for want of good Conformity in the Master.]—The one justice appears to have a mere equitable jurisdiction as mediator or arbitrator between the parties, and has no express power given him to discharge the indenture. If the master refuse to conform to his recommendation, he may leave the matter transferred to the four justices at sessions, who may act compulsorily and inflict a penalty. But the like option is not given to the apprentice. (East v. Pell, 4 M. & W. 665.)

Appearance at sessions.

On his appearance at Sessions.]—The sessions may discharge the apprentice although the master does not appear, but not unless the master was summoned. (W. Ditton's case, 2 Salk. 490.) It was moved to quash an order made for the discharge of an apprentice. The question arose upon the clause of the statute, which directs that upon appearance of the master the apprentice may be discharged by four justices, after one justice out of sessions hath endeavoured to compose the matter in difference. And in this case it was objected that Dutton, the master, was bound over to appear, and did not; and the justices have but a limited jurisdiction; and it is expressly directed by the act that the discharge is to be made on the appearance of the master; besides there is another remedy, to proceed on the recognizance, which is forfeited by not appearing. By the Court:—The act must have a reasonable construction, so as not to permit the master to take advantage of his own obstinacy; and it would be very hard, that, supposing the master is profligate and runs away, the apprentice shall never be discharged.

9. Jurisdiction of Justices, &c.

Proceeding on recognizance for not appearing.

An order of sessions for discharging an apprentice was quashed because it did not set forth that the master was summoned, or that he appeared. (R. v. Gill, 1 Stra. 143; R. v. Eastman, 2 Stra. 1013, S. P.)

Discharge of Apprenticeship at Sessions.]—We have already seen, ante, 203, that an original jurisdiction is vested in the sessions, and that no previous complaint need have been made to a magistrate.

Discharge of apprenticeship at sessions.

We have also seen, ante, 204, the sessions have jurisdiction over the place where the master lives, although the apprentice is bound elsewhere.

The powers of the act can only be amended by a general and not a private sessions. (Anon. Skin. 98; 1 Bott, 578, S. C.)

As to the cause of discharge, see ante, 204.

The intention of the act is, that as the justices may discharge the apprentice from his master for ill usage, so also they may discharge the master from the apprentice for evil and disorderly behaviour in the apprentice. (Hawksworth v. Hillary, 1 Saund. 313, 314; R. v. Duhammel, Skin. 108.)

Return of premium.

The sessions have no power, on making an order for the discharge of an apprenticehood, to direct the return of any part of the premium already paid to the master, or the non-payment of any part of it remaining unpaid; assuming indeed that they have any power at all under the stat. of 5 Eliz. c. 4, in such a case where a premium has been paid. (East v. Pell, 4 M. & W. 665.)

Hale v. Webb, T. 26 Geo. III., 2 Bro. 78, the plaintiff was bound apprentice to the defendant, with 200*l.* premium. About a year after, the mother wished to have him discharged; which being consented to, and it being necessary the same authority should discharge which bound him, they went before the chamberlain, where an end was put to the contract. The bill prayed a return of part of the premium; but Lloyd Kenyon, Master of the Rolls, dismissed the bill. Suppose the discharge had been in consequence of gross misconduct, and the master had agreed to the dissolution, it would be a forfeiture of the premium.

Assigning over apprentice.

The sessions have no power to assign over the apprentice to another. (R. v Barnes, 1 Str. 48; Bac. Ab. Master and Servant, (E.))

Order to receive apprentice.

But they may order the master to receive the apprentice. (R. v. Barney, Comb. 405.)

Form and enrolment of order.

The order must be under the hands and seals of at least four of the justices. (R. v. Cateley, Carth. 198.)

It must be according to the act enrolled with the clerk of the peace; and in a case where it was not so enrolled, it was held bad. (R. v. Hales Owen, 1 Stra. 99.)

Where the master is complained against, the order must set forth either that he appeared or that he was summoned and made default, or it will be quashed for the defect. (Supra.)

The cause for the order must be duly set forth therein. (1 Bott, 577; R. v. Fastman, 2 Stra. 1013.)

Order, how far conclusive.

No case has occurred in which the settlement has depended upon the validity of such an order of discharge; the power of a quarter sessions over it when trying a question of settlement is therefore undecided; but it may perhaps be concluded from analogy to the proceedings of ecclesiastical courts, (4 Co. 29; Carth. 225; 11 St. Trials, 218, 222, 285,) and admiralty courts; (Lothian v. Henderson, 3 Bos. & Pul. 499; Bolton v. Gladstone, 5 East, 155;) that being a direct judgment upon the fact by a Court not only of competent but exclusive jurisdiction, it is conclusive of the question between contending parishes, although they are not immediately parties to the sentence, unless it has been obtained by fraud; (Amb. 762;) or appears altogether void. (Chichester v. Philips, Sir T. Raym. 405; Havelock v. Rockwood, 8 Term Rep. 268; Case of the Flud Oyen, ib. 270, n. a; 1 Rob. Adm. Rep. 135.)

9. Jurisdiction of Justices, &c.

On this ground, in the case of Ex parte Gill, (7 East, 376; 1 Bott, 718, ante, 201;) where upon a habeas corpus to bring up the body of an apprentice, the keeper of the house of correction returned, with the body of the party, a regular conviction of him by two magistrates, on the statute of 20 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 4, post, 210, for a misdemeanor in absenting himself as an apprentice from his master's service; it was held to be no answer, to show by affidavit that the party had bound himself when an infant to serve till twenty-five, and that when he came of age he elected to avoid the indentures, after which the offence imputed had been committed; for this was proper matter to be shown to the magistrates below, who, if the matter shown were true, acted at their own peril in committing the party, but that the Court had no power to discharge an apprentice from his indentures, and were bound, by the return of a regular conviction, where the objection did not appear on the face of the return, to remand the party.

Correction and punishment of apprentices.

Sessions shall cause due Correction and Punishment to be administered.]—This being left indefinite, it seemeth most apposite that the justices commit the apprentice to the house of correction for a time to be kept to hard labour, or otherwise corrected as the nature of the offence may require.

This clause, however, does not restrain, but enlarges the power of magistrates over apprentices beyond the power given them over the masters; and the magistrates may inflict corporal punishment on or imprison the apprentice with hard labour in the house of correction, or else discharge him, at their discretion. (Hawkesworth v. Hillary, 1 Saund. 313, 314.)

Justices, &c. may apprehend apprentice who runs away, and may bind him to good behaviour.

Apprehension of runaway Apprentices.]—By 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 47, "If any servant or apprentice of husbandry, or of any art, science, or occupation aforesaid, unlawfully depart (see R. v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 745), or flee into any other shire, it shall be lawful to the said justices of peace, and to the said mayors, bailiffs, and other head officers of cities and towns corporate, for the time being justices of peace there, to make and grant writs of capias, so many and such as shall be needful, to be directed to the sheriffs of the counties, or to other head officers of the places whither such servants or apprentices shall so depart or flee, to take their bodies, returnable before them at what time shall please them; so that if they come by such process, that they be put in prison till they shall find sufficient surety well and honestly to serve their masters, mistresses, or dames, from whom they so departed or fled, according to the order of the law." (Post, "Servants," Vol. V.)

And by 24 Geo. II. c. 55, s. 1, if a justice of any county, riding, &c. or place, shall issue a warrant against any person, and he shall escape into another county, riding, &c. any justice of such other county, riding, &c., shall upon proof on oath of the handwriting of such justice granting the warrant, indorse his name thereon; and the constable or other person, on having the warrant so indorsed, may arrest him there, and carry him before a justice in such other county, &c. if the offence be bailable, to find bail, or else shall carry him back before a justice in the shire from whence the warrant did first issue. (See further post, "Warrant by Justices," Vol. VI.)

By the same act, if a justice shall issue a warrant against such person and he shall escape into another shire, the constable or other person, on having the warrant indorsed by a justice of such other shire, may arrest him there, and carry him before a justice of such other shire, if the offence is bailable, to find bail, or else shall carry him back to a justice in the shire from whence the warrant did first issue.

(2.) Apprenticeship, where no Premium or not more than Twenty-five Pounds Premium paid.

Herein, 1st, Of complaints by apprentices against masters; and 2ndly, Of complaints by masters against apprentices.

On complaint by apprentice, justices to summon master.

1st. Complaints against Masters.]—Stat. 20 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 3, enacts "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any two or more such justices, upon any complaint (a) or application by an apprentice, put out by the parish, or any other apprentice, upon whose binding out no larger sum than 5*l.* [extended to 25*l.* by 4 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 1, and by 5 Vict. c. 7, to apprentices where no premium was paid] of lawful British money was paid, touching or concerning any misusage, refusal of necessary provision, cruelty, or other ill-treatment of or toward such apprentice, by his or her master or mistress, to summon (b) such master or mistress to appear before such justices at a reasonable time, to be named in such summons; and such justices shall and may examine into the matter of such complaint; and upon proof thereof made, upon oath, to their satisfaction (whether the master or mistress be present or not, if service of the summons be also upon oath proved), the said justices may discharge (c) such apprentice, by warrant or certificate under their hands and seals; for which warrant or certificate no fees shall be paid."

And may discharge apprentice.

IV. c. 29, s. 1, one justice,] upon application or complaint made (a) upon oath, by any master or mistress, [or by 4 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 1; and by 5 Vict. c. 7, to apprentices where no premium has been paid,) was paid, (see s. 3, ante, p. 206,)] touching or concerning any misdemeanor, miscarriage, or ill behaviour, in such his or her service, (which oath such justices are hereby empowered to administer,) to hear, examine, and determine (b) the same, and to punish the offender by commitment (c) to the house of correction, there to remain and be corrected, and held to hard labour for a reasonable time, not exceeding one calendar month, [extended by 4 Geo. IV. c. 34, s. 1, to three,] or otherwise by discharging (d) such apprentice in manner and form before-mentioned."

Punishment of apprentice.

Discharging him.

The apprentice may appeal (id. s. 5, ante, 207.) The proceedings are not recoverable by certiorari, (id. s. 6.) The act does not extend to the stannaries of Devon and Cornwall, (id. s. 7, ante, 207.)

The complaint must be made by the master, but it may be verified upon the oath of any other person, who knows the fact complained of. (Finley v. Jowle, 12 East's Rep. 248.) The plaintiff was an apprentice within the description of the stat. 20 Geo II. c. 19, against whom his master, the defendant, had preferred a complaint in writing before two magistrates of the county of York; which complaint was verified by the oath of a witness who spoke to the fact, but not by the oath of the master himself: and the magistrates having discharged the defendant of his apprentice, the latter brought an action upon the indentures against his master, who justified under the magistrates' discharge: and at the trial it was objected that the magistrates had no jurisdiction by the words of the act, the complaint not having been verified upon the oath of the master. But this was overruled, and there was a verdict for the defendant. Upon a motion for a new trial, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said the words of the act must be understood with reference to the subject-matter. The application or complaint must be made to the magistrates by the master or mistress, because they alone have an interest in preferring it; and it must be verified upon oath, but it need not be upon the oath of the master or mistress, who may know nothing of the fact themselves: the complaint may be well founded upon some cause which happened in their absence. But it is sufficient that the master makes the complaint and verifies it by the oath of the person who knows the fact; otherwise, unless the fault were committed in the presence of the master, he would be without the remedy intended to be given by the legislature. Per curiam, Rule refused.

Where apprentice absconds, he shall serve beyond his term, for time he absented.

ever he shall be found," (so it be within seven years after the expiration of his term, s. 3,) "be compelled to serve his said master for so long a time as he shall have so absented himself from such service, unless he shall make satisfaction to his master for the loss he shall have sustained by his absence from his service, and so from time to time, as often as any such apprentice shall, without leave of his master, absent himself from his service, before the term of his contract shall be fulfilled; and in case any such apprentice shall refuse to serve as hereby required, or to make such satisfaction to his master, such master may complain upon oath to any justice of the peace of the county or place where he shall reside, which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer, and to issue a warrant under his hand and seal for apprehending any such apprentice; and such justice, upon hearing the complaint, may determine what satisfaction shall be made to such master by such apprentice. And in case such apprentice shall not give security to make satisfaction according to such determination, it shall and may be lawful for such justice to commit every such apprentice to the house of correction for any time not exceeding three months."

9. Jurisdiction of Justices, &c.

6 Geo. 3, c. 25.

By sect. 5, persons aggrieved by such determination, order, or warrant of the justice (except an order of commitment) may appeal to the next sessions, giving six days' notice to the justice and to the parties of his intention of bringing such appeal, and of the cause and manner thereof, and entering into recognizance, within three days after such notice, before a justice, with sufficient surety, to try the appeal at and to abide the order or judgment of and pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such sessions; which said justices, at their said sessions, on proof of such notice given, and of entering into such recognizance, shall hear and determine the appeal, and give such relief and costs to either party, as they shall adjudge reasonable. And their judgments and orders shall be final and conclusive to all parties concerned. (See ante, title "Appeal;" and see R. v. Justices of Staffordshire, 12 East, 572.)

Appeal.

Sect. 6. Nothing herein shall extend to the stannaries in Devon or Cornwall; or to impeach or lessen the jurisdiction of the chamberlain of London, or of any other court within the said city, touching apprentices; sect. 2, nor to any apprentice whose master shall have received with him the sum of 10*l.*

Exceptions.

The remedy given by sect. 1 of this latter statute of the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, which empowers the justices to oblige apprentices absenting themselves before the expiration of their apprenticeships to serve for such time as they shall be absent, or to make satisfaction for their absence, or in default of giving security for such satisfaction, to commit them, is cumulative, and does not repeal the penal provision of stat. 20 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 4, as applied to the misdemeanor. (Gray v. Cookson and Clayton, 16 East, 13, ante, p. 201.)

Remedy given by 6 Geo. 3 is cumulative with 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 4.

By stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 34, intituled, "An Act to enlarge the Powers of Justices in determining Complaints between Masters and Servants, and between Masters, Apprentices, Artificers, and others," s. 1, after reciting the expediency of extending the powers of stats. 20 Geo. II. c. 19, 6 Geo. III. c. 25, 4 Geo. IV. c. 29, enacts, "That it shall be lawful, not only for any master or mistress, but also for his or her steward, manager, or agent, to make complaint upon oath against an apprentice, within the meaning of the said acts, to any justice of the peace of the county or place where such apprentice shall be employed, of or for any misdemeanor, misconduct, or ill behaviour of any such apprentice; or if such apprentice shall have absconded, it shall be lawful for any justice of peace of the county or place where such apprentice shall be found, or shall have been employed, and on complaint thereof made on oath by such master, mistress, steward, manager, or agent, which oath the said justice is hereby empowered to administer, to issue his warrant for apprehending every such apprentice; and further, to hear and determine the said complaint, and to punish the offender by abating the whole or any part of his or her wages, or otherwise by commitment to the house of correction, there to remain and be held to hard labour for a reasonable time not exceeding three months." See further, post, "Servants," Vol. V.; and post, "Commitment in Execution."

Masters or steward, &c. may make the complaint.

Justice may abate wages, or commit apprentice to hard labour.

Parish Apprentices.

Object of parish apprenticeships.

In the establishment of parish apprentices the legislature does not appear even to have had in view the instruction of youth or to fit them for any trade or useful occupation; it is a misapplication of terms to call the parties bound an "apprentice;" there is not even a direction to or covenant by the master to afford the party bound any instruction; the whole of that part of the system is literally a mere parochial billet of youth, compelling clergymen, gentlemen, farmers and traders to quarter and support a part of the poor, and to receive under their own roofs persons, however obnoxious to them, in aid of the parish funds. (See the legislative declaration in 32 Geo. III. c. 57, s. 7, Chit. App. 21; sed vid. Lord Kenyon's observations in R. v. St. Nicholas, Nottingham, 2 *T. I. Binding of Parish Apprentices, Statutes as to.

Power to bind.

Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, directs the churchwardens and overseers of every parish to raise a fund for setting to work the children of those who should not be thought able to keep or maintain them; and by sect. 5 enacts, "that it shall be lawful for the said churchwardens and overseers, or the greater part of them, by the assent of any two justices of the peace, [one of whom must be of the quorum,] (R. v. Woolstanton, 2 Stra. 1110,) to bind any such children as aforesaid, to be apprentices where they shall see convenient, until such man child shall come to the age of 24 years, [now by 18 Geo. III. c. 47, to 21 years,] and such woman child to the age of 21 years, or the time of her marriage; the same to be as effectual to all purposes as if such child were of full age, and by indenture of covenant bound him or herself."

Who to be bound.

By 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 7, post, 215, the infant must have attained 9 years.

Children bound apprentices, master to provide for them according to indenture signed by justices, &c.

Stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 5, reciting stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, "But there being doubts whether the persons to whom such children are to be bound are compellable to receive such children as apprentices, that law hath failed of its due execution;" enacts, "That where any poor children shall be appointed to be bound apprentices pursuant to the said act, the person or persons, to whom they are so appointed to be bound, shall receive and provide for them, according to the indenture signed and confirmed by the two justices of the peace, and also execute the other part of the said indentures; and if he or she shall refuse so to do, (a) oath being thereof made by one of the churchwardens or overseers of the poor, before any two of the justices of the peace for that county, liberty, or riding, (b) he or she, for every such

The annual Mutiny Act usually enacts, that no officer of her Majesty's forces, residing in barracks or elsewhere under military law, shall be deemed liable to have any parish poor child bound apprentice to him; but that every such officer shall be wholly exempt from taking or receiving, or from having bound to him, any such child as an apprentice, any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

Military officers exempted from.

By stat. 32 Geo. III. c. 57, s. 12, "Where any parish apprentice shall have been so discharged from any master or mistress as aforesaid under and by virtue of the said last mentioned act, and such master and mistress shall have been convicted of such offence, in consequence of such prosecution by indictment as aforesaid, or shall have been found guilty thereof in any action brought at the suit of the party injured, it shall not be lawful for the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of any parish or place, or the major part of them, to bind any other apprentice upon such person; but that whenever such person ought or would be compellable to take a parish apprentice, it shall and may be lawful for any two justices of the peace of the county, city, town, riding, division or place where such person shall reside, upon application made to them by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of such parish or place, to order and direct that such person shall pay into the hands of such churchwardens and overseers of the poor, some or one of them, a sum not exceeding the sum of 10*l.* nor less than 5*l.*, for the purpose of binding out a child (intended to be bound) an apprentice with the approbation of such two justices; and in case such person shall refuse to pay such sum as aforesaid, then that it shall and may be lawful for such two justices, by warrant under their hands and seals, to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such person, together with the reasonable expenses of such distress." Stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 139, (d) passed to regulate parish apprenticeships, intituled "An Act to regulate the Binding of Parish Apprentices," reciting, s. 1, that "Many grievances have arisen from the binding of poor children as apprentices by parish officers to improper persons, and to persons residing at a distance from the parishes to which such poor children belong, whereby the said parish officers and the parents of such children are deprived of the opportunity of knowing the manner in which such children are treated, and the parents and children have in many instances become estranged from each other; and also from the permission given to apprentices, by the persons to whom such apprentices have been bound, to serve others without a formal assignment, whereby the discretion to be exercised by magistrates in placing out apprentices to suitable persons is frequently rendered of no avail;" for remedy thereof enacts, "That from and after the 1st day of October, 1816, before any child (e) shall be bound apprentice by the overseers of the poor of any parish, township, or place, such child shall be

Sect. 3. "The allowance of two justices of the peace for the county within which the place in which such child shall be intended to serve an apprenticeship shall be situated, shall be valid and effectual, although such place may be situated in a town or liberty within which any other justices of the peace may in other respects have an exclusive jurisdiction."

Allowance by county magistrates valid in towns, &c. of exclusive jurisdiction.

Sect. 4. "And whereas there are several cities and boroughs which are counties of themselves, and several districts situated without the limits of the county to which such districts respectively belong, be it enacted, that the distance to which parish apprentices may be bound shall not be construed to be limited to such cities and boroughs being counties, but shall extend to the county in which any such city and borough, and any such district, though belonging to another county, shall be locally situated."

Distance to which apprentices may be bound not limited to cities counties of themselves.

Sect. 5. "No settlement shall be gained by any child who shall be bound by the officers of any parish, township, or place, by reason of such apprenticeship, unless such order shall be made and such allowances of such indenture of apprenticeship shall be signed as hereinbefore directed." (e)

No settlement gained unless directions complied with.

Sect. 6. "In case any overseer or overseers shall bind an apprentice to any person or persons without having obtained such order and such allowances as hereinbefore required, and in case any person or persons shall receive any such apprentice as so bound without such order and allowances having been first obtained, the said overseer or overseers, and the said person or persons, shall each respectively forfeit the sum of 10*l.* for each apprentice so bound, to be recovered as the penalties hereinafter given are directed to be recovered."

Penalty on overseers binding apprentices contrary hereto. (f)

Sect. 7. "After the said first day of October it shall not be lawful for any parish officers to bind out any child as parish apprentice until such child shall have attained the age of nine years, any thing in any act or acts of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding."

Children not to be bound until nine years old.

Stat. 51 Geo. III. c. 80, intituled "An Act to render valid certain Indentures for the binding of Parish Apprentices," [15 June, 1811,] reciting, that whereas, by 43 Eliz. c. 2, it is enacted, "That the churchwardens of every parish, and four, three, or two substantial householders there, as shall be thought meet, having respect to the proportion and greatness of the same parish and parishes, to be nominated yearly in Easter week, or within one month after Easter, in the manner therein directed, shall be overseers of the poor of the same parish; and that it shall be lawful for the said churchwardens and overseers, or the greater part of them, by the assent of two justices of the peace, to bind the children of such parents as shall not by the churchwardens and overseers, or the greater part of them, be thought able to maintain their children, to be apprentices; and whereas in divers small parishes, two persons only have been annually appointed to act in the capacity of churchwardens as well as overseers of the poor; and that divers indentures for the binding of parish apprentices have been executed and signed by such two persons, purporting to be the churchwardens and overseers of such parishes; but, by reason that the said indentures have not been signed by distinct persons as churchwardens, and other distinct persons as overseers, such indentures have been or may be deemed to be void," enacts, "That all indentures for the binding of parish apprentices, which have been heretofore executed and signed by two persons only, acting or purporting to act in the capacity of churchwardens as well as overseers of the poor, and also all such indentures as shall hereafter be so signed, shall be considered as good, valid, and effectual, as if the same had been executed and signed by distinct persons as churchwardens and distinct persons as overseers of the poor, according to the said recited act."

Indentures by two persons only acting in double capacity for churchwardens and overseers, valid.

By section 2, "Nothing in this act contained shall extend to do away or alter any decision which may have taken place in any Court of law, respecting the binding of any parish apprentice, or the settlement of any poor person, before the passing of this act."

to allow such indenture accordingly: and whereas doubts (a) have lately arisen whether the allowance of such two justices, although they act as justices for both counties, are valid and effectual, or whether it is not necessary that such indenture should be allowed by four justices, two acting for one county, and two for the other only; and the settlement of the numerous persons who have already served and are now serving under indentures allowed by two justices acting for both counties in manner aforesaid will be set aside, to their manifest injury." it is enacted, "That from and after the passing of this act all indentures for the binding of parish apprentices which have been previous to the passing of this act allowed, and shall hereafter be allowed, by two justices of the peace acting as well for the county or district within which the place by the officers of which such child shall be bound shall be situated, as for the county or district within which the place shall be situated wherein such child shall be intended to serve, shall be deemed and taken to be as good, valid and effectual, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been allowed by two justices of the peace acting only for the county or district in which the place from which such child shall be bound is situated, and also by two other justices of the peace acting only for the county or district within which the place shall be situated in which such child shall be intended to serve."

Indentures allowed by justices acting for two counties to be as valid as if granted by justices acting for different counties.

Indentures with seal of corporations annexed to be valid.

Sect. 2. "And whereas, by divers acts of parliament heretofore made and passed, the directors, guardians, acting guardians, or other officers of incorporated hundreds, parishes and other districts, are by the said acts of parliament respectively authorised to bind poor children apprentices in the manner by the said acts of parliament respectively prescribed and directed: and whereas the said directors, guardians, acting guardians, and other officers, have bound out poor children apprentices by indentures, to which the said directors, guardians, acting guardians, and other officers have been, by their description as directors, guardians, acting guardians, or other officers of such incorporated hundreds, parishes, and other districts respectively, made parties of the one part, or to which they have by their said descriptions respectively been binding parties, and which indentures have been executed by the said directors, guardians, acting guardians, and other officers, by affixing thereto the seal of the corporation of which they are directors, guardians, acting guardians, and officers respectively, and in no other manner by them: and whereas doubts have been entertained as to the effect and validity of indentures so executed; and it is desirable to remove such doubts; be it declared and enacted, that from and after the passing of this act in all cases where any indentures for the binding out poor children apprentices have been heretofore or shall be hereafter executed by any directors, guardians, acting guardians, or other officers of any hundreds, parishes or other districts now incorporated or hereafter to be incorporated under and by virtue of any act of parliament, by affixing thereto the seal of the corporation of which they are or shall be directors, guardians, acting guardians, or other officers respectively, such execution of the said indentures respectively shall be deemed and taken to be a good, valid and effectual execution of the said indentures respectively by the said directors, guardians, acting guardians or other officers of such incorporated hundred, parishes or other districts respectively." (See further as to incorporate district apprentices, post, 210.)

Indentures to be allowed by two justices, one of them acting for the county and one for the city, &c.

Sect. 3. "And whereas it is expedient that justices of the peace in every city, borough, or town corporate should have concurrent jurisdiction with county magistrates in apprenticing any child or children within the limits of such city, borough, or town corporate; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act every indenture for the binding of parish apprentices within any city, borough, or town corporate, shall be allowed by two justices of the peace, one of such justices acting for and on behalf of the county, and the other of such justices acting for and on behalf of the city, borough or town corporate within the limits of which such child shall be bound.

1. Binding of, Statutes as to.

By the 4 & 5 Will IV. c. 76, (the New Poor Law Act,) sect. 15, it is enacted, "That from and after the passing of this act the administration of relief to the poor throughout England and Wales, according to the existing laws, or such laws as shall be in force for the time being, shall be subject to the direction and control of the said commissioners; and for executing the powers given to them by this act the said commissioners shall and are hereby authorised and required, from time to time, as they shall see occasion, to make and issue all such rules, orders, and regulations for the management of the poor, for the government of workhouses and the education of the children therein, and for the management of parish poor children under the provisions of an act made and passed in the seventh year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act for the better Regulation of Parish Poor Children of the several Parishes therein mentioned within the Bills of Mortality, and the superintending, inspecting, and regulating of the Houses wherein such Poor Children are kept and maintained, and for the Apprenticing the Children of Poor Persons, and for the Guidance and Control of all Guardians, Vestries, and Parish Officers, so far as relates to the Management or Relief of the Poor, and the Keeping, Examining, Auditing, and Allowing of Accounts, and making and entering into Contracts in all Matters relating to such Management or Relief, or to any Expenditure for the Relief of the Poor, and for carrying this Act into Execution in all other respects, as they shall think proper;' and the said commissioners may, at their discretion, from time to time suspend, alter, or rescind such rules, orders, and regulations, or any of them: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed as enabling the said commissioners or any of them to interfere in any individual case for the purpose of ordering relief."

Apprenticing of poor children to be under the control of the poor law commissioners. (a)

By sect. 61, it is enacted, "That from and after the period at which any rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners shall come into operation for the binding of poor children apprentices, in addition to such assent or consent, order or allowance of justices, as are now required by law, such justices or any one justice are and is hereby authorised and required to examine and ascertain whether the rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners then in force for the binding of poor children apprentices have been complied with, and to certify the same at the foot of every such contract or indenture, and of the counterpart thereof, in such form and manner as the said commissioners by such rules, orders, or regulations, may direct, and until so certified no such contract or indenture of apprenticeship shall be valid: provided nevertheless, that nothing in this act, or in any rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners, shall affect the jurisdiction of any justices of the peace over any master or apprentice during the period of apprenticeship."

Justices to certify that rules have been complied with in binding poor apprentices.

Justices' power as between master and apprentice.

The above enactment of the 15th section makes no alteration in the law, except that, to secure a conformity with the rules which that section empowers the commissioners to make on this subject, it imposes (s. 61) on justices the duty of certifying that such rules have been complied with.

II. Who may be bound Parish Apprentices.

We have already seen the statutes which point out who is to be bound a parish apprentice, viz. the 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5; 18 Geo. III. c. 47, ante, 212.

Who may be bound.

The child to be bound should be of the age of nine years or upwards, and of parents who are not able to maintain it, 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 7, ante, 215.

But it is not necessary that the child should be chargeable to the parish, or even residing within it, to authorise the overseers to put it apprentice; it is sufficient if it be the child of a person settled in the parish, who the overseers think is not able to maintain it. (R. v. St. George's, Exeter, 3 Ad. & El. 373.)

(a) By a bill now before parliament it is proposed to enact that the poor law commissioners shall prescribe the duties of poor apprentices, and that masters neglecting to fulfil them shall be subject to a penalty; see Addenda, tit. "Apprentices."

2. Who may be bound.

A person of the age of twenty-one years cannot be considered a poor child within the meaning of the 56 Geo. III. c. 139. (R. v. Inhabitants of St. John Bedwardine, 5 B. & Ad. 169; 2 N. & M. 86, S. C.)

Sect. 11 of that statute extends only to indentures of apprenticeship of poor children; and therefore an indenture, whereby a person of the age of twenty-four is bound apprentice, part of the premium being paid out of the public parochial funds, does not require the assent of two justices. (Id.)

It is discretionary in the parish officers to select those children whose parents the officers think unable to maintain them. (R. v. Crosse, Comb. 209.)

The consent of the apprentice is not requisite. (R. v. St. George, Exeter, 3 Ad. & El. 373.)

III. Who compellable to take them, and how compellable.

Who compellable to take.

We have already pointed out the enactments as to who are compellable to take parish apprentices, viz. the 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, and 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 5, ante, 212. (a)

As the churchwardens and overseers have the power to place out poor children, they are the proper judges of persons who are fit to be their masters; and those are, all persons who, by their profession and manner of living, have occasion to keep servants; but the same are to be approved of by the justices, and if such master be dissatisfied, he may appeal to the sessions. (Dalt. c. 58, p. 143.)

Minchamp's case, 2 Salk. 491; 1 Bott, 605. Two justices bound an apprentice to a merchant; he appealed to the sessions, and the order was discharged. And now the Court of Queen's Bench confirmed the order of sessions; because the act having made persons compellable to take apprentices, and given an appeal to the sessions, it was in the discretion of the justices at sessions to determine whether it was or was not fitting to put an apprentice upon any one; and therefore the Court would not disturb what the sessions had done.

Gentlemen of fortune and clergymen are equally liable with others to take parish apprentices. (1 Bla. Com. 426.)

Occupiers of tithes are liable. (2 Nol. 221, citing R. v. Saltern, Cald. 444.)

The condition of the master is immaterial. (R. v. St. Margaret's, Lincoln, Burr. 728.) Nor need he be of age. (R. v. Petrox, 4 T. R. 196.)

Nor is it necessary that the party should reside in the parish. (R. v. St. Nicholas, 2 T. R. 726.) Persons occupying lands in the parish, but residing out of it, are compellable to receive parish apprentices, but mere strangers are not. So ruled in the following case:—The parish officers of Sowton, Devon, having apprenticed S. Helier, a poor child of Sowton, to the defendant, according to the statute, he appealed to the sessions, who confirmed the order subject to the opinion of the Court on the following case:—the apprentice was bound (prout the indenture) to the appellant, who resided in the parish of Pinhoe, on an estate which he rented and occupied in the parish of Sowton of 20*l.* per annum, which was divided by the highway from the house in which he lived. There was no house on the estate of which he was the occupier. The indenture, together with the apprentice, was tendered to the appellant in the parish of Sowton, in the highway adjoining to the said estate lying in the parish of Sowton. After hearing East in support of the order, and Fanshaw and Clapp contrà, Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "It is highly fit that this question should not remain any longer undecided. I remember a much older case than those mentioned at the bar in which this question was discussed but not decided. The question arises on 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5. The general

(a) By a bill now before parliament it is proposed to repeal these enactments, and to abolish compulsory apprenticeship on persons. It will probably pass; and if so, it will be found in the Addenda, tit. "Apprentices." purview of that statute was to make a provision for the maintenance of the poor; and the first clause, in mentioning those who are to contribute to such maintenance, describes two sorts of persons, namely, inhabitants and occupiers of lands, &c. Amongst other provisions for the poor, the 5th section gives power to the parish officers, with the assent of two magistrates, to bind poor children apprentices, where they shall see convenient. It is true, indeed, that those words cannot be taken so generally as they purport, because they cannot compel mere strangers, who stand in no relation to the parish, to take such apprentices. But I think that the context of the statute furnishes the means of circumscribing the general extent of those words; and that context I take from the first clause, which imposes other burdens of the same nature on occupiers of lands, &c. as well as inhabitants The general object of the act was to compel all those who had any property in the parish to contribute their due proportion towards the maintenance of the poor, and the receiving of apprentices is one mode of contributing to their general relief. In construing these words I see no reason for confining the power of binding to the inhabitants of the parish; they ought to be extended to persons occupying lands in the parish, though residing out of it. Then it is said that if this construction be put upon the statute, the party may be doubly charged; in the parish where he lives, in respect of his inhabitancy, and in that in which he has lands, in respect of his occupation of them. But if he find himself aggrieved he may appeal to the sessions; and we must take it for granted that the justices will do what is right. They are to adapt the charge to the size of the property, which the person charged possesses; and these are incidental charges which fall on him in respect of that property. I remember it was argued in a former case on this subject, that if this construction of the statute were to prevail, some parishes would disburden themselves of many of their poor by apprenticing out their poor children to persons living out of the parish; but the answer to any such argument is, that at the time when the 43 Eliz. was passed, the stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. was not in existence. However, the ground of my decision here is, that this is one of the modes provided for the maintenance of the poor in this statute, which imposes the duty in respect of the property." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions confirmed. (R. v. Clapp, H. 29 Geo. III., 3 T. R. 107; and see R. v. Guardians of Tunstead, id 523; 1 Bott, 619.)

3. Who compellable to take.

And in R. v. Barwick, 7 T. R. 33; 1 Bott, 624, it was determined, that where several persons hold lands in partnership, some of whom actually reside upon and occupy the same, and others reside at a distance in another parish, the latter as well as the former are obliged to take parish apprentices, if in other respects they are fit persons to take them.

So the court held under 20 Geo. III. c. 36, that the terms "occupier" and "inhabitant" are synonymous. (R. v. Guardians of Tunstead, 3 T. R. 523; and see further, as to the meaning of these terms, R. v. Adlard, 4 B. & Cres. 772; 7 D. & R. 340, S. C.; Attorney-General v. Forster, 10 Ves. 335.)

The master must not reside or carry on the trade to which the apprentice is to be bound, out of the same county, beyond forty miles from the parish or place to which the child belongs, unless the child's parish be more than forty miles from London, ante, 214.

It was questioned but not decided in the recent case of R. v. Spreyton, 3 B. & Adol. 818, whether the binding can be to a person living abroad, though retaining property in the parish.

We have already seen that officers, &c. in the army are exempt by the Annual Mutiny Act, ante, 213.

Also that persons having been guilty of misusing their apprentices should not be made masters, 32 Geo. III. c. 57, s. 12, ante, 213.

Persons having paid the penalty for not taking.

It has often been a question whether a person who has paid the 10*l.* under 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 5, (ante, 212,) is liable to take another apprentice till his turn comes again, for as the penalty fixed in the one case answers in the amount to that which the legislature has directed to be paid where a master, convicted of misconduct, is not allowed to receive an apprentice, but compelled to pay the stipulated sum,—it has been urged that the coincidence

3. Who compellable to take. in the amount proves that the payment of the penalty was to be equivalent to the acceptance of the apprentice. But it is obvious that no penalty exacted for an offence can be an apology for the commission of a second offence. The only protection is in the discretion of the two justices, or of the sessions on appeal; not an arbitrary but such a legal discretion as is noticed in the maxims laid down under title "Justices," Vol. III.

How compellable. The statutes, ante, 213, &c. point out several modes of enforcing the taking the apprentice, by distress, &c. Independently of this an indictment lies for disobeying an order of justices, either in not receiving, or receiving and afterwards turning off, or not providing for a parish apprentice; for though an act of parliament prescribe an easier way of proceeding by complaint, yet it does not hinder an indictment. (Reg. v. Gould, 1 Salk. 381; 6 Mod. 164, S. C.; 1 Bott, 605; 2 Show. 193; 1 Stra. 76; and see an indictment, R. v. Shipton, 8 B. & Cres. 772; and "Order," Vol. III.)

But where the officers select an improper person, the party is not indictable. (Minchamp's case, 2 Salk. 491; 1 Bott, 605.)

It seems an indictment for refusing to take the apprentice need not aver the parents are poor. (R. v. Crosse, Comb. 289.)

IV. The Mode and Term of Binding Parish Apprentices.

Previous inquiry. Inquiry to be made before Binding.]—The statute 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 1, requires the justices to make certain inquiries and examinations as to the residence, and character and circumstances of the master, &c. before binding out the apprentice.

Order of justices. Order of Justices.]—The 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 1, requires this order. In R. v. Fairfax, 3 Mod. 269; Carth. 94; Comb. 164; it was held that an order under the statute 43 Eliz. to bind out a parish apprentice, must state it to be by the churchwardens, and for the omission the order was quashed; and it should seem this case would apply to an order made under the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, the 18th section of that act, ante, 217, extending its provisions to churchwardens having the power of overseers.

Notice to overseers. Notice to Overseers.]—This is required by the 56 Geo. III. s. 139, s. 2, and must be duly given, and must be proved to the justices to have been so given, before they allow the indenture, or no settlement will be acquired by a service under it. (R. v. Whiston, 6 N. & M. 65.) A pauper settled in the parish of N. C., in the county of Nottingham, was, pursuant to an order of two justices of the county, bound apprentice by the churchwardens and overseers of that parish, to A. B. of another parish, in a borough situate in the same county, but having justices who had exclusive jurisdiction therein. The indenture was allowed by the two justices, but no notice was given to the overseers of the poor of the parish in the borough of the intention to bind such apprentice, nor did they or any of them attend before the county justices, who allowed the indenture and admitted such notice. It was held by three justices, (Abbott, C. J. dissentiente,) that by the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 2, ante, 214, the indenture was void for want of such notice, and that the pauper did not gain any settlement by serving under it. (R. v. Newark-upon-Trent, 3 B. & Cres. 59; 4 D. & R. 745, S. C.)

And in the more recent case of R. v. Threlkeld, 4 B. & Adol. 229; 1 N. & M. 14, S. C.; the Court considered that under that enactment, when an apprentice is bound from one parish into another, notice must be given to the overseers of the latter, though both be in the same county and jurisdiction of the peace.

But where the apprentice is bound into another parish by assignment of the indenture, no notice is requisite. (R. v. Inhabitants of Exminster, 6 A. & Ell. 598.)

Term of binding. The Term of Binding.]—The time for which a male child is to be bound is till he becomes twenty-one years of age; the time for which a female child is to be bound is until she becomes twenty-one years of age or is married. 43 Eliz. c. 2; 18 Geo. III. c. 47, ante, 212.

4. Mode and Term of Binding.

The apprentice may be bound for a shorter time than the statute requires, though not for a longer time. (R. v. Chalbury, 1 Bott, 606.)

But where a local statute enacted that certain guardians of the poor should have power to bind children apprentices, "provided such children be not bound for a longer term than until they shall have attained the respective ages following, viz. a boy the age of twenty-two, and a girl that of twenty;" it was held, that an indenture binding a boy for a longer term than that allowed by the act was not absolutely void, but only voidable. (R. v. Inhabitants of the Vill of St. Gregory, 2 Adol. & Ell. 99; 4 N. & M. 137, S. C.)

So an indenture, not made for any certain time, is not thereby void, but voidable only; (R. v. Woolstanton, 1 Bott, 610;) nor is an indenture, binding a poor girl an apprentice, void for want of the alternative "or till marriage." (R. v. St. Petrox, 1 Wils. 96; 1 Bott, 607.)

The Indenture.]—The indenture is between the churchwardens and overseers, or the major part of them of the one part, and the master of the other part. There is no need of a stamp to or a statement of the premium in it.

The indenture.

A master is not compellable to give to his apprentice, forced upon him, wages or clothes at the end of the term. It was moved to quash an order to compel a person to take an apprentice, because in the close of the indenture it was said, "that the master, at the end of the term, shall give his apprentice two suits of clothes." Upon debate, the court held this to be ill; for the justices during the term of his apprenticeship cannot order him wages, they must only order him a maintenance as an apprentice, and cannot order him any thing after the term is ended; so the order was quashed. (Reg. v. Wagstaff, Fol. 205; 1 Sess. Ca. 48; 1 Bott, 605.)

Contents of.

The first section of 56 Geo. III. c. 139, (ante, 213, 214,) requiring that the order of magistrates for the binding ut parish apprentices shall be referred to in the indenture of the date thereof, is compulsory; and, therefore, an indenture in which the date of the order is omitted is void, and no settlement is gained by serving under it. (R. v. Bawbergh, 2 B. & Cres. 222; 3 D. & R. 338, S. C.)

Order of justices to be referred to.

The 32 Geo. III. c. 57, s. 1, post, 231, requires a proviso to be inserted as to the continuance of the apprenticeship after the death of the master.

Proviso as to death of master.

It is not necessary that the master should execute the indenture. (R. v. Fleet, 1 Bott, 601.) This was a question of settlement, and it appeared that the pauper, parish apprentice, was bound by indentures; that the original indenture was properly executed by the parish officers, and allowed by two justices. The counterpart was also allowed by the justices, but neither the indenture nor counterpart was executed by the master. The master accepted the indenture and the pauper, and considered him as his apprentice. And upon this case there arose a question, whether it was necessary, under 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 5, (ante, 212,) that the master should have executed a counterpart, to enable the pauper to gain a settlement. And the court held that the binding was authorised by 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, long before the act requiring a counterpart; that the statute of William only compelled persons to receive poor apprentices, but did not in other respects confirm the power of binding, which was already fully established; (Cald. 31;) and the court said, that it had been so determined in R. v. St. Peter's on the Hill, 2 Bott, 367; in which last case it was decided, that if the apprentice himself be bound, the execution by the master is not actually necessary, but the indenture shall be valid without it.

Execution of, by master.

Nor is it necessary that it should be executed by the apprentice. (R. v. St Nicholas in Nottingham, 2 T. R. 726; 2 Bott, 373; R. v. Woolstanton, 1 Bott, 606.)

been held sufficient, as will appear from the following case, it not appearing otherwise than that they constituted the majority. A parish indenture ran thus: — "This indenture, made the 2d day of April, 1800, in the 40 Geo. III. &c. witnesseth, that W. S., churchwarden of the hamlet of Attertan, in the parish of Wetherley, in the county of Leicester, and J. G., overseer of the poor of the said hamlet, by and with the consent of his Majesty's justices, &c., by these presents do put and place J. A., aged fourteen years, a poor child of the said parish, apprentice to J. B., of the parish of Hinckley, in the county of Leicester, framework knitter, with him to dwell and serve, &c. until the said apprentice shall accomplish his full age of twenty-one years, according to the statute, &c.;" and so it proceeded in the common form, concluding with covenants by J. B. to the said churchwardens and overseers, and every of them, &c. and their successors, "to instruct the apprentice in his trade, and so to provide for the said apprentice that he be not a charge to the said hamlet, &c. In witness, &c. (Signed) W. S., J. G., and J. B.;" and the consent of the two justices to the indenture was in the usual form. No other evidence was produced either on the part of the appellants or of the respondents. And the question was, whether the indenture of apprenticeship were a valid instrument or not, being made and executed by one churchwarden and one overseer only. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "no evidence having been given to impeach the validity of this indenture by showing that it was executed by less than a majority of the proper officers charged with that duty, the validity of it must be tried by itself: and if any intendment can by law be made to support it, we must make that intendment. Now if there were two existing overseers at the time, and only one churchwarden, the two who executed the indenture, being a majority, would be sufficient to bind the apprentice. Then can there be by law only one churchwarden? That may be regulated by custom, and by custom there may be only one in this place; therefore, the party who impeached the indenture should have given evidence to rebut the intendment which may be made in support of it while unimpeached by evidence." Le Blanc, J.: "The indenture was produced on one side, and there was no evidence to impeach it on the other. The question then is, whether by any intendment of law such indenture can be good? And it may be good by intendment in the way put by my lord. Then, not being impeached by evidence, it stands good." The other judges concurring, the order was confirmed. (R. v. Hinckley, 12 East, 361. (a))

So in R. v. Earl Shilton, 1 B. & Ald. 275, it was held that the statute 43 Eliz. c. 2, does not absolutely require two churchwardens in every parish for the management of the poor, and therefore an indenture binding out a poor apprentice, which was executed by one churchwarden (where by custom there was but one,) and one overseer, was held to be within the 5th section of that act, which requires it to be executed by the greater part of the churchwardens and overseers. The pauper served his master under such a binding for two years, and resided in his master's parish. The appellants objected to the indenture, that it was signed by one churchwarden and one overseer only; and they then proved the registry of appointments of churchwardens for the parish of C. whereof the churchwarden and overseer were such churchwarden and overseer; that in the year when the above indenture was executed only one churchwarden was appointed for that parish, and it was admitted that he was the only churchwarden of the parish the year throughout. It was further proved, that for forty years preceding, the practice had invariably been in the above parish to appoint only one churchwarden. The question submitted to the Court was, whether such indenture of apprenticeship, made and executed

(a) Mr. Evans, in his Collection of Statutes, observes upon this case, "I have never been able to consent to the correctness of this decision, because the presumption is always to be made according to the general course and operation of the law; and if the appointment of one churchwarden would be primâ facie void, the existence of a special custom to support it would seem to require positive proof."

during the time when the parish had but one churchwarden, was a valid instrument or not? The cases of R. v. Hinckley, 12 East, 361, and R. v. All Saints, Derby, 13 East, 150, were cited. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "Generally speaking, there are two churchwardens; but I think that the legislature used the word churchwardens here in the plural number, not as requiring that there should be two, but as speaking of the whole body of officers of that description, of whatever number that body be constituted. By custom there may be only one churchwarden in a parish, and if so, it is absolutely necessary that all the powers of the 43 Eliz. should be vested in him, or otherwise the act would be nullified in all those parishes in which such a custom prevailed. The act does not expressly require two churchwardens, and the inconvenience that would necessarily result from adopting that construction of the statute is sufficient to induce me to reject it altogether." Bayley, J. "The word churchwardens in the plural number is here used because the legislature were aware that there were generally two. It is as if they had said, 'all churchwardens, whether one or more.' Order of sessions confirmed." See the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 1, as to indentures executed before the 28th May, 1821.

1. Mode and Term of Binding

But where a parish indenture was executed by two persons, styling themselves churchwardens and overseers, one of whom was also sole churchwarden, the binding was held insufficient; for the stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, required, that there shall be two overseers distinct from the churchwardens. (R. v. All Saints, Derby, 13 East, 143.)

This decision, however, procured the enactment of the 51 Geo. III. c. 80, s. 1, (ante, 217.) And it has been since held, that an indenture signed by two parish officers, one of whom acted in the double capacity of churchwarden and overseer, is valid under this act, and that such act extends not only to cases where both the parish officers act in a double capacity, but to those also where only one of them is in that situation. (R. v. St. Margaret's, Leicester, 2 B. & Ald. 200.) In that case, W. B. was bound apprentice by indenture to R. W., which witnessed that T. C. and J. I., churchwardens of the parish of F., and the said T. C. and F. G., overseers, placed W. B. apprentice, &c., but it was executed by T. C. and F. G. only. It appeared that L. C. and J. I. were the two churchwardens of F. at the time when the said T. C. and F. G. were appointed overseers. It was agreed that this indenture was within the 51 Geo. III. c. 80, and therefore valid. Et per Curiam.—"It is admitted, that if both these persons had been churchwardens as well as overseers, the case would be within the act; but the statute is remedial—it ought to be construed liberally. We do not therefore put a forced construction upon its provisions when we decide that it extends to the case of a defect in one parish officer only, as well as to cases where both the parish officers act in a double capacity. (And see R. v. Stoke Golding, 1 B. & Ald. 173.)

The churchwardens of the parish at large (in which the township is situated) need not join in the execution of an indenture of apprenticeship, executed by the overseers of a township which has no churchwardens or chapelwardens, and maintains its own poor separately. (R. v. Nantwich, 16 East, 228.)

See further the 54 Geo. III. c. 107, s. 1 & 2, ante, 218, 219, and the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 63, s. 2, ante, 220.

Allowance by justices.

Where master resides in same county in which the binding parish is.

Allowance by Justices where Master resides in same County in which the Binding Parish is.]—The stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, ante, 212; 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 1, ante, 213; 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 63, s. 3, ante, 220; and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 61, ante, 221; point out the mode of allowance of the binding by the justices where the child is bound apprentice to a master in the same county in which the binding parish is situated.

It is requisite, under 43 Eliz., that one of the justices should be of the quorum; and where in a special order of sessions the question was, whether a boy bound over by justices (the boy being no party to the indenture) had gained a settlement, it having been stated only that his binding was allowed and approved of by two justices generally, and for this omission the Court quashed the order. (R. v. Woolstanton, 2 Stra. 1110; Burr. Set. C. 129.)

4. Mode and Term of Binding.

The assent of the justices being in its nature an act of judgment, it is, it seems, indispensably necessary that they should be and confer together when their assent is given; for where an indenture was separately signed by two justices, and they neither assented nor signed at the same time, nor in the presence of each other, it was held void, and that no settlement could be gained by service under it. In the case referred to, Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "The rule has long been settled, that the concurrence of justices together is not necessary where the act to be done is merely ministerial, but they must confer together and form a joint opinion where the act is of a judicial nature; and there is no doubt that this is a case of the latter description." (R. v. Hamstall Redware, 3 T. R. 381; 1 Bott, 620.)

It is sufficient, however, although one magistrate sign the indenture when alone, if he be afterwards present when the other executed it, and they both agreed to the propriety of the measure. (R. v. Winwick, 8 T. R. 454; 1 Bott, 625; more fully noticed, title "Poor," Vol. IV.; and see R. v. Stotfold, 4 T. R. 596.)

And where a master had executed the counterpart of an indenture, and afterwards appealed, the Court of Q. B. held, that the sessions had done right in rejecting parol evidence, which was offered to show that at the time when the counterpart was executed by him, the indenture and counterpart were signed by one justice only, though the indenture when produced appeared to have been signed and allowed by two justices; the appellant by having executed the counterpart was estopped, and could not be permitted to contradict his own deed. Willes, J., inclined to think it was sufficient if the justices gave their assent at any time before the appeal. (R. v. Saltern, Cald. 444; 1 Bott, 613, S. C.; see R. v. Forrest, 3 T. R. 38.)

An indenture of apprenticeship sufficiently declares the consent of the proper justices, by describing them of the "said county." (R. v. Hinckley, 1 B. & Ald. 273: more fully noticed, post, "Poor," Vol. IV.) And where by a parish indenture, which purported to be made between the churchwarden and overseers of the parish of D. in the county of Northampton, of the one part, and A. B., of Countesthorpe, in the county of Leicester, of the other part, it was witnessed that the said churchwarden and overseers of the parish of D., with the consent of two of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county dwelling in or near the said parish, had bound, &c.: the justices, in their written consent in the margin of the indenture, described themselves as justices of the county aforesaid: it was held, that the words county aforesaid had the same meaning as the words said county in the body of the indenture; and that it sufficiently appeared by the reference to the latter words, that the consenting justices were justices of the county of Northampton. (R. v. Countesthorpe, 2 Barn. & Adol. 487.)

The allowance in this case should be signed by the justices on the indenture, but it need not necessarily be sealed by them, though it is usually so. (R. v. St. Peter's; R. v. St. Paul's, infra.)

Allowance by justices where the binding is to a master out of the county, &c. in which the binding parish is.

Allowance by Justices where the Binding is to a Master out of the County, &c. in which the Binding Parish is.]—In this case, under the second section of the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, ante, 214, the indenture must be allowed by four distinct justices, two of them being justices of the county from which the apprentice is to be bound, and the other two being justices of the county into which he is to be bound. But by the statute 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 63, ante, 219, an indenture allowed by two justices acting as well for the county or district within which the place, by the officers of which the child shall be bound, shall be situated, as for the county or district within which the place shall be situated wherein such child shall be intended to serve, shall be as good as if allowed by two justices acting for each separately.

The justices in this case have a discretionary power to determine on the propriety of the binding generally, and not merely with regard to the fitness respectively of the master and apprentice. (R v. Mills, 2 B. & Adol. 578.)

Allowance by Justices where the Binding is at public parochial Expense.]—

4. Mode and Law of Binding.

Allowance by justices where binding at expense of public parochial fund.

The first ten sections of the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, apply to cases where the parish officers are the binding parties, but inasmuch as parish officers intending to bind a child apprentice to an improper person, or to a person not residing or carrying on business within a reasonable distance, might, without being actual parties to the indenture, in order to evade the provisions contained in those sections, advance the public parochial funds to the parents of such child in order to bind him out; to remedy that mischief, and to prevent the parish officers from doing indirectly that which the other sections prevented them from doing directly, the 11th section was introduced. "I think we must construe the enacting part of the 11th section to cases where the execution of the indenture is directly or indirectly obtained by parish officers, so as in effect to be a binding by them."—Per Tenterden, C. J., in R. v. St. Peter's, Hereford, 1 B. & Adol. 916. Therefore where A., intending from charitable motives to apprentice a poor person, collected a sum of money for that purpose from several individuals, and among others from the overseers of three different parishes, though there was no evidence that the person belonged to either, and the sums given by the overseers were charged and allowed to them in their respective accounts, and with the sums so collected and with his own money A. paid the premium of apprenticeship; this was held not a binding by the parish officers within the act, and did not require the assent of two justices. (Id.)

So where the trustees of a charity established for placing out poor boys of a parish, the parish officers furnished him, from the parochial funds, with a suit of clothes, all of which would not have been given to him at that time, except with the prospect of his being bound; but no stipulation was made on the subject by or with the master: it was held, that the supply of clothes was not an expense incurred by the parochial funds within the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 11, and therefore that the indenture did not require the approval of two justices. (R. v. Quainton, 3 Nev. & M. 289; 1 Ad. & Ellis, 133, S. C.)

Lands were devised for the relief of the poor of H., one-half of the revenue to be employed for the relief of widows, the other half towards binding out apprentices; the rents were received by the churchwardens, and not mixed with the poor's rate, but kept in a distinct account. A parishioner of H., not receiving parish relief, applied to the churchwardens to provide him with the means of apprenticing his son. The son was apprenticed, and the churchwardens paid the premium, costs of indenture, and expense of clothing the apprentice, out of the charity fund: Held, that this was not an indenture by which an expense was incurred by public parochial funds within 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 11, and therefore not void for want of the approval of two justices according to that statute. (R. v. Halesworth, 3 B. & Adol. 717.)

And in a similar case, were lands were devised to the churchwardens and overseers of L. and their successors, upon trust to apply the rents towards educating twenty poor children, and a part thereof yearly towards apprenticing eight of such children, to be chosen out and allowed by the said churchwardens and overseers and the principal inhabitants:—Held, that this also was not a public parochial fund within the meaning of the act. (Id.)

But where, before the execution of an indenture, the master said that the intended apprentice should have better clothes, the apprentice then applied to the parish officers, who agreed to give him 2*l.* on the execution of the indenture, for the purpose of buying clothes, which they did accordingly; it was held, that the money paid by the parish officers was an expense incurred by reason of an indenture of apprenticeship, within the meaning of the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 11, and therefore that the indenture required the assent of two justices. (R. v. Mattishall, 8 B. & Cres. 733; 3 M. & R. 386, S. C.; more fully noticed, post, "Poor," Vol. IV.)

Where an apprentice is bound out of a parish by his father, but part of the expense is paid out of the parochial funds, the indenture must be approved of by two justices. (R. v. Stoke Damerel, 1 M. & R. 458; 7 B. & Cres. 563, S. C.)

It may be observed that the 11th section of the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, extends only to indentures of apprenticeship of poor children; and, therefore,

4. Mode and Term of Binding.

an indenture whereby a person of the age of twenty-four is bound apprentice, part of the premium being paid out of the public parochial funds, does not require the assent of two justices. (R. v. The Inhabitants of St. John, Bedwardine, 2 Nev. & M. 86; 5 B. & Adol. 169, S. C.)

And though an infant be a pauper in the parish workhouse at the time of the binding and the parish officers pay the premium, still it is not necessary for them to sign the indenture, or that the justices should assent thereto, if the infant be not a parish apprentice within the meaning of the 43 Eliz. c. 2. (R. v. Arundel, 5 M. & Sel. 257.)

The allowance of the indenture to which the parish officers are actual parties is required, by the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 1 (ante, 213), to be signed by two justices, but it need not be under seal. The allowance, however, of an indenture to which the parish officers are not parties, but where they have directly or indirectly procured the binding, and in respect whereof some expense has been expressly incurred by the public parochial funds, is required, by the 11th section of that statute (ante, 216), to be sealed as well as signed by two justices, or it will be void ab initio, and service under it will confer no settlement. This will appear from the cases of R. v. St. Peter's, Hereford, 1 B. & Adol. 916; R. v. St. Paul's, Exeter, 10 B. & Cres. 12; 5 M. & R. 94, S. C.; R. v. Stoke Damerel, 1 M. & R. 458; 7 B. & Cres. 563; 1 M. & R. M. C. 155, S. C.; which will be found more fully noticed while treating of Settlements by Apprenticeships, post, "Poor," Vol. IV.

Stamp on.

Stamps.]—As to the stamp in general, see post, "Poor," Vol. IV. the indenture is in general exempt from it. It is unnecessary to set out the premium in words at length in an indenture relating to a parish apprentice. (R. v. Oadby, 1 B. & Ald. 477; 1 Salk. 68.)

Appeal.

Appeal.]—As to the right of appeal, see ante, 213, 216.

V. Assignment, Discharge, and Settling Disputes as to Parish Apprentices.

Assignment.

We have already noticed how far the assignment of apprentices in general is sanctioned and valid, ante, 195, 196. In most cases the assignment cannot be supported without the consent of all parties, which in the case of parish indentures includes the master and the parish officers.

In general.

In general a parish apprentice under age cannot be discharged by his consent; (R. v. Austrey, 1 Burr, 441;) even though his father consent; (R. v. Langham, Cald. 126;) as he is bound out by the parish officers under a special authority, they ought to be consulted and give their assent to his discharge, otherwise the whole policy of the 43 Eliz. might be defeated.

But such assent is not necessary after he has attained the age of twenty-one, at which time the master and apprentice may cancel the indentures by mutual agreement. For at twenty-one the apprentice is sui juris, and his discharge from the indenture concerns at that time himself and his master only, and there is no necessity to procure the assent of the parish officers. (R. v. Eccleshall Bierlow, 1 Bott, 608.)

We have already seen, ante, 196, as to what amounts to a cancellation of the indentures.

The assignment and vacating of parish indentures is provided for and regulated in most cases by the following legislative enactments of 32 Geo. III. c. 57; 56 Geo. III. c. 139; and by those enactments relating to the discharge of apprentices in general in cases of ill-treatment, misconduct, &c. which we have already noticed, ante, 202, 211.

On death of master.

On death of Master.]—At common law by the death of the master the agreement for the service by the apprentice is put an end to, but the covenant on the part of the master still continues in force, as far as his assets will extend (see ante, 199); so that thereby the apprentice gets all the benefit of being provided for without doing any thing in return (ante, 199).

5. Assignment and Discharge, &c. of.

This is remedied in some cases by the 32 Geo. III. c. 57. By sect. 1 of which act, after reciting, "Whereas by an act, passed in the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled 'An Act for the Relief of the Poor,' it is (amongst other things) enacted, that it shall be lawful for the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of any parish, or the greater part of them, by the assent of two justices of the peace, to bind any children, whose parents they shall judge to be not able to keep and maintain such children, to be apprentices, where they shall see convenient, till such man child should come to the age of twenty-four years, and such woman child to the age of twenty-one years, or the time of her marriage, the same to be as effectual to all purposes as if such child were of full age, and by indenture of covenant bound him or herself; and whereas, by an act made in the eighth and ninth years of the reign of King William, intituled 'An Act for Supplying some Defects in the Laws for the Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom,' after reciting, that there being doubts whether the persons to whom such children were to be bound, under and by virtue of the said statute of the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, were compellable to receive such children as apprentices, that law had failed of its execution, it was therefore enacted, that where any poor children should be appointed to be bound apprentices, pursuant to the said act of Queen Elizabeth, the persons to whom they are so appointed to be bound apprentices shall receive and provide for them according to the indenture signed and confirmed by the two justices of the peace, and also execute the other part of the said indentures, under the penalty, in case of refusal, of the forfeiture of ten pounds for every such offence, to be levied of the goods of the offender, in the manner mentioned in the said act; and whereas, by an act passed in the eighteenth year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled 'An Act to amend such part of an Act, made in the Forty-third Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth,' intituled 'An Act for the Relief of the Poor,' as relates to the binding of parish apprentices,' it was enacted, that when any man child should be bound to be an apprentice, by virtue of the said act made in the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, such child shall be bound to be an apprentice for no longer term than till he shall come to the age of twenty-one years; and whereas in such indentures of apprenticeship, it hath been usual to insert several agreements and covenants to be done and performed by the several parties thereto; (that is to say) an agreement on the part of the apprentice, that he will faithfully serve his master during the term of such apprenticeship; and also several covenants on the part of the master, for himself, his executors and administrators, that he the said master will teach or cause to be taught, such apprentice in the business of husbandry, or in the craft, mystery or occupation which such master then useth, as the case may be; and that such master shall also, during the term of such apprenticeship, find and allow unto such apprentice sufficient meat, drink, apparel, lodging and all other things needful for an apprentice, during such term: and whereas, in the event of the death of the master during the term of such apprenticeship, the agreement for service on the part of the apprentice is at an end, but the covenant for maintenance on the part of the master still continues in force, as far as the master's assets will extend, or doubts have arisen with respect thereto, and, in consequence thereof, such apprentices do frequently, on the death of their master, leave their master's house, and, after living in idleness, return again and become a burden on their master's effects, and so from time to time as they think proper, which is attended with great inconvenience and hardship to the family and personal representatives of such master, and is at the same time an inducement to such apprentice to continue in a disorderly and idle course of life: and whereas the several powers given to justices of the peace for the better ordering of parish apprentices, by the several acts of parliament made for that purpose, do cease and determine on the death of the master, for which a remedy ought to be provided: and whereas several other regulations are necessary to be made respecting parish Provisions to take place on death of original master to extend to subsequent one.

Sect. 4. "In case no such application shall be made as aforesaid within three calendar months next after the death of such master or mistress, or in case such two justices to whom any such application as aforesaid shall have been made, shall not think fit that such apprenticeship should be continued, then the said apprenticeship shall be determined, and the indenture of apprenticeship and covenants therein contained shall be at an end, in like manner as they would have been at the expiration of the term therein mentioned."

If no application made, or justices do not think fit that apprenticeship should continue, it shall be ended.

Sect. 5 "Nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to any parish apprentice, but to such only as shall be living with and shall make part of the family, or shall be in the actual employment of such original master or mistress, or of any subsequent master or mistress appointed under and by virtue of the several provisions of this act at the time of the death of any such masters or mistresses respectively." Enforcing Covenant for Maintenance.]—Sect. 6, reciting that "much difficulty and delay must necessarily happen in bringing an action upon the covenant for maintenance before mentioned contained in any such indenture of parish apprenticeship;" enacts, "That in case any such original master or mistress as aforesaid, [where no premium, 5 Vict. c. 7, or not more than 5*l.* premium has been given, 32 Geo. III. c. 57, s. 9,] or any master or mistress appointed under or by virtue of this act, shall, during the term of any such parish apprenticeship as aforesaid, or if the executors or administrators of such masters or mistresses, any or either of them, having assets, shall, during such three calendar months as aforesaid, refuse or neglect to maintain and provide for any such apprentice, according to the terms of such covenant, it shall and may be lawful for any two justices of the peace of the county, city, town, riding, division, or place in which the parish or place shall lie, to which such apprentice shall belong, on complaint of such apprentice, or of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of such parish or place, by warrant under their hands and seals, to levy, by distress and sale of the personal estate and effects or assets of such master or mistress respectively, such sum or sums of money as shall be necessary for the maintenance and clothing of such apprentice, and as shall also be necessary to reimburse to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of such parish or place any sum or sums of money that shall have been reasonably expended by them for that purpose."

Justices may order sums for maintenance, &c. to be levied by distress.

Apprentices may be assigned with consent of two justices.

Assignment of Apprentice.]—Sect. 7 reciting that it "frequently happens that persons are compellable, under and by virtue of the act of the 9th and 10th years of King William, to take a greater number of parish apprentices than it is convenient for them to maintain or employ in their own families, and they are therefore forced to place out or assign over such apprentices to other persons; and it is proper that such assignment should be legally made, under the inspection and control of the magistrates, as well for the benefit of the apprentice, as that the original master may be discharged from his covenants in respect of such apprentice; and it is fit that the person to whom such assignment shall be made, and also the apprentice, should be made subject to the ordinary jurisdiction of justices of the peace with respect to masters and parish apprentices;" enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful for any master or mistress of any such parish apprentice as aforesaid, [where not more than 5*l.* premium, sect. 9, or no premium, 5 Vict. c. 7, has been given,] by indorsement on the indenture of apprenticeship, or by other instrument in writing, by and with the consent of two justices of the peace of the county, city, town, riding, division, or place where such master or mistress shall dwell, testified by such justices under their hands, to assign such apprentice to any person who is willing to take such apprentice for the residue of the term mentioned in such indenture of apprenticeship: provided always, that such person to whom such apprentice is intended to be assigned shall at the same time, by indorsement on the counterpart of such indenture, or by writing under his or her hand, stating the said indenture of apprenticeship and the indorsement and consent aforesaid, declare his or her acceptance of such apprentice, and acknowledge himself, herself, his or her executors and administrators, to be bound by the agreements and covenants mentioned in the said indenture on the part of the master or mistress of such apprentice to be done and performed; which indorsement or instrument may be in the forms or to the effect mentioned in the schedule hereunto annexed; (post, Forms, Nos. 31, 32;) and in such case such apprentice shall be deemed and taken to be the apprentice of such subsequent master or mistress to whom such assignment shall be made, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and so from time to time, as often as it shall be necessary or convenient for any such subsequent master or mistress to part with any such apprentice; and all justices of the peace shall have the like power and authority, in the several cases last mentioned, with respect as well to the subsequent master or mistress, masters or mistresses, as to the apprentice, as such justices shall then have by any law for the better regulation of parish apprentices." This assignment must be executed by the master, or by some person legally authorised by him. Where the master was abroad, and the assignment was executed by his steward without any other authority than what might be implied from his often having done so before, and the expenses being allowed by the master in his accounts, the Court held the assignment to be bad, and that the apprentice gained no settlement under it; the master should exercise his discretion in making it, and it should therefore be executed either by himself, or by express authority from him. During the first two years he received from her meat and drink. During the third and fourth years he received wages. It was held, first, that no settlement was gained by the service with the sister, the service not being under the indentures; and, secondly, there had been a putting away of the apprentice without the consent of the justices, within the meaning of the 9th section of 56 Geo. III., and that the pauper did not by his service with the sister gain any settlement by hiring and service. (R. v. Shipton, 8 B. & Cres. 88.)

42 Geo. 3, c. 46.

By stat. 42 Geo. III. c. 46, after reciting the power given by the 43 Eliz. c. 2, to overseers of the poor to bind out poor children apprentices: and that "whereas it would tend to the benefit of the children so bound as apprentices, if the overseers of the poor were required to keep a register of all children who shall be so bound:" it is enacted, "That the overseers of the poor of every parish, township, or place, appointed by virtue of the said recited act, passed in the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, shall, from and after the 1st day of June, 1802, and they are hereby required, to provide and keep a book or books, at the expense of the said parish, township, or place, and to enter, or cause to be entered therein, the name of every child who shall be bound out by them respectively as an apprentice, together with the several other particulars, in manner and form required by this act, according to the schedule hereunto annexed; and every such entry, when made in the said register, shall be produced and laid before the two justices of the peace, who shall signify their assent to the indenture of apprenticeship of every such child, at the time when such indenture shall be laid before such justices for their assent, as required by the said recited act; and each entry in the said register shall, if approved of by such justices, be signed by them according to the form marked in the schedule." (a)

Overseers to keep a book for entering name of apprentices bound out by them.

Entry to be signed by two Justices.

Not providing such book, or neglecting to make such entries therein, &c.

Sect. 2. "If any overseer or overseers of the poor shall refuse or neglect to provide and keep such book or books, or to make such entry therein as before directed, or shall destroy, or permit, suffer, or cause to be destroyed, any such book or books, or shall wilfully and knowingly obliterate, deface, Incorporated District Apprentices.

Incorporate district apprentices.

Stat. 20 Geo. III. c. 36, s. 1, after reciting that "several acts of parliament have of late years been made and passed, for the better relief and employment of the poor in particular incorporated hundreds or districts, within that part of Great Britain called England, whereby power is given to bind poor children apprentices under certain restrictions therein mentioned: and whereas doubts have arisen, whether persons are compellable to receive and provide for such poor children as shall be appointed to be bound apprentices to them in pursuance of the said acts;" enacts, "That from and after the 24th day of June, 1780, the respective persons to whom any poor children shall be appointed to be bound apprentices, in pursuance of any act or acts of parliament made and passed for the better relief and employment of the poor in any particular incorporated hundreds or districts, within that part of Great Britain called England, shall, and they are hereby required to receive and provide for such children, according to the indentures to be executed by the directors and acting guardians of the poor for such respective hundreds or districts, for the binding of such poor children, in like manner as persons are now obliged by the laws in being to receive and provide for poor children appointed to be bound apprentices by churchwardens and overseers of the poor, with the assent of two justices of the peace, and also to execute the counterpart of such indentures respectively: and if any person, to whom any poor child shall be appointed to be bound apprentice, in pursuance of any such act of parliament as aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect to receive and provide for such poor child, or to execute the counterpart of the indenture for binding such child as aforesaid, every person so refusing or neglecting, upon proof of such refusal or neglect being made by the oath of one of the directors or acting guardians, or of some other credible witness, before any two justices of the peace acting in and for the county, liberty, or place, within which the incorporated hundred or district to which such child belongs shall be situate, shall forfeit and pay to the directors and acting guardians of the poor for such incorporated hundred or district, or to their treasurer or appointee, to be applied to the relief of the poor within the same, the sum of ten pounds; such penalty or forfeiture to be levied by distress and sale of the goods of the person refusing or neglecting as aforesaid, by warrant under the hands and seals of such justices; saving always to the person, to whom any poor child shall be so appointed to be bound an apprentice, his or her appeal to the next general or quarter session of the peace for that county, liberty or place, whose order therein shall be final."

Persons to whom children shall be bound in pursuance of act for relief of poor in a particular district, shall be obliged to provide for them, &c.

Sect. 2. "Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to compel any person to take any such poor child apprentice as aforesaid, unless such person shall be an inhabitant and occupier of lands, tenements or hereditaments, in the parish to which such child belongs; and that all bastard children born or to be born in the house of industry within any such incorporated hundred or district, shall be deemed to belong to the parish or place where the mother of such bastard child was legally settled."

None except an inhabitant, &c. compellable to take apprentice.

Bastard born in house of industry to belong to mother's parish.

Unless he be an Inhabitant and Occupier.]—R. v. Directors and Guardians of the Poor within the Hundreds of Tunstead and Happing in Norfolk, incorporated by 25 Geo. III. c. 27; 3 T. R. 523; 1 Bott, 622. The directors, under the powers given them by that act, bound a poor male child apprentice to one Reynolds, who was an occupier of land, but not an inhabitant within the said hundreds. He appealed to the sessions, who were of opinion that he was not bound to receive the apprentice, because he was not an inhabitant as well as an occupier But the Court of Queen's Bench said, that incorporated districts under particular statutes were to be governed, as to binding out apprentices, by the same rule as other places. That for some purposes inhabitants and occupiers are synonymous terms; that where a person derives a benefit from property which he occupies in a parish, he is liable to contribute to the ease of it. If indeed the legislature had used imperative words, the Court must have been bound by them, but there are none such in this statute. Order of sessions quashed. (See further, as to the meaning of the term "inhabitant," post, "Constable;" 1 Nev. & P. 328.)

Who an inhabitant.

By stat. 42 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 8, in order to obviate doubts, whether the provisions of the 20 Geo. III. c. 36, extended to apprentices bound under the authority of the several acts which have since passed, by which houses of industry, or establishments for the poor, have been authorised to bind apprentices, the powers of that act are extended to poor children bound under the authority of any subsequent act.

Act of 20 Geo 3, c. 36, extended to bindings under subsequent acts.

See the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 18, &c. ante, p. 217, regulating the mode of binding apprentices in incorporated districts.

Mode of binding.

By the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 63, s. 2, (ante, 220), indentures of apprenticeship, with the seal of the corporation annexed, shall be a sufficient execution within the meaning of the above enactments

By sect. 3, if the allowance of the indenture be by two justices, one of them acting for the county, and one for the town corporate, &c. it will suffice. (Ante, 210.)

R. v. Stowmarket, 9 East, 211. It appeared that the pauper was a poor boy of the age of fourteen, in the house of industry for the poor of the incorporated hundred of Stowmarket: that the guardians of this house were empowered by their incorporating act to apprentice poor children for seven years: that it did not appear that they had ever exercised this power, but instead of binding out the children, they were sent to their respective parishes: the pauper was sent to one R of Stowmarket, to whom he had been allotted by the officers of that parish: this person told the pauper he had procured him a service with one F. of Coddenham. The pauper did not object, conceiving he had no discretion on the subject. On the day after Michaelmas he went to F. who received him, and told him he would give him clothes, and that he was to stay with him a year. The pauper did stay the year, receiving clothes, maintenance and a little pocket money. And per Lord Ellenborough, C. J. (who reprobated this practice of the directors allotting children out, instead of providing for them in the manner pointed out by the act.) The adoption of a contract must be the act of a free agent; and it appears from the circumstances of the pauper's making no objection or agreement, conceiving that he had no discretion on the subject, and that he was obliged to accept the service as being under the control of others, that he cannot be considered as having adopted the act of his master.

Compulsory binding.

Poor child allotted instead of bound.

Where a parish is incorporated with others for the maintenance of its poor, and a guardian is appointed under the 22 Geo. III. c. 83, the churchwardens and overseers may still bind out poor children apprentices, and the indentures Execution by guardians, &c.

need not be signed by the guardians. (R. v. Lutterworth, 5 D. & R. 343; 3 B. & Cres. 487, S. C.)

By an act of parliament all persons seised of land of the annual value of £30 in the hundred of Stow were incorporated by the name of the guardians of the poor within the hundred of Stow in the county of Suffolk, and were to have common seal, and the poor of the hundred were to be placed under the management of the corporation, and the directors and acting guardians, whom the corporation were authorised to appoint in the manner therein mentioned, were empowered with the consent of two justices to bind any poor child under their management apprentice in like manner as churchwardens and overseers of the poor with assent of the justices of the peace were then by law empowered to do.

By indenture the directors and acting guardians of the poor of the hundred of Stow, with the consent of two justices, bound out a poor boy under their management an apprentice for one year, and affixed to the indenture the common seal of the corporation, but it was not otherwise executed by the directors and acting guardians: it was held that the indenture was invalid. (R. v. The Inhabitants of Haughley, 4 B. & Ad. 650; 1 Nev. & M. 525, S. C.)

Binding for a longer term than provided for.

A local statute enacted that certain guardians of the poor should have power to bind children apprentices, provided such children be not bound for a longer term than until they shall have attained the respective ages following, viz. a boy the age of twenty-two and a girl that of twenty: it was held, that an indenture binding a boy for a longer term than that allowed by the act, was not absolutely void, but only voidable. Public Charity Apprentices.

Public charity apprentices.

By the 7 Jac. I. c. 3, s. 2, all sums of money given by any person to be continually employed for the binding out apprentices shall be employed in manner following, unless otherwise ordered by the givers, viz. all corporations of cities, boroughs, and towns corporate, and in places not corporate, the parson or vicar, constables, churchwardens, collectors, and the overseers, or the most part of them, shall have the nomination and placing of such apprentices, and the guiding and employment of such monies, and if they shall not employ the same accordingly, every person offending shall forfeit 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, half to the poor and half to him that shall sue, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information.

Sect. 3. The master that shall receive the money shall be bound with one or two sureties in double the sum unto such corporation, or to the other persons appointed by this act in places not corporate to take the ordering of it, on condition to repay it at the end of seven years, or within three months thereof; and if the apprentice should happen to die within the seven years, then within one year after such death, and if the master shall die within the seven years, then within one year after such master's death.

Sect. 4. The said money shall always be put forth in three months after it shall come to the said parties' hands: and if there be not then fit persons to be bound apprentices within the places where the money is given to be employed, it shall be disposed of for binding some of the poorest children of any adjoining parish, after the same manner.

Sect. 5. And choice shall always be made of the poorest children; and no such apprentice shall be above fifteen years of age when bound.

Sect. 6. The said persons in places not corporate shall yearly, within a month after Easter, account before four, three, or two justices for the said monies, and within ten days after such accounting yield up the monies and bonds remaining in their hands.

Sect. 7. And if any of the trustees shall break their trust, or commit any offence for which no penalty is given by this act, any person may petition the lord chancellor, who may issue a commission to hear and determine the same, and may levy the money misemployed upon such defaulters, or otherwise upon such able inhabitants of the place, as they shall think fittest; and persons aggrieved may appeal to the lord chancellor.

Note.—A summons rather than a warrant, in all such like cases, between party and party, is generally most eligible; yet in this case it seems that a warrant is justifiable to apprehend the master and bring him before the justice (especially if he shall contemn the summons); because it is required that he shall give security to the justice to appear at the sessions, if he shall not conform to the justice's order in the premises.

(a) The act gives this form, see ante, 238. (b) Ibid.

Apprehension of Offenders, see post, "Arrest."

Approver.

AN Approver (probator) is a person indicted of treason or felony, and in prison for the same, who, upon his arraignment, before any plea pleaded, doth confess the indictment, and takes a corporal oath to reveal all treasons and felonies that he knoweth of, and therefore prays a coroner, before whom he is to enter his appeal or accusation against those that are partners in the crime contained in the indictment. (3 Inst. 129.) Who is, &c.

This accusation of himself and oath makes his accusation of another person of the same crime to amount to an indictment; and if his partners are convicted, he shall have his pardon of course. (Id. 129, 130.)

But justices of the peace cannot take cognizance hereof, because they have no authority by their commission to assign a coroner. (Id. 130.)

And besides, as it is in the discretion of the Court whether they will suffer one to be an approver, this method of late hath been seldom practised; and in many cases we have what seems to amount to the same by statute, where pardon is assured to offenders, on discovering and convicting their accomplices. (4 Blu. Com. 330; statutes 4 & 5 Will. III. c. 8; 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 17; 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 23, s. 5; 5 Anne, c. 31, s. 4; 29 Geo. II. c. 30.) The rewards given by these statutes were abolished by 58 Geo. III. c. 70; but by 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 32, the Court have now a discretionary power of rewarding those who have been acting in the apprehension of offenders. See post, "Rewards," Vol. V. Practice as to, obsolete. Reward to.

It is the duty of magistrates, in all cases, to commit an accomplice, and not to admit him to bail, notwithstanding it may be intended to call the accomplice as a witness on the trial. (Rex v. Beardmore, 7 Car. & P. 497.) Should not be admitted to bail.

The practice of the London police-offices is in conformity to this principle, for it is not their custom to release an accomplice who proposes to give evidence as a witness against his associates, but to commit him for the felony; in which case, upon his fully disclosing the facts upon the trial, he will probably receive his pardon; in order, however, to avoid collusion in the testimony between the parties suspected, the accomplice is usually committed to the house of correction and the others to the county prison. (See 1 Chit. C. L. 83; Rudd's case, 1 Leach, 120; 1 Cowp. 336, S. C.)

The engagement of a magistrate to an accomplice, that if he will give his evidence he will experience favour, is merely in the nature of a recommendation to mercy, for no authority is given to a justice of the peace to pardon an offender, and to tell him that he shall be a witness against others. He is not therefore assured of his pardon, but gives his evidence in vinculis, in custody, and it depends upon his behaviour whether he shall or shall not be admitted to mercy. A justice has no authority to select whom he pleases to pardon or to prosecute; and a prosecutor himself has even less power or rather pretence to select than a justice of the peace. It is merely an equitable claim to the mercy of the crown, from the magistrate's express or implied promise of an indemnity upon certain conditions of a most candid disclosure. Accomplice's evidence.

An accomplice admitted as king's evidence, and performing the condition on which he is admitted as a witness, is not entitled as matter of right, to be exempt from prosecution for other offences with which he is charged, but it will be matter in the discretion of the judge whether he will recommend him for a pardon or not. (R. v. Lee, Russ & Ry. C. C. R. 361; R. v. Brunton, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 454; R. v. Duce, 1 Burn's Just. by Chetwynd, 212.) But the judges will not, in general, admit an accomplice as king's evidence, although applied to for that purpose by the counsel for the prosecution, if it appear that he is charged with any other felony than that on the trial of which he is to be a witness. (2 C. & P. 411.)

The confirmation of an accomplice ought to be as to some matter which goes to connect the prisoner with the transaction, and it would be highly dangerous to act on the evidence of an accomplice unconfirmed with respect to Confirmation of.

Approver.

the party accused. (Reg. v. Dyke, 8 Car. & P. 261; S. P. Reg. v. Farlar, 8 Car. & P. 106; R. v. Noakes, 5 C. & P. 526.)

But it seems that in strict law a jury may if they please act upon the evidence of an accomplice, without any confirmation of his statement. (R. v. Hastings, 7 C. & P. 152.) And if an accomplice be confirmed in his evidence against one prisoner, but not confirmed with respect to another, both may be convicted, if the jury think the accomplice worthy of credit. (R. v. Dawber and others, 3 Stark. N. P. C. 34; and see R. v. Jones, 2 Camp. 131.) It has been held that if an accomplice be confirmed as to the particulars of the story, he does not require confirmation as to the person charged. (R. v. Birkett, R. & R. 252.) But this doctrine no longer prevails, as such confirmation proves only the participation of the accomplice. (R. v. Webb, 6 C. & P. 595; R. v. Wilkes, 7 C. & P. 172; R. v. Dyke, 8 C. & P. 261; R v. Farlan, 8 C. & P. 108.) But where upon an indictment against principal and accessaries, the case against the principal was proved by an accomplice, who was confirmed as to the accessaries, but not as to the principal, the jury were ordered to acquit the prisoners. (R. v. Wells & al. M & M. 326; R. v. Moore, 7 C. & P. 270.) In the case of felony the testimony of the wife of an accomplice is not such evidence as a jury ought to rely upon as confirmation of the statement of the accomplice. (R. v. Neale, 7 C. & P. 168.) A prisoner who employed another person to harbour a felon, may be convicted on the uncorroborated testimony of the person who harboured him. (R v. Jarvis, 2 M. & Rob. 40.)

Arraignment.

What.

IN felonies it is absolutely necessary the prisoner should attend his trial personally, though it is not so in misdemeanors. See ante, 177.

When an offender comes into Court, or is brought in by process, sometimes of capias, and sometimes of habeas corpus directed to the gaoler of another prison, the first thing that follows thereupon is his arraignment. (2 Hale, 216.)

Now arraignment is nothing else but calling the offender to the bar of the Court, to answer the matter charged upon him. (Id.)

Standing in irons.

The prisoner, on his arraignment, though under an indictment of the highest crime, must be brought to the bar without irons and all manner of shackles and bonds, unless there be a danger of escape, and then he may be brought with irons. (2 Hale, 219; 4 Bla. Com 323; 2 Hawk. c. 28, s. 1.)

But at this day they usually come with their shackles upon their legs, for fear of an escape, but stand at the bar unbound, till they receive judgment. (2 Hale, 219.)

A distinction, however, has been taken as to the standing in irons, &c. between the time of the arraignment and the trial, and it seems to be the better opinion that the prisoner is not entitled to have his fetters taken off until after he has pleaded. (Layer's case, 16 St. Trials, 94, 99; R. v. Waite, 1 Leach, 26; 2 East's P. C. 570; 2 Hale, 219, n. b.; 4 Bla. Com. 322, n. 2, Chit. Ed.) Arraignment.

There is no necessity that a prisoner, at the time of his arraignment, should hold up his hand at the bar, or be commanded so to do; for this is only a ceremony for making known the person of the offender to the Court; and if he answer that he is the same person it is all one. (2 Hawk. c. 28, s. 2; R. v. Radcliffe, 1 Bla. Rep. 3; Fost. 40, S. C.; 4 Bla. Com. 323; Lord Stafford's case, T. Raym. 408.) Holding up hand.

It is not usual at all to require this of a peer. (2 Hale, 219, n. a.; 2 Hawk. c. 28, s. 2.) Peers.

A peeress, when about to be tried by her peers, may be arraigned kneeling, and rise after joining issue. (1 Leach, 146.)

After this the indictment should be read to the prisoner distinctly in English, that he may understand the charge. (2 Hale, 219; Dalt. c. 185.) Reading indictment.

The indictment is, it seems, to be read, although the defendant has had a copy delivered to him. (R. v. Hensey, 1 Burr. 643.) The mode in which it is read is, after saying "A. B. hold up your hand," to proceed, "You stand indicted by the name of A. B., late of, &c., for that you, on, &c." and then to go through the whole of the indictment. (Dalt. c. 185; post, "Sessions," Vol. V.; "Trial," Vol. VI.; Cro. C. C. 7.) The indictment is to be slowly read if defendant wish it. (2 Leach, 711.)

As to the arraignment of a deaf and dumb prisoner, see "Mute," Vol. V. Deaf and dumb prisoner.

After the indictment is read, the clerk of the arraigns says, "How say you, A. B., are you guilty or not guilty?" (2 Hale, 119; R. v. Hensey, 1 Burr. 643; Cro. C. C. 7.) Upon this, if the prisoner confesses the charge the confession is recorded, and nothing is done till judgment. (4 Harg. St. Trials, 779; Dalt. c. 185.) But if he denies it, he answers, "Not guilty," upon which the clerk of assize, or clerk of the arraigns, replies, that the prisoner is guilty, and that he is ready to prove the accusation. (Id.; 4 Bla. Com. 339.) Asking defendant if guilty, &c.

After issue is thus joined, the clerk usually proceeded to ask the prisoner "How will you be tried?" to which the prisoner replied, "By God and my country;" to which the clerk, in the humane presumption of the prisoner's innocence, rejoins, "God send you a good deliverance." (2 Hale, 219; 4 Bla. Com 341; Cro. C. C. 7.)

Though the prisoner persists in saying he will be tried by his King and his country, and refuses to put himself on his trial in the ordinary way, it will not invalidate a conviction. (R. v. Davis, Gow, C. N. P. 219, and notes there.)

And these unnecessary forms after the plea of not guilty are abolished by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 1, which directs that when a prisoner shall plead not guilty, he shall by such plea, without any further form, be deemed to have put himself on the country for trial, and the Court shall, in the usual manner, order a jury for the trial of such prisoner accordingly.

This being done, he writes on the indictment "po. se," for ponit se, meaning that the defendant put himself upon the country, and thus the form of the arraignment concludes. (2 Hale, 119; Cro. C. C. 7.)

As to standing mute and allowing the plea of not guilty to be entered thereon, see 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 2, post, "Mute," "Plea," Vol. V. Standing mute.

In prosecutions for treason, as the defendant cannot be tried immediately after arraignment, he is remanded by rule to be brought up again at some fixed period to take his trial. (4 Harg. St. Trials, 778.) Postponement of trial.

It was usual to postpone the arraignment of the prisoner on an indictment for murder, at common law, until a year and a day had elapsed, unless the evidence were very clear against him, and no appeal depending. (2 Hawk. c. 28, s. 1.) But now, by 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, the justices shall proceed to try Postponement of arraignment.

Arraignment.

him upon an indictment for murder or manslaughter, though within the year, and, if acquitted, he may, at their discretion, be detained to answer an appeal; for autrefois acquit upon an indictment is no bar to that vindictive proceeding. Other offences, however, remain as at common law, though it is the constant practice not to wait until the termination of the year.

Several defendants.

Where several defendants are to be charged upon the same indictment, they should be all arraigned together on the first day before any of them are brought to trial, and on the next day proceed to trial with one or more of them together, as shall be found most convenient for the purposes of justice. (Kel. 8.)

Several indictments.

If there be two indictments against the same person for the same offence, as for murder and manslaughter, in respect of the same death, or an inquisition of the coroner and an indictment found by the grand jury, the proper course is to arraign him upon both at the same time, and to indorse his acquittal or attainder on them, that he may not again be disturbed by another proceeding. (2 Hale, 228; 1 East's P. C. 371; R. v. Culliford, 1 Salk. 382.) For if he be arraigned upon one only and acquitted, he must be tried upon the other, and plead his former acquittal. (Id.) But if the prisoner be arraigned upon the indictment only, there ought to be an entry of cesset processus on the coroner's inquest, for otherwise the prisoner might be outlawed upon it. (Id.)

Accessaries.

As to the arraignment of accessaries, see ante, 28, 29.

Effect of want of, or mistake in, arraignment.

The total want or omission of the arraignment will be a sufficient ground for reversing the judgment or attainder. (2 Hale, 218; Anon. 3 Mod. 265.) But it is doubtful whether it is absolutely necessary, in case of an appeal at least, to state it on the record. (2 Hawk. c. 28, s. 6.) And it is said, that if it be stated in the record, that the defendant had oyer of the indictment, it shall be intended that he was arraigned formally upon it. (1 Show. 152; Com. Dig. Indictment, M.; and see Gow, 213.)

As to the other proceedings, see post, titles "Sessions," Vol. V.; "Traverse," "Trial," Vol. VI.

(1.) Proclamation for silence, to proceed on business on the arraignment of prisoners.

OYEZ. My lords the Queen's justices do strictly charge and command all manner of persons to keep silence, for they will now proceed to the pleas of the crown and arraignment of prisoners upon their lives and deaths; and all those that are bound by recognizance to give evidence against any of the prisoners which shall be at the bar, let them come forth and give their evidence, or they will forfeit their recognisance. [Then follows the usual form of arraignment as pointed out, ante, 265.]

(2.) Entry or description of the arraignment on the record.

AND afterwards, to wit, at the same delivery of the gaol of the said Lady the Queen of his county aforesaid, on the said Friday, the 6th day of August, in the said second year of the reign of the said Lady the Queen, before the said justices of the Lady the Queen last above named, and others their fellows aforesaid, here cometh the said P. H. under the custody of the said W. B. Esquire, sheriff of the county aforesaid (in whose custody in the gaol of the county aforesaid, for the cause aforesaid, he had been before committed), being brought to the bar here in his proper person by the said sheriff, to whom he is here also committed. And forthwith being demanded concerning the premises in the said indictment above specified and charged upon him, how he will acquit himself thereof, he saith that he is not guilty thereof, and thereof for good and evil he puts himself upon the country. And J. B. Esquire, clerk of the assize for the county aforesaid, who prosecutes for the said Lady the Queen in this behalf, doth the like. Therefore, &c.

Arrest without Warrant.

THIS title is to be understood of arrests in criminal cases only, and not in civil cases; also to arrests without warrant. As to arrests under a warrant, see "Warrant," Vol. VI.

In law, an arrest doth signify the restraint of a man's person, depriving him of his own will and liberty, and binding him to become obedient to the will of the law; and it may be called the beginning of imprisonment. (Lamb. 95; and see further, post, 282.) What an arrest.

I. Who may or may not be Arrested.

All persons are in general liable to an arrest when accused of capital or violent offences. (4 Bla. Com. 289.) Who liable to.

Generally a peer or member of parliament shall have the privilege of peerage and parliament for himself and his servants to be freed from arrests; but for treason, felony and breach of the peace, there can be no privilege. (4 Inst. 24, 25; 1 Bla. Com. 145; 11 Harg. St. Tr. 305; Fortes. 359.) Peers. Members of parliament.

Bodies corporate, acting in a way that would render an individual liable to arrest, cease to retain, of course, their corporate character, and become individually responsible. Bodies corporate.

Stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 23, enacts, "That if any person shall arrest any clergyman upon any civil process while he shall be performing divine service, or shall, with the knowledge of such person, be going to perform the same, or returning from the performance thereof, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer such punishment by fine or imprisonment, or by both, as the Court shall award." But this does not prohibit the arrest of clergymen in criminal cases, in which they may be arrested like other individuals. In Goddard v. Harris, 7 Bingh. 320; 5 M. & P. 122, S. C., the Court discharged a clergyman arrested in his way to the altar, on civil process, but refused to give him the costs of the application, it not appearing that the arrest was with the concurrence of the plaintiff or his attorney. Clergymen.

A married woman may be arrested on a criminal charge, the same as if she were a feme sole. (R. v. Taylor, 3 Burr. 1681; 1 Hawk. c. 1.) Feme covert.

1. Who may be Arrested.

Persons charged in execution.

In the case of R. v. Woodham, 2 Stra. 828, upon a motion for an information against the defendant, who was a justice of the peace, it was holden that a person in execution in the Queen's Bench may be there charged criminally by a justice of the peace's warrant; but that no such justice can take a prisoner of this Court out of the custody of the Court, and send him to the county gaol.

The Court, however, will grant a habeas corpus to the warden of the Fleet to take the body of a debtor confined there before a magistrate, to be examined from time to time respecting a charge of felony or misdemeanor. (Ex parte Griffiths, 5 B. & Ald. 730; see post, "Habeas Corpus," Vol. III.)

When the party in custody on a civil action is thus to be proceeded against criminally, the practice is for the magistrate before whom the complaint is laid to take the information of the accuser and witnesses, and to issue his warrant, which is lodged with the keeper of the place of confinement where the defendant is kept in prison. This officer, on the termination of the civil imprisonment, sends for a constable, who takes the party before a justice of the peace, by whom the accuser, witnesses and prisoner are examined, and the latter is discharged, bailed or committed as on an original accusation. When the party is already in gaol on a criminal charge, and fully committed for trial, it is not usual to bring him from his first custody before a magistrate on a subsequent charge; but the examination of witnesses is taken as in ordinary cases, and a warrant of detainer is sent to the gaoler in whose custody he remains. By this means it will appear on the calendar that he is charged with two offences, and if acquitted on that for which he was first committed, his discharge will be prevented, and, if the offence was committed in another county, he may be sent thither by habeas corpus to take his trial at the assizes. (1 Chit. C. L. 63.)

II. For what an Arrest may be made.

And herein of an arrest,—1st. Where a party is found actually committing an offence; and—2nd. Where he is merely suspected of having committed an offence.

1. Where Party found actually committing an Offence.

At common law.

By the Common Law.]—By the common law any person may do any thing reasonably necessary to prevent the perpetration of a crime, and he may detain the offender until it may be fairly presumed he has changed his purpose. (2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 19; 1 Hale, 589; 2 Roll. Abr. 559; Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 22; R. v. Hunt, R. & M. C. C. 93.)

In a case where the defendants broke and entered the plaintiff's house to prevent him from murdering his wife, the Court of Common Pleas held that they were justified. (Per Chambre, J. Handcock v. Baker and others, 2 Bos. & Pull. 260.)

Any person may apprehend a thief in the mainour, that is, with stolen goods actually in his possession or the like. (1 Show. 24.)

Any person may without warrant apprehend and carry before a magistrate a party about to expose an infant and leave it to perish; (1 Leon. 317; Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 22;) or a party playing with false dice, or other indictable fraud affecting the public. (Sir W. Jones, 249; Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 22.)

If a man be found committing a felony in the night, any one may apprehend and detain him until he can be carried before a magistrate. (R. v. Hunt, R. & M. C. C. 93.)

It seems also that a man may be arrested on fresh pursuit without warrant when found committing a felony, though before his arrest he escape to some distance and has given over his intention to commit the felony. (See R. v. Howarth, R. & M. C. C. 207, post, 280; sed vide 2 Hawk. c. 12; 1 East's P. C. c. 5, s. 72; R. v. Dyson, 1 Stark. 246.)

But no person can in general be apprehended without warrant for a mere misdemeanor unattended with violence, as perjury or libel; (R. v. Wilkes, 2 Wils. 159; 2 Salk. 698; Fortes. 140;) and no private person can apprehend another for a bare breach of the peace after it is over, and where there is no probability of its being renewed, without a warrant, nor could a constable do so at common law, unless the breach were in his view. (2 Inst. 52; 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 21; 1 East's P. C. 300; Bac. Abr. Trespass (3 D.); R. v. Dyson, 1 Stark. 246.)

2. For what may be made.

Before a person interferes to prevent others from fighting, he should first notify his intention to prevent a breach of the peace. (2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 19; 1 Hale, 589; R. v. Rickets, 3 Campb. 68.)

But it seems that where the circumstances are such that a man must know why a person is about to apprehend him, he need not be told why, and the arrest will be legal and the resistance illegal as much as if he had been told. (R. v. Howarth, R. & M. C. C. 207.)

A party cannot be imprisoned for a mere trespass for which an indictment will not lie. (See Green v. Bartram, 4 C. & P. 308; R. v. Storr, 3 Burr. 1701, 1703, 1707; R. v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 357; and see Williams v. Glenister, 6 B. & C. 699, post, 274, 276.)

Malicious injuries.

Under the Malicious Injuries Act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30.]—The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 28, enacts, "That any person found committing any offence against this act, whether the same be punishable upon indictment or upon summary conviction, may be immediately apprehended without a warrant by any peace officer, or the owner of the property injured, or his servant, or any person authorised by him, and forthwith taken before some neighbouring justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law."

To justify a party in apprehending on this enactment, he must find the prisoner in the actual commission of the offence, or take him on quick pursuit, and he must take him directly to a magistrace, and if he take him elsewhere he loses the protection of the act. (R. v. Curran, 3 C. & P. 397; Hanway v. Boultbee, 4 C. & P. 350.) See further the case of R. v. Howarth, R. & M. C. C. 207, post, 273, as to the meaning of the words "found committing."

Larceny.

Under the Larceny Consolidation Act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29.]—The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s 63, enacts, "That any person found committing any offence punishable either upon indictment or upon summary conviction by virtue of this act, except only the offence of angling in the day-time, may be immediately apprehended without a warrant by any peace officer, or by the owner of the property on or with respect to which the offence shall be committed, or by his servant, or any person authorised by him, and forthwith taken before some neighbouring justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law."

With respect to felonies, this provision makes no alteration; but it extends the power of arrest to various misdemeanors. It is taken from the 1 Geo. IV. c. 56, s. 3.

In order to justify an arrest under this act, in an action for false imprisonment, the plea should substantially disclose all that would be required to be stated in an indictment under the act. (Mathews v. Biddulph, 4 Scott, N. R. 54; and see the cases above cited.)

Game.

Under the Game Act.]—By the Game Act, 9 Geo. IV. c. 69, s. 2, persons found committing any offence against it may be apprehended by any person. (See "Game," Vol. III.)

Smuggling.

Smuggling.]—By the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 53, s. 53, persons making fires or signals to smuggling vessels may be apprehended by any person. And see further as to the apprehension of offenders against the customs and excise laws, post, "Excise and Customs," Vol. II.

Vagrants.

Vagrants, &c.]—The 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, contains provisions for arresting idle and disorderly persons, rogues and vagabonds. (See post, "Vagrants," Vol. VI.)

2. For what may be made.

In a recent case it was held, that a man may be arrested under the 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 4, 6, as a person found in a dwelling-house, &c. with intent to commit a felony, if he is seen in the dwelling-house but gets out of it and is taken on fresh pursuit, and it makes no difference that he was not seen getting out of the house, and was found concealing himself, to avoid being apprehended, upon other premises near. (R. v. Howarth, R. & M. C. C. 207; see R. v. Curran, 2 C. & P. 397; Hanway v. Boultbee, 4 C. & P. 350; supra.)

It was also there held, that to make such an arrest legal it is not necessary that the person should have at the time he is arrested a continuing purpose to commit the felony, and that he may be arrested though that purpose is wholly ended. (Id.)

Highway and Turnpike Acts.

Under Highway and Turnpike Acts.]—The 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 50, s. 79, relative to highways in general, and the 3 Geo. IV. c. 126, s. 140, relative to turnpike roads in general, contain clauses empowering surveyors, &c. to secure transient offenders against those acts. See post, "Highways," Vol. III.

Metropolis Road Act.

By the statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 43, s. 73, the Metropolis Road Act, it is enacted, "That the said watchmen and supervisors of the watch shall, during the time they shall be stationed on the said roads, and at all times coming to and going from their duty, use their best endeavours to assist all and every person or persons passing along the said roads, or the footpath adjoining, who shall be any ways assaulted, attacked or ill-treated, and to prevent all mischiefs by fire, and all murders, burglaries, or robberies, and all other outrages, disorders, and misdemeanors, as well on the said roads and the footpaths adjoining, as in all houses and other buildings or grounds by the sides of or near the said roads; and for that purpose it shall be lawful for the said watchmen and supervisors, or any of them, to apprehend and secure all night-walkers, malefactors, rogues, vagabonds, and other disorderly persons who shall be found loitering, wandering, misbehaving themselves, or committing any disorder or offence on the said roads, or refusing to give a good account of themselves, or whom the said watchmen or supervisors shall have reason to suspect of any evil intentions or designs, and to search every such person, or the loading of any horse, ass, mule, cart, or other carriage, which they shall suspect to have any stolen goods thereon or therein, and shall and may confine and secure every such person, and such horse, ass, mule, cart, or other carriage, until such person can be conveniently conveyed before a justice of the peace to be examined and dealt with according to law; and all persons are hereby authorised and required to aid and assist any such watchman or supervisor in securing any such offender or person as aforesaid."

By sect. 74 of the same statute, watchmen and supervisors of the watch are put on the same footing as constables; and by sect. 155, any person may apprehend offenders against that act and take them to a constable or officer."

Police Acts.

Police Acts.]—As to arrests allowed by the Metropolitan Police Acts, see post, "Police," Vol. V.; "Thames," Vol. VI.; and post, 274.

As to arrests allowed by the Rural Police Act, see post, "Constable."

---

2. On Suspicion of having committed an Offence.

On suspicion of guilt.

In every case of treason or felony actually committed, a party may be arrested by any person, if there be reasonable ground to suspect him guilty. (2 Hale, 72; 2 Hawk. c. 12, 13, s. 15; Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 43; Guppy v. Brittlebank, 5 Price, 525; Beckwith v. Philby, 6 B. & Cres. 635.)

And it seems that for every misdemeanor, or other indictable offence, and which subjects the offender to corporal punishment, though it does not amount to an actual breach of the peace, the supposed offender may on a regular warrant of a justice be arrested, on the ground that the law impliedly gives power to issue a warrant when it gives jurisdiction over the offence; (Bane v. Methuen, 2 Bingh. 65; 9 Moore, 161, S.C.;) and it has been considered that perjury and libels, (Butt v. Conant, 4 Moore, 165; 1 B. & B. 548, S. C.; Fortesc. 37, 358; 1 Chit. C. L. 13,) and nuisances when persisted in, (Hall's case, Vent. 169; 1 Mod. 76, S. C.,) subject the offender to such criminal process. 2. For what may be made.

But as we have just seen, no person can in general be arrested without warrant for a mere misdemeanor, unattended with violence, after its commission, as perjury or libel, ante, 269; and it is very unusual for justices out of sessions to grant warrants in such cases, unless the offence be of such a magnitude as requires a warrant. (See Butt v. Conant, 1 Moore, 195; 1 Brod. & B. 548, S. C.)

And clearly, as a general rule, a private individual cannot arrest another without warrant on the ground of suspicion of his having been guilty of a misdemeanor; (Fox v. Gaunt, 3 B. & Ad. 798;) and the same rule also, it seems, applies to constables and other conservators of the peace.

In the case of a man apprehending a person offering goods for sale or pawn, where there is reasonable suspicion of their having been stolen, there is an express enactment that he shall be indemnified, though afterwards it appears that no felony was committed. Thus by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, (the Larceny Consolidation Act,) s. 63, any person to whom any property shall be offered to be sold, pawned, or delivered, if he shall have reasonable cause to suspect that any such offence (i. e. any offence punishable either upon indictment or upon summary conviction under that act,) has been committed on or with respect to such property, is thereby authorised and if in his power is required, to apprehend and forthwith to carry before a justice of the peace the party offering the same, together with such property, to be dealt with according to law.

The question as to what is a reasonable and probable ground for suspicion, is a mixed proposition of law and fact. Whether the circumstances alleged to show it reasonable or not are true and existed, and the inferences drawn from them warranted, is a matter of fact for the consideration of the jury, but whether, supposing them true, they amount to a reasonable ground for suspicion, is a question of law for the opinion of the judge. (Panton v. Williams, 1 G. & D. 504; 2 Ad. & Ell. (N. S.) 69; and the cases there cited.) Grounds of suspicion.

The grounds must be such that any reasonable person, acting without passion or prejudice, would fairly have suspected the party arrested of being the person who committed the offence. (Allen v. Wright, 8 C. & P. 522.) A bare surmise is plainly insufficient. (Davis v. Russell, 5 Bing. 364; 2 M. & P. 590, S. C.; 4 Inst. 144.)

The following causes of suspicion have been generally agreed to justify the arrest of an innocent person for felony:—

(1.) The common fame of the country; but it seems, that it ought to appear upon evidence, in an action brought for such arrest, that such fame had some probable ground. (2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 9.) Common fame.

(2.) Being found in such circumstances as induce a strong presumption of guilt; as coming out of a house wherein murder has been committed, with a bloody knife in one's hand; or being found in possession of any part of goods stolen, without being able to give a probable account of coming honestly by them. (Id. s. 12.) Circumstances of guilt.

(3.) The behaving one's self in such a manner as betrays a consciousness of guilt; as where a man accused of felony, on hearing that a warrant is taken out against him, doth abscond. (Id. s. 13.) Flight.

But the party who flies from an arrest for a capital offence, is not thereby guilty of a capital offence, but only liable to forfeit his goods, when such flight is found against him by the coroner's inquest. (2 Hawk. c. 17, s. 13.)

(4.) The being found in company with one known to be an offender, at the time of the offence, or generally at other times keeping company with persons of scandalous reputation. (2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 11; 2 Inst. 52.) Evil company.

(5.) The living an idle, vagrant and disorderly life, without having any visible means to support it. (2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 10; and see post, title "Vagrant," Vol. VI.) Living idle.

(6.) The being pursued by hue and cry. (2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 14.) Hue and cry.

2. For what may be made.

For if a felony be done, and one is pursued upon hue and cry, that is not of ill fame, suspicious, unknown nor indicted, he may be attached and imprisoned by the law of the land. (2 Inst. 42.)

And though generally no such cause of suspicion as any of the above mentioned will justify an arrest by a private individual where in truth no such crime hath been committed; yet it will be justified in the case of hue and cry, though no crime has been committed. (2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 16.)

Distinction on arrest by private individuals, and arrest by constable on suspicion.

There is a material distinction between arrests without warrant by private individuals and arrests by peace officers on suspicion of an offence. In order to justify the former in causing the imprisonment of a person without warrant, he must not only make out a reasonable ground of suspicion, but must prove that a felony has been actually committed, except in the case of hue and cry, or an indictment found against the party; whereas a constable having reasonable ground, on a charge preferred by another person, to suspect that a felony has been committed, is authorised to arrest the suspected party without warrant, and take him before a magistrate or other proper authority, although no felony has been committed. (Beckwith v. Philby, 6 B. & Cres. 637.; 9 D. & R. S. C.; Samuel v. Payne, Doug. 359; White v. Taylor, 4 Esp. Rep. 80; Cald. 291; Hobbs v. Branscomb, 3 Camp. 420; Stonehouse v. Elliot, 6 T. R. 316.) If indeed a constable of his own head takes a person into custody on suspicion, he must, like a private individual, prove that a crime was actually committed by some one. (Hobbs v. Branscomb, 3 Campb. 420.)

III. By whom the Arrest may be made.

In criminal cases, a person may be apprehended and restrained of his liberty, not only by process out of some Court, or warrant from a magistrate, but frequently by justices, constables, watchmen, or private persons, without any warrant or precept.

And it seems an arrest may be made without warrant, though there be no reason to suspect an escape. (Davis v. Russell, 5 Bing. 354; 2 Moo. & P. 590, S. C.)

1. By Justices of Peace.

By justices of the peace.

If a justice see a felony, or other breach of the peace, committed in his presence, he may in his own person apprehend the offender. And he may also, by word of mouth, command any one to arrest another who shall be guilty of any felony, or actual breach of the peace, in his presence, and such command is a good warrant without writing. (2 Hale, 86.)

Any justice or the sheriff may take of the county any number that he shall think meet, to pursue, arrest, and imprison traitors and felons, or such as break, or go about to break, or disturb, the queen's peace, and every man being required, ought to assist and aid them, on pain of fine and imprisonment. (Dalt. J. c. 171; 2 Hale, 87.)

If the magistrate was not present when a crime has been committed, he ought not, upon mere discretion, to send the party accused to prison, but upon due consideration of evidence adduced before him. And it was observed by Chief Justice Pratt, in R. v. Wilkes, 2 Wils. 158, that in case a magistrate has notice, or a particular knowledge, that a person has been guilty of an offence, yet it is not a sufficient ground for him to commit the criminal, but in that case he is rather a witness than a magistrate, and ought to make oath of the fact before some other magistrate, who should thereupon act the official part, by granting a warrant to apprehend the offender, it being more fit that the accuser should appear as a witness, than act as a magistrate.

A magistrate ought never to act as such in his own case. (Dalt. c. 173; Anon. 1 Salk. 396; post, "Justices," Vol. III.)

For a contempt of court.

If a contempt be committed in the face of a court, (as by rude and contumelious behaviour, by obstinacy, perverseness, or prevarication, by breach of the peace, or any wilful disturbance whatever,) the judge may order the offender to be instantly apprehended and imprisoned at his, the judge's discretion, without any further proof or examination. (2 Hawk. c. 22; 4 Bla. Com. 282, 283; Spilsbury v. Micklethwaite, 1 Taunt. 146; R. v. James, 5 B. & Ald. 894; 1 D. & R. 559, S. C.; Cropper v. Horton, 8 D. & R. 166.) 3. By whom.

In a modern case it was held the exhibiting in an assize town an inflammatory publication respecting a crime about to be tried at the assizes was not a contempt which the judge of assize could interfere to stop by committing the party exhibiting it. (R. v. Gilham, M. & M. C. N. P. 165.)

2. By Sheriffs and Coroners.

A sheriff may apprehend and commit to prison all persons who break the peace or attempt to break it, and may bind any one in a recognizance to keep the peace; and he may and is bound ex officio to pursue and take all traitors, murderers, felons, and rioters, and all persons above fifteen are required to be assisting him therein upon his summons, otherwise they may be fined and imprisoned. (2 Hale, 87; 4 Bla. Com. 289; 2 Hen. V. c. 8.) By sheriffs.

If a sheriff be assaulted in the execution of his duty, he may apprehend the offender and keep him in prison for a reasonable time to be carried before a magistrate. (2 Hale, 87.)

A coroner is a conservator of the peace in relation to all felonies, and may arrest, or cause another to arrest, any felon. (2 Hale, 88; 4 Bla. Com. 289.) By coroners.

---

3. By Constables.

A constable is a conservator of the peace, and may at common law apprehend a party guilty of treason or felony without any warrant. (4 Bla. Com. 289; 1 Hale, 587; 1 East's P. C. 303.) And in general this common law authority of a constable is applicable to tithing men, headboroughs, and borsholders. (2 Hale, 95; Selw. N. P. 3d ed. 830, n.) By constables. For felony.

He may also apprehend a supposed offender for a felony without warrant, upon a reasonable charge made by a third party, and this although upon investigating the charge it turn out that no felony has been committed. (1 East's P. C. 300; Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald. 291; White v. Taylor, 4 Esp. 80; M'Clougan v. Clayton, Holt's C. N. P. 470; Davis v. Russell, 5 Bing. 354; 2 Moo. & P. 590, S. C.; Beckwith v. Philby, 6 B. & C. 637; Samuel v. Payne, Dougl. 359; Cowles v. Dunbar, 2 Car. & P. 565; R. v. Thompson, R. & M. 80.) The charge need not be a formal and accurate one. (R. v. Ford, R. & Ry. C. C. 329.) But there must in all cases exist a reasonable charge and suspicion. And it seems that a constable is not justified in apprehending and imprisoning a person on suspicion of having received stolen goods on the mere assertion of one of the principal felons. (Isaacs v. Brand, 2 Stark. Rep. 167.) On suspicion of felony.

It is said that in all cases of a charge made by another person, the person suspecting ought to be present at the arrest; for the justification of the constable must be that he did aid the other in taking the party suspected. (2 Hale, 91.)

In general, however, a constable cannot by the common law, any more than a private person, of his own accord, and on his own suspicion, without any express charge or warrant, justify an arrest of a supposed offender for a felony, unless he can show that a felony has been actually committed, by some one, as well as a reasonable ground for suspecting the party arrested of it. (2 Inst. 52; 1 Hale, 90; White v. Taylor, 4 Esp. 80; M'Cloughan v. Clayton, Holt's C. N. P. 478; and see Parton v. Williams, 3 B. & Ald. 330; and as to what is a reasonable ground for suspicion, see ante, 271.) There are, however, authorities in favour of an exception to this rule in the case of night-walkers, and persons reasonably suspected in the night of felony. (Lawrance v. Hedger, 3 Taunt. 14; 1 East's P. C. 303; 3 Hawk. c. 12, s. 20; 2 Hale, 89; 2 Inst. 52; Bac. Abr. Constable, (C).

A constable may arrest any one for a breach of the peace in his presence, and keep him in his house or the stocks until he can bring him before a ma- For breach of the peace.

3. By whom. gistrate. (1 Hale, 587; 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 8; see Cook v. Nethercote, 6 C. & P. 741.)

A constable also has by virtue of his office authority to interpose upon his own view for the purpose of preventing a breach of the peace or quelling an affray, and all persons who assist constables in such interposition, and by the constable's request, are protected. (1 East's P. C. 303.)

Also where an offence is threatened in his presence a constable may, to prevent the offence, arrest the party menacing, and detain him in custody till the threat is over, or carry him as soon as he can conveniently before a magistrate. (2 Hale, 88; 1 East's P. C. 306; Cook v. Nethercote, 6 C. & P. 741; Timothy v. Simpson, 1 C. M. & R. 760, post, 276; Howell v. Jackson, 6 C. & P. 723; Baynes v. Brewster, 1 Gale & D. 669.)

So he may apprehend any person who encourages a prisoner in his custody to resist, (White v. Edmunds, Peate, 89,) or otherwise obstruct him in the execution of his duty, (Levy v. Edwards, 1 C. & P. 40,) or any one joining in the offence. (Lewis v. Arnold, 4 C. & P. 354.)

But a constable has not without warrant any authority to arrest upon a charge of a mere breach of the peace after it is over. (Selw. N. P. 3d. ed. 830; 2 Inst. 52; 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 20, c. 13, s. 8; Strickland v. Pell, 2 Lord Raym. 1301; Cowper v. Henley, 2 Esp. 540; and see Matthews v. Biddulph, 4 Scott, N. R. 54.) And in a recent case, where a constable without warrant took a man in custody upon a charge of his having assaulted and ill used another, the charge not being made in the presence of the alleged offender, the arrest was considered illegal; (R. v. Curran, R. & M. C. C. 132;) and the alleged offender having escaped, and stabbed an assistant of the constable in his attempt to retake him, it was held it would not have been murder had he killed him, but only manslaughter. (Id.)

Where A. went to a house at night, demanding to see the servant. He was told to depart and would not. A constable was sent for, and A. went from the house to the garden. When the constable arrived A. said that if a light appeared at the windows he would break them, upon which the constable took him into custody; it was held that the constable was not justified in so doing. (R. v. Bright, 4 C. & P. 387.)

A constable may be justified in removing a person from a church for disturbing the congregation in time of divine service, although no part of such service was actually going on at the time, but he has no right to detain such person in custody afterwards for the purpose of taking him before a magistrate. (Williams v. Glenister, 2 B. & C. 699.) And it seems that the churchwardens have the same power. (Burstow v. Henson, 10 M. & W. 105.)

For misdemeanor. And generally speaking, a constable has not, without warrant, any authority to arrest a person on a charge of misdemeanor after it is over. And in this respect there is no distinction between one kind of misdemeanor and another, such as breach of the peace, and fraud, &c. (See Fox v. Gaunt, 3 B. & Ad. 798; Matthews v. Biddulph, 4 Scott, N. R. 54; 1 Dowl. N. S. 216, S. C.)

By statutes. By the Malicious Injuries Act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 28, and the Larceny Consolidation Act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 63, the Game Act, 9 Geo. IV. c. 69, s. 2, the Smuggling Act, 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 53, s. 53, power is given to constables, peace officers, and others, to apprehend persons found committing offences under those acts, and see also the provisions of the Vagrant Act, post, "Vagrant," Vol. VI.

The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 63, (the Metropolitan Police Act,) authorises constables, belonging to the Metropolitan Police District, to apprehend offenders without a warrant, see "Police," Vol. V. And see the Rural Police Act, tit. "Constable."

He should notify his authority. Where a constable acts without warrant, by virtue of his office of constable, he should, unless the party be previously acquainted with it, notify that he is constable, or that he arrests in the Queen's name, and for what. (See 1 Hale, 458, 589; 1 Hawk. 31, s. 49, 50; Mackally's case, 9 Co. 69; "Homicide," Vol. III.) And this applies more particularly to a special bailiff. (2 Russ. 737.) But it will, it should seem, be sufficient, if from the circumstances the offender may collect he is a constable: and if he show his staff of office it will suffice. (1 Hale, 460; Fost. 310; 1 Russ. 738.) And in the case of an arrest by a private person, it has been held, that where the circumstances are such that a man must know why a person is about to apprehend him, he need not be told, and the arrest will be legal and the resistance illegal, as much as if he had been told. (R. v. Howarth, R. & M. C. C. 207.)

3. By whom.

If upon a reasonable charge of felony or other crime for which a constable may arrest without warrant, the constable refuse to arrest or make hue and cry he may be indicted and fined. (Cro. Eliz. 654; 2 Hale, 90; 1 East's P. C. 301; 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 7.)

May be indicted for neglect.

It is much the best for the constable in all cases, not requiring immediate interference, to obtain a magistrate's warrant before apprehending a party, and if he does he will be entitled to the benefit of the 24 Geo. II. c. 44. s. 8, which protects him when acting under a warrant on his granting on request a copy thereof. (See "Constable," post, Vol. I.)

Best for constable to have a warrant.

4. By Watchmen, Beadles, &c.

Watchmen, patrols, and beadles have authority at common law to arrest and detain in prison, for examination, persons walking in the streets at night whom there is reasonable ground to suspect of felony, although there is no proof of a felony having been committed. (Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt. 14; 2 Hale, 96, 98; 1 East's P. C. 303; 2 Inst. 52; and see 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 3; "Vagrant," Vol. VI.; also the Police Acts, "Police," Vol. V.; and ante, 274.)

By watchmen, beadles, &c.

In R. v. Bootie, 2 Burr. 164, is an indictment against a constable for suffering a street-walker, taken up by a watchman, to escape.

The Metropolis Road Act gives various powers to watchmen in apprehending individuals. (7 Geo. IV. c. 142, s. 73, 74; and see title "Highways," Vol. III.)

Other statutes give the same power to watchmen while on duty as constables have to apprehend persons suspected of a felony. (7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 63, ante, 274; "Police," Vol. V.)

A watchman having apprehended a party may discharge himself from liability for an escape by delivering him to a constable, or he may himself take him before a magistrate. (Dalt. J. c. 104; R v. Bootie, 2 Burr. 164.)

Watchmen may be appointed by constables as their assistants, subject to the custom of the place for the appointment of watchmen; and a watchman thus appointed has for the time being the authority of the constable as his deputy. (1 Bla. Com. 4th ed. 292; 1 Chit. C. L. 24.)

---

5. By Private Persons.

All persons who are present when a felony is committed, or a dangerous wound given, are bound to apprehend the offender, on pain of being fined and imprisoned for their neglect, unless they were under age at the time. (2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 1.)

By private persons when enjoined.

Also every private person is bound to assist an officer demanding his help for the taking of a felon, or the suppression of an affray, (Id. s. 12,) and may be indicted if he refuses without lawful excuse. (Reg. v. Brown, 1 C. & Mar. 314.)

And it is the duty of all private persons to arrest without warrant any person detected in the attempt to commit a felony. (R. v. Hunt, R. & M. C. C. 93; R. v. Howarth, R. & M. C. C. 207.) And though the offender run away, and give over his intention of committing the felony, still it seems, on fresh pursuit, he may be apprehended by any one. (R. v. Howarth, R. & M. C. C. 207.)

We have already seen that if a felony has been actually committed by some one, a private person may arrest, or direct a peace officer to arrest a party whom he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to have been guilty of it, though in fact such party be really innocent; but he is not absolutely bound to do so like a peace officer; and he does so at his peril, for if these grounds for suspecting the party be not reasonable, or there has been no felony committed, the person arresting is guilty of a false imprisonment, and liable accordingly. (See ante, 271.)

When permitted.

3. By whom.

Where an indictment is found against a party, a private individual may arrest him; for in this case he does not act on his own suspicion, but upon the finding of the fact by the grand inquest on oath, which is suspicion grounded on high authority, and is a charge against the party on record. (Dalt. c. 170, s. 5; 1 Hawk. c. 28, s. 12; 1 East's P. C. 301.)

Any person may, it is said, legally arrest in the night time a suspicious night-walker, though he be quite innocent. (1 East's P. C. 303. Per Lawrence, J., in Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt. 15.)

He may arrest a common notorious cheat going about the country with false dice, and being actually caught playing with them, in order to take him before a justice. (Jones, 249; Cro. Car. 274; and see 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 20.)

Any person may justify breaking and entering a party's house, and imprisoning him, to prevent him from murdering his wife, who cries out for assistance. (Handcock v. Baker, 2 B. & P. 260.)

So any one may arrest a lunatic who seems disposed to do mischief. (Bac. Ab. Trespass (D. 3.)

So any person may arrest another for the purpose of putting a stop to a breach of the peace committed in his presence. (Ante, 274; 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 8.) Care must be taken, however, that what had occurred did actually amount to a breach of the peace. Where a man and his wife refused to go out of the shop of a baker, and continued to abuse him in relation to an alleged overcharge, until a crowd of 100 to 150 persons collected round the shop, and obstructed the public passage: it was held, that the baker was justified in giving the man and his wife into custody, and that their conduct amounted to a breach of the peace, and that trespass would not lie. (Cohen v. Huskisson, 2 M. & W. 477; Ingle v. Bell, 1 M. & W. 516.) But proof of annoyance and disturbance by a person present at a meeting, such as crying "Hear, hear," and putting questions to a speaker, and making observations on his statement, will not justify the chairman of the meeting in giving such person in custody. (Wooding v. Oxley, 9 Car. & P. 1.) Nor is it a sufficient plea to an action for false imprisonment that the defendant was possessed of a house, and that the plaintiff was then making a great disturbance therein, and refused to depart when requested, and was in a great heat and fury, ready and desirous to make an affray, and cause a breach of the peace, whereupon the defendant gave the plaintiff into custody. (Wheeler v. Whiting, 9 C. & P. 269.)

But a private person, no more than a constable, cannot without warrant apprehend another for a misdemeanor or bare breach of the peace after it is over. (Ante, 274.) It seems, however, that he may arrest if there are good and reasonable grounds for apprehending that an affray or other breach of the peace will be continued or renewed. "It is clear (said Parke, B. in Timothy v. Simpson, 1 C. M. & R. 762,) that any person present may arrest the affrayer, at the moment of the affray, and detain him till his passion has cooled and his desire to break the peace has ceased, and then deliver him to a peace officer. And if that be so, what reason can there be why he may not arrest an affrayer after the actual violence is over, but whilst he shows a disposition to renew it by persisting in remaining on the spot where he has committed it? Both cases fall within the same principle, which is, that for the sake of the preservation of the peace any individual who sees it broken may restrain the liberty of him whom he sees breaking it, so long as his conduct shows that the public peace is likely to be endangered by his acts. In truth, whilst those are assembled together who have committed acts of violence, and the danger of their renewal continues, the affray itself may be said to continue; and during the affray the constable may not merely on his own view, but on the information and complaint of another, arrest the offender, and of course the person so complaining is justified in giving the charge to the constable." And see Baynes v. Brewster, 1 G. & Dav. 669.

By the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 6, any person whatever may apprehend an offender under that act, and convey him before a justice, or deliver him to a constable for that purpose. (See "Vagrant," Vol. VI.) 3. By whom.

Persons found committing an offence against the Malicious Injuries Act, may be apprehended without warrant by any peace officer, the owner of the property, his servant, or person authorised by him. So, with respect to offences against the Larceny Act, the Game Act, and the Smuggling Act, the offender may be apprehended by any person. (See ante, 274.)

By the Larceny Act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 63, where any property is offered to be sold or pawned to any person, if he has reasonable cause to suspect the party offering it, such person is not only authorised but required (if in his power) to arrest the party, and carry him before a justice.

Under the Police Acts private persons may also arrest in certain cases without warant. (Post, "Police," Vol. V.)

Before a private person interferes to prevent a breach of the peace, as an affray, he is bound to notify his intention of so doing, otherwise the parties engaged may imagine that he comes to act as a party. (1 East's P. C. 306; Fost. 310.) But where the circumstances are such that a man must know why a person is about to arrest him, he need not be told, and the arrest will be legal, and the resistance illegal, as much as if he had been told. (R. v. Howarth, R. & M. C. C. 207.) Notifying authority.

It is always safest for a private person to obtain a warrant when time will allow, because where the arrest is under a warrant no action of trespass, but only an action on the case, lies, and the latter cannot be sustained unless the plaintiff can show that the charge was without probable cause as well as malicious; and if the magistrate should erroneously issue his warrant, the party accusing will not in general be liable as a trespasser. (West v. Smallwood, 3 M. & W. 418; Leigh v. Webb, 3 Esp. Rep. 166; Belk v. Broadbent, 3 T. R. 185; Boote v. Cooper, 1 T. R. 535.) But an arrest, when a warrant ought previously to have been issued, will not be rendered legal by a subsequent issuing of that authority. (Bac. Ab. Trespass, D. 3.) Safest to obtain a warrant.

In Fox v. Gaunt, 3 B. & Adol. 798, Lord Tenterden remarked, that in cases of misdemeanor it was much better that parties should apply to a magistrate for a warrant than take the law into their own hands, which they were too apt to do.

IV. Time and Place of Arrest.

A person charged on a criminal account may be apprehended at any time in the day or night. (9 Co. Rep. 66; Davis v. Russell, 5 Bing. 354; 2 B. Moore, 590, S. C.) Time of arrest.

The statute 29 Car. II. c. 7, s. 6, prohibits arrests on Sunday, except in the cases of treasons, felonies, and breaches of the peace. (See "Lord's Day," Vol. III.)

No place affords protection to offenders against the criminal law, and they may be arrested any where and whoever they may be. (See Bac. Ab. Trespass, D. 3.) Place of arrest.

If a person having committed a felony abroad come here, he may be arrested here, and conveyed and given up to the authorities of the country, against the laws of which the offence was committed. (Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 34.)

In a recent case where a party against whom a true bill for perjury had been found, and a warrant for her apprehension granted, was apprehended abroad, and brought here in custody and committed to prison for want of bail, the Court refused to discharge her on the ground that she had been improperly apprehended in a foreign country. (Ex parte Scott, 4 Man. & R. 361; 9 Barn. & Cres. 446, S. C.)

V. The Manner of an Arrest.

Notifying authority.

As to the necessity of notifying constable's authority, see ante, 274; or a private person's, ante, 275.

Manner of arrest, and what constitutes one.

In making the arrest, the constable or party making it should actually seize or touch the offender's body, or otherwise restrain his liberty. The mere requiring the party to go before the justice is no arrest or imprisonment. (Dalt. 170; Berry v. Adamson, 6 B. & Cres. 528; Gage v. Radford, 3 C. & P. 464.) For bare words will not make an arrest, without laying hold on the person, or otherwise confining him. But if an officer come into a room, and tell the party he arrests him, and lock the door, this is an arrest; for he is in custody of the officer. (Genner v. Sparkes, 1 Salk. 79; 2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 1; Williams v. Jones, Cas. temp. Hardw. 301; Grainger v. Hill, 4 Bingh. N. C. 212; and see Arrowsmith v. Le Mesurier, 2 N. R. 211; Bridgett v. Coyney, 1 Man. & Ryl. 211, 215; M. & M. 244.) So if the officer or other person say to a party, "I arrest you," and the party acquiesce and go with him, this will be a good arrest. (Rupen v. Lucas, 1 C. & P. 153.)

Taking the power of the county.

A private person cannot raise power to arrest or detain a felon. (1 Hale, 601.)

But any justice, or the sheriff, may take of the county any number that he shall think meet, to pursue, arrest, and imprison traitors, murderers, robbers, and other felons; or such as do break, or go about to break, or disturb the queen's peace: and every man, being required, ought to assist and aid them, on pain of fine or imprisonment. (Dalt. c. 171; and Reg. v. Brown, 1 C. & Mar. 314.)

It is not justifiable for a justice, sheriff, or other officer, to assemble the posse comitatus, or raise a power or assembly of people, upon their own heads, without just cause. (Id.)

But where a justice, sheriff, or other officer, is enabled to take the power of the county, it seemeth they may command and ought to have the aid and attendance of all knights, gentlemen, yeomen, husbandmen, labourers, tradesmen, servants, and apprentices, and all other persons being above the age of fifteen years, and able to travel. (Id.)

Women, ecclesiastical persons, and such as be decrepit or diseased, shall not be compelled to attend them. (Id.)

And in such case it is referred to the discretion of the justice, sheriff, or other officer, what number they will have to attend on them, and how and after what manner they shall be armed or otherwise furnished. (Id. See further, post, "Hue and Cry," Vol. III.)

Breaking outer doors.

It seems to be the better opinion that a private individual, in order to justify breaking open doors without warrant, must in general prove the actual guilt of the party arrested, and that it will not suffice to show that a felony has actually been committed by another person, or that reasonable ground of suspicion existed; but that an officer, acting bonâ fide on the positive charge of another, will be excused, and the party making the accusation will alone be liable. (Dougl. 358; Dick. J. Arrest, III.; 1 Hale, 583; 2 Hale, 92; and the cases and law fully collected in 1 Chit. C. L. 53.)

But the breaking an outer door is, in general, so violent, obnoxious and dangerous a proceeding, that it should be adopted only in extreme cases, where an immediate arrest is requisite.

In the case of a misdemeanor a demand of admittance should always be first made before breaking open outer doors. (Lannock v. Brown, 2 B. & Ald. 592; 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 1.) No precise form of words of demand is necessary.

In some extreme cases even a private individual may break and enter the house of another in order to prevent him from murdering another, who cries out for assistance. (Handcock v. Baker, 2 B. & P. 260.)

When an affray is made in a house in the view or hearing of a constable, he may break open the house in order to suppress it; (2 Hale, 95; 1 Hawk. c. 63; 2 Hawk. c. 14;) and the like where those who have made an affray in his presence, fly to a house and are immediately pursued by him. (2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 8.) 5. Manner of.

So if there be a disorderly noise or disturbance in a house at an unseasonable time of night, and especially in an inn, a constable or his watch may break into it to see and suppress the disorder. (2 Hale, 95.)

So when a person escapes from a lawful arrest, and shelters himself in a house, the constable may break into it and retake him, whatever the cause of the arrest may have been. (2 Hawk. 87.) But if it be not on fresh pursuit, the officer, it seems, should have a magistrate's warrant. (1 East's P. C. 324.)

An officer or party who gains admittance into the house, under the above circumstances, may, if necessary to regain his liberty, break open the outer door. (Id. See Pugh v. Griffiths, 7 Ad. & Ell. 827.)

As to how far outer doors may be broken open under a warrant, see post, "Warrant," Vol. VI., where the law as to breaking open doors is more fully treated of.

VI. What is to be done after the Arrest.

When a constable arrests a party for treason or felony, he must take him before a magistrate to be examined as soon as he reasonably can. (Com. Dig. Imprisonment, H. 4; Wright v. Court, 4 B. & Cres. 596; 6 D. & R. 623, S. C.) Where a constable detained a party three days, in order that the person, whose goods had been stolen, might have an opportunity of collecting his witnesses and bringing them to prove the felony, it was held he was not justified in so doing. (Wright v. Court, 4 B. & Cres. 596; 6 D. & R. 623, S. C.) By constables.

Though the arrest be at night, or at any other time, when it is not possible or seasonable to take before a magistrate, it seems a constable is justified in a case of treason or felony in taking the party out of his house to a gaol or other place for safe custody, until he can take him before a magistrate. (Davis v. Russell, 2 B. Moore, 590; 5 Bing. 354, S. C.)

If the party resist his apprehension or attempt to escape, it seems the constable may handcuff him, or use any other reasonable and necessary means to prevent his escaping, otherwise not. (Wright v. Court, 4 B. & Cres. 596; 6 D. & R. 623, S. C.)

So if there be danger of a present rescue, or if the party be sick, then the constable may keep him in a house or other place of security until such time as it may be reasonable to take him before a magistrate. (2 Hale, 120.)

And see further as to rescue, post, "Escape," Vol. II.; "Rescue," Vol. V.

If the constable or his watch hath arrested affrayers, or persons drinking in an alehouse disorderly at an unseasonable time of night, he may put the persons in the stocks, or in a prison, if there be one in the vill, till the heat of their passion or intemperance is over, though he deliver them afterwards, or till he can bring them before a justice. (2 Hale, 95.)

Where an arrest has been made without a warrant the constables may in some cases take the party's word for his appearance before a magistrate; and this is frequently done where the charge is for an assault of a trifling nature, and the defendant is of good repute, and there is no probability of his absconding. (See Hardy v. Murphy, 1 Esp. 295; Arrowsmith v. Le Mesurier, 2 N. R. 211; 1 Ch. C. L. 59.) As to how far this may done where there is a warrant, see post, "Warrant," Vol. VI.

When the prisoner is brought before the magistrate, he is still considered to be in the custody of the officer, until he has been either discharged, bailed, or committed to prison. (2 Hale, 120.)

It seems a gaoler will be protected in receiving a party into custody, although it appear he was wrongfully taken; because it is his duty to receive persons brought by a proper officer, without inquiring into the legality of the arrest. (Sir T. Jones, 214; Brandling v. Kent, 1 T. R. 60; Hobbs v. Branscomb, 3 Campb. 420. See further, post, "Gaol," Vol. III.) By gaolers.

When a private person has apprehended another for treason or felony, he should deliver him over to a constable, or carry him before a magistrate or By private persons.

6. What to be done after.

to any gaol in the county. (1 Hale, 589; 2 Hale, 77; 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 7; R. & M. C. C. 93; Com. Dig. Imprisonment, H. 4.) It is rarely the case that a private person carries the party to gaol. He cannot apprehend and discharge the party at his own pleasure; except perhaps in the case of an affray or breach of the peace, when it seems he may detain the offender until his passion is over, or till there be no opportunity for his doing the threatened mischief. (2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 8; see R. v. Curran, 3 C. & P. 397; 5 East, 294.) Neither can he, it seems, apprehend and deliver the party over to a constable only, but he must follow up the charge by attending before the magistrate, and then only he ceases to be an actor. The law gives no authority even to a justice to detain a person suspected, but for reasonable time till he may be examined. (Com. Dig. Imprisonment, H. 5; Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 28; 5 Man. & R. 53, S. C.; post, "Examination," Vol. II.)

Escapes.

As to escapes, see post, Vol. II. title "Escape."

If a party imprisoned obtain his release by undue means, as by fraudulently writing a letter in the name of a magistrate authorising his discharge, he may be indicted for forgery at common law. (R. v. Harris, 6 C. & P. 129.)

I. What an Assault.

An assault, (assultus, from the French assayler,) is an attempt or offer, with force and violence, to do a corporal hurt to another, whether from malice or wantonness; as by striking at him with or without a weapon, though the party striking misses his aim; so drawing a sword, throwing a bottle or glass, with intend to wound or strike, presenting a gun or pistol at a person within the distance to which the gun or pistol will carry, though they were in fact not loaded, (R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483,) or pointing a pitchfork at a person standing within reach; holding up one's fist at him, in a threatening or insulting manner, or with such other circumstances as denote at the time an intention (coupled with a present ability) of using actual violence against his person, will amount to an assault. (1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 1, 2; Bull. N. P. 15; 1 Selw. N. P. 27; 1 East's P. C. 406; 3 Bla. Com. 120.) What an assault.

From hence it clearly follows that one charged with an assault and battery may be found guilty of the assault, and yet acquitted of the battery; but every battery includes an assault: therefore on an indictment for assault and battery, in which the assault is ill laid, if the defendant be found guilty of the battery it is sufficient. (1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 1.)

Every unlawful imprisonment includes an assault. (1 Hawk. c. 60, s. 7; 4 Bla. Com. 218.)

Mere words will not amount to an assault, though perhaps they may in some cases serve to explain a doubtful action. (1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 1; Bull. N. P. 15; Tuberville v. Savage, 1 Mod. 3.)

In an action for an assault, the declaration stated, that the defendant assaulted the plaintiff, and also then presented a certain pistol loaded with gunpowder, ball, and shot, at the plaintiff, and threatened and offered therewith to shoot the plaintiff and blow out his brains. It was proved, that the parties, being on board a ship, the defendant (who was the captain) went into his cabin, and brought out a pistol, and cocked it at the plaintiff's head, saying, that if the plaintiff was not quiet he would blow his brains out: and it was held, that if the defendant, at the time he presented the pistol, used words showing that it was not his intention to shoot the plaintiff, this would be no assault. (Blake v. Barnard, 9 Car. & P. 626.)

If a man strike at another, but at such a distance that he cannot by possibility touch him, it is no assault. (Com. Dig. Battery, (C.)) But if A. advances in a threatening attitude with his fists clenched towards B., with an intention of striking him, so that his blow would have almost immediately reached B. if he had not been stopped by a third person: this would be an assault in point of law, though at the particular moment when A. was stopt, he was not near enough for his blow to take effect. (Stephens v. Myers, 4 C. & P. 349.)

So riding after a person and obliging him to run away into a garden to avoid being beaten is an assault. (Martin v. Shoppee, 3 C. & P. 373.)

If a master takes indecent liberties with a female scholar, without her consent, though she does not resist, it is an assault. (R. v. Nichol, R. & R. C. C. 130.)

So making a female patient strip naked, under the pretence that the defendant, a medical man, could not otherwise judge of her illness, was held an assault, he himself having taken off her clothes; the jury in that case finding that the stripping of her was wholly unnecessary, and that the prisoner had no belief that it would assist him in judging of her case. (R. v. Rosinski, R. & M. C. C. 19.)

And where the master of an union workhouse inflicts personal chastisement on a female pauper in an indecent manner, he is guilty in law of an assault, even though the extent of the correction be within the limits of moderation. (Reg. v. Miles, 6 Jur. 243.)

So it is an assault in parish officers to cut off the hair of a pauper in the poor-house by force against her will. (Forde v. Skinner, 4 C. & P. 239.)

On an indictment for assaulting a female child with intent to abuse and carnally to know her, the jury found that the prisoner assaulted the child with intent to abuse her, but negatived the intention charged carnally to know her. Holroyd, J. held that the averment of intention was divisible, and sentenced the prisoner to twelve months' imprisonment. (R. v. Dawson, 3 Stark. 62. and see R. v. Evans, id. 35.)

Putting a deleterious drug into coffee in order that another may take it, is, if it be taken, an assault upon the person who takes it. (Reg. v. Button, 8 Car. & P. 660.)

If one has an idiot brother who is bed-ridden in his house, and keeps him in a dark room without sufficient warmth or covering, this of itself will neither be an assault nor an imprisonment. (R. v. Smith, 2 C. & P. 449.)

It is an indictable offence to expose a person of tender years under the defendant's care to the inclemency of the weather. (R. v. Ridley, 2 Campb. 650, 3; ante, 195.)

To support an indictment for an assault, such an assault must be shown as could not be justified, if an action were brought for it, and leave and license or other defence pleaded. (Reg. v. Meredith, 8 Car. & P. 589.) And therefore an attempt to commit the misdemeanor of having carnal knowledge of a girl between the ages of ten and twelve, is not an assault, as the consent of the girl puts an end to the charge of assault. (Id.)

II. What a Battery, &c.

What a battery.

Battery (from the Saxon batte, a club, or beaten, to beat, from whence cometh also the word battle,) seemeth to be, when any injury whatsoever, be it never so small, is actually done to the person of a man in an angry, or revengeful, or rude, or insolent manner, as by spitting in his face, or throwing water on him, (Pursill v. Home, 8 Ad. & Ell. 602,) or any way touching him in anger, or violently jostling him out of the way, and the like. (1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 2; Rawlings v. Till, 3 M. & W. 28.)

The injury need not be effected directly by the hand of the party. Thus an assault and battery may be committed by encouraging a dog to bite, by riding over a person, or by wilfully driving a cart against the carriage of another person, and thereby causing bodily injury to the persons in it. (Hopher v. Reeve, 7 Taunt. 698; 1 Russ. 863; Deacon's C. D. 62.)

Neither need the assault and battery be immediate, as where one pushes a drunken man against another, and thereby hurts him, this is an assault and battery; otherwise, if the real intention was to assist the drunken man, or to prevent him from going along the street without help, and in so doing a hurt ensued. (Short v. Lovejoy, Bull. N. P. 16.) So in the case of a lighted squib thrown in a market-place from one to another to avoid injury till it struck a party, the first thrower would be guilty of an assault and battery. (Scott v. Shepherd, 2 Bla. Rep. 892.)

Striking a horse whereon a person is riding and whereby he is thrown is a battery on him. (Dodwell v. Burford, 1 Mod. 24; W. Jones, 444.)

What a wounding.

A wounding is where the violence is such that the flesh is opened; a mere scratch may constitute a wounding. As to what is a wounding within the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 12, see post, "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. V. 8—9.

It has been said that an imprisonment necessarily includes a battery; (Onley v. Flower, 2 Selw. N. P. Imprisonment, I.; B. N. P. 22;) but this seems very questionable. (Emmett v. Lye, 1 New Rep. 255.)

What an imprisonment.

Every restraint or confinement of the person, whether it be in a common prison or in a private house, or by a forcible detaining in the public streets, will be an imprisonment (2 Inst. 589; Com. Dig. Imprisonment, G.) Actual contact is not necessary to constitute an imprisonment. (Grainger v. Hill, 4 Bing. N. C. 212.) Where a warrant or process is used merely as a summons, and the party voluntarily goes before the magistrate or with the officer, this is not it seems an imprisonment, (ante, 278); but it is otherwise where the party goes by compulsion. (Chim v. Morris, 2 C. & P. 361; Pocock v. Moore, Ry. & M. C. N. P. 321.) In a case where a man, who had an idiot brother bedridden in his house, kept him in a dark room without sufficient warmth or clothing, it was holden not to be an imprisonment. (R. v. Smith, 2 C. & P. 449.)

2. What a Battery, &c.

III. In what cases justified or excused.

Self-Defence.]—Even a maihem is justifiable if committed in a party's own defence. (Dance v. Lucy, 1 Sid. 246; 1 Rol. Rep. 19; Cockcroft v. Smith, 2 Salk. 642; 1 Ld. Raym. 177, S. C.; Anon. 3 Salk. 46.) But a person struck has merely a right to defend himself, and strike a blow in his defence, but he has no right to revenge himself; and if, when all the danger is past, he strikes a blow, not necessary, he commits an assault and battery. (Reg. v. Driscoll, 1 Car. & M. 214; R. v. Milton, M. & M. 107.) And in no case should the battery be more than is necessary for self-defence. (Bull. N. P. 18.) Self-defence.

The mere offer of a person to strike another is sufficient to justify the latter's striking him; he need not stay till the other has actually struck him. (Bull. N. P. 18; 2 Roll. Abr. 547, l. 37.)

It was resolved in Frances v. Ley, Cro. Jac. 367, that when a person is assaulted or beaten in a church or churchyard, it is not lawful for him to return blows in his own defence, as he may elsewhere. (And see 1 Hawk. c. 23, s. 28.)

So one who is guilty of the offence cannot excuse himself by showing that the person struck by him made the first assault, if that assault was justifiable. (1 Hawk. c. 21, s. 4; Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 15; Leeward v. Basilee, 1 Salk. 407; 1 Ld. Raym. 62, S. C.; Carth. 280.)

Defence of Relations, Servants, &c.]—A husband may justify a battery in defence of his wife, a wife in defence of her husband, a parent in defence of his child, a child in defence of his parent, a master in defence of his servant, and a servant in defence of his master. (2 Roll. Abr. 546, D.; 1 Hawk. c. 60, s. 23, 24; Tickell v. Road, Lofft, 215.) Defence of relations, servants, &c.

But in all these cases the battery must be such only as was necessary to the defence of the party or his relation; for if it were excessive, if it were greater than was necessary for mere defence, the prior assault will be no justification. (Bull. N. P. 18; Weaver v. Bush, 8 T. R. 78; 1 East's P. C. 406.) Thus a man cannot justify a maihem for every assault, as if A. strike B., B. cannot justify drawing his sword and cutting off A.'s hand. (Per cur. Cooke v. Beal, 1 Ld. Raym. 177.)

When a person does not stand in either of these relations he cannot justify an interference in behalf of the party injured; but merely as an indifferent person to preserve the peace. (Post, 284.)

Therefore a servant cannot justify beating another in defence of his master's son, though he were even commanded to do so by the master, because he is not a servant to the son; and for the like reason a tenant may not beat another in defence of his landlord. (1 Hawk. c. 60, s. 24.)

Defence of Property.]—A party may justify a battery by showing that he committed it in defence of his possession; as for instance, to remove the prosecutor out of his close or house; (Lutw. 1435; Hard. 358;) or out of a public-house, if the party be misconducting himself; (Howell v. Jackson, 6 C. & P. 723; Moriarty v. Brooks, Id. 684;) or to prevent him from entering the defendant's close or house; (2 Rol. Abr. 548, l. 25;) to restrain him from taking or destroying his goods, &c.; (Id. 549, l. 7;) from taking or rescuing cattle, &c. in his custody upon a distress; (Id. l. 10; 2 Bro. Ent. 260;) or to retake personal property improperly detained or taken away; (Weaver v. Bush, 8 T. R. 78; 2 Roll. Rep. 56, 208; Rex v. Milton, M. & M. 107;) or the like. Defence of property.

In the case of a trespass in law, merely without actual force, the owner of the close, &c. must first request the trespasser to depart, before he can justify laying his hands on him for the purpose of removing him; and even if he refuse, he can only justify so much force as is necessary to remove him. (Weaver v. Bush, 8 T. R. 78; 2 Roll. Abr. 548, l. 35, 45; Green v. Goddard, 2 Salk. 641; Skin. 387.) But if the trespasser use force, then the owner may oppose force to force; (Green v. Goddard, 2 Salk. 641; Weaver v. Bush, 8 T. R. 78; Tulley v. Heed, 1 C. & P. 6;) and in such a case, if he be assaulted or beaten, he may justify even a wounding or maihem, in self defence, as above mentioned. In answer to a justification in defence of his possession, it may be shown that the battery was excessive. (Skin. 387; Lutw. 1436; R. v. Milton, M. & M. 107.) Or that the party assaulted, or some one by whose authority he acted, had a right of way or other easement over the close, or the like. (See Jervis's Arch. C. L. 9th ed. 491.)

Moderate correction.

Moderate Correction.]—A parent may justify the correcting of his child, or a master the correcting of an apprentice, seaman, or scholar; the correction being moderate and done in a proper manner. (Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 19; 1 Hawk. c. 60, s. 23; c. 62, s. 2.) As to what is not a moderate correction, see ante, "Apprentice," 193, 194; post, "Servants," Vol. V.

A military officer may order a correction for disobedience of orders. (Lane v. Degberg, Bull. N. P. 19; 2 C. & P. 148.) But he must in no case be guilty of any unnecessary injury to the offender, or he would be liable. (Wall v. Macnamara, 1 T. R. 536; Swinton v. Molley, 1 T. R. 537; ante, 283.)

Under authority of law.

Under Authority of Law.]—It is a sufficient justification to show that the assault was done under the authority of the law, with or without legal process, no greater assault being committed than was necessary. (See 2 Roll. Abr. 546; 2 Stra. 1049.)

A person may, it seems, if it be necessary to do so, lay hands on another in order to serve him with process. (Harrison v. Hodgson, 10 B. & Cres. 445.)

So a person may lay hands upon another to prevent him from fighting or committing a breach of the peace. (Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 16; Burfoot v. Reynolds, 2 Stra. 953.) Or to prevent him from rescuing goods taken in execution; (3 Lev. 113;) or from taking away heiress; (R. v. Milton, M. & M. 107;) or the like. (1 Mod. 168.)

Churchwardens and private persons are justified in gently laying their hands on those who disturb the performance of any part of divine service, and turning them out of the church. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 28; and see Williams v. Glenister, 2 B. & Cres. 699; 4 D. & R. 217, S. C.; Burton v. Henson, 10 M. & W. 105.)

Misadventure.

Misadventure.]—It is a sufficient excuse or justification to show, that the assault or battery happened by misadventure. Therefore where in throwing down skins into a man's yard, the wind took one of them and blew it aside, whereby another man's eye was put out, it was held he could not be indicted for an assault. (R. v. Gill, 1 Str. 190.) So if by a sudden fright a horse runs away with his rider and runs against a man, it is no assault. (Gibbons v. Pepper, 4 Mod. 405.) But if the running away of the horse were occasioned by its being improperly whipped by a third person, such third person would be guilty of an assault; and if death ensued, the offence would amount to manslaughter. (Bac. Ab. Assault and Battery, B.) If a soldier hurt another by accident in discharging his gun in exercise, he would not be liable to an indictment. (Weaver v. Ward, Hob. 134.)

There are many cases of accidents which cannot be set up as a defence in an action for a battery, that would certainly be a good defence upon an indictment; in civil cases the accident must have been inevitable and without any fault to operate as an excuse. (2 Rol. Ab. 548; Weaver v. Ward, Hob. 134; Moore, 864, S. C.; 2 Bla. Rep. 896; 1 Stra. 595; Wakeman v. Robinson, 1 Bing. 213.)

But in criminal cases, the intention with which the act was done must always be taken into consideration, and it may be taken as a general rule that the same facts which would make a killing homicide by misadventure, will be a good defence to an indictment for a battery. See "Homicide," Vol. III.

3. When justifiable.

Amicable Contest.]—It is a good justification to prove that the alleged battery was merely an amicable contest; as that he wrestled with the prosecutor for a wager. (Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 18; Bac. Abr. Assault and Battery, B.) So, that it happened by accident whilst the defendant was engaged in some sport or game, which was neither unlawful nor dangerous, as with swords or the like. As to pugilistic fights, see post, "Fighting;" "Homicide," Vol. III.

Amicable contest.

IV. Indictment and Punishment for; Compounding of.

There is no doubt but that the wrong-doer is subject both to an action at the suit of the party, wherein he shall render damages, and also to an indictment at the suit of the queen, wherein he shall be fined according to the heinousness of the offence. (1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 4.)

Action or indictment for.

The Court in which the action is brought will not in general compel the plaintiff to stay the proceedings either in the action or the prosecution by indictment. (Jones v. Clay, 1 Bos. & P. 191. See post, "Nolle Prosequi," Vol. V.)

But in general the adoption of both proceedings is considered vexatious, and the Court will not pass judgment for the assault while an action for the same assault is depending, and although at the time of the defendant's being brought up the prosecutor offer to discontinue the action. (R. v. Mahon, 4 Ad. & Ell. 575.) The pendency of the indictment may also in some cases induce the jury to give smaller damages in the action.

A party may be prosecuted on one indictment for assaulting two or more persons. (R. v. Benfield, 2 Burr. 984.)

A private assault is not inquirable in the leet, not being a common nuisance, as all affrays are. (1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 1.)

Whatever is a legal justification or excuse for assault may, upon an indictment for the assault, be given in evidence under the general issue. (1 Hawk. c. 62, s. 3; 1 East's P. C. 406.)

Punishment for.]—The offence of a common assault is a misdemeanor, and is punishable on indictment by fine or imprisonment, or both, according to the more or less aggravated nature of the case. The offender may also be ordered to find sureties to keep the peace.

How punished.

The Court have no power (except in some aggravated cases provided for by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31; or by the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85) to order the defendant to be kept to hard labour, or subjected to personal correction.

It is an aggravation of the offence on account of the person on whom or the place where the same is committed; as where a man assaults or threatens another for suing him; a counsel or attorney for being employed against him; a juror for his verdict; or a gaoler, constable, or other ministerial officer for keeping him in custody, and properly executing his duty. (4 Bla. Com. 126.)

A defendant indicted for any felony which includes an assault on the person, may now, by 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11, be acquitted of the felony and found guilty of an assault only, and in such case may be sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour.

Punishment on indictment for a felony, including an assault.

The following is the enactment of that section, "That on the trial of any person for any of the offences thereinbefore mentioned, or for any felony whatever, where the crime charged shall include an assault against the person, it shall be lawful for the jury to acquit of the felony and to find a verdict of guilty of assault, against the person indicted, if the evidence shall warrant such finding; and when such verdict shall be found, the Court shall have power to imprison the person so found guilty of an assault for any term not exceeding three years."

4. Indictment for.

Under this enactment, the prisoner ought not to be convicted of an assault which is quite distinct from and independent of the felony charged; and on such an indictment the prisoner ought only to be convicted of an assault which is involved in the felony itself. (R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483; S. P. R. v. Cuttridge, 9 C. & P. 471.) And he may be convicted of the assault, if the indictment contain any one good count, although all the other counts may be bad. (R. v. Nicholls, 9 C. & P. 269.) A. presented a loaded pistol at B., but was prevented from pulling the trigger, and it was held that A. could be properly convicted of this assault, on an indictment for feloniously attempting to discharge loaded arms at B. (R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483.) So a prisoner who is tried for manslaughter on the coroner's inquisition, may be convicted of an assault under the above section. (R. v. Pool, 9 C. & P. 728.) And on an indictment for abduction, on the stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 19, if the jury should not be satisfied that the prisoner was actuated by motives of lucre, and they be satisfied that the prisoner used force to the person of the lady in taking her away, and that he took her away against her consent, they may convict him of an assault. (R. v. Barratt, 9 C. & P. 387.) In another case, a party was indicted for a highway robbery, accompanied by violence, under the stat. 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 87, s. 3: the jury pronounced the following verdict:—"We find the prisoner guilty of an assault, but without any intention to commit any felony:" it was held that such special finding did not take the case out of the operation of the above act, and the prisoner was sentenced under it to imprisonment, with hard labour, for the assault. (R. v. Ellis, 8 C. & P. 654.) But it seems that a charge of administering wrong medicine does not of necessity include a charge of assault, so as to convict the party under the act. (Edsall v. Russell, 6 Jur. 996.) The act applies to offences committed before it passed. (Reg. v. Hagan, 8 C. & P. 167.)

Compounding of or referring to arbitration.

Compounding, &c. of.]—There does not appear any objection to compounding or referring to arbitration a prosecution for a common assault. (See 1 Moore, 120; post, "Award.")

In cases where the offence more immediately affects the individual, the defendant is sometimes permitted by the Court, even after conviction, to speak with the prosecutor before any judgment is pronounced, and a trivial punishment (generally a fine of a shilling) is inflicted, if the prosecutor declares himself satisfied. (4 Bla. Com. 363, 364; Baker v. Townshend, 1 Moore, 120.)

And where the defendant was convicted on an indictment for ill-treating a parish apprentice, and at the recommendation of the Court of quarter sessions gave security for the fair expenses of the prosecution, upon an understanding that the Court would abate the period of his imprisonment, the security was held to be legal and binding. Et per Lord Ellenborough, C. J.—"The security in question, given with the sanction of the Court, is rather to be considered as part of the punishment suffered by the defendant in expiation of his offence, in addition to the imprisonment inflicted upon him. If we had seen any ground for suspecting the authority of the Court had been used as an instrument of oppression or extortion, we should have watched the case very jealously; but nothing of that sort appears." (Beeley v. Wingfield, 11 East, 46.)

V. Proceedings for, before Justices, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31.

For a common assault, a party may be fined by justices.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 27, justices of the peace are empowered to fine for common assaults. The enactment is as follows:—"And whereas it is expedient that a summary power of punishing persons for common assaults and batteries should be provided, under the limitations hereinafter mentioned:" be it therefore enacted, "that where any person shall unlawfully assault, or beat, any other person, it shall be lawful for two justices of the peace, upon complaint of the party aggrieved, to hear and determine such offence, and the offender, upon conviction thereof before them, shall forfeit and pay such fine as shall appear to them to be meet, not exceeding, together with costs, (if ordered,) the sum of five pounds, which fine shall be paid to some one of the overseers of the poor, or to some other officer of the parish, township, or place, in which the offence shall have been committed, to be by such overseer, or officer, paid over to the use of the general rate of the county, riding, or division, in which such parish, township, or place shall be situate, whether the same shall or shall not contribute to such general rate; and the evidence of any inhabitant of the county, riding, or division, shall be admitted in proof of the offence, notwithstanding such application of the fine incurred thereby; and if such fine as shall be awarded by the said justices, together with the costs, (if ordered,) shall not be paid, either immediately after the conviction, or within such period as the said justices shall at the time of the conviction appoint, it shall be lawful for them to commit the offender to the common gaol, or house of correction, there to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two calendar months, unless such fine and costs be sooner paid; but if the justices, upon the hearing of any such case of assault or battery, shall deem the offence not to be proved, or shall find the assault or battery to have been justified, or so trifling as not to merit any punishment, and shall accordingly dismiss the complaint, they shall forthwith make out a certificate under their hands, stating the fact of such dismissal, and shall deliver such certificate to the party against whom the complaint was preferred."

Application of fine.

Inhabitant witness.

Commitment for non payment.

If magistrates dismiss complaint, they to certify same.

By sect. 28, "If any person against whom any such complaint shall have been preferred, for any common assault or battery, shall have obtained such certificate as aforesaid, or having been convicted shall have paid the whole amount adjudged to be paid under such conviction, or shall have suffered the imprisonment awarded for non-payment thereof, in every such case he shall be released from all further or other proceedings, civil or criminal, for the same cause."

Certificate or conviction shall be a bar to other proceedings.

Sect. 29. "In case the justices shall find the assault or battery complained of to have been accompanied by any attempt to commit felony, or shall be of opinion that the same is, from any other circumstances, a fit subject for a prosecution by indictment, they shall abstain from any adjudication thereupon, and shall deal with the case, in all respects, in the same manner as they would have done before the passing of this act: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall authorise any justices of the peace to hear and determine any case of assault or battery, in which any question shall arise as to the title to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any interest therein or accruing therefrom, or as to any bankruptcy or insolvency, or any execution under the process of any court of justice."

Aggravated cases not within the act;

nor questions of title, &c.

Sect. 33. "And for the more effectual prosecution of offences punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this act, be it enacted, that where any person shall be charged on the oath of a credible witness before any justice of the peace with any such offence, the justice may summon the person charged to appear before any two justices of the peace at a time and place to be named in such summons, and if he shall not appear accordingly, then (upon proof of the due service of the summons upon such person by delivering the same to him) the justices may either proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte, or may issue their warrant for apprehending such person and bringing him before them, or the justice before whom the charge shall be made may, if he shall so think fit, issue such warrant in the first instance without any previous summons."

Power to summon, &c. offender.

Proceeding ex parte.

Warrant for apprehension.

Sect. 34. "The prosecution for every offence punishable on summary conviction by virtue of this act shall be commenced within three calendar months after the commission of the offence, and not otherwise."

Limitation for proceedings.

Sect. 35. "The justices before whom any person shall be summarily convicted of any offence against this act may cause the conviction to be drawn up in the following form of words, or in any other form of words to the same effect as the case shall require, that is to say:—Then follows the form of the conviction, which see post, (No. 7.)

Form of conviction.

5. Proceeding for, before justices, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31.

Certiorari.

Conviction, &c. not to be quashed for want of form, &c.

Provisions extended to assaults on board merchant-ships.

Sect. 36 enacts, "That no such conviction shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any of his majesty's superior courts of record; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same."

By sect. 38, the act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

By the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 44, reciting the passing of the above act, and that it is expedient that the provisions of the said act should be extended to similar offences committed on board ships belonging to subjects of her Majesty, it is enacted, "That in the case of any assault or battery committed on board any ship belonging to any subject of her Majesty in any part of the world, it shall be lawful for any two justices of the peace in any part of her Majesty's dominions, or the territories under the government of the East India Company, residing at or near any port or place at which the said ship may arrive or touch, upon complaint of the party aggrieved, to hear and determine any such complaint, and to proceed and make such adjudication thereon as by the said act any two justices are empowered to do in the cases of assaults and batteries in England; and the fine or forfeiture to be imposed in any such case shall be payable to the Seamen's Hospital Society: Provided always, that such complaint shall be made and prosecuted within three months after such alleged assault or battery, or within three months after the arrival of the ship at her final port of destination in the united kingdom, or within three months after the respective parties shall be within the jurisdiction of such justices as aforesaid."

Construction of act.

The above provisions do not appear to prevent the prosecutor from going to the sessions and preferring his indictment in the first instance; but if he lay his complaint before a magistrate, and the case be heard before two magistrates, they may, provided it be not one of the cases within the 29th section, above stated, either fine the offender in any sum not exceeding 5*l.* or may dismiss the case, giving the accused a certificate that is to have the effect of discharging him from all future proceedings, civil or criminal, for the same assault; or if the magistrates think it a case proper for an indictment, they may act as they would have done before this statute. (Carr. C. L. 341.)

The complaint must be made on oath. And a warrant to bring the offender before the justices must state the complaint to have been upon oath or it will be bad. (See Caudle v. Seymour, 1 Q. B. 889; 1 Gale & D. 454, S. C.)

Where two justices convicted a defendant summarily as of a common assault, where it appeared by the deposition that the defendant had laid hands on the prosecutor in an indecent manner, but without violence, a certiorari being moved for on the ground that the offence, if committed, was accompanied by a felonious attempt, and therefore within section twenty-nine of the above act, the Court refused to interfere, inasmuch as no excess of jurisdiction appeared on the face of the conviction, and the evidence (of which the magistrates were the judges) did not clearly show an intention to commit felony; and semble, that although this had appeared by the deposition, and the conviction had been consequently illegal, the Court of Queen's Bench would not have interposed by certiorari. (Anonymous, 1 B. & Ad. 382.)

The certificate of the justices should be applied for without any delay. Where two justices, on the 29th of November, dismissed a charge of assault, on the ground that the offence was "not proved," and did not give their certificate of such dismissal, under section twenty-seven, until the 10th January following; it was held, that the certificate had not been granted "forthwith," within the meaning of section twenty-seven, and was therefore no bar to an indictment for the same assault. (Reg. v. Robinson, 4 Per. & D. 391; 12 Ad. & E. 672, S. C.) And where a plea to an indictment for an assault alleged that the defendant had been brought before two justices for the same assault, and that the justices, deeming the offence not to be proved, "forthwith" gave the defendant a certificate of such dismissal; and the replication traversed the giving of the certificate modo et formâ; it was held, (dubitante Coleridge, J.) that the time of giving the certificate (inter alia) was put in issue. (Ib.)

When the justices dismiss the complaint on any of the grounds authorised by section 27, the certificate of dismissal should set forth such grounds, otherwise the certificate will not be a bar to future proceedings. And where in such a case, the venue or the declaration was in Surrey, and the plea stated, that the complaint was dismissed by justices of Surrey, it was held to appear sufficiently, that the assault was committed in the same county, so as to give jurisdiction to such justices. (Skuse v. Davis, 10 Ad. & E. 635.)

5. Proceedings for, before justices, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31.

In an action for the same assault in respect of which the justices have granted a certificate, a party cannot avail himself of this certificate as a defence unless it be specially pleaded. (Harding v. King, 6 C. & P. 427.)

Assaults in Particular Cases.

THE legislature has in many cases of aggravated assaults imposed a severer punishment than that which could be inflicted at common law, and in some cases has made the assault a felony.

We will proceed to consider of them, and Herein of assaults,

1. To rob, and Menaces to Steal, 291.
2. To commit a Felony,—on Peace Officers, Revenue Officers, and to raise Wages, 293.
3. In endeavour to save Shipwrecks, or escape from Wrecks, &c. 296.
4. On Seamen to prevent Working, and Assaults to Stop Grain, &c. 298.
5. Other particular Assaults, 299.

As to assaults on gamekeepers, &c. see post, "Game," Vol. III.

As to assaults by shooting, stabbing, or poisoning, or sending explosive substances, or throwing destructive substances, see post, "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. V.

I. Assaults to rob and Menaces to Steal.

By the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 87, s. 6, it is enacted, "That whosoever shall assault any person with intent to rob shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall (save and except in the cases where a greater punishment is provided by this act) be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years."

Assault with intent to rob.

Sect. 7 enacts, 'That whosoever shall, with menaces or by force, demand any property of any person with intent to steal the same, shall be guilty of Demanding property with menaces, &c.

1. To rob, &c. felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years."

As to the offence of an assault with intent to rob, the accused being armed, or for an assault with intent to rob, together with one or more person or persons, as provided against by sect. 3 of the act, and also as to the offence of robbery in general, see "Robbery," Vol. V. As to the offence of obtaining money, &c. by threats, see "Threats," Vol. VI.

Punishment.

In addition to the punishment of imprisonment for any term not exceeding three years, as provided by the above sect. 6, hard labour, and solitary confinement, or either, (such confinement not to exceed one month at any one time, nor three months in any one year) may be added. (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 87, s. 10, see "Larceny," Vol. III.)

Conviction for assault only.

The offender may be convicted of the assault only. (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 15, s. 11, ante, 285.)

Form of indictment and proof of assault to rob.

Where the offence of robbery was not completed by taking and carrying away, or there seems no prospect of substantiating it by evidence, the defendant should be indicted under the above act for an assault with intent to rob. (1 East's P. C. 411, 440.)

A count for robbery cannot be added to a count for an assault with intent to rob; if it be, the prosecutor will be put to his election. (R. v. Gough, 2 M. & M. 71.)

It was held, on an indictment on 7 Geo. II. c. 21, (repealed by 4 Geo. IV. c. 54,) for an assault with intent to rob, that it should charge the assault to be unlawful and malicious as well as felonious, unless it also lay a felonious demand of goods in a forcible and violent manner. (R. v. Pegge, 1 East's P. C. 420.) Also that it must charge the prisoner made the assault with intent to rob, and not merely to steal the goods of the prosecutor. (R. v. Montello, 2 Leach, C. C. 702; 1 East's P. C. 420, S. C.)

The cases of R. v. Jackson, 1 Leach's C. C. 267; 1 East's P. C. 419, S.C.; R. v. Johnson, R. & R. C. C. 492; deciding that the indictment must state that the assault was made with an offensive weapon, or that a demand was made of money or goods, are not applicable to a prosecution under the above act.

In R. v. Thomas, 1 Leach, 330; 1 East's P. C. 417, it was holden, that an indictment, which alleged the assault to have been made upon J. N., was not supported by proof that the assault was made upon the driver of the post-chaise in which J. N. was; but this indictment was framed upon the repealed statute, 7 Geo. II. c. 21, which made it felony for any person with an offensive weapon to assault any other person, with intent to rob such person; and the decision would not, as it seems, be applicable to the present statute, which is more general, if the jury were satisfied that the chaise was stopped in furtherance of an intention to rob J. N. (Arch. C. L. by Jervis, 9th edit. 265.)

The intent.

It is a question for the consideration of the jury on a review of all the facts connected with the assault whether the prisoner had any intention to rob; no actual demand of money is necessary to support the indictment. (R. v. Trusty, 1 East's P. C. 418; R. v. Sherwin, id. 421.) Where A. was decoyed into a house and chained down to a seat, and compelled to write an order for the payment of money and an order for the delivery of deeds; and the paper on which he wrote remained in his hand half an hour, but he was chained all the time; it was held that this was not an assault with intent to rob. (R. v. Edwards, 6 C. & P. 521.)

Form of indictment for, and proof of menaces to steal.

To support an indictment for demanding property with menaces or force, with intent to steal the same, a demand of the property stated in the indictment with menaces or force must be proved, and demand in words is not necessary, gestures or any other mode would suffice. (R. v. Jackson, 1 Leach, 269.)

Where an indictment stated that the defendant "feloniously, by menaces, did demand the monies of the said J. N.," it was holden to be insufficient, because it did not state from whom he had demanded them. (R. v. Dunkley, 1 Mood. C. C.)

If a person with menaces demand a sum of money of another, and that other does not give it to him because he has it not with him, this is a felony within the statute; but if the person demanding the money knows that the money is not then in the possession of the party, and only intends to obtain an order for the payment of it, it is otherwise. (R. v. Edwards, 6 C. & P. 513.) 1. To rob, &c.

[Commencement as usual, as ante, 9,] that the said C. D. on the day of , A. D. at the parish of in the said county, in and upon [the said] A. B. feloniously did make an assault, with intent then and there the monies and chattels of the said A. B. from the person and against the will of the said A. B. feloniously and violently to steal, take, and carry away; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [conclude as usual, as ante, 9, to the end.] (1.) Commitment for an assault with intent to rob.

—— to wit. THE jurors for our Lady the Queen upon their oath present, that C. B. in the peace of God and of our said Lady the Queen, then and there being, feloniously did make an assault, with intent the monies, goods and chattels of the said A. B. from the person and against the will of the said A. B. then and there feloniously and violently to steal, take, and carry away; against the form of the statute in that case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lady the Queen her crown and dignity. (2.) Indictment for a like offence.

[Commence as in the preceding form,] in the county aforesaid, with menaces [or by force, or with menaces and force] did feloniously demand of A. B. the money [any property] of him the said A. B., with intent the said money, [chattel, or valuable security] from the said A. B. then and there feloniously to steal, take, and carry away; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity. (3.) Indictment for demanding money, &c. with menaces or by force, with intent to steal the same.

[The chattel, money, or valuable security demanded must be stated according to the fact. If the demand were of a specific chattel or valuable security, it may be stated thus: "a certain chattel, to wit, ," or "a certain valuable security, to wit, ."]

II. Assaults to commit a Felony; on Peace Officers, Revenue Officers; to raise Wages.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 25, "Where any person shall be charged with and convicted of any of the following offences as misdemeanors; that is to say, of any assault with intent to commit felony; of any assault upon any peace officer or revenue officer, in the due execution of his duty, or upon any person acting in aid of such officer; of any assault upon any person, with intent to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of the party so assaulting, or of any other person, for any offence for which he or they may be liable by law to be apprehended or detained; or of any assault committed in pursuance of any conspiracy to raise the rate of wages; in any such case the court may sentence the offender to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years; and may also (if it shall so think fit) fine the offender, and require him to find sureties for keeping the peace." Assaults with intent to commit felony. Assaults on peace or revenue officers. Assaults in pursuance of a conspiracy to raise wages.

By the Metropolitan Police Act, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 18, persons assaulting or resisting officers in the execution of their duty, or aiding or inciting therein, are subject to a penalty of not more than 5*l.*; or, in the discretion of the magistrate before whom he shall be convicted, may be imprisoned for any time not more than one calendar month. (See "Police," Vol. V.) Assaulting police.

By the 1 & 2 Will. IV. c. 41, s. 11, persons convicted before two justices of assaulting or resisting special constables are subject to a penalty of £20, in Assaulting special constables.

2. To commit felony. On constables, &c.

addition to the usual punishment for assaulting constables. (See further title, "Constable," post.)

Assault to commit rape.

When the offence of rape was not completed, or there was no prospect of substantiating it by evidence, the defendant should be indicted for an assault with intent to commit a rape, and defendant may be punished, as directed by the above act, with hard labour, &c. But care must be taken not to indict for the misdemeanor when the evidence will prove the felony; for if this should appear on the trial, the defendant must be acquitted. (R. v. Harmwood, 1 East's P. C. 411, 440; see post, "Rape," Vol. V.) Under a count for an assault with intent to commit a rape, defendant may be convicted of an assault with an intent to abuse simply. (R. v. Dawson, 3 Stark. 62.) If a master take indecent liberties with a female scholar without her consent, though she does not resist, he is liable to be punished as for an assault with intent to commit a rape. (R. v. Nichol, R. & R. C. C. 130; and see further, ante, 281.) To prove the intent evidence of previous attempts to commit the same offence is not admissible. (R v. Lloyd, 7 C. & P. 318.) A boy under the age of fourteen cannot be convicted of the offence. (R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396.) And evidence is not admissible to show that in point of fact he could commit the offence. (R. v. Phillips, 8 C. & P. 736.) As to the rules of evidence on examining the prosecutrix, see post, "Evidence," Vol. II.; "Rape," Vol. V.

III. Assaults, &c. in Endeavour to save Shipwrecked Property, or Escape from Wrecks.

Assaults on officers, &c. saving wreck.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 24, "If any person shall assault and strike, or wound any magistrate, officer, or other person whatsoever, lawfully authorised, on account of the exercise of his duty in or concerning the preservation of any vessel in distress, or of any vessel, goods, or effects wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, or lying under water, every such offender, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction for such term as the Court shall award."

3. In saving Wrecks, &c.

This act repeals so much of the 26 Geo. II. c. 19, as relates to any person who shall be assaulted, beaten, and wounded in the exercise of his duty in the salvage of any vessel, goods, or effects as therein-mentioned. Under this act, to constitute an offence, it is not necessary that the person must have been assaulted, beaten, and wounded, as was requisite under the 26 Geo. II.

Impeding persons endeavouring to escape from wrecks.

By the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 7, it is enacted, "That whosoever shall by force prevent or impede any person endeavouring to save his life from any ship or vessel which shall be in distress, wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, (whether he shall be on board or shall have quitted the same,) shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of the natural life of such offender, or for any term not less than fifteen years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years."

The imprisonment under this section may be with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, not exceeding one month at any one time, nor three months in any one year. (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 12.) This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. (5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1.) The accused, if acquitted of the felony, may be found guilty of an assault. (Ante, 285.)

(16.) Commitment for assault on magistrates, &c. in saving a wreck.

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 9,] that the said C. D. on, &c. at, &c. in the said county, unlawfully did assault one A. B. and him the said A. B. did then and there strike and beat, [or wound,] on account of the exercise of his the said A. B.'s duty in and concerning the preservation of a certain vessel then and there in distress, [of any vessel in distress, or of any vessel, goods, or effects wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, or lying under water,] he the said A. B. being then and there a magistrate, [or officer, or person,] lawfully authorised in that behalf: against the form of the statute in such case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 9, to the end.]

(17.) Indictment for a like offence.

—— to wit. THE jurors for our Lady the Queen upon their oath present, that before and at the time of the committing of the offence hereinafter mentioned, on the day of in the year of the reign of our sovereign Lady Victoria, at the parish of in the county of one J. P. then and there being a magistrate, [magistrate, officer, or other officer whatsoever lawfully authorised,] was then and there engaged in the exercise of his duty as such magistrate, in and concerning the preservation of a certain vessel, [of any vessel in distress, or of any vessel, goods, or effects wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, or lying under water,] then and there wrecked, stranded, and cast on shore, the said J. P. being then and there lawfully authorised thereunto, and that C. D. late of the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, labourer, then and there well knowing the premises, in and upon the said J. P. then and there unlawfully did make an assault, and him the said J. P. then and there unlawfully did strike and wound on account of the exercise of the said duty of him the said J. P. in and concerning the preservation of the said vessel so wrecked, stranded, and cast on shore as aforesaid; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity. [Add a count for a common assault, as ante, 289, (No. 4.)] (18.) Indictment for impeding persons escaping from wrecks.

—— to wit. THE jurors for our Lady the Queen upon their oath present, that before and at the time of committing the felony hereinafter mentioned, on the day of in the year of the reign of our sovereign lady Victoria, at the parish of , in the county of , a certain vessel [ship or vessel] was then and there stranded and cast on shore [in distress, or wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore] and that A. B. late of the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, labourer, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, one C. D. then and there endeavouring to save his life from the said ship so stranded and cast ashore, then and there feloniously and by force did prevent and impede [prevent or impede], against the form of the statute in that case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

IV. Assaults on Seamen, &c. to prevent Working, and Assaults to obstruct Selling, &c. of Grain.

Assault on seaman to prevent him working.

Assaults to obstruct buying, &c. of grain, &c.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 26, "If any person shall unlawfully, and with force, hinder any seaman, keelman, or caster, from working at or exercising his lawful trade, business, or occupation, or shall beat, wound, or use any other violence to him, with intent to deter or hinder him from working at or exercising the same; or if any person shall beat, wound, or use any other violence to any person, with intent to deter or hinder him from selling or buying any wheat or other grain, flour, meal, or malt, in any market or other place, or shall beat, wound, or use any other violence to any person having the care or charge of any wheat or other grain, flour, meal, or malt, whilst on its way to or from any city, market-town, or other place, with intent to stop the conveyance of the same, every such offender may be convicted thereof before two justices of the peace, and imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding three calendar months: provided always, that no person who shall be punished for any such offence, by virtue of this provision, shall be punished for the same offence by virtue of any other law whatsoever."

Repeal as to assaults on seaman, &c.

This act repeals so much of the stat. 33 Geo. III. c. 67, "As relates to any seaman, keelman, caster, ship-carpenter, or other person who shall prevent, hinder, or obstruct or assault, beat, wound, or do any bodily violence or hurt to any seaman, keelman, caster, or ship-carpenter as therein particularly mentioned." And this repeal appears to extend to sections 2 and 3 of that statute.

This provision is a substitution for sections 2 and 3 of the stat. 33 Geo. III. c. 67. Under that statute the first offence was punishable with imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than twelve, and it was imperative on the Court to transport the offender for a second or other subsequent offence; and by that statute prosecutions must have been commenced within twelve months, which is not so under the present provisions. (Car. C. L. 342.)

Repeal as to assaults to obstruct sale of grain.

This act repeals also so much of the stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 22, "as relates to any person who shall beat, wound, or use any other violence to any person or driver, and so much thereof as makes any second offence felony; and it also repeals so much of the stat. 36 Geo. III. c. 9, "as relates to any person who shall beat, wound, or use any other violence to any person or driver, and so much thereof as makes any second offence felony."

V. Conviction for an Assault on a Trial for Felony.

Before the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 85, upon the trial of an indictment for felony, the prisoner must either have been convicted of the felony or acquitted. But now, by sect. 11 of that act, "on the trial of any person for any of the offences hereinbefore mentioned, (see them under title "Malicious Injuries to the Person," Vol. V.) or for any felony whatever, where the crime charged shall include an assault against the person, it shall be lawful for the jury to acquit of the felony, and to find a verdict of guilty of assault against the person indicted, if the evidence shall warrant such finding; and when such verdict shall be found, the Court shall have power to imprison the person so found guilty of an assault for any term not exceeding three years."

On trial for felony defendant may be convicted of an assault.

Punishment for.

By sect. 8, "where any person shall be convicted of any offence punishable under this act, for which imprisonment may be awarded, it shall be lawful for the Court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of such imprisonment, or of such imprisonment with hard labour, not exceeding one month at any one time, and not exceeding three months in any one year, as to the Court in its discretion shall seem meet." (See Anon. 2 Moo. C. C. 40; 1 Russ. C. & M. by Greaves, 778, n. (m).)

Imprisonment.

Solitary confinement.

Hard labour.

A party may be convicted of an assault, under the above enactment, upon an indictment for rape; (Anon. 2 Moo. C. C. 40;) and this although he be under fourteen, and therefore incompetent to commit a rape; (Reg. v. Brimilow, 2 Moo. C. C. 122; 9 C. & P. 366, S. C.;) or although it turn out that the prosecutrix consented, supposing the prisoner to be her husband. (Reg. v. Saunders, 8 C. & P. 265; Reg. v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 286; 1 Russ. C. & M. by Greaves, 778.)

Decisions on the act.

So a party may be convicted under the above enactment upon an indictment for murder; (Reg. v. Gould, 9 C. & P. 364; Reg. v. Phelps, 1 Russ. C. & M. by Greaves, 779;) or robbery; (R. v. Ellis, 8 Car. & P. 654; Reg. v. Pool, 9 C. & P. 728;) or upon an indictment under the 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 2, for causing a bodily injury dangerous to life; (Reg. v. Cruse, 8 C. & P. 541; 2 Moo. C. C. 53;) or for stabbing with intent to maim, &c.; (Reg. v. Nicholls, 9 C. & P. 267; Reg. v. Archer, 1 C. & K. 174;) or upon an indictment for carnally knowing and abusing a child under the age of ten years. (Reg. v. Folkes, 2 Moo. C. C. 460; but see Reg. v. Banks, 8 C. & P. 574; Reg. v. Martin, 2 Moo. C. C. 123; 9 C. & P. 213, S. C.)

ceased had died of a dislocation of the vertebræ, two days after fighting with the prisoner; it was held that if the jury were not satisfied that the death of the deceased was caused by the prisoner, they might find the latter guilty of an assault, under the above enactment, and that with a view to a conviction on it, it was immaterial that the deceased was the challenger in the fight, and that it did not appear which party struck the first blow. (R. v. Lewis, 1 Car. & Kir. 419.)

So he may be convicted, under the above enactment, of an assault, on an indictment for abduction, if the jury are not satisfied that the prisoner took the female away from motives of lucre. (R. v. Barratt, 9 C. & P. 387.)

A party may be convicted of an assault upon an inquisition for manslaughter, alleging the death to be caused by striking, although there be no evidence of the cause of death. (Reg. v. Pool, 9 C. & P. 728.)

But on an indictment for administering poison with intent to murder, where the prisoner did no more than leave the poison in a position for the prosecutor to take, it was considered that he could not be convicted of an assault under the above enactment; (R. v. Draper, 1 Car. & Kir. 176;) and it would seem he could not have been convicted of the assault, though with his own hand he had delivered the poison to the prosecutor. (See R. v. Dilworth, 2 Moo. C. C. 531.)

Upon an indictment for felony the jury cannot convict of an assault, which is a completely separate and distinct assault. (Reg. v. Guttridge, 9 Car. & P. 471.)

It must be an assault involved in, and connected with, the felony charged. (Reg. v. Guttridge, 9 C. & P. 471; and see R. v. St. George, id. 483; R. v. Phelps, 1 Russ. C. & M. by Greaves, 781.)

The jury can only convict where the crime charged includes an assault against the person. They cannot, therefore, convict of an assault upon an indictment for an unnatural crime committed upon an animal. (Reg. v. Eaton, 8 Car. & P. 417.)

Though the indictment for the felony be against several defendants, some of them may be convicted of the felony, and another of an assault, under the above enactment. (R. v. Archer, 1 Car. & Kir. 174.)

Assizes.

Assize, what.

ASSISE (assessio) anciently signified in general a Court where the judges or assessors heard and determined causes, and more particularly upon writs of assize brought before them by such as were wrongfully put out of their possession, which writs heretofore were very frequent; but now men's possessions are more easily recovered by ejectments and the like; yet still the Old commission of.

judges in their circuits have a commission of assize directed to themselves and the clerk of assize, to take assizes, and to do right upon such writs. Assizes.

To which commission of assize four other commissions are now superadded; to wit, Commissions of.

1. A commission of general gaol delivery, directed to the judges and the clerk of assize associate, which gives them power to try every prisoner in the gaol, committed for any offence whatsoever, but none but prisoners in the gaol.(a) General gaol delivery.

2. A commission of oyer and terminer, directed to the judges and many other gentlemen of the county, by which they are empowered to hear and determine treasons, felonies, and other misdemeanors by whomsoever committed, whether the persons to be tried be in gaol or not in gaol. Oyer and terminer.

In R. v. Carlisle, 4 C. & P. 415, the Court of Queen's Bench refused to grant a habeas corpus to discharge out of custody a person who had been convicted of libel at the commission of oyer and terminer at the Old Bailey, on the ground that when the verdict was returned only one commissioner was present instead of two, as required by law. It is questionable, however, whether such a circumstance may not be assigned as error.

3. A commission or writ of nisi prius, directed to the judges and clerk of assize, by which civil causes brought to issue in the Courts above are tried in the vacation by a jury of twelve men of the county where the cause of action arises; and on return of the verdict of the jury to the Court above, the judges there give judgment. Nisi prius.

These causes, by the course of the Courts, are usually appointed to be tried at Westminster in some Easter or Michaelmas Term by a jury returned from the county wherein the cause is to be tried, but with this proviso, (nisi prius) unless before the day prefixed the judges of assize come into the county in question; this they are sure to do in the preceding vacation.

The old commission of assize and the commission of nisi prius are constantly accompanied by writs of associatur, in pursuance of the statutes 13 Edw. I. c. 30; 27 Edw. I. c. 4; 12 Edw. II. c. 3, whereby certain persons (usually the clerk of assize and his subordinate officers) are directed to associate themselves with the justices and serjeants, who are required to admit the said persons into their society, in order to take the assizes, &c., that a sufficient supply of commissioners may never be wanting. But to prevent the delay of justice by the absence of any of them, there is also issued as of course a writ of si non omnes, directing, if all cannot be present then, that any two of them (a judge or serjeant being one) may proceed to execute the commission. (2 Hale, 39; 2 Hawk. c. 28; 4 Bla. Com. 269; Deacon, C. D. 75.) Writs of association and si non omnes.

4. A commission of the peace in every county of their circuit. Commission of the peace.

By the precept for the general gaol delivery before mentioned, the sheriff is commanded to attend there in person with his under-sheriff, and to give notice to all justices of the peace, mayors, coroners, escheators, stewards, and also to all chief constables and bailiffs of hundreds and liberties, that they be then and there in their own persons with their rolls, records, indictments, and other remembrances, to do those things which to their offices in that behalf appertain to be done. Who to attend there.

By virtue whereof all justices of the peace, mayors, and others above-mentioned, of that county where the judges have their assizes, are bound to be present; and if they make default without lawful impediment, the judges may set a fine upon them for their neglect. (Cro. Circ. C. 3; 4 Bla. Com. 270.)

Also by ancient custom, (that is, by the common law of the land,) before Constables' presentments.

(a) At Stafford Lent Assizes, 1810, Wood, B. ordered eight prisoners against whom no bills had been preferred, and who were committed for trial at the general quarter sessions of the peace to be discharged out of custody; observing, that every prisoner had a right to be tried by the first competent tribunal, and that he was bound by his commission to deliver the gaol. (1 Burn's J. Chetw. ed. tit. Assize.)

Assizes.

the coming of the judges, the high constables issue their warrants to the petty constables, headboroughs, borsholders, &c. to make presentments of all crimes and offences cognizable at the assizes, to the intent (as it seemeth) that the judges thereby may have a general information and knowledge how the peace hath been kept; which presentments, being delivered to the high constables, are by them delivered into Court, and make up part of the rolls and other remembrances above mentioned. Which said warrants of the high constables perhaps may be best drawn up in the words of the commission of oyer and terminer, which is the largest of all the five commisssions above-mentioned; and see the forms thereof, post, "Constable," Vol. I. (Some of the presentments of constables heretofore made are abolished by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 38, which see post, that title.)

Jurisdiction of justices at.

The same persons being entrusted with all these commissions of assize, may proceed by one where they have no jurisdiction by another, and may execute them at the same time. (2 Hale, 34; 2 Hawk. c. 5, s. 21; 4 Bla. Com. 270.)

The commissions of assize and nisi prius are principally of a civil nature, but the justices have also under them, by virtue of several statutes, a criminal jurisdiction; and where an indictment of treason, felony or misdemeanor is removed out of the county by certiorari, the record is sent down by nisi prius to be tried; and the judges of nisi prius may, upon that record, proceed to trial, judgment and execution, as if they were justices of gaol delivery by virtue of the stat. 14 Hen. VI. c. 1. (2 Hale, 39 to 42; 3 Bla. Com. 40.)

Upon an indictment found at the sessions and transmitted to the assizes by the justices at session, though they be not returned by certiorari, the judges of assize should try them. (R. v. Wetherell, Russ. & R. C. C. 381.)

Judges may act where they reside or were born.

By 49 Geo. III. c. 91, the judges may act in counties in which they reside or were born.

Assizes but one day in law, &c.

The assizes are but one day in law and the entry of every proceeding at them refers to the first day of the assize; and see R. v. Fletcher, Russ. & R. C. C. 58.

Time of holding assizes.

The assizes are held before the Queen's commissioners, among whom are usually two of the judges of the Courts at Westminster, twice in every year, in every county of the kingdom, except the four northern ones, where they are held only once, and London and Middlesex, where they sit no less than eight times, in consequence of the number of offences which arise in the vicinity of the metropolis. The assizes in other counties are commonly held in the respective vacations after Hilary and Trinity Terms; and in the counties attached to the home circuit, it is usual to hold a third assize after Michaelmas Term to try prisoners.

Place of holding assizes.

11 Ric. 2, c. 11.

By the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 71, intituled "An Act for the Appointment of convenient Places for the holding of Assizes in England and Wales," reciting that "by a statute made in the sixth year of the reign of King Richard the Second it was ordained that the justices assigned to take assizes and deliver the gaols should hold their sessions in the principal and chief towns of every of the counties where the shire courts of the same counties should be holden: and whereas by a statute made in the eleventh year of the same reign, reciting so much of the said statute of the sixth year as is hereinbefore recited, and stating that the said statute was in part prejudicial and grievous to the people of divers counties in England, it was provided that the Chancellor of England for the time being should have power thereof to make and provide remedy, by advice of the justices, from time to time when need should be, notwithstanding the said statute: and whereas the places at which the assizes are now held in various counties of England and Wales are inconvenient to the inhabitants thereof, and it would conduce to the more cheap, speedy and effectual administration of justice to appoint other places instead thereof for the holding of assizes; but doubts may be entertained whether that object can be fully effected by virtue of the statutes hereinbefore referred to:" it is enacted, that "so much of each of the said statutes as is hereinbefore recited shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Recited statutes in part repealed.

Assizes.

By sect. 2, "His Majesty, by and with the advice of his most honourable Privy Council, shall have power from time to time to order and direct at what place or places in any county in England or Wales the assizes and sessions under the commissions of gaol delivery, and other commissions for the dispatch of civil and criminal business, shall be holden, and to order and direct such assizes and sessions for the dispatch of criminal and civil business to be holden at more than one place in the same county on the same circuit, and to order and direct the assizes and sessions under such commissions for the dispatch of criminal business to be holden for the whole county at one place, and for the dispatch of civil business at one or more place or places in such county, on the same circuit; and further to order and direct any special commissions of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery to be holden at any one or more places in any such county."

His Majesty in Council may direct at what places in any county assizes and sessions of gaol delivery shall be held, and that they may be holden in more than one place in a county on the same circuit.

Sect. 3. "In case his Majesty, by and with the advice of his most honourable Privy Council, shall think fit to order and direct that the assizes or any such special commissions shall be holden at more than one place in any one county, it shall be lawful for his Majesty, by and with the advice aforesaid, to divide any such county for the purposes of this act, and to make rules and regulations touching the venue in all cases, civil and criminal, then pending or thereafter to be pending and to be tried within any division of such county so to be made as aforesaid; and touching the liability and attendance of jurors, whether grand jurors, special jurors, or common jurors, at the assizes and sessions as aforesaid, or at any sessions under any special commissions to be holden within any such division; and touching the use of any house of correction or prison as a common gaol, and the government and keeping thereof; and touching the alterations of any commissions, writs, precepts or other proceedings whatsoever for carrying into effect the purposes of this act; and touching any other matters that may be requisite for carrying into effect the purposes of this act; and all such rules and regulations shall be of the like force and effect as if the same had been made by the authority of parliament, and shall be notified in the London Gazette, or in such other manner as his Majesty, by and with the advice of his most honourable Privy Council, shall think fit to direct."

Power to divide counties for the purpose of holding assizes in different divisions of the same county.

Sect. 4. "His Majesty shall have power from time to time, for the purpose of carrying this act into effect, to order and direct that the Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster shall be holden at any one or more places in the county palatine of Lancaster, as he shall think fit, and to divide the said county palatine for the purpose of the trial of civil causes and the transaction of other civil business in the said Court, and to make the like rules and regulations touching the venue in civil cases to be tried within any division of the said county, and the liability and attendance of jurors, whether special or common, at the Court to be held within any such division, and touching the alterations of commissions, writs, precepts, or other proceedings for carrying into effect the purposes of this act, and touching any other matter that may be requisite for carrying into effect the purposes of this act; and all such rules and regulations shall be of the like force and effect as if the same had been made by the authority of parliament, and shall be notified in the London Gazette, or in such other manner as his Majesty shall think fit."

Power to direct the Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster to be holden at any one or more places in the county, and to divide the county for that purpose.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 72, intituled "An Act for enabling Justices of Assize and Nisi Prius, Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol Delivery, to hold Courts for Counties at large in adjoining Counties of Cities and Towns, and conversely," (24th August, 1839,) reciting "That it would facilitate the dispatch of business if her Majesty's justices of assize were authorised to hold the assizes of and for the counties at large in England and Wales, and also of and for any county of a city, county of a town, borough, or other jurisdiction locally situate within or adjacent to such county at large, in any court house or other building, whether in or belonging to such county at large, or in or belonging to such county of a city, county of a town, borough, or other jurisdiction, indiscriminately: it was therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for her Majesty's justices of assize, or other her Majesty's commissioners by whom any Court shall be holden by virtue of any of her Majesty's commissions of assize or nisi prius, oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery, to hold such Court for any county at large in England and Wales, and also for any county of a city, county of a town, borough, or other jurisdiction locally situate within or adjacent to such county at large, in any court house or other building, whether in or belonging to such county at large, or in or belonging to any such county of a city, county of a town, borough, or other jurisdiction, indiscriminately, and also from time to time, as often as they shall see fit, by proclamation in open Court, to adjourn any such Court from the court house or other building wherein they shall then be holding the same to such other court house or building as they may deem convenient, whether in and belonging to such county at large, or within and belonging to such county of a city, county of a town, borough, or other jurisdiction locally situate within or adjacent to the same as aforesaid; and all jurors, prosecutors, witnesses, and other persons who may have been required to appear before the said justices and commissioners in any cause, criminal or civil, shall give attendance before the said justices and commissioners wherever the said Court shall be holden as aforesaid, and there shall do all such things as they ought to have done before and at the Courts holden before such justices and commissioners if this act had not been made, and in default thereof shall be subject to such and the same penalties and forfeitures for such their default; and all evidence given and all things done at any such Court shall be deemed, and in all indictments, pleadings, rules, and entries shall be alleged, to have been given and done respectively within the county at large, or within the county of a city, county of a town, borough, or other jurisdiction (as the case may be) within which such Court would have been holden if this act had not been made: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall authorise the holding of any such Court in any place more than three miles distant from the county, city, town, borough, or other jurisdiction for which such Court is holden."

Proviso.

When Court may direct issue to be tried by jury of adjoining county, &c.

Stat. 38 Geo. III. c. 52, s. 1, reciting that "Whereas there exists in the counties of cities and of towns corporate within this kingdom an exclusive right that all causes and offences which arise within their particular limits should be tried by a jury of persons residing within the limits of the county of such city or town corporate; which ancient privilege, intended for other and good purposes, has in many instances been found by experience not to conduce to the ends of justice; and that it will tend to the more effectual administration of justice in certain cases, if actions, indictments and other proceedings, the causes of which arise within the counties of cities and towns corporate, were tried in the next adjoining counties," enacts, "That from and after the 1st of June, 1798, in every action, whether transitory or local, which shall be prosecuted or depending in any of his Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster; and in every indictment removed into the King's Bench by certiorari; and in every information filed by his Majesty's Attorney or Solicitor-General; or by the leave of the Court of King's Bench; and in all cases where any person or persons shall plead to or traverse any of the facts contained in the return to any writ of mandamus, if the venue of such action, indictment or information, be laid in the county of any city or town corporate within that part of Great Britain called England, or if such writ of mandamus be directed to any person or persons, body politic or corporate, that it shall be lawful for the Court in which such action, &c. and other proceeding shall be depending, at the instance of the prosecutor or plaintiff, or of any defendant, to direct the issue or issues joined in such action, &c. to be tried by a jury of the county next adjoining to the county of such city or town corporate; and to award proper writs of venire and distringas accordingly, if the said Court shall think it fit so to do."

Sect. 2. Indictments for offences committed within the county of any city or town corporate, may be preferred to the jury of the county next adjoining.

Sect. 3. Indictments found by the grand jury, or inquisitions taken before the coroner of the county of a city or town corporate, may be ordered by the Court to be filed with the proper officer of the next adjoining county, and defendants may be removed to the gaol thereof. (See "Indictment," Vol. III.)

Assizes.

By the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 22, intituled "An Act to enable Justices of Assize on their Circuits to take Inquisition of all Pleas in the Court of Exchequer of Pleas which shall be brought before them without a special Commission for that Purpose," and reciting "that by the statute commonly called The Statute of Westminster the Second, passed in the thirteenth year of the reign of King Edward the First, the justices of assize on their several circuits are empowered to take inquisitions of all pleas in the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas: and that it was expedient to extend the said power to pleas in the Court of Exchequer, in order to put an end to the practice which has hitherto obtained of issuing a separate commission from the said Court upon each record brought therefrom before the judges of assize: it was enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for all justices of assize, and they are hereby authorised and empowered, on their respective circuits, to try causes and take inquisitions of pleas pending in the Court of Exchequer of Pleas which shall be brought before them, and to proceed thereon in like manner as they can or may do in respect of causes and pleas pending in the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas under and by virtue of the said act, or by any other law, statute, or usage whatsoever; and that it shall not be necessary hereafter to issue any commission from the said Court of Exchequer of Pleas for that purpose."

Stat. West. 2, 13 Edw. I. c. 30.

Justices of assize may try causes, &c. pending in the Exchequer without a special commission.

By 3 Geo. IV. c. 10, intituled "An Act to enable, in certain cases, the opening and reading of Commissions under which the Judges sit upon the Circuits after the Day appointed for holding Assizes," sect. 1, it is enacted, "That whenever it shall so happen that commissions of assize shall not be opened and read in the presence of one of the quorum commissioners at any place specified for holding the assize on the very day appointed for such purpose, it shall and may be lawful to open and read the same in the presence of one of the quorum commissioners therein named on the following day, or if the following day shall be on a Sunday, or any other day of public rest, then on the succeeding day; and such opening and reading thereof shall be as effectual to all intents and purposes as if the same had been opened and read in the presence of one of the quorum commissioners on the very day appointed for that purpose, and shall be deemed and taken to be an opening and reading thereof on the day for that purpose appointed; and all records and other proceedings under or relating to any commission which may be opened and read by virtue of this act, shall and may be drawn up, entered, and made out under the same date, and in the same form in all respects as if such commission had been opened and read on the day originally appointed for that purpose: provided always, that the judges and quorum commissioners are hereby directed and required to have such commissions opened and read on the very days appointed for that purpose, unless the same shall be prevented by the pressure of business elsewhere, or by some unforeseen cause or accident."

Opening the commission.

When not opened, &c. on the day, same may be opened, &c. on following day, &c.

Must be opened on day appointed, if not prevented.

Sect. 2. "In every case in which it shall happen that any such commission shall be opened and read under the provisions of and according to this act, the quorum commissioner before whom the same shall be opened and read shall under his hand and seal certify to the lord chancellor, lord keeper, or lords commissioners of the great seal for the time being, that the said commission was so opened, and the cause of the delay of opening and reading the same, which certificate shall be enrolled in the High Court of Chancery."

Cause of delay to be certified to lord chancellor, &c.

Attachment.

THIS word, as a law term, we have immediately from the French attacher, to tye, or make fast. The Italian word is attacare; the Spanish, attacar; and the Saxon tæcan, to take.

It signifies the taking of a man's body by commandment of a writ or precept; and is properly grantable in cases of contempts, against which for the most part all courts of record generally, but more especially those of Westminster Hall, and above all, the Court of Queen's Bench, may proceed in a summary manner, according to their discretion. (2 Hawk. c. 22, s. 1; 5 Bla. Com. 286.)

In the case of R. v. Bartlett, 2 Sess. Cas. 176, it is said that generally the sessions have not a power to award an attachment: but the Court said they would not determine how it would have been, if they had committed the person for contempt; but the ordinary and proper method is by indictment.

As each Court, however, is in general considered to be a proper judge of its own contempts (Crosby's Case, 3 Wils. 199), the Court of Queen's Bench will not grant an attachment for a contempt to an inferior jurisdiction, but leave it to be punished by that Court against which the contempt has been committed. (R. v. Birchett, 1 Stra. 567; 2 Hawk. c. 22, s. 2; R. v. Mile End, 1 Ld. Raym. 676.)

When an order, however, is confirmed by the Court above, an attachment lies for non-performance of it; and therefore the Court will not take security of the party for performance of it. (Q. v. Chaffey, 2 Ld. Raym. 858; 1 Bott, 472.)

If a witness neglect to obey a subpœna to attend before the grand jury, on an affidavit that he was material to the prosecutor's case, and was duly served with the subpœna, the Court of Queen's Bench will grant an attachment against him, on which he may be taken and committed till after the trial of the offender, when an order will be made for his discharge. (R. v. Ring, 8 T. R. 585; R. v. Willett, 6 T. R. 295; R. v. Dixon, 3 Burr. 1687; R. v. Donnell, 1 Ad. & Ell. 598. And see further, post, "Costs," Vol. II. p. 173; "Evidence," Vol. II. p. 447.)

Attainder.

THE difference between a man attainted and convicted is, that a man is said to be convicted before he hath judgment, as if a man be convicted by verdict or confession, and when he hath his judgment upon the verdict or confession, then he is said to be attainted. (1 Inst. 390 b.)

That is to say, his blood is become (attinctus) tainted, stained, or corrupted; insomuch that by the common law, in cases of treason or felony, his children or other kindred cannot inherit his estate, nor his wife claim her dower; and the same cannot be restored or saved but by act of parliament; and therefore, in divers instances, there is a special provision by act of parliament that such or such an attainder shall not work corruption of blood, loss of dower, nor disherison of heirs. (1 Inst. 391 b.)

Attainder.

By stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 145, intituled "An Act to take away corruption of blood save in certain cases," it is enacted, "That no attainder for felony which shall take place from and after the passing of this act, save and except in the cases of the crime of high treason, or of the crimes of petit-treason or murder, or of abetting, procuring, or counselling the same, shall extend to the disinheriting of any heir, nor to the prejudice of the right or title of any person or persons other than the right or title of the offender or offenders during his, her, or their natural lives only; and that it shall be lawful to every person or persons, to whom the right or interest of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, after the death of any such offender or offenders, should or might have appertained if no such attainder had been, to enter into the same."

As to attainder in general, see 1 Ch. C. L. 723 to 742; as to when it ensues (Id. 723); the meaning and effect of (Id. 725); its consequences in forfeiture of real property (Id. 727; Doe d. Evans v. Evans, 5 B. & Cres. 584; 8 D. & R. 399, S. C.; Doe d. Griffiths v. Pritchard, 5 B. & Adol. 765; 2 Nev. & M. 489, S. C.); in forfeiture of personal property (1 Chit. C. C. & Id. 730); in forfeiture as altered by statutes (Id. 733); to what time the forfeiture relates (Id. 735); what to be done with the felon's goods (Id. 736); of the loss of dower by (Id. 738); corruption of blood by (Id. 740; see also Deacon, Crim. Law Dig. tit. Attainder.)

During the abeyance of a barony descendible to the heirs of the body, one of the co-heirs was attainted for treason. After the passing of an act to restore in blood the sons and daughters of the party attainted, A. claimed through the co-heir who was so attainted, B. through another co-heir: it was held, that it was competent to determine the abeyance in favour of A. or in favour of B. (Camoy's Peerage, 5 Bing. 754.)

The statute 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 23, alters the law as to the escheat and forfeiture of real and personal property held in trust, &c.

As to the competency of an attainted witness, see post, "Evidence," Vol. II.

It may be as well to observe, that a felon attainted and ordered to be transported for a certain term of years, was not (under the 8 Geo. III. c. 15) restored to his civil rights till after the expiration of the term for which he was ordered to be transported. Therefore, as by his attainder all personal property and rights of action accruing to him (either before or after the attainder) were vested in the crown without office found, the attainder of such a person was held to be well pleaded to an action brought by him on a bill of exchange, which had been indorsed by him after his attainder and before the term of his transportation had expired; (Bullock v. Dods, 2 B. & A. 258;) but now, by the 5 Geo. IV. c. 84, s. 26, the 8 Geo. III. c. 15, is repealed; and though a felon may not have served the whole period of the term for which he was transported, yet if he shall receive any remission of part of the term of his transportation, from the governor or lieutenant governor of New South Wales, or any other colony, he may now, whilst lawfully residing in any place, under such sentence or remission, lawfully sue for the recovery of any property acquired by him since his conviction, not only in the colonial courts, but in those of any part of her Majesty's dominions. (See Deacon's C. L. Dig. 83.)

As to the plea of autrefois attaint, see post, "Autrefois Attaint."

Attaint, see "Jurors," Vol. III.

Attaint of jurors is abolished by 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 60.

Attempts and Solicitations to commit Crimes.

Solicitations.

AT common law it is a misdemeanor to incite another to the commission of any indictable offence, though the solicitation does not succeed; (R. v. Higgins, 2 East's Rep. 5; Schofield's case, Cald. 397; and see R. v. Sutton, 2 Stra. 1074;) as soliciting a servant to steal his master's goods, or the like. (Id.; sed vid. R. v. Collingwood, 6 Mod. 289.)

But as the offence of an illegal solicitation rests in tendency only, a greater degree of particularity is requisite in the indictment, in stating the manner and means of the solicitation, for by these alone can the defendant's criminality be tried. (1 Stark. C. L. 133.)

It is a misdemeanor to solicit a member of the privy council to accept a bribe for the disposal of an office; (R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. R. 2494; and see R. v. Pollman, 2 Camp. 229; R. v. Plympton, 2 Ld. Raym. 1377;) or to offer a bribe to a juryman; (Young's case, 2 East, 14, 16;) or a voter at an election of members of parliament; (4 Burr. 2500; and see post, "Bribery," Vol. II.)

Attempts.

It also seems that an attempt to commit a felony is a misdemeanor, and every attempt (not every intention) to commit a misdemeanor is a misdemeanor; (R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 8; Reg. v. Martin, 9 C. & P. 215; S. P. Reg. v. Martin, 9 C. & P. 213;) and an attempt to commit a statuteable misdemeanor is as much a misdemeanor as an attempt to commit a common law misdemeanor. (Schofield's case, Russ. & R. C. C. 107, n.; and see R. v. Butler, 6 C. & P. 368; R. v. Roderick, 7 C. & P. 795.)

An attempt to provoke another to send a challenge is a misfeasant. (R. v. Phillips, 6 East, 464.)

So is an attempt to suborn a person to commit perjury a misdemeanor. (Anon. Cald. 400; R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 14.)

So are all attempts tending to the prejudice of the community indictable. (Per Lawrence, J., R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 8.)

On a prosecution for a misdemeanor in inciting another to commit felony, it is not necessary for the prosecutor to show negatively that the felony was not completed, in order to sustain the charge for misdemeanor only; but he may leave it for the defendant to show, if he think fit, that the misdemeanor was merged in the greater offence; and in the absence of such proof, he may be convicted of the solicitation. (See per Lord Mansfield, Cald. 400; R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 8.)

Many attempts to commit offences are by statutes made felonies; as attempts to murder or do bodily harm by poisoning, stabbing, shooting, drowning, sending explosive substances, &c. See the title "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. V.; and as to assaults with intent to commit a felony, see ante.

Punishment.

The punishment is by fine or imprisonment, or both.

By the 3 Geo. IV. c. 114, the Court may sentence a person having attempted to commit felony, to "imprisonment with hard labour, for any term not exceeding the term for which such Court may now imprison for such offences, either in addition to or in lieu of any other punishment which may be inflicted on any such offenders by any law in force before this act."

Costs of prosecution.

The expenses of a prosecution for an attempt to commit a felony are allowed by 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 23, post, "Costs," Vol. II.

(1.) Indictment for soliciting a servant to embezzle his master's goods.

—— to wit. THE jurors for our Lady the Queen upon their oath present, that C. D. late of the parish of, in the county of , labourer, on the day of , in the year of the reign of our Lady the now Queen Victoria, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, did wickedly and unlawfully solicit and incite one A. B. [a domestic servant of one E. F.] feloniously to take, steal, and carry away divers, to wit, [six silver spoons] of the value of [fourteen shillings,] of the goods and chattels of [his master] the said E. P. and then and there did, &c. [state the filiation], whereas in truth and in fact he the said A. B. at the time when he so endeavoured to persuade, solicit, and instigate the said E. F. to make oath and swear as aforesaid, then and there well knew that the said C. D. would be put to great charges and expenses of his monies if she the said E. F. would swear as aforesaid, and whereas in truth and in fact he the said A. B. at the time when he so endeavoured to persuade, solicit, and instigate the said E. F. to make oath and swear as aforesaid, had no reasonable or probable cause whatsoever to suspect or imagine that the said C. D. was the father of such child, but on the contrary thereof the said A. B. was then and there informed by the said E. F. that he the said A. B. was the father of such child of which she the said E. F. was so pregnant as aforesaid; and whereas in truth and in fact she the said E. F. never told or informed him the said A. B. that the said C. D. was the father of such child, and whereas in truth and in fact he the said A. B. so wickedly and unlawfully endeavoured to persuade, solicit, and instigate the said E. F. to swear as aforesaid, in order that the said A.B. might be exonerated, freed, and discharged from divers expenses which might accrue to him as being the father of such child, after the same should be born of the body of her the said E. F., against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

Attorney.

Attorney, who.

AN Attorney is one who is appointed to do any thing in the turn, stead, or place of another. (1 Inst. 51.)

Unqualified persons must not act, except for board of guardians.

By the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 2, no person shall act as an attorney in any civil or criminal matter before justices of assize, of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or at any general or quarter sessions of the peace, or before any justices of the peace, or before any commissioners of the revenue, unless admitted and enrolled, and qualified to act according to that act. But by the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 68, clerks and officers may conduct proceedings before justices at petty sessions on behalf of a board of guardians, although not attornies or certificated.

Cannot be justices, except in some places.

By the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 33, "No attorney or solicitor shall be capable to continue or be a justice of the peace for any county within that part of Great Britain called England, or the principality of Wales, during such time as he shall continue in the business and practice of an attorney or solicitor."

But by sect. 34 it is provided, "That the prohibition last hereinbefore contained shall not extend, or be construed to extend, to any city or town being a county of itself, or to any city, town, cinque port, or liberty having justices of the peace within their respective limits and precincts by charter, commission, or otherwise, but that in every such city, town, liberty, and place, attornies or solicitors may be capable of being justices of the peace, and in such manner only as they might have been if this act had never been made, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Cannot be a commissioner of land-tax, &c.

An attorney cannot be a master, or (in general) clerk, or messenger to a master, of the superior courts (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 30, s. 15); nor can he be a commissioner of the land-tax, unless he possesses 100*l.* per annum. (30 Geo. II. c. 3, s. 87, &c.)

May be under-sheriff, &c.

It may be as well to add, that the statutes of 1 Hen. V. c. 4, and 22 Geo. II. c. 46, are repealed, which provided that no attorney whilst under-sheriff, or holding various minor offices, should practise in the Queen's courts or at quarter sessions.

Exempt from serving certain offices.

Attornies are exempted from serving all offices where personal service is required, even although imposed by act of parliament, and in the most comprehensive terms (Gerard's case, 2 W. Bl. 1126); such as the offices of constable (R. v. Routledge, 2 Doug. 538; Gerard's case, 2 W. Bl. 1126; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 109, s. 6); overseers of the poor (Gerard's case, 2 W. Bl. 1126; Ex parte Jefferies, 6 Bing. 195); or tythingman, offices under the commissioners of sewers, collectors of subsidies, watch and ward, &c. (Gerard's case, 2 W. Bl. 1126); and corporation offices, such as sheriffs, &c., even although the attorney be resident in the corporation town. (Mayor of Norwich v. Berry, 1 W. Bl. 636; 4 Burr. 2109, S. C.) But they are not privileged from being balloted for the militia, for they can pay for substitutes. (Gerard's case, 2 W. Bl. 1126; see Evindon's case, 2 Str. 1143, contra.)

Autrefois acquit.

What.

THIS is a plea by a person indicted of a treason or felony, that he was heretofore acquitted of the same treason or felony; for one shall not be brought into danger of his life for the same offence more than once. (3 Inst. 213.)

When pleadable.

When pleadable.]—If the prisoner could have been legally convicted on the first indictment, upon any evidence that might have been adduced, his acquittal on that indictment may be successfully pleaded to a second indictment; and it is immaterial whether the proper evidence was adduced at the trial of the first indictment or not. (R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 634: R. v. Clarke, 1 Brod. & B. 473; R. v. Embden, 9 East, 437.)

Thus an acquittal upon an indictment for burglary and larceny may be pleaded to an indictment for larceny of the same goods; because, upon the former indictment, the defendant might have been convicted of the larceny. But if the first indictment were for a burglary, with intent to commit a larceny, and did not charge an actual larceny, an acquittal on it would not be a bar to a subsequent indictment for the larceny; (see 2 Hale, 245;) because the defendant could not have been convicted of the larceny on the first indictment.

So an acquittal upon an indictment for murder may be pleaded in bar of another indictment for manslaughter; (Fost. 329; 2 Hale, 246;) because the defendant might be convicted of the manslaughter on the first indictment.

And if a party charged with the crime of murder committed in the perpetration of a burglary, be generally acquitted on that indictment, he cannot afterwards be convicted of the burglary with violence, under the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 86, s. 2, as the general acquittal on the charge of murder would be an answer to that part of the indictment containing the allegation of violence. (Reg. v. Gould, 9 Car. & P. 364.)

So an acquittal upon an indictment for manslaughter is, it seems, a bar to an indictment for murder. (Fost. 329.)

If the charge be in truth the same, though the indictments differ in immaterial circumstances, the defendant may plead his previous acquittal with proper averments; for it would be absurd to suppose that by varying the day, parish, or any other allegation, the precise accuracy of which is not material, the prosecutor could change the right of the defendant, and subject him to a second trial. (Keilw. 58; 1 Leach, 448; R. v. Embden, 9 East, 437.) Thus, as to the point of time, if he be indicted for a murder as committed on a certain day and acquitted, and afterwards be charged with killing the same person on a different day, he may plead the former acquittal in bar notwithstanding this difference, for the day is not material; and this is a fact which could not be twice committed. (2 Hale, 179, 244; 2 Hawk. c. 35.) And the same rule applies to accusations of other felonies, for though it is possible for several acts of the same kind to be committed at different times by the same person, it lies in averment, and the party indicted may show that the same charge is intended. (2 Hale, 179, 244; 2 Hawk. c. 35.)

Four persons were tried for a rape, upon an indictment containing counts charging each as principal and the others as aiders and abettors. They were acquitted; and it being proposed on the following day to try three of them for another rape upon the same person (the second indictment being exactly the same as the first, with the omission only of the fourth prisoner), they pleaded autrefois acquit to the second indictment, averring the identity of the offences, and to this plea there was a replication that the offences were different. The prisoners' counsel put in the commitment and the former indictment, and also the minutes of the former acquittal written on the indictment. On this evidence the jury found that the offences were the same; and it being referred for the opinion of the judges, whether there was any evidence to justify and support the verdict, and if not, whether such verdict was final, and operated as a bar to any further proceedings by the Crown—upon the second indictment their lordships held that the verdict of the jury was final, and the prisoners were discharged. (R. v. Parry, 7 Car. & P. 836.)

All variations not inconsistent with the validity of both proceedings, such as differences in the day, the vill, or the quantity, may be shown to be merely technical. But if the variances are in those things which are material, autrefois acquit must not be pleaded; for either the first indictment was ineffectual, and, therefore, the acquital is of no avail, or the second will prove not applicable to the evidence, and therefore the objection is needless. (2 Hale, 245.)

An acquittal upon an indictment for a felony is no bar to an indictment for a misdemeanor, and e converso. (2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 5.) And an acquittal of an offence charged as a larceny cannot be pleaded in bar to an indictment for the same offence charged as a false pretence. (Reg. v. Henderson, 1 Car. & M. 328.) Nor is an acquittal as accessary a bar to an indictment as principal, and e converso. (2 Hale, 244; Fost. 361; 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 11; Rex v. Plant, 7 C. & P. 575.)

So an acquittal upon an insufficient indictment is no bar to another indictment for the same offence. (4 Co. 45 a.) Where the defendant was formerly indicted for forging a will, which was set out in the indictment thus: "I John Styles," &c. and was acquitted for variance, the will given in evidence commencing "John Styles," without the "I:" it was holden that he could not plead this acquittal in bar of another indictment, reciting the will correctly, "John Styles," &c. (R. v. Cogan, 2 Leach, 503.) Where the first count of an indictment charged the prisoners with having in their possession a mould intended to impress the stamp of the reverse side of a shilling; the second stated, that the mould was intended to impress the obverse side; the third stated, that it was intended to impress part or parts of the reverse side; and the fourth stated the same as to the obverse side. A general verdict of guilty having been recorded, a motion was made in arrest of judgment, on the ground that the two last counts were bad for uncertainty, whereupon the judge directed another indictment to be preferred. The second indictment contained the two first counts of the previous one, a third and fourth stated, that the mould was intended to impress parts of the obverse and parts of the reverse sides; a fifth and sixth used the word "part" instead of parts. The prisoner pleaded autrefois convict. The twelve judges decided that the plea was bad, and confirmed the second conviction. (R. v. Phillips, 1 Jurist, 427.) And see a case where there was a misstatement of the king's reign. (R. v. Taylor, post.)

An insolvent debtor, acquitted on a former indictment for omitting goods from his schedule, may be again indicted for omitting other goods not specified in the former indictment, but such a course ought not to be taken except under very peculiar circumstances. (R. v. Champneys, 2 M. & Rob. 26.)

As to the sufficiency of the discharge, which may be thus pleaded, it must be a legal acquittal by judgment upon trial, by verdict of a petty jury. (2 Hale, 243, 6; 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 6.)

And therefore, if a man be committed for a crime, and no bill be preferred against him, or if it be thrown out by the grand jury, so that he is discharged by proclamation, he is still liable to be indicted. (Id.)

So if the facts be found specially by the coroner's inquest or grand jury, and he be thereupon discharged, he cannot plead it in bar to any subsequent prosecution; but if the special verdict be found by the petit jury, and judgment be given by the Court "that he go thereof without day," this will amount to a sufficient acquittal. (Id.)

Form, &c. of Plea.

Although it was formerly thought that no acquittal in any other Court could be effectually pleaded in bar to a prosecution in the Court of Queen's Bench, it is now settled that a legal acquittal in any Court whatsoever, having competent jurisdiction to try the charge, will be sufficient to preclude any subsequent proceedings before every other tribunal. (1 Leach, 135, n. a.)

Even an erroneous acquittal is conclusive until the judgment be reversed, so that if a judge direct a jury to acquit the prisoner on any ground, however fallacious, he is entitled to the benefit of the verdict. (2 Inst. 318; 2 Hale, 247.)

If a judgment in favour of a prisoner be reversed, he may be arraigned and tried de novo. (2 Hale, 247.)

A mere error in the former process, however, will not render that prosecution nugatory, because the reason which relates to errors in the indictment will not apply, and the defendant might legally have been convicted. (Id. 248.)

And it may be here observed, that a party found guilty by a jury at a sessions irregularly holden, is entitled to have the record of the proceedings regularly made up according to the fact, and the Court of Queen's Bench will grant a mandamus to the justices to make up such record; (R. v. The Justices of Middlesex, in re Bowman, 3 Nev. & M. 110; S. C. 5 B. & Adolph. 1113;) and the Court will postpone the trial of the prisoner to enable him to apply for such mandamus. (R. v. Bowman, 6 C. & P. 101.) The prisoner would, it is conceived, have the same right on a plea of autrefois acquit.

Form and requisites of plea.

Form of Plea.]—This plea is of a mixed nature, and consists partly of matter of record, and partly of matter of fact. (2 Hale, 241, 255; 2 Hawk. c. 35.)

It is requisite to set forth in the plea the record of the former acquittal, or it would be bad on demurrer; (R. v. Wildey, 1 M. & Sel. 188; 2 Hale, 241.) But it is not necessary to produce the record immediately, because it is pleaded in bar, and he who pleads it hath neither the custody nor property in the record. (2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 65.)

If, in a plea of autrefois acquit, the prisoner were to insist on two distinct records of acquittal, his plea would be bad for duplicity; but semble, that if he insisted on the wrong, the Court would, in a capital case, take care that he did not suffer by it. (R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 634; and see R. v. Chamberlain, 6 C. & P. 98, post, 317.) The two records in that case were the record of acquittal of murder upon the former indictment and the record of acquittal on the coroner's inquisition.

After the statement of the record of acquittal, the matter of fact of the plea must be stated, viz. that the charges and persons are the same which were included in the former prosecution. (1 Hale, 255, 392.) Where the variance between the indictments is not material, the identity may be maintained by averments; and the same observation applies to an immaterial difference in the addition of the party indicted. (Keilw. 58; ante, 312.)

An indictment charged that the defendant on such a day in the second year of the reign of the present King kept a gaming house. Plea, that on such a day in the fourth year of the reign of the present King, the defendant was arraigned upon an indictment, which charged that the defendant, on the 18th January, in the fifty-seventh year of the reign of the late King, and on divers other days and times between that day and the day of taking that inquisition, kept a gaming-house, &c. The plea then averred the identity of the offence stated in the two indictments, and the acquittal of the defendant. Upon demurrer to this plea, concluding with a prayer of judgment of respondeas ouster, it was held that the plea was bad, because the indictment upon which the acquittal was alleged to have taken place, on the face of it, charged an offence committed in the reign of the late King; and it was not competent to the defendant to show, by averment, that it was for the same offence as that charged in the indictment before the Court, for that would, in effect, be to contradict the record. It was also held, that the crown was entitled to final judgment, notwithstanding the form in which the demurrer concluded. (R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502; 5 D. & R. 422, S. C.)

The plea concludes with a verification and prayer that the defendant may be dismissed the Court without further day. (2 Hale, 392; 2 Leach, 715.)

Replication. Evidence.

The plea ought properly to be on parchment, signed by counsel: the Court, however, will not reject the plea because it is informal, but will assign counsel to prepare it in a proper form for the defendant. (R. v. Chamberlain, 6 C. & P. 93.)

Should be on parchment, &c.

In Vandercomb and Abbott's case, 2 Leach, 712, the Court considered that it was absolutely necessary for the prisoner to plead over to the felony at the same time that he pleads his plea of autrefois acquit. But in R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 634, the prisoner merely pleaded his plea of autrefois acquit, without pleading over to the felony: and it is laid down in 2 Curw. Hawk. c. 23, s. 128, that a prisoner may still plead "not guilty" after his special plea is found against him: and in the case of R. v. Welch, Car. C. L. 56, O. B. 1828, the prisoner pleaded autrefois acquit to a charge of felony, without also pleading over to the felony: judgment was given against him on this plea; and he after that pleaded "not guilty," and was tried and convicted.

Pleading over to the felony.

Replication.]—The replication may, if the fact of acquittal be disputed, either take issue upon the averments of identity, or aver nul tiel record. (2 Hale, 255.)

Replication.

In Vandercomb and Abbott, 2 Leach, 715, (n.), the counsel for the crown wished to reply ore tenus to the plea of autrefois acquit; "but the prisoner's counsel insisted that the replication must be on parchment, for that only the attorney-general could make such a replication ore tenus; and the Court said that it must be on parchment, for otherwise the parties would not have equal justice, as, by its being pleaded ore tenus, the prisoners would be deprived of the opportunity of taking advantage of any defect there might happen to be in the form of the replication. However, in the case of R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 635, the counsel for the prosecution replied ore tenus, although the plea was on parchment; but he repeated the words of the replication (from notes) so slowly, that they were written down by the learned judge. (Car. C. L. 56.)

The replication concludes to the country, and no day is given to bring in the record, as in civil actions: because in criminal cases there can be no trial by the record, it must be by jury only. (Jervis's Arch. C. L. 9 ed. 91.)

Evidence.]—To prove the issue of nul tiel record, the prisoner must produce the record properly drawn up. (See R. v. Bowman, 6 C. & P. 101; post, 317; and post, "Evidence," Vol. II.) But it seems that during the sitting under the same commission, the original indictment and minutes of the verdict upon it are receivable in evidence in support of a plea of autrefois acquit, without a record being drawn up. (R. v. Parry, 7 C. & P. 836.) In order to his pleading autrefois acquit in a case of felony, the prisoner has not a right to a copy of the second indictment, but he has a right to have the indictment read slowly. (Id.)

Evidence.

In order to enable the defendant to produce the record, if the indictment be before justices or at the assizes, he may remove the tenor of the record into Chancery, and have it sent to the Court where it is to be tried by mittimus sub pede sigilli. (2 Hale, 242, 255.) Or if he be arraigned in the Queen's Bench, and the former trial were before justices of the peace or of oyer and terminer, the Court will give him a writ of certiorari to remove the proceedings, and respite the plea until he has, by the return, been enabled to frame it. (Id.)

Production of record how effected.

Addressing Jury.]—If in the replication, the prosecutor take issue on a fact averred in a plea of autrefois acquit, the counsel on both sides address the jury. (R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 635.) And the counsel for the accused has the right to begin. (R. v. Parry, 7 C. & P. 836.)

Addressing jury.

Judgment.]—In case of felony, if the plea be held bad, the judgment is respondeat ouster; or rather, as the defendant generally pleads over to the felony, the jury are charged again, and that at the same time with the issue on the plea of autrefois acquit, to inquire of the second issue, and the trial proceeds as if no plea in bar had been pleaded. (1 Leach, 134.)

In case of misdemeanors, as the defendant cannot also plead over, the judgment upon a plea of autrefois acquit, which is in bar, whether it be on demurrer to the same, or on issue joined, is final, and sentence will be pronounced against the defendant. (2 Ld Raym. 922; R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & Cres. 502; 5 D. & R. 422, S. C.; ante, 314.)

When, on the other hand, the plea is allowed, the judgment is, that "he shall go without day," and he is altogether discharged from the prosecution. (2 Hale, 391.)

A verdict for the prisoner cannot be set aside and a new trial had, although without evidence and against the opinion of the judge. (R. v. Lea, 2 Mood. C. C. 9.)

(1.) Plea of autrefois acquit.

Autrefois attaint.

Plea of abatement.

THE 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 4, enacts—"That no plea setting forth any attainder shall be pleaded in bar of any indictment, unless the attainder be for the same offence as that charged in the indictment." By this enactment the plea of autrefois attaint appears unavailable. (See 4 Bla. Com. 337, n.)

As to attainder, see ante, "Attainder."

Autrefois convict.

A MAN convicted of a felony may plead such conviction in bar of any subsequent indictment for the felony of which he was convicted. (2 Hale, P. C. 251; Vaux's case, 4 Co. 45; 2 Hawk. c. 36, s. 10, 14.) Autrefois convict.

This plea, like that of autrefois acquit, must set out the record of conviction to the allowance of judgment, inclusive, and must contain an averment either that the offences charged in the former indictment and in the present one are one and the same offence, and not other and different, or that the felony charged in the present indictment was (if at all) committed previously to the former conviction. (See ante, 314; and further, 1 Chit. C. L. 461, 462.)

The Court will not reject a plea of autrefois convict on account of the informal manner in which it is handed in by the prisoner, but will assign counsel to put it into a formal shape and postpone the trial to give time for its preparation. (R. v. Chamberlain, 6 Car. & P. 93.)

A plea of autrefois convict can only be proved by the record, and the indictment with the finding of the jury, &c. indorsed by the proper officer, is not sufficient, although it appear that no record has been made up: but the Court before whom the prisoner is brought to be tried the second time, will postpone the trial, at the request of the prisoner, on affidavit of the fact, to give time for an application for a mandamus to compel the making up of the record. (R v. Bowman, 6 Car. & P. 101.)

A party found guilty by a jury at a session irregularly holden, is entitled to have the record of the proceedings correctly made up according to the fact, and the Court of Queen's Bench will grant a mandamus to the justices to make up such record. (R. v. The Justices of Middlesex, in re Bowman, 5 B. & Adol. 1113; 3 Nev. & M. 110, S. C.)

Award.

AS to arbitration of disputes between masters, labourers and workmen, see the 5 Geo. IV. c. 96, post, "Servants," Vol. V.

Mr. Watson. in his Treatise on Awards, p. 35, observes, that "matters of a criminal nature, for obvious reasons, are not capable of being submitted to the decision of an arbitrator. But there are many cases which may be made the subject of an indictment, as assaults, nuisances, and the like, and for which the prosecutor may proceed by action, where those reasons do not apply. It is perfectly clear that these matters may be referred before indictment, but whether an indictment found for any of these minor offences can be referred or not without express leave of the Court, does not appear to be quite so clearly settled. Perhaps the clearest rule to be drawn from the cases on the subject is, that indictments for assaults, nuisances, &c. may be referred to arbitration by leave or by authority of the Court where they are depending, but without such permission or authority indictments cannot be referred; and this rule will reconcile all the reported cases on the subject." What criminal matters may be referred.

Thus in the case of R. v. Rant, reported in Kyd on Awards, p. 64; (and see Elworthy v. Bird, 2 Bing. 258; 9 Moore, 480, S. C.; and Elworthy and another v. Bird, M'Cleland's Exch. Rep. 69;) and Rex v. Coombs, which was a reference to arbitration of two cross indictments for riot, which indictments had been found at the Middlesex sessions; the reference by bond and the submission having been made a rule of court, a motion to set aside the award having been made, Mr. Kyd showed cause, on the ground that the award was a nullity, as a criminal prosecution could not be made the subject of reference. He had hardly stated the fact that the submission was by bond, when the Court expressed considerable surprise that a criminal prosecution should be so submitted; they observed that it was usual indeed in prosecutions of this kind, before a verdict was given, or after verdict of conviction, and before sentence, for the parties to talk together by the recommendation of the Court, and, if they agreed, the Court set a nominal fine; but the whole was done under the inspection of the Court, and their sentence formally allowed.

Several instances will be found of references of indictments by the authothority of the Courts where the indictments were pending, both before and after conviction. (See R. v. Moate, 3 B. & Adol. 237; Blanchard v. Lilly, 9 East, 497; Kyd, 66, 67; R. v. Cotesbatch, 2 D. & R. 265.)

In a modern case it was decided on demurrer that an indictment for an assault might, by leave of the Court of Quarter Sessions, be referred to arbitration; and the Court of Common Pleas decided, principally on the authority of Beeley v. Wingfield, 11 East, 46, that an action might be maintained to enforce such a reference. Lord C. J. Gibbs is reported to have laid down the law generally, that the parties might refer, without noticing the necessity for the concurrence of the Court; however, his observations must be taken with reference to the precise point then under consideration. (Baker v. Townsend, 1 Moore, 120; 7 Taunt. 422, S. C.)

And where a defendant, prosecuted by parish officers for disobeying an order of maintenance, was convicted, and sentence deferred by the Court with a view to an arrangement; in the meantime he was committed to prison, and the officers demanded of him a sum considerably exceeding the amount of maintenance due, but part of which was to cover costs; A. paid part and gave a note for the remainder; he was then brought before the Court, fined 1s. and discharged. It did not appear whether or not the particulars of the arrangement were communicated to the Court, but A. made no complaint when brought up. In an action afterwards brought upon the note, held, that no irregularity appeared in the compromise, and that the note was legal. (Kirk v. Strickwood, 1 Nev. & M. 275; 4 B. & Adol. 421, S. C.)

It has been decided that the justices at sessions, by the consent of the parties, have power to refer the merits of an appeal against a poor rate to arbitration, and to adopt the award of the arbitrators as their judgment; but without the leave of the parties they cannot order such a reference, for they have no power to delegate their authority. (R. v. Justices of Northampton, Cald. 9, 2; Bott, 716.)

Making submission a rule of court.

The statute 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 15, allowing parties to make a submission a rule of court, in order to proceed for non-performance of an award, &c. does not extend to matters criminal, and therefore a submission for an indictment at the quarter sessions for an assault could not be made a rule of court under the statute. (Watson v. M'Cullum, 8 T. R. 520; R. v. Cotesbatch, 2 D. & R. 265.)

Revoking authority.

Nor does the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 42, s. 39, which takes away the power of revoking of a submission to arbitration, extend to a reference agreed to on the trial of an indictment, and either party has power to revoke the reference. (Reg. v. Bardell, 1 Nev. & P. 74; 5 Ad. & Ell. 619, S. C.)

I. What it is, &c.

Discharge without bail.

IF a person be brought before a justice, and after examination, (as to which see "Examination," Vol. II.) it appear that no felony is committed, he may discharge him; but if a felony be committed, though it appear not that the party accused is guilty, yet he cannot discharge him, but must bail or commit him. (Hale's Sum. 98.)

What.

Bail, (from the French bailler, to deliver,) signifies the delivery of a man out of custody, upon the undertaking of one or more persons for him that he shall appear at a day limited, to answer and be justified by the law. (1 Hale's Sum. 96.) It is a delivery or bailment of a person to his sureties, upon their giving, together with himself, sufficient security for his appearance, he being supposed to continue in their friendly custody instead of going to prison.

Difference between bail and mainprize.

The difference between bail and mainprize is, that mainpernors are only surety, but bail is a custody; and therefore the bail may retake the prisoner if they doubt he will fly, and detain him and bring him before a justice, and the justice ought to commit the prisoner in discharge of the bail, or put him to find new sureties. (1 Hale's Sum. 96.)

II. In what Cases, and Power and Duty of Justices out of Sessions as to.

At common law.

With respect to the cases in which bail is allowable, it is observable that at common law no justice, or indeed any Court, could bail a person in execution on a judgment or conviction for any offence, for then such imprisonment, without bail, is part of the sentence and punishment, and this is the existing law. (8 T. R. 325; 4 Bla. Com. 298; 1 Wils. 299.) Nor will a Court, between conviction and judgment, bail the offender without the consent of the prosecutor. (4 Burr. 2545, 2539.) But when a party was arrested before conviction, by the ancient common law all felonies were bailable, till murder was excepted by statute; (6 Edw. I. c. 9; Com. Dig. Bail, F. 1; Hale's Sum. 97;) so that persons might be admitted to bail before conviction is almost every case. (4 Bla. Com. 298.)

By statute.

But the statute of Westminster, 3 Edw. I. c. 15, took away the power of justices of the peace to bail in treason, and in several instances of aggravated felony. The statutes 23 Hen. VI. c. 9, 3 Hen. VII. c. 3, and the 1 & 2 Ph. & Mary, c. 13, contained further regulations upon this subject; and the latter statute extended the power of bailing to justices of the peace (a).

In felonies.

In Felonies.]—These statutes, however, as to the bailing of prisoners were repealed by 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 1, and now by that act, "Where any person

---

(a) A justice could not (before the passing of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64,) receive bail for a prisoner in the following cases: — 1. Upon an accusation of treason. 2. Of murder. 3. Of manslaughter, where the prisoner was clearly shall be taken on a charge of felony or suspicion of felony, before one or more justice or justices of the peace, and the charge shall be supported by positive and credible evidence of the fact, or by such evidence as, if not explained or contradicted, shall in the opinion of the justice or justices raise a strong presumption of the guilt of the person charged, such person shall be committed to prison by such justice or justices in the manner hereinafter mentioned. But if there shall be only one justice present, and the whole evidence given before him shall be such as neither to raise a strong presumption of guilt, nor to warrant the dismissal of the charge, such justice shall order the person charged to be detained in custody until he or she shall be taken before two justices at the least. [And where any person so taken, or any person in the first instance taken before two justices of the peace, shall be charged with felony, or on suspicion of felony, and the evidence given in support of the charge shall in their opinion not be such as to raise a strong presumption of the guilt of the person charged, and to require his or her committal; or such evidence shall be adduced on behalf of the person charged as shall in their opinion weaken the presumption of his or her guilt; but there shall, notwithstanding, appear to them in either of such cases to be sufficient ground for judicial inquiry into his or her guilt, the person charged shall be admitted to bail by such two justices in the manner hereinafter mentioned.] Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to require any such justice or justices to hear evidence on behalf of any person so charged as aforesaid, unless it shall appear to him or them to be meet and conducive to the ends of justice to hear the same."

2. In what Cases, and Power of Justices as to.

When one justice may commit.

Justices not bound to hear evidence on behalf of prisoner.

But this enactment as to the cases in which justices should bail, has undergone an important amendment, by the statute 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 33, s. 3, which, after reciting, "Whereas in many cases the taking bail for the appearance of persons charged with felony may be safely admitted without endangering the appearance of such persons to take their trial in due course of law, and it is therefore expedient in such cases to amend and extend the provisions in that respect of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64," enacts "that it shall be lawful for any two justices of the peace, if they shall think fit, (of whom one or other shall have signed the warrant of commitment,) to admit any person or persons charged with felony, or against whom a warrant of commitment for felony is signed, to bail, in the manner and according to the provisions directed by the said recited act, in such sum or sums of money and with such surety or sureties as they shall think fit, and notwithstanding such person or persons shall have confessed the matter laid to his or their charge, or notwithstanding such justices shall not think that such charge is groundless, or shall think that the circumstances are such as to raise a presumption of guilt."

Where two justices may bail.

Since these enactments one justice cannot take bail on a charge of felony, or suspicion of felony. He must either dismiss the charge or commit the accused, or he must order the party to be detained until he be taken before two justices. If the prisoner be brought before two or more justices either in the first instance or on being ordered to be detained by a single justice, or after a warrant of commitment made, they may, if they shall think fit, admit him to bail.

One justice cannot bail in felony.

Before the justices admit to bail under these enactments, they must take the examinations of the parties as directed by sects. 2 and 3 of 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, and as to which see title "Examinations by Justices before Trial," Vol. II. p. 467.

---

the slayer, and not barely suspected to be so—or if any indictment was found against him. 4. Such as being committed for felony broke prison—because this not only carries a presumption of guilt, but is also superadding one felony to another. 5. Persons outlawed, and such as have abjured the realm. 6. Approvers, and persons by them accused. 7. Persons taken with the mainour, that is, with the thing stolen in their hands, or in the fact of felony. 8. Persons charged with arson. 9. Excommunicated persons, taken by writ excommunicato capiendo. (See 2 Inst. 186; 2 Hale, 132, et seq.; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 33, et seq.; 4 Bla. Com. 298.)

2. In what Cases, and Power of Justices as to.

Principle on which parties should be admitted to bail.

The principle which should guide justices in admitting an accused party to bail or committing him for trial, should always be the probability of his appearing to take his trial, and not his supposed guilt or innocence. (Reg. v. Scarfe, 9 Dowl. 553.) The enormity of the offence—the rank and station of the accused—the presumption of his guilt or innocence—the severity of the punishment for the crime charged to have been committed, may all be taken into consideration in estimating this probability, but do not individually or collectively constitute the legal grounds on which justices should take or refuse bail.

As regards the consequence of a justice's refusing bail when besought to grant it, see post, 328.

In misdemeanors.

In Misdemeanors.]—In all cases of misdemeanors, except for breach of prison, justices must take bail, see 3 Edw. I. c. 15; unless the party be excluded from it by any special act, see 2 Hale, 127.

Persons guilty of affrays may be bailed or not, at the discretion of the magistrate; but he ought to be more cautious how he take bail if a wound has been given, from which death may probably ensue. (1 Hawk. c. 23, s. 19; Bac. Ab. Bail, B.)

In misdemeanors one justice may bail. (See Dalton, c. 12; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 54.)

Where warrant backed.

Where Warrant backed.]—By 24 Geo. II. c. 55, where a warrant has been backed and the party accused has been taken out of the county where the supposed offence has been committed, any justice of the county where he was taken, may, if the offence be bailable, take bail; and the same provision is extended to Ireland, by 44 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 1; and the 45 Geo. III. c. 92, and the 48 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 2, enact, that where the offender escapes from one part of the United Kingdom to the other, he may be bailed by any judge or justice of that part of the United Kingdom where he was apprehended, unless the judge who granted the warrant has written the words "not bailable" on the back of the process. See the enactments of the 24 Geo. II. and 45 Geo. III. in full, post, "Warrant," Vol. VI.

Within the metropolitan police district.

Within the Metropolitan Police District.]—By the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 36, (the Metropolitan Police Act,) it is enacted, "That any one of the said metropolitan police magistrates, if he shall think fit, may remand any person for further examination, or may suffer to go at large any person who shall be charged before him with any felony or misdemeanor, upon his personal recognizance, (with or without sureties,) and every such recognizance shall be conditioned for the appearance of such person before the same or some other of the said magistrates for further examination, or to surrender himself to take his trial at the Central Criminal Court, or at a Court of general or quarter sessions, at a day and place to be therein mentioned, and the magistrate shall be at liberty, from time to time, to enlarge every such recognizance to such further time as he shall appoint, and every such recognizance which shall not be enlarged, shall be discharged without fee or reward, when the party shall have appeared according to the condition thereof: Provided always, that whenever any magistrate shall take the recognizance of any person to appear at the Central Criminal Court, or at a Court of general or quarter sessions, the magistrate shall be bound to return the depositions taken in the case, and to bind over the witnesses to appear and give evidence in like manner as if he had committed the party to take his trial at such Court."

One magistrate may act except in in anything directed to be done at petty, special, or quarter sessions.

Sect. 14. "Any one of the said magistrates may do alone any act at his Court which by any law now in force or by any law not containing an express enactment to the contrary shall be directed to be done by more than one justice, but none of the said magistrates shall be competent to act as a justice either alone or with any other justice in any thing which is to be done at a special or petty sessions of all the justices acting in the division, or by the justices in quarter sessions assembled."

In other cases, actions, &c.

In other Cases.]—No power at all is given to justices of the peace to bail any persons on process in civil actions, or for contempts to superior courts. (2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 64.)

2. In what Cases, and Power of Justices as to.

There are furthermore many statutes which prohibit bail and mainprize in very many cases, and allow the same in many others, which are interspersed among the several titles which treat of these matters.

And where a statute ordaineth that an offender shall be imprisoned at the queen's will or pleasure, there the prisoner cannot be bailed till he hath redeemed his liberty by such fine or ransom as shall be assessed by the queen's justices in her Courts. (Dalt. c. 167, pp. 294, 295.)

III. Power of Justices in Sessions and others to take Bail.

Justices in sessions.

Justices in Sessions.]—It seems to be a good general rule that so far as any persons are judges of any crime, so far they have power of bailing a person indicted before them of such crime; and upon this ground it seems clear that any two justices, one being of the quorum, may of common right bail persons indicted at the sessions, for that any two such justices may hear and determine the indictment. Also it hath been holden that any one justice hath the like power. (2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 54, 62.

Justices of gaol delivery.

Justices of Gaol Delivery.]—The justices of gaol delivery may bail any person convicted before them of homicide, by misadventure or in self-defence, or even of manslaughter, the better to enable him to obtain his pardon; and this even after their sessions is determined. (2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 65.) But if the judge be of opinion that the prisoner in either of the cases is improperly convicted, or that the offence is of a very venial nature, the practice is now not to bail him, but merely to impose a light or a nominal fine on the prisoner, and to order him to be discharged. The justices of gaol delivery, it seems, have the same power of bailing persons indicted before them for any crime, as that possessed by the Court of Queen's Bench. (2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 65.)

But a judge will not admit a party to bail after the grand jury have returned a true bill against him for murder. (Reg. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 556.) Nor can a person arrested during the assizes under an indictment for a misdemeanor, be discharged on bail without pleading and traversing. (Reg. v. Wettenhall, 2 M. & Rob. 291.)

And where even a true bill was found against several prisoners for a rape, the prisoners had been on bail, and the prosecutrix did not appear either before the grand jury or to give evidence on the trial: on application being made to the judge to postpone the trial, founded on affidavit, stating that, in the belief of the deponent, the prosecutrix was kept out of the way in consequence of money having been given to her by some of the prisoners, the judge postponed the trial, and would not admit the prisoners to bail. (Reg. v. Guttridge, 9 Car & P. 228.)

By the Habeas Corpus Act, (31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 7,) "If any person committed for treason or felony, shall on the first day of the sessions of gaol delivery, after such commitment, petition the Court, and upon the last day move in open Court to be set at liberty upon bail, the justices are required to bail such persons, unless it appear upon oath that the witnesses for the King could not be produced the same sessions. And if the prisoner shall not upon his application be indicted and tried the second sessions, he shall be discharged from his imprisonment." See "Habeas Corpus," Vol. III.

Sheriffs.

Sheriffs.]—By the common law the sheriff had power only to bail those persons who were indicted before him at his torn. By 1 Edw. IV. c. 2, he is required to return all indictments taken before him at his torn to the justices of the next sessions. At this day, therefore, he has no power of this kind, or at least it is never exercised in practice upon criminal charges. (2 Hen. Bla. 418, 4 T. R. 505; 2 Saund. 59 b; Hawk. b. 2, c. 15, s. 26, 27; Bac. Ab. Bail, A.; Lamb. 15.) It has indeed been supposed (2 Saund. 59 b) that he may take a recognizance, though not a bond; but it appears from the authorities that he cannot in any way take on himself to set a prisoner at liberty on bail whom he once obtains in his custody. (4 Term Rep. 505; 2 Hen. Blu. 418; Lamb. 15; Dick. J., Bail, I.)

3. Power of Sessions and others to take Bail.

Constables.

Constables.]—By the common law every constable, being a conservator of the peace, might have bailed one suspected of felony; but this authority is transferred from him to the justices of the peace by several statutes. (Lamb. 15.)

By the Metropolis Police Act, 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 9, post, Vol. V. night constable may in certain cases take bail.

The Corporation Act, 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 79, also empowers night constables to take bail in cases of petty misdemeanor.

Court of Queen's Bench, or a Judge thereof.

Court of Queen's Bench.]—The Court of Queen's Bench, or any judge thereof, in vacation, (not being restrained or affected by the statute 3 Edw. I. c. 15, or 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 1,) in the plenitude of that power which they enjoy at common law, may, in their discretion, admit persons to bail in all cases whatsoever, though committed by justices of the peace or others, for crimes in which inferior jurisdictions would not venture to interfere, and the only exception in their discretionary authority is, where the commitment is for a contempt, or in execution. (R. v. Marks, 3 East, 163; 2 Hale, 129; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 47; Leach, 168; Rudd's case, 1 Cowp. 333.) Thus they may bail for high treason; (Leach, 168; Comb. 111;) murder; (3 East, 163;) manslaughter; (2 Stra. 1242; Comb. 111;) forgery; (Cowp. 333;) rapes; (4 Burr. 2179;) horse stealing; (2 Chit. Rep. 110;) libels; (1 Wils. 29;) and for all felonies and offences whatever. (3 East, 163; 5 T. R. 169.)

This power, however, is to be exercised in the discretion of the Court, and none can claim its benefits de jure. (2 Hale, 129.) The judges seldom admit a person to bail where magistrates have properly refused it, without some particular circumstances are shown to exist in his favour. (Bac. Ab. Bail, D.)

And it is not usual for this Court to bail in cases of felony, unless when in consequence of the defect of the commitment, and of the examination and depositions, it appears doubtful whether any offence has been committed. (1 Leach, 481; R. v. Judd, 2 T. R 257; R. v. Remnant, 5 T. R. 169.) And however defectively the mittimus may have been framed, yet, if from the depositions the Court can collect that a felony has been committed, they will not bail the prisoner, but remand him upon a special rule. (3 East, 163.)

The ill health of the party in custody is not of itself sufficient ground to induce this Court to bail him. (R. v. Shuckburgh, 1 Wils. 29; 1 Ch. C. L. 99.) But where he has been for some time in prison, so that his life is actually in danger thereby, the Court might perhaps bail him. (Ld. Aylesbury's case, 1 Salk. 103.) They will not admit him to bail where the complaint is constitutional. (R. v. Wyndham, 1 Stra. 4.) Nor where the illness arises from the act of the prisoner. (Id.)

In all cases where it appears that a prisoner ought to be bailed, if he be unable to defray the expenses of being brought up to Westminster for that purpose, a rule to show cause will be granted why he should not be bailed by a magistrate in the county, with a certiorari to return the depositions before them; (R. v. Jones, 1 B. & Ald. 209; see R. v. Booker, 2 Dowl. P. C. 446; R. v. Massey, 6 M. & Selw. 108;) and this without an affidavit of his poverty. (R. v. Gregory, 9 Dowl. P. C. 129.)

In the case of an assault the application to have the defendant bailed should be made to a judge at chambers, and not by motion to the Court. (2 Chit. Rep. 110.)

As to the mode of taking the bail in these cases, see the form of the rule in R. v. Massey, 6 M. & Selw. 108.

We shall hereafter consider the necessity for bailing under the act of Habeas Corpus. (See "Habeas Corpus," Vol. III.)

Marshal of Queen's Bench.

By 5 Edw. III. c. 8, the Marshal of the Queen's Bench is prohibited from bailing persons indicted of felony, on pain of half-a-year's imprisonment and ransom. (F. N. B. 215.)

3. Power of Sessions and others to take Bail.

Courts of Common Pleas, Exchequer, and Judges.

Courts and Judges of C. P. and Exch.] It seems the Courts of Common Pleas and Exchequer at any time during term might, by the common law, award a habeas corpus for any person committed for a crime under the degree of treason or felony, and thereupon discharge him, if it shall plainly appear by the return that the commitment was illegal, (as being made by one who had no jurisdiction of the cause, or for a matter for which by law no man ought to be committed,) or bail him if it was doubtful. (2 Inst. 53, 615; 4 Inst. 290; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 81; Deac. C. D. 111.) And now by the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, each judge of these Courts has the same power of granting writs of habeas corpus and bailing prisoners as if he had been a judge of the Queen's Bench. See the powers given them by the Habeas Corpus Act, post, "Habeas Corpus," Vol. III.

Court of Chancery.

Court of Chancery.] This Court possesses the same power at common law, as to granting a habeas corpus and discharging or bailing a prisoner, as the Courts of Common Pleas and Exchequer, with this addition, that it may award the habeas in term or vacation. In some cases the Lord Chancellor may bail for felony. (Id.; sed vide 4 Bla. Com. 299.)

Houses of Parliament.

Houses of Parliament.] The House of Lords or House of Commons, during their sessions, may bail a person committed for a contempt. (Skin. 683.) When the Serjeant of the House of Commons has taken into his custody persons committed by order of the House, he cannot, upon their tendering bail, release them from confinement. (1 Lev. 109; Hard. 464.)

IV. Number and Sufficiency, &c. of Bail.

Number and sufficiency.

The sureties ought to be at least two men of ability, but whose sufficiency as well as the sum to be expressed in their recognizance, are, it is said, left in a great degree to the discretion of the magistrate or magistrates, and therefore they may examine them upon oath as to the value of their property. (2 Hale, 125; Hawk. b. 2, c. 15, s. 4; Bac. Ab. Bail, F.; Com. Dig. Bail, K. 1; Dalt. J. C. 114; Dick. J. Bail, II. and id. V.; Bennett v. Watson, 3 M. & Selw. 1.) Every one of the bail ought to be of ability to answer the sum in which he is bound, which, in times when money was more valuable than at present, was said ought never to be less than £40 for a capital crime, but might be as much higher as the justices in their discretion thought fit to require upon consideration of the ability and quality of the prisoner, and the nature of the offence. (Id. ibid.; and see language of the 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 3, and 2 Wils. 159, as to the description of the bail.)

It is said not to be usual for the Queen's Bench to bail on a habeas corpus on a commitment for treason or felony without four sureties, but for every inferior offence two are sufficient in both cases in that Court. The number of the bail must be mentioned in the notice, otherwise the Court will reject the application. (Hawk. b. 2, c. 15, s. 4, n. 1; Bac. Ab. Bail, F.; 2 T. R. 255; 1 Leach, 486; 1 Stra. 5; 2 Stra. 855; Com. Dig. Bail, K.; 1 Gilb. L. & E. 4; Dick. J. Bail, V.; R. v. Shaw, 6 D. & R. 154.) And if a rule of Court require two bail, and one of the bail appear and be insufficient, the defendant will be remanded. (Dougl. 466, in notes.)

And though the commitment of the magistrate be informal, the Court of Queen's Bench will not discharge the defendant, in case it appears that a great offence is charged upon him, without ample security for his appearance. And in a late case of this nature the prisoner was compelled to enter into a recognizance himself in £1000, and four sureties in £500 each. (2 T. R. 257; 1 Leach, 486.) And after conviction for a libel, the defendant, who was bailed on the ground of illness, was obliged to find bail himself in £2000, and two sureties in £1000 each. (1 Stra. 9; 9 Id. 5.)

By the Declaration of Rights, 1 Will. sess. 2, c. 2, excessive bail ought not to be required. (See post, 327.)

Who may be bail.

Every housekeeper possessed of sufficient property to answer the required responsibility may be bail. The defendant's attorney may be bail for him.

4. Number, &c. of Bail.

(R. v. Bowes, Dougl. 466, n.) A person convicted of an infamous crime, as perjury, &c. cannot be admitted as adequate bail. (R. v. Edwards, 4 T. R. 440.) Nor can a married woman, for her recognizance cannot be estreated. (Styles, 369; 2 Hawk. c. 15.)

Depositing money, &c.

It is said that justices, as a substitute for bail, may take money in deposito. (Moyser v. Gray, Cro. Car. 446.)

The bail should not be rejected on account of their political opinions. (Reg. v. Badger, post, 328.)

Increasing number of.

After the defendant has been admitted to bail, the Court will not, on affidavit of aggravating facts, require the bail to be increased. (R. v. Salter, 2 Chit. Rep. 109.) As to requiring fresh bail, see infra.

V. Time of taking, Notice and Justification of Bail.

Time of taking bail.

It appears that if a party is not ready with bail at the time he is apprehended, and the offence is bailable, he may at any time before conviction be released from imprisonment on finding sureties. (R. v. Shebbeare, 1 Burr. 460; Hawk. b. 2, c. 16, s. 1, n. 1.) This is analogous to proceedings in a civil suit. (Imp. K. B. 200, 684, 7th edit.; Imp. C. P. 179, 5th edit.) And after the recognizances have been entered into, the justice, before whom the transaction takes place, will issue his warrant called a liberate to the gaoler to discharge him. (Dick. J. Bail, 6.)

And it is said that justices of the peace will sometimes send the prisoner to some private prison for a short time, to afford him an opportunity of procuring bail before he is committed for trial, but that this practice has been disapproved of as inconvenient, and not agreeable to law. (1 Hale, 123, sed quære.) It is, however, the present practice, especially in cases where notice of bail is requisite, in order to prevent the necessity of committing defendant in the mean time.

Notice of.

In general no notice of bail is requisite, but justices may, if they think fit, (and in strong cases it is usually done,) order that a reasonable notice of bail, usually twenty-four or forty-eight hours, according to circumstances, shall be given to the prosecutor.

The 30 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 17, which required twenty-four hours' notice of bail in offences, as to false pretences, &c. appears repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27.

Where bills for misdemeanors are found under the commission of oyer and terminer at the Central Criminal Court, the defendant must give forty-eight hours' notice of bail, unless the application for process is made on a Friday, in any case in which there is reason to think that there is a desire to keep the party in custody over Sunday. (R. v. Carlile, 6 C. & P. 628.)

Where an indictment is found at the sessions, and the prosecutor moves for a warrant, the Court, when they grant it, will make a note, by way of order, at the foot of the warrant, that the defendant shall give twenty-four hours' notice of bail to the prosecutor; which time the Court will, in some cases, order to be extended to forty-eight hours, according to the circumstances stated, and a judge or justice of the peace after sessions will, upon producing a certificate of a bill having been found, grant a warrant on a similar order, the intent of which notice is, that the prosecutor may have an opportunity of inquiring into the sufficiency of the bail, that if they are not satisfactory, he may have an opportunity of opposing them. (Cro. C. C. 15.)

Where the defendant, in order to avoid being apprehended under a warrant upon indictment found or preferred, voluntarily goes before a magistrate and offers bail to answer the supposed offence, it is said that no notice of bail is requisite. (Cro. C. C. 16.)

Where neither the husband of a feme covert, nor her next of kin, can be discovered, service of a rule nisi for bailing a defendant on a charge of manslaughter may be made on the coroner. (R. v. Williams, 8 Dowl. P. C. 301.)

Justification of.

Justification being requisite, bail is absolute in the first instance. (R. v. Hall, 2 Bla. Rep. 1110.) The bail may, however, be examined on oath by the magistrates, or by the prosecutor, or any professional gentleman by the magistrates' leave, as to the sufficiency of their property.

Fresh bail.

It is said that if the magistrates be deceived, they may require fresh sureties. (2 Hawk. c. 15; 2 Hale, 125; Dick. J. Bail.)

VI. Taking down Examination; Recognizance and subsequent Proceedings.

The justices, or one of them, before admitting the party to bail, must take his examination and the information on oath of those who know the facts and circumstances of the case and must put the same into writing, or so much of the same as shall be material; and must certify such bailment in writing, and must also subscribe such examination, and the information, bailment and recognizance, and transmit them to the proper officer of the Court in which the trial is to be, so as to be delivered to him before or at the opening of the Court on the first day of the assizes or sessions. (See 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, 3; post, "Examination," Vol. II.; and the 24 Geo. II. c. 55, s. 1.)

Putting examination into writing.

Certifying the recognizance.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 86, s. 11, justices acting within the limits of the Central Criminal Court are to certify examinations, &c., to the justices of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, as they are required by the 7 Geo. IV.

Formerly the justices used personally to attend with the recognizance in order to certify it, but it is now handed over to the clerk of the peace or clerk of the assizes.

With respect to the form of the recognizance, it is left to the discretion of justices to take it either in a certain sum, or else body for body; but where the charge is for an offence not amounting to a felony, the recognizance ought only to be expressed for the payment of a certain sum; and the taking a recognizance in any case body for body is now obsolete. (R. v. Dalton, 2 Stra. 911; 2 Hale, 125.)

Form and effect of recognizance.

The principal and the bail usually acknowledge themselves respectively to owe to the Queen a named sum, which it is said should not be less than £40, to be levied of their lands and tenements, goods and chattels, if the former shall make default in the performance of the condition which is subscribed, and which requires him to appear at the place of trial to answer the charge against him. (1 Chit. C. L. 104.)

But if the party accused be an infant (2 Hale, 126), or in gaol (id.), or a married woman, then the recognizance is taken only from the sureties. (Id.)

The recognizance need not be signed by any of the parties bound in the condition. (Dick. Sess. 87; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 83.)

If the recognizance be to answer generally, it includes every species of crime of which the culprit may be accused, and therefore, where it is intended that the recognizance should only have relation to a particular crime, that crime should be distinctly specified. (Reg. v. Ridpath, 10 Mod. 152.)

Although the jurisdiction of the justices is in general confined to the limits of their own county, yet it is said that recognizances voluntarily taken before them in any other place are valid. (3 Burr. 14.)

Before whom taken.

Upon the recognizance being taken, if the defendant have appeared voluntarily, or if he be in custody of the constable, the justices discharge him as of course: but if he be in prison, the justices, upon application, issue their warrant, called a liberate (form of, post, 333, No. 8), to the gaoler to discharge the prisoner.

Deliverance on.

VII. Requiring excessive Bail.

Justices must take care that in cases where they are bound by law to bail the prisoner, they do not, under the pretence of demanding sufficient surety, make so excessive a requisition as in effect to amount to a denial of bail, which is a grievance expressly prohibited by the 1 Will. & M. sess. 2, c. 2, (the Declaration of Rights), by which it is declared that excessive bail ought not to be required, and if it be, this is a misdemeanor, punishable not only by the statute, but also by the common law, as an offence against the liberty of the subject, and an action lies at the suit of the party wrongfully imprisoned, and an indictment may be supported. (6 Mod. 179; Hawk. b. 2, c. 15, s. 13 to 24; Bac. Ab. Bail, F.; Com. Dig. Bail, F. 5, K. 6; 3 Bos. & Pul. 551.)

Excessive bail.

VIII. Denying Bail where it ought to be granted.

Refusing bail.

To refuse bail where the party ought to be bailed (the party offering the same) is a misdemeanor punishable not only by the suit of the party, but also by indictment or criminal information. (2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 13; Hale's Sum. 97; Osborn v. Gough, 3 B. & P. 551. See 3 Edw. I. c. 15; 31 Car. II. c 2.)

If several persons conspire to persuade the justice to refuse the bail when sufficient, they may be indicted. (6 Mod. 179.)

The prisoner must tender the bail, or the justice is not required to grant it. (2 Hale, 123; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 14.)

A very important case has recently been decided with reference to the refusal of bail by justices, which, on account of its practical bearing, it will be prudent to state at some length. The case was Regina v. Badger and another, decided in the Queen's Bench, Hil. Vac. 1843, and arose out of the following circumstances. It appeared, that during the disturbances in Staffordshire, in 1842, a person named O'Neil was apprehended for using seditious language at a meeting of Chartists held near Dudley. He was committed for trial on that charge; he subsequently tendered as bail two persons perfectly solvent, and who were town-councillors of Birminghams, but the defendants, two justices before whom they attended, refused to accept the bail, on the ground that these persons had attended, and taken a prominent part at Chartist meetings. O'Neil subsequently applied to the Court of Queen's Bench for a rule calling upon the defendants to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against them for having refused to accept the bail. A rule nisi was granted, and in delivering the judgment of the Court on a motion to make that rule absolute, Lord Denman, C. J., after going through the facts, and alluding to the state of the disturbed districts about the period of the transaction, made the following, among other, observations: "Standing charged with a misdemeanor," said his lordship, "O'Neil claims the right of every man so charged, to be released from prison and admitted to bail on producing sufficient sureties. He says he tendered such to the magistrates, who refused to receive them, not from an objection to their sufficiency, but from corrupt, partial, and arbitrary motives, with the determination to keep him in prison, when their duty required them, under the circumstances, to bail him and release him out of custody. We have, first, to consider whether this refusal was a lawful act, a point on which no serious doubt was entertained. Neither of the learned counsel who opposed the rule contended that a magistrate can lawfully reject bail at his own discretion, or is at liberty, when bail is offered, to enter into an investigation as to the character or opinions of such bail, provided he is satisfied of their sufficiency to answer for the appearance of the party in the amount reasonably required for that purpose. The law is clear, and is as old as the Statute of Westminster, 13 Edward I. c. 15. Lord Coke, in his commentary upon that statute (2nd Institute, 191), says, that 'to deny a man plevin who is plevisable, and thereby to detain him in prison, is a great offence, and grievously to be punished;' and Lord Hale (c. 17) adopts the same remark, and Hawkins (2, c. 15) speaks of refusal of bail as an indictable offence. Blackstone, referring to the ancient statute (4th book, c. 22), the Habeas Corpus and the Bill of Rights, calls it an offence against the liberty of the subject. If, then, such refusal took place from improper motives, it might be treated as a criminal offence and made subject to an indictment or information. The affidavits on which the rule was granted accused the magistrates of motives corrupt, partial, personal, and arbitrary; but even the deponents themselves do not mean to charge pecuniary corruption or personal malice, or any feeling of revenge, in the sense of giving an unfair advantage to one litigant party over another. The only censurable feelings that can with any show of reason be suspected, are a premeditated refusal and disregard of the just claim made by O'Neil for his liberation, and a determination to keep him in prison without legal authority, and in contempt of their duty. The affidavits on both sides are much the same in substance in respect of all that occurred before the magistrates. The facts being clear, the question is, whether a criminal information ought to be filed; and this depends on our view of the motives which influenced the magistrates. And we must advert to the very questionable character of one line of defence which they appear to insinuate rather than avow They depose that some time previous to the apprehension of O'Neil these deponents consulted with their brother magistrates as to the nature of the bail to be taken by them in the case of persons committed for attending illegal meetings, for using seditious language, and particularly for inciting to outrages, inasmuch as the disturbances were then going on in certain districts in Staffordshire and in the neighbourhood of Dudley, and resistance to the laws was fomented and kept up by the inflammatory and exciting speeches and conduct of persons who were Chartists. They debated whether, if they were called upon to accept as bail for the appearance or good behaviour of individuals charged with any of these acts of sedition persons who had taken a prominent part in the proceedings of the Chartist body, it was advisable to receive them; and that these deponents and the other magistrates, wholly uninfluenced by any corrupt, perverse, vindictive, personal, or partial motive, but, as they believed, in a fair and legitimate exercise of their office, in the performance of their duty as magistrates, and with a view only to the preservation of the peace, decided that such persons ought not, in the then state of the country, to be admitted as bail, and ought not so to be accepted by them. They further say that after the commitment of O'Neil the same decision was again considered by the magistrates, and was agreed to by the lord-lieutenant of Worcestershire, who thought it was a proper decision. Another magistrate states also this resolution, and informs the Court that, if he had been called upon to accept such persons as bail for any one charged with the same offence, he would also have rejected them. Now, the assumption of powers unknown to the law appears to us peculiarly ill-judged at a period of disturbance, and not to be palliated, but rather rendered so much the more culpable, if deliberately followed by high functionaries having a judicial duty to perform; and if we had found the magistrates wilfully adopting such a measure in defiance of the law, the encouragement so given would have compelled us the more strongly to mark our disapprobation of their conduct. These proceedings, however, give the parties challenged an opportunity of explaining the state of mind in which they acted, and we find the magistrates expressly swearing that they thought they were acting in the fair, legitimate exercise of their office, and in the performance of their duty as magistrates. We may regret that the question of law was not more carefully examined; almost the first page of their most ordinary text-books would have convinced these gentlemen that their refusal on such a ground to receive the bail offered was not a legitimate exercise of their office, or a proper performance of their duty as magistrates, but the contrary. Their opinion that it was right was hastily adopted in a crisis of real danger, and most probably, from a deference to the general resolution, and this induces us, in conformity to the rule by which this Court has regulated its practice, to decline interfering by criminal information. We shall therefore discharge the rule, but as the conduct of the magistrates was such as to justify the application, they must pay all the costs attending it."

8. Denying Bail.

IX. Granting Bail where it ought to be denied.

Taking bail improperly.

Admitting bail where it ought not is punishable by the judges of assize by fine; or punishable as a negligent escape at common law. (Hale's Sum. 97.)

If the keeper of a prison bail any not liable, he shall lose his fee and office; if another officer, he shall have three years' imprisonment, and make fine at the king's pleasure. (3 Edw. I. c. 15.)

A justice of Surrey committed a man on suspicion of stealing a mare, and bound over the owner to prosecute. Afterwards, upon examining two other persons he admitted the party to bail. The prosecutor appeared at the assizes, and found a bill; but the party accused did not appear. And the Court granted an information against the justice, declaring they should not have bailed the man themselves. (R. v. Clarke, 2 Stra. 1216.) However since the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 33, s. 3, ante, 321, justices may bail though the party has been committed, one of the bailing justices having signed the commitment.

9. Taking Bail improperly.

"If any justice of the peace shall take bail where he ought not, or wittingly or willingly take insufficient bail, and the party appear not, the said justice not only to be proceeded against according to law, but likewise to be complained of to the lord chancellor, that he may be turned out of his commission." (6th Order of the Judges to be observed by Justices of the Peace, O. B. 16 Car. 2. From Kelyng's Reports, p. 3.)

X. Personating Bail.

Personating bail.

By the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 66, s. 11, "If any person shall, before any court, judge, or other person lawfully authorised to take any recognizance or bail, acknowledge any recognizance or bail in the name of any other person not privy or consenting to the same, whether such recognizance or bail in either case be or be not filed; or if any person shall, in the name of any other person not privy or consenting to the same, acknowledge any fine, recovery, cognovit actionem, or judgment, or any deed to be inrolled; every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years, nor less than two years."

In addition to the punishment of imprisonment, hard labour, and solitary confinement, may be imposed, (11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 66, s. 26,) such confinement not to exceed one month at any one time nor three months in any one year. (7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5.)

If the convict be already under sentence of transportation or imprisonment, this sentence may commence after the expiration of the former sentence. (7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 10.)

This offence is not triable at quarter sessions. (5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1.)

XI. Power of Bail.

Power of bail.

The party bailed is considered, in law, as in custody of his sureties, who are considered as his keepers, and they may therefore reseize to bring him in, if they fear his escape, and take him before the justice or Court, and by whom he may be committed, and thus the bail may be discharged from their recognizance; but he is at liberty to find new sureties. (2 Hale, 124, 7; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 3; Com. Dig. Bail, Q. 2.)

The bail may thus seize the person of the principal at any time, (as on a Sunday,) or at any place, and in surrendering the principal they may command the co-operation of the sheriff and any of his officers. (Anon. 6 Mod. 231; Rol. Rep. 99. And see Exparte Lyne, 3 Stark. 132; Horn v. Swinford, 1 Dowl. N. P. C. 20.)

XII. Liability of Bail, and what a Forfeiture of Recognizance.

What a forfeiture of recognizance, and its consequences.

By appearance the terms of the recognizance are fulfilled. (2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 84.) If, however, the sureties are bound by recognizance, that a defendant shall appear in the Queen's Bench the first day of such term, to answer to a particular information against him and not to depart till he shall be discharged by the Court; and afterwards the Attorney-General enters a nolle prosequi as to that information, and exhibits another, on which the defendant is convicted, and refuses to appear in court after personal notice; the recognizance is forfeited by the default, for being express that the party shall not depart till he be discharged by the Court, it cannot be satisfied unless he be forthcoming, and ready to answer to any other information exhibited against him before he receives his discharge, as much as to that which he was particularly bound to answer. (Reg. v. Ridpath, 10 Mod. 152; ante, 327.)

Liability of.

But in such case it seems that the recognizance will not be forfeited by the party's not appearing in court on the first day of every term after he has pleaded to the information as it may be before he has pleaded. (2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 84.) 12. Liability of.

The 38 Geo. III. c. 52, s. 5, enacts, "That every recognizance for the appearance to answer an indictment for any offence charged to have been committed within the county of any city or town corporate, shall be forfeited, if the prosecutor shall, ten days previous to the holding of the next Court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery in the next adjoining or other county, give notice to the person bound in such recognizance of the intention to prefer such indictment in the next adjoining or other county, if the party bound in such recognizance shall not appear; but if he shall appear, then the recognizance shall be discharged, the same as if the party bound thereby had complied with the terms thereof; and the 6th section of the same act provides, "That leaving such notice at the last place of abode of the party bound by the recognizance ten days before the holding of the sessions shall suffice, and that the recognizance shall not be estreated or returned into the exchequer until the next following session, in order that such recognizance may be discharged, in case the party bound shall show sufficient cause for discharging the same."

It seems that the defendant and his bail cannot be called upon their recognizance, except on the day on which he is bound to appear; if he is called on any other day, notice must be given of the intention. (R. v. Adams, Rep. temp. Hardw. 237.)

The bail of a person acquitted of perjury may move to be discharged from their recognizance before the acquittal is entered on the record, because it appears on the postea. (R. v. Spencer, 1 Wils. 315.)

The bail are not entitled to have their recognizance discharged without submitting to the terms of paying the costs incurred. (R. v. Lyon, 3 Burr. 1461; R. v. Finmore, 8 T. R. 409; R. v. Turner, 15 East, 570.)

If the principal do not appear, and the recognizance be forfeited and the penalty paid by the bail, yet the principal continues amenable to the law whenever he can be taken.

It should seem, that if the bail have been compelled to pay the penalty in consequence of the recognizance becoming forfeited, they may sustain an action against him for money paid. (See Fisher v. Fallows, 5 Esp. 171.)

The persons of the bail are not liable under the recognizance. (R. v. Dalton, 2 Stra. 911; 2 Hale, 125.)

(6.) Recognizance of bail.

[Westmoreland.] BE it remembered, that on the day of in the year of the reign of O. A. of [yeoman,] A. B. of [yeoman,] and B. B. of [yeoman,] came before us [John Moore, Esquire,] and [Richard Burn, Doctor of Laws,] two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, one whereof is of the quorum, and severally acknowledged themselves to owe to our said lady the Queen, that is to say, the said A. O. [20l.] and the said A. B. and B. B. [10l.] each, to be respectively levied of their lands and tenements, goods and chattels, if the said A. O. shall make default in the performance of the condition endorsed [or underwritten].

[John Moore,
Richard Burn.]

The condition of this recognizance is such, that if the within [above] bound A. O. shall personally appear before the justices of our sovereign lady the Queen assigned to keep the peace within the said county, and likewise to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, at the next general quarter sessions of the peace [or before her Majesty's justices of gaol delivery, at the next general gaol delivery] to be holden in and for the said county, then and there to answer to our said sovereign lady the Queen for and concerning the [felonious taking and stealing of the property of A. M. of yeoman,] with the suspicion whereof the said A. O. stands charged before us the said justices, and to do and receive what shall by the Court be then and there enjoined to him, and shall not depart the Court without license, then the above [within] written recognizance shall be void.

Taken and acknowledged the day and year above written, before us the undersigned Banks for Savings.

9 Geo 4, c. 92, consolidating laws as to saving banks.

BY the 9 Geo. IV. c. 92, intituled "An Act to Consolidate and Amend the Laws relating to Savings Banks," passed the 28th July, 1828, after reciting "that it is expedient to amend the laws relative to savings banks in England and Ireland, and to consolidate the same in one act, and to make other provisions respecting savings banks;" it is enacted, "that 57 Geo. III. c. 105, 57 Geo III. c. 130, 58 Geo. III. c. 48, 1 Geo. IV. c. 83, 5 Geo. IV. c. 62, shall be and the same are hereby, from and after the twentieth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, repealed provided nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall invalidate or annul any payments, receipts, or appointments made, or proceedings had, or bonds or securities taken or entered into, or drafts, powers of attorney, certificates, orders, or other instruments whatsoever, executed under the authority of any of the hereby repealed acts."

Repeal of acts.

Not to invalidate appointments, &c. under preceding acts.

What institutions entitled to privileges and benefits of act.

Sect. 2. "And whereas certain banks for savings have been established in England and Ireland, for the safe custody and increase of small savings belonging to the industrious classes of his Majesty's subjects, and it is expedient to give protection to such institutions and the funds thereby established, and to afford encouragement to others to form the like institutions; be it enacted, that if any number of persons have formed or shall form any society in any part of England or Ireland, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining any institution in the nature of a bank to receive deposits of money for the benefit of the persons depositing the same, to accumulate the produce of so much thereof as shall not be required by the depositors, their executors or administrators, at compound interest, and to return the whole or any part of such deposit and the produce thereof to the depositors, their executors or administrators, (deducting out of such produce so much as shall be required for the necessary expenses attending the management of such institution,) but deriving no benefit whatsoever from any such deposit or the produce thereof, and shall be desirous of having the benefit of the provisions of this act, such persons shall cause the rules and regulations established or to be established for the management of such institution to be entered, deposited, and filed in manner hereinafter directed, and thereupon shall be deemed to be entitled to and shall have the benefit of the provisions contained in this act: provided always, that the privilege of paying money into the banks of England or Ireland, and of receiving receipts for the same, shall be and the same is hereby declared to be extended to such institutions as may have formed or may hereafter form their rules and regulations according to the provisions of this act; and it shall and may be lawful for the trustees of such institutions respectively to invest any funds already accumulated by such institutions, and which shall not have been invested at the time of the passing of this act, and to receive receipts for the same in manner authorised by this act: provided nevertheless, that no such institution to be hereafter formed shall have or be entitled to the benefits of the provisions in this act contained, unless the formation of the same shall have been sanctioned and approved of by the justices of the county, riding, division, or place where such institution is intended to be held, at the general quarter sessions, and by the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, or, on their behalf, by the comptroller-general or assistant comptroller acting under the said commissioners."

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Banks to be approved of by sessions and commissioners of national debt.

Sect. 3. "No such institution as aforesaid shall have the benefit of this act unless the rules and regulations for the management thereof shall be entered in a book or books to be kept by an officer of such institution to be appointed for that purpose, and which book or books shall be open at all seasonable times for the inspection of the persons making deposits in the funds of such institution, and unless such rules and regulations shall be fairly transcribed on parchment, and such transcript deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county, riding, division, or place wherein such institution shall be established; which transcript shall be filed by such clerk of the peace with the rolls of the sessions of the peace in his custody, and a certificate of the enrolment thereof shall be signed by such clerk of the peace on a duplicate copy, to be provided by and returned to such institution, on payment of a fee of ten shillings in respect thereof, provided the same be returned to such institution as aforesaid within the space of ten days then next following, and not otherwise; but nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall extend to prevent any alteration in or amendment of any such rules or regulations so entered and deposited and filed as aforesaid, or repealing or annulling the same or any of them, in the whole or in part, or making any new rules or regulations for the management of such institution, in such manner as by the rules and regulations of such institution shall from time to time be provided, but such new rules or regulations, or such alterations in or amendments of former rules or regulations, or any order annulling or repealing any former rule or regulation, in the whole or in part, shall not be in force until the same respectively shall be entered in such book or books as aforesaid, and the transcript or transcripts thereof deposited with such clerk of the peace as aforesaid, who shall file and certify the same as aforesaid, on payment of a fee of five shillings."

Rules to be entered in a book and be open to inspection of depositors; and a copy thereof deposited with clerk of peace. (a)

Not to prevent alterations.

Alterations to be entered and deposited.

Sect. 4. "Before a transcript of the rules and regulations, or alterations in or amendments of former rules or regulations, for the management of any institution requiring the benefit of this act, shall be deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county, riding, division, or place wherein such institution shall be established, pursuant to the directions of this act, such transcript shall be submitted by the trustees or managers for the time being of each respective institution, and at the expense of the said institution, to a barrister at law to be appointed by the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the same are in conformity to law, and with the provisions of this act; and that the said barrister shall give a certificate thereof, or point out in what part or parts they are repugnant thereto; and the fee to be paid to such barrister for perusing the rules, regulations, alterations, or amendments of each respective institution, and giving such certificate as aforesaid, shall not at any one time exceed the sum of one guinea; and such transcript shall be signed by two trustees, and shall,

Rules, &c before deposited with clerk of peace to be submitted to a barrister.

(a) So much of this act as requires the transcript of the rules to be deposited with the clerk of the peace, or filed by him, and a certificate to be returned to the institution, and that such transcript shall be laid before justices at sessions, is repealed by the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 83, s. 18, post, 360 d together with the certificate of such barrister as hereinbefore mentioned, be laid before the justices for such county, riding, division, or place, at the general or quarter sessions next after the time when such transcript shall have been so deposited; and it shall be lawful for such justices then and there present, after due examination thereof, to reject and disapprove of any part or parts thereof, or to allow and confirm the said transcript, or such part or parts thereof as shall be conformable to the true intent and meaning of this act, without requiring the certificate or approval of any other barrister; provided always that the said justices shall signify such rejection or disapproval of any one or more of the rules, orders and regulations contained in such transcript, by the words 'rejected' or 'disapproved' written opposite such rule or rules, order or orders, regulation or regulations, and signed by the chairman of such sessions; and such rule or rules, order or orders, regulation or regulations, as shall be so rejected or disapproved, shall not be in force from the time of such rejection or disapproval, any thing in this act, or in any such rules, orders and regulations to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that the said clerk of the peace do, within the space of ten days next after such rejection or disapproval, give notice thereof in writing to the two trustees of such institution, by whom the transcript of such rules, orders and regulations shall be signed as aforesaid; and provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to require any rule making any alteration in the hours of attendance at any such institution as aforesaid to be laid before such barrister as aforesaid, previous to the inrolment thereof."

Session may reject rules.

Manner of signifying such rejection.

Clerk of peace to give notice of such rejection.

Rules, when entered and deposited, to be binding on members and depositors.

Sect. 5. "All rules and regulations from time to time made and in force for the management of such institutions as aforesaid, and duly entered in such book or books as aforesaid, and deposited with such clerk of the peace as aforesaid, shall be binding on the several members and officers of such institution, and the several depositors therein and their representatives, all of whom shall be deemed and taken to have full notice thereof by such entry and deposit as aforesaid: and the entry of such rules and regulations in such book or books as aforesaid, or the transcript thereof deposited with such clerk of the peace as aforesaid, or a true copy of such transcript examined with the original, and proved to be a true copy, shall be received as evidence of such rules and regulations respectively in all cases; and no certiorari shall be brought or allowed to remove any such rules or regulations into any of his majesty's courts of record; and every copy of any such transcript deposited with any clerk of the peace as aforesaid shall be made without fee or reward, except the actual expense of making such copy; and such copy shall not be subject to any stamp duty."

Copy of transcript to be received as evidence.

No certiorari.

Treasurer or manager, &c. not to derive benefit from institution.

Sect. 6. "No such institution as aforesaid shall have the benefit of this act, unless it shall be expressly provided by the rules and regulations for the management thereof, that no person or persons, being treasurer, trustee, or manager of such institution, or having any control in the management thereof, shall derive any benefit from any deposit made in such institution, save only and except such salaries and allowances or other necessary expenses as shall, according to such rules and regulations, be provided for the charges of managing such institution, and for remuneration to officers employed in the management thereof, exclusive of the treasurer or treasurers, trustee or trustees, manager or managers, or other persons having direction in the management of such institution, who shall not directly or indirectly have any salary, allowance, profit, or benefit whatsoever therefrom, beyond their actual expenses for the purposes of such institution."

Treasurer, &c. to give security. (a)

Sect. 7. "That every treasurer, actuary, or cashier, who shall be intrusted with the receipt or custody of any sum of money subscribed or deposited for the purpose of such institution, or any interest or dividend from time to time accruing therefrom, and every officer or other person receiving any salary or allowance for their services from the funds of any savings banks, unless he shall already have given good and sufficient security, shall give good and sufficient security, to be approved of by not less than two trustees and three managers of such savings banks, for the just and faithful execution of such office or trust, and such security shall be given by bond or bonds to the

"The said commissioners shall cause all the monies paid into the Banks of England and Ireland respectively, and placed to their account in pursuance of the provisions of this act, to be invested from time to time, under such regulations as the said commissioners shall direct, in the purchase of bank annuities or exchequer bills, or in either of them, in their names, and to be carried to the account hereinbefore provided; and the interest which shall arise from time to time and become due thereon shall in like manner be invested in the purchase of government annuities or of exchequer bills as aforesaid."

Monies paid in to be invested in bank annuities or exchequer bills.

Sect. 16. "On the twentieth day of November one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, the interest payable on the receipts issued to the trustees of savings banks by the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt shall cease; and that from and after the said twentieth day of November, all receipts issued prior to that day shall carry interest at the rate of two pence halfpenny per centum per diem; and that from and after the twentieth day of November one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, upon the payment of any sum or sums of money into the Banks of England or Ireland to the account of the said commissioners by the trustees of any savings bank, it shall be lawful for the officer or officers of the said commissioners in that behalf, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and empowered to issue, upon every such payment being made, a receipt, signed by one of the cashiers of the governor and company of the Bank of England or Ireland respectively, for the amount of such payment, carrying interest at the rate of two pence halfpenny per centum per diem from the day of such payment inclusive, payable, with the principal, at the Banks of England and Ireland, whenever the same shall be required or drawn for in manner directed by this act; and such receipt shall be dated on the day on which the payment of any such sum or sums of money shall be made respectively; and every such receipt shall be in such form as shall be from time to time directed by the said commissioners; and the principal and interest of all sums mentioned in any receipt shall be charged and chargeable upon, and the same are hereby charged and made payable out of, all or any monies standing in any account in the names of the said commissioners, or out of any monies produced by the sale of any stock or annuities, funds or exchequer bills, standing in their names in the books of the Bank of England and Ireland respectively, as the said commissioners shall from time to time direct."

National debt commissioners, their officer shall give a receipt for the same, carrying interest at 2½d. per cent. per diem.

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Such interest to be calculated half-yearly, and carried to account of savings banks as additional principal.

Sect. 17. "All interest which shall become due and payable upon any sum of money mentioned in any such receipt, upon the twentieth day of November and the twentieth day of May in every year next after the date of any such receipt, shall be from time to time calculated and computed by the officer of the said commissioners, and shall in each and every year be placed to the credit of the savings bank on whose account any such sum of money was paid, within six weeks from such twentieth day of November and twentieth day of May respectively, and shall be carried to and written on the account of such savings bank, and shall become principal, and shall from thenceforth carry interest as principal money paid into the said Banks of England or Ireland respectively on the account of such savings bank; and a receipt, according to such form as the said commissioners shall approve, shall be signed by the officer of the said commissioners, and shall be issuable by the said officer half-yearly within six weeks after such twentieth day of November and twentieth day of May respectively (and such receipts shall bear date the twenty-first day of November and twenty-first day of May respectively), for the amount of such interest so credited and made principal as aforesaid, as if the amount thereof had been a payment made by the trustees of such savings bank to the account of the said commissioners: provided always, that no interest shall be computed or calculated on the fractional part of a pound, or any sum less than a pound, of the half-yearly balance standing in the books of the said commissioners on account of any savings bank on any twentieth day of November or twentieth day of May respectively; provided also, that it shall be lawful for the managers and trustees of any such savings bank, if they shall so think fit, to direct that all interest which shall become due and payable to each depositor on any sum of money deposited in such savings bank shall yearly, or twice in each and every year, be calculated and computed by the trustees of such savings bank, or such person or persons as they shall appoint, and shall be carried to the credit of the person or persons depositing the said sum or sums of money, and shall become principal, and shall from thenceforth carry interest in all respects as other principal money deposited in the said banks, or as if the said sum of interest so calculated had actually been paid to the said depositors, and by them repaid to the said trustee or trustees; any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

No interest on fractional parts of a pound.

Interest arising to depositors may be calculated yearly or twice a year, and carried to their credit as principal.

Before drawing for money, trustees shall sign appointment of agent to receive same, and appointment to be deposited with commissioners.

Sect. 18. "Before any trustees of any savings bank shall make any order or draft for payment, by the said commissioners, of any sum or sums of money under this act, the trustees of such savings bank shall make, give, sign, and execute an appointment under the hands and seals of not less than two of such trustees, and the execution of which shall be attested by two managers of the same savings bank, empowering and authorising some person or persons named in such appointment to be agent or agents for receiving all and every such sum and sums of money as such trustees shall from time to time require to be paid by such commissioners; and every such appointment shall be produced by or on behalf of the person or persons named therein to the officer of the said commissioners, fourteen days at least before the payment of any sum or sums of money on account of such savings bank, and such appointment shall remain deposited in the office of such officer; and every such appointment shall be made in such form, and under such regulations, as shall from time to time be directed or required or approved of by the said commissioners or their officer: (a) provided always, that it shall and may be lawful for the trustees of any savings bank by whom any such appointment shall be made, given, signed, and executed, or for the survivors or survivor of such trustees, to revoke such appointment by any certificate or other instrument under the hands and seals or hand and seal of such trustees or trustee, attested by two managers of such savings bank, and in such form and under such regulations as shall be directed or required or approved of by the said commissioners or their officer; and in case of the decease of every such trustee

Appointments may be revoked, and others granted from time to time

(a) The same as the 1 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 4, and 5 Geo. IV. c. 62, s. 4, the power to make appointment being given to not less than two trustees, instead of not more than four.

except one, it shall and may be lawful for the surviving trustee, together with any other trustee or trustees, being not less than two, of the said savings bank, and in case of the decease of all such trustees, or in case all such trustees shall decline or refuse to act, it shall and may be lawful for not less than two other trustees of the said savings bank, from time to time to make, give, and execute an appointment in manner aforesaid, re-appointing the person or persons named in such appointment, or any other person or persons in his or their room or stead, to be the agent or agents of such trustees; and every such certificate or instrument of revocation, and every such new appointment, shall be produced to the officer of the said commissioners by the person or persons named in such new appointment, fourteen days at least before the payment of any sum or sums of money to the person or persons named in such new appointment, and shall remain deposited in the office of such officer." 9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Sect. 19. "It shall and may be lawful for the trustees of any savings bank from time to time (by any draft or order in writing under the hands of any two trustees of such savings bank, attested by two other trustees or managers, or by any two credible witnesses, according to such form as the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt shall from time to time direct), to require that the whole or any part of the principal sum or sums of money standing in the books of the said commissioners to the credit of the trustees of such savings bank respectively shall be paid to such person or persons as such trustees shall from time to time require, being the agent or agents named in some appointment executed under this act or the said recited acts, and lodged with the officers of the said commissioners, as hereinbefore mentioned, and then remaining in force; and every such draft or order shall be addressed to the said commissioners, and upon the same being produced to the officer of the said commissioners, the said officer shall, within five days after the production thereof, upon the back of such draft or order, indorse and sign an order, in such form as shall or may from time to time be directed and required by the said commissioners, for the payment of the sum mentioned in the draft or order of such trustees, together with the amount of all interest due on such sum up to the day immediately preceding the day of the date of the order of such officer, and which order of such officer, previous to the issuing thereof, shall be entered and countersigned by the clerk or other proper officer making such entry, and shall be addressed to the cashiers of the governor and company of the bank of England or Ireland, as the case may be; and such cashiers, or one of them, shall, upon the production of such order, pay the sum mentioned therein to the person or persons mentioned in the draft or order of the said trustees; and the signature of such person or persons, jointly or severally, shall be a sufficient discharge to the said commissioners, and to the said governors and company respectively; and all payments made in pursuance of such drafts or orders respectively shall be deemed and taken to be payments made by the said commissioners to the trustees of such savings bank respectively, according to the numerical order and priority of date in which the original receipts of money deposited on account of such savings bank respectively shall have been issued to the trustees thereof respectively in manner hereinbefore mentioned." Trustees may draw for sum placed to their account, by drafts on commissioners, to be indorsed by their officer, with the interest added thereto, and paid by the bank.

Sect. 20. "That whenever the sum to be drawn for by the trustees of any savings bank shall exceed 5,000*l.* the draft or order for that purpose shall be signed by not less than four such trustees, and that the signature of each and every of the said four trustees shall be separately attested by at least one manager of such savings bank, or by some one other credible person, and that any manager or other person attesting the signature of any one of the said four trustees shall not be an attesting witness to the signature of any other of such four trustees: provided also, that whenever the sum or sums drawn for by one or more drafts by the trustees of any savings bank in England and Ireland respectively, or by the trustees of any friendly society in England, shall exceed the sum of 10,000*l.* the amount of such draft or drafts (if more than one) shall not be payable or be paid by the officer of the said commissioners until the expiration of fourteen days next after the day when the draft or drafts for such sum or sums shall be produced to the said officer." Drafts above 5,000*l.* to be signed by four trustees, and attested. Drafts for 10,000*l.* not to be paid until after fourteen days.

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Officer not to issue in one day orders for more than 10,000*l.* for same bank.

Trustees appearing in person may receive payments of drafts instead of agents.

Sect. 21. "Such officer shall be and he is hereby restrained from issuing any order or orders for payment as aforesaid, bearing the same date, upon any one day, on account of the same savings bank or friendly society, exceeding in amount the principal sum of 10,000*l*; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding: provided also, that in case any one or more trustee or trustees of any savings bank who shall have made, given, signed, and executed any such appointment, shall at any time appear in person at the office of the said commissioners in England or Ireland respectively, and require payment of any sum or sums of money which might be required by the person or persons authorised to receive the same by such appointment, or if any trustee or trustees of any savings bank shall appear in person, where no such appointment shall have been made, and if such trustee or trustees so appearing shall produce a draft or order, signed by any two or more trustees of such savings bank, for any sum under 5,000*l.* or by any four or more trustees for sums exceeding 5,000*l.*, no such trustee or trustees being himself or themselves a party or parties who signed such draft or order, and if the identity of the person of the trustee or trustees so appearing shall be ascertained to the satisfaction of the said commissioners or their officer, it shall be lawful for the said officer to direct payment to be made to such trustee or trustees so appearing of any sum or sums required to be paid by such order or draft, in like manner as if the person or persons authorised by such appointment to receive the same had required such payment; anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding; provided nevertheless, that notwithstanding the payment made to such trustees or trustee appearing in person, on the appointment of such person or persons as aforesaid, the appointment shall remain in full force and virtue until revoked by the trustees as hereinbefore mentioned."

Trustees, &c. to ascertain amount of surplus fund, and distribute or appropriate same.

Sect. 22. "Within six weeks after the twentieth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, the trustees and managers of the different savings banks already established in England and Ireland shall ascertain the amount of the increased stocks or funds of their respective banks up to the said twentieth day of November one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, and shall, as soon afterwards as conveniently can be, after retaining so much thereof as may be necessary for or towards the future purposes and management of the said savings banks respectively, appropriate the same in the manner provided for by their respective rules and regulations made before the passing of this act; or in the event of no provisions having been made by such rules and regulations, then in such manner as the trustees or managers, or the major part of them, assembled at any general meeting to be convened according to the respective rules and regulations of such savings banks, shall think fit and proper; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Surplus to be paid over to commissioners for reduction of national debt.

Sect. 23. "In all cases where the joint stock or property of any savings bank, arising from deposits made under this or any former act, shall, from and after the twentieth day of November one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, be increased by the interest received beyond the rate of interest payable to the depositors by the rules and regulations of such savings banks, or by any other means, the said trustees or managers, after deducting all such expenses as they may deem proper, shall, within six months after the twentieth day of November in each year, ascertain, certify, and pay over to the said commissioners the amount of such increased stock and property, reserving such portion as may appear necessary to meet current expenses; and the amount of such surplus, which shall be ascertained, certified, and paid over (after such deduction as aforesaid,) shall be discharged from the account of such savings bank standing in the books of the said commissioners, and the said commissioners shall keep a separate and distinct account of such surplus so discharged from the account of the said savings banks respectively as aforesaid, and apply the same in such manner, and under such regulations, from time to time, as any other monies under the provisions of this act: provided always, that it shall and may be lawful for the trustees or managers of the said respective savings banks to claim and receive of and from the said commissioners, (who are hereby required to pay the same upon such certificate as they may appoint,) for the purposes of the institution, any sum of money equal to the whole or any part of the principal monies which may have been so discharged from the account of such savings banks as aforesaid."

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Sect. 24. "From and after the twentieth day of November one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, the interest payable to depositors by the trustees or managers of any savings bank shall not exceed the rate of twopence farthing per centum per diem."

Interest not to exceed 2¼d. per cent. per diem.

Sect. 25. "In case the trustees or managers of any such institution shall receive or shall have received any deposit of money from or for the benefit of any person under the age of twenty-one years, it shall be lawful for the trustees or managers of such institution to pay such person his or her share and interest in the funds of such institution; and the receipt of such person shall be a sufficient discharge, notwithstanding his or her incapacity or disability in law to act for him or herself."

Savings of minors may be invested.

Sect. 26, reciting, "And whereas deposits in saving banks may have been made and may be made by married women, without notice that they are married women, and deposits may have been made and may be made by women who may have afterwards married;" enacts, "that it shall be lawful for the trustees in any savings bank to pay any sum of money in respect of any such deposit to any such woman, unless the husband of such woman, or his representatives, shall give to such trustees notice of such marriage, and shall require payment to be made to him or them."

Deposits made by married women.

Sect. 27. "From and after the twentieth day of November one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, it shall and may be lawful for the trustees or treasurer of any charitable or provident institution or society in England or Ireland, or charitable donation or bequest, for the maintenance, education or benefit of the poor, from time to time to subscribe any part of the funds of such institution or society into the funds of any savings banks, if the trustees or managers thereof shall be willing to receive the same, to the amount of one hundred pounds per annum, provided the amount of the sum to be invested by such institution or society shall not at any time exceed the sum of 300*l.* in the whole, exclusive of interest."

Charitable societies may invest sums not exceeding 100*l.* per ann. or 300*l.* in the whole.

Sect. 28. "It shall be lawful, if the trustees or managers of any savings banks shall think proper, for any friendly society established under and by virtue of any act or acts relating to friendly societies from time to time to subscribe the whole or any part of the funds of such friendly society, as they shall from time to time direct, through their treasurer, steward, or other officer or officers, into the funds of any institution which shall take the benefit of this act, and which shall be willing to receive the same, under such terms and conditions as shall be specially provided for that purpose by the rules, orders and regulations of such institutions; provided always, that it shall not be lawful for the said trustees to receive any sum or sums from any friendly society formed and enrolled after the passing of this act which may exceed the sum of 300*l.*, principal and interest included, nor to pay any interest on the same whenever such sum or sums shall amount to or continue at the said sum of 300*l.* or upwards.

Friendly societies may subscribe portion of their funds into savings banks.(a) to friendly societies, or a member of any of the charitable institutions hereinbefore mentioned, shall, by reason of such person being or becoming a depositor in any institution taking the benefit of this act, be considered as subject or liable to any penalty, forfeiture or disability, declared or expressed, or intended so to be, by or in the rules, orders or regulations of such friendly society; any rules, orders or regulations of such friendly society made, or hereafter to be made, to the contrary notwithstanding; provided also, that no depositor shall be subject or liable to any penalty or forfeiture on account of his belonging to or being interested in the funds of any friendly society or charitable society deposited in any other savings bank."

Regulations, &c. of act extended to payments, &c. under 30 Geo. 3, c. 128.

Sect. 31. "All regulations and provisions in this act contained, relative to money paid into the Bank of England, and receipts issued on account thereof, and also to the application of all such money by the said commissioners, shall be applicable to payments made and receipts issued under the authority of an act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled 'An Act for the further Protection and Encouragement of Friendly Societies, and for preventing Frauds and Abuses therein,' except with respect to all such friendly societies as may have been formed and enrolled previous to the passing of this act."

No sum to be subscribed without name and profession, &c. of depositor.

Sect. 32. "No sum shall be paid or subscribed into any savings bank by any person or persons, by ticket or number or otherwise, without disclosing his or her name, together with his or her profession, business, occupation, calling and residence, to the trustees or managers of such savings bank; and the trustees or managers of every savings bank are hereby required to cause the name of such depositor, together with his or her profession, business, occupation, calling and residence, to be entered in the books of the institution."

Persons allowed to subscribe as trustees on behalf of others.

Sect. 33. "It shall and may be lawful for the trustees or managers of any savings bank to receive from any person or persons acting as trustee or trustees on behalf of any depositor or depositors, whether such person or persons is or are himself or themselves a depositor or depositors or not, any sum or sums not exceeding the annual amount hereinafter mentioned, provided that such trustee or trustees shall make such declaration on behalf of such depositor or depositors, and subject to the like conditions, as by this act is required in the case of any person or persons making any deposit on his or her own account; and all deposits made by any such trustee or trustees shall be inserted in the books of such savings bank in the joint names of such trustee or trustees and of the person or persons on whose account such sum shall be so deposited; and the receipt and receipts of such trustee or trustees, or the survivor of them, or the executors or administrators of any sole trustee or surviving trustee, with or without the receipt of the person or persons on whose account such sum may have been deposited, shall be a good and valid discharge to the trustees or managers of the institution."

Subscribers to one savings bank shall not subscribe to any other.

Declaration to be made at time of subscription.

Sect. 34. "It shall not be lawful for any person or persons who shall have made any deposit in, or any subscription to, or who shall be entitled to any benefit from, the funds of any savings bank, to make any deposit in or to subscribe any sum into the funds of any other savings bank, or to open any new account in the said savings bank; and that every person desirous of making any deposit in or any subscription to any savings bank, shall at the time of making the first deposit in any savings bank, and at such other time or times as such depositor shall be required so to do by the trustees or managers of any such savings bank, sign, either by themselves, or in case of infants under the age of seven years, by some person to be approved of by the trustees or managers, or by such other person as they shall appoint, a declaration in such form as shall be directed or approved of by the commissioners or other proper officer, that the person or persons on whose behalf any such first deposit or subscription shall be required to be made is not or are not entitled to any deposit, or any such subsequent deposit or subscription in or any benefit from the funds of any savings bank, other than that into which such deposit or subscription shall be made, or any other funds in the said savings bank; and in case any such declaration shall not be true, or if any person shall at any time have or hold or be possessed of any deposit or funds in more than one savings bank within the United Kingdom, every such person shall forfeit and lose all right and title to any deposit in or to any funds of any and every such savings bank; and the managers and trustees of such savings bank shall and they are hereby required in such case to close the account of such depositor, and to cause the sum or sums so forfeited to be forthwith paid into the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland, as the case may be, to the account of the commissioners standing in the books of the governor and company of the said banks respectively, under the title of 'The account of the commissioners for applying certain sums of money annually to the reduction of the national debt;' and the cashier or cashiers of the said governor and company is and are hereby required to receive all such sums, and to place the same to the said account, to be applied in like manner as all other money placed to the said account; and every such declaration so made shall be filed and kept and preserved by the trustees of every such savings bank; and a printed notice of such regulation and prohibition shall be affixed in the office or place appointed for the receiving of deposits to any savings bank, in such form as the said commissioners or their proper officer shall from time to time direct, or require or approve."

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Penalty on false declaration, forfeiture of deposit to sinking fund.

the trustees or managers of such institution, and they are hereby authorised and permitted in case such trustees or managers shall be satisfied that no will was made and left by such deceased depositor, and that no letters of administration will be taken out of the goods and chattels of such depositor, to pay the same at any time after the decease of such depositor, according to the rules and regulations of the said institutions; and in the event of there being no rules and regulations made in that behalf, then the said trustees or managers are hereby authorised and permitted to pay and divide the same to and amongst the person or persons entitled to the effects of the deceased intestate according to the Statute of Distributions."

Payment to persons appearing to be next of kin declared valid. Remedy for next of kin.

Sect. 42. "That whenever any trustees or managers of any savings bank at any time after the decease of any depositor, have paid and divided any sum of money not exceeding 50*l.* to or amongst any person or persons who shall at the time of such payment appear to such trustees or managers to be entitled to the effects of any deceased intestate depositor according to the Statute of Distributions, or according to the rules and regulations of any such savings banks, the payment of any such sum or sums of money shall be valid and effectual with respect to any demand of any other person or persons as next of kin of such deceased intestate depositor, or as the lawful representative or representatives of such depositor, against the funds of such savings bank, or against the treasurer or trustees or managers thereof; but nevertheless such next of kin or representatives shall have remedy for such money so paid as aforesaid against the person or persons who shall have received the same."

Payments under probates of wills, &c. appearing to be in force shall be valid.

Sect. 43. "Payment of any money by any such institutions as aforesaid to any person or persons having any letters of administration or probate of any such will or testamentary disposition granted by any Ecclesiastical Court, and appearing to be in force, shall be valid and effectual with respect to any demand of any other person or persons as the lawful representative or representatives of such depositor against the funds of such institution, or against the treasurer, trustees, or managers thereof; but nevertheless such lawful representative or representatives shall have remedy for such money or securities for money so paid or transferred as aforesaid against the person or persons who shall have received the same."

Powers of attorney, &c. given by trustees or depositors, not liable to stamp.

Sect. 44. "No power, warrant, or letter of attorney, granted or to be granted by any person or persons, or trustee or trustees of any institution established under this act, nor any power, warrant, or letter of attorney given by any depositor or depositors in the funds of such institution to any other person or persons, authorising him, her, or them to make any deposit or deposits of any sum or sums of money in the said funds on behalf of the said depositor or depositors, or to sign any document or instrument required by the rules or regulations of such institution to be signed on making such deposit, or to receive back any sum or sums of money deposited in the said funds, or the dividends or interests arising therefrom, nor any receipt nor any entry in any book of receipt for money deposited in the funds of any such institution, nor for any money received by any depositor, his or her executors or administrators, assigns or attorneys, from the funds of such institution, nor any draft or order, nor any appointment of any agent or agents, nor any certificate or other instrument for the revocation of any such appointment, nor any other instrument or document whatever required or authorised to be given, issued, signed, made, or produced in pursuance of this act, shall be subject or liable to or charged with any stamp duty or duties whatsoever."

No draft, order, or appointment of agents, &c. liable to stamp.

Disputes to be referred to arbitrators, (a)

Sect. 45. "If any dispute shall arise between any such institution, or any person or persons acting under them, and any individual depositor therein,

(a) It is compulsory on the parties to refer the matter in dispute to arbitrators, and where an action was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, as trustee of a saving bank, to recover a sum deposited by the plaintiff with the cashier of that establishment, but which the latter had purloined: it was held it would not lie. (Crisp v. Bunbury, 8 Bing. 394; 1 M. & Scott, 646, S. C.)

or any executor, administrator, next of kin, or creditor of any deceased depositor, or any person claiming to be such executor, administrator, next of kin or creditor, then and in every such case the matter so in dispute shall be referred to the arbitration of two indifferent persons, one to be chosen and appointed by the trustees or managers of such institution, and the other by the party with whom the dispute arose, and in case the arbitrators so appointed shall not agree, then such matter in dispute shall be referred in writing to the barrister at law so to be appointed by the said commissioners as aforesaid, who shall receive a fee of not more than one guinea; and whatever award, order, or determination shall be made by the said arbitrators or by the said barrister, shall be binding and conclusive on all parties, and shall be final to all intents and purposes, without any appeal; and the said award, order, or determination shall declare by whom the said fee payable to the said barrister shall be paid; and no submission to or award, order, or determination of the said arbitrators, or of the said barrister, shall be subject or liable to or charged with any stamp duty or duties whatsoever."

Trustees to make up annually accounts of progress, &c. and transmit same to national debt commissioners.

Sect. 46. "And for the more effectually ascertaining from time to time the actual and progressive state of the several savings banks respectively, be it enacted, that the trustees or managers of any savings bank shall annually cause a general statement of the funds of such savings bank, invested in the Bank of England or the Bank of Ireland in the names of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, to be prepared up to the twentieth day of November in each year, showing the balance or principal sum due to all the depositors collectively in such savings bank, and a statement of the expenses incurred, and stating in whose hand such balance shall then be remaining; and every such annual statement shall be attested by two managers or two trustees, or by one manager and one trustee of such savings bank; and every such annual statement shall be countersigned by the secretary or actuary of such savings bank; and all such annual statements shall be transmitted to the office of the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt in London or Dublin, (as the case may be), within six weeks next after the twentieth day of November in each year; and in case the trustees of any such savings bank shall neglect or refuse to make out and transmit such account as aforesaid, or in case any such trustees shall at any time neglect or refuse to obey any orders or directions given by the said commissioners, or through their officer, pursuant to the directions of this act, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners to close the account of the trustees of such savings bank, and to discontinue the keeping any further account with the trustees of such savings bank, and to direct that no further sum shall be received at the Bank of England or at the Bank of Ire-

If trustees neglect, &c. commissioners may close their accounts, &c.

If the savings bank refuse to appoint an arbitrator to decide the claims, a mandamus lies to compel them, unless indeed it is a matter of dispute whether the persons applying for the mandamus are entitled to represent the body of depositors who require the arbitration. (Rex v. The Managers, &c. of Witham Savings Bank, 1 Ad. & Ell. 321.)

In Rex v. Cheadle Savings Bank, 1 Ad & Ell. 323, n., 3 N. & M. 418, S. C.; the Court granted a mandamus calling upon a savings bank to appoint an arbitrator to decide between them and applicants, in whose names a deposit had been made, though the deposit had been withdrawn by the person who made it for the applicants, and though the published rules directed that a duplicate book of the deposits shall be delivered by the bank, and be an authority for paying over any sums to the person bringing it to the bank, and though such a duplicate was delivered up to the bank when the deposit was withdrawn. But where, by a rule of a savings bank, no claim for any sum of money could be made more than seven years from the death of a depositor, the Court discharged a rule nisi for a mandamus to the trustees of such a bank to appoint an arbitrator, under s. 45, to decide a dispute as to money, the alleged depositor of which had been dead more than seven years. (Reg v. Northwich Savings Bank, Trustees, 1 Per. & D. 477, 9 Ad. & Ell. 729.)

Where money belonging to depositors has been embezzled, the remedy against the trustees is by mandamus to appoint an arbitrator, under s. 45, and not by action. (Rex v. Mildenhall Savings Bank, 6 Ad. & E. 952; 2 N. & P. 278, S. C.)

land from the trustees of such savings bank to the account of the said commissioners, until such time as such commissioners shall think fit: provided always, that it may be lawful for the said commissioners to re-open such account, and to allow the growing interest of such account during the time of such discontinuance, and to authorise the receipt of money at the Banks of England or Ireland, whenever such commissioners shall think fit to do so, upon such trustees complying with the directions of such commissioners or their officer."

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Sect. 47. "The trustees or managers of every such savings bank shall cause a duplicate of every such annual statement, accompanied by a list of the trustees and managers of such institution for the time being, attested and countersigned as aforesaid, to be publicly affixed and exhibited in some conspicuous part of the office or place where the deposits of such savings bank are usually received, for the information of all persons making deposits therein, and every such duplicate shall from time to time remain so affixed and exhibited until the ensuing annual statement shall in like manner be affixed and exhibited as aforesaid; and every depositor shall be entitled to receive from the said institution a printed copy of such annual statement on payment of one penny."

Duplicate of accounts to be affixed in office of savings bank

Sect. 48. "From and after the passing of this act the following accounts shall be prepared by the said commissioners, and shall be annually laid before both houses of parliament on or before the twenty-fifth day of March in every year, if the parliament shall be sitting, and if the parliament shall not be sitting, then within fourteen days after the commencement of the then next session of parliament; that is to say, accounts, made up to the twentieth day of November then next preceding, of the gross amount of all sums received and credited, including interest, and of all sums paid, including interest, from the sixth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventeen, up to such twentieth day of November, by the said commissioners, on account of the trustees of the several savings banks in England and Ireland, and also on account of any friendly societies in England respectively, and of the gross amount of all sums, stock, funds, annuities, and exchequer bills standing in the names of such commissioners on the twentieth day of November on account of any such savings banks or friendly societies respectively, and the sums paid for the purchase of such stocks, funds, or exchequer bills, and the gross amount of the interest or dividends received thereon by the said commissioners, and the gross amount of the interest paid by such commissioners up to such twentieth day of November on all receipts issued to the trustees of any such savings bank or friendly societies in England and Ireland respectively; and also on account of all expenses incurred by the said commissioners for salaries of clerks or other incidental charges, during the preceding year."

Accounts to be annually laid before parliament by national debt commissioners.

Sect. 49. "And for the purpose of rendering the accounts of the several savings banks in England and Ireland uniform and correspondent with the accounts of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, it is enacted, that from and after the twentieth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, the interest or dividends due to each depositor in each savings bank in England shall be computed half yearly to the twentieth day of May and the twentieth day of November, or yearly to the twentieth day of November in each year, or up to such period nearest to such twentieth day of May or twentieth day of November as such interest shall be payable, according to the rules or regulations of such savings banks respectively, and to no other periods."

Savings banks to compute interest to 20 h May and 20th November half-yearly or yearly.

Sect. 50. "It shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorised and empowered, to lay out, from time to time, (if they shall deem it expedient, and under such regulations as the said commissioners shall direct,) the whole or any part of the monies which shall be standing in their names in the books of the Banks of England and Ireland respectively, in pursuance of this act, in the purchase of exchequer bills held by the said banks respectively or by the public, as the case may be; and the said commissioners shall be entitled to receive, for the sum or sums laid out by them in exchequer bills, such an amount of 3*l. per centum* consolidated or reduced annuities, transferable at the Bank of England, as the said sum or sums of money would have bought if the same had been applied to the purchase of 3*l. per centum* annuities, estimating the amount of such annuities at the quarterly average price of 3*l. per centum* annuities which shall have been purchased with the monies commonly called the sinking fund in the same quarter of the year in which such exchequer bills shall have been purchased; and the said 3*l. per centum* annuities, and the dividends arising thereon from time to time, shall constitute and form part of the funds belonging to the said commissioners on account of the said savings banks, and shall be subject to the same provisions and to the same and the like purposes as all other capital stocks and dividends standing in their names on the said account shall and may be subject and liable to; and the accountant-general of the said governor and company shall, within five days after such entry shall have been made as aforesaid, certify to the said commissioners the amount of the 3*l. per centum* annuities so placed upon their said account under the provisions of this act."

Comptroller-general to certify to treasury, quarterly, amount of principal and interest paid for exchequer bills.

Sect. 51. "The comptroller-general or assistant comptroller acting under the said commissioners shall, at the end of every quarter of the year in which such exchequer bills shall have been purchased by or on account of the said commissioners as aforesaid, certify to the lords commissioners of his Majesty's treasury the amount of the principal and interest paid for the same (and also the amount and description of 3*l. per centum* annuities which might have been purchased with such principal and interest, estimated at the quarterly average price of 3*l. per centum* annuities as aforesaid); and thereupon it shall and may be lawful for the said lords commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them, and they are hereby authorised and required, by warrant under their hands, from time to time to order and direct the said governor and company of the Bank of England to direct their accountant-general to enter and place to the credit of the said commissioners, upon the account standing in their names in the books of the said bank, under the title of 'The Fund for the Banks for Savings,' the amount of the 3*l. per centum* consolidated or reduced annuities (as the case may be) contained from time to time in every such certificate; the first half yearly payment of the dividend whereof shall commence from the day on which the last half-yearly dividends were due and payable on the said 3*l. per centum* consolidated or reduced annuities, as the case may be."

3*l. per cent.* annuities created by purchase of exchequer bills to be chargeable upon consolidated fund.

Sect. 52. "That the 3*l. per centum* annuities which shall be created from time to time by the purchase of exchequer bills under and by virtue of this act, shall be deemed and taken to be, and shall from time to time be added to, and shall form part of the capital of the 3*l. per centum* consolidated or reduced annuities (as the case may be) transferable at the Bank of England, and the dividends arising thereon shall, as the same shall become due, be charged upon and be payable out of, and the same are hereby made chargeable upon, the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

Exchequer bills to be delivered to paymaster of, to be cancelled, &c.

Sect. 53. "It shall be lawful for the said commissioners to cause all or any part of the exchequer bills purchased by them, or on their account, under the provisions of this act, to be delivered to the paymasters of exchequer bills, to be cancelled, within five days after the expiration of the quarter of the year in which such bills shall have been so purchased; and the said paymasters are in such case hereby required, upon the delivery thereof, to cancel the same accordingly; and it shall and may be lawful to the said commissioners to exchange from time to time any part of such exchequer bills, not so delivered to be cancelled, for new bills of the like amount (if they shall deem it expedient to do so), according to the usual course of the exchequer, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Commissioners may sell bank annuities.

Sect. 54. "It shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby authorised and empowered, to sell from time to time, if they shall deem it expedient, any part of the said bank annuities, which shall be standing in their names in the books of the Bank of England and Ireland respectively, in pursuance of the said recited acts or this act, and to apply the whole or any part of the monies produced by such sale or sales in the purchase of exchequer bills, in the same manner and under the same regulations and provisions as any other monies are authorised by this act to be so invested by the said commissioners."

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Sect. 55. "That it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, or for the proper officer or officers of the said commissioners, from time to time, to make application to the lord high treasurer or to the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, stating and certifying what sum of money may be required for satisfying any demands which shall from time to time be made upon the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt by the trustees of any savings bank or friendly society in England or Ireland, and thereupon it shall and may be lawful for the lord high treasurer or commissioners of the said treasury, or any three of them, in case they shall think fit and proper so to do, by warrant under their hands, to cause or direct any number of exchequer bills to be made out at the receipt of his Majesty's exchequer in Great Britain, for such sum or sums of money as shall be from time to time stated and certified in any such application of the said commissioners, or their officer or officers under the direction of the said commissioners, or for any part of any such sum or sums; and such exchequer bills shall be made out in the same or like manner, form, and order, and according to the same or like rules and directions, as are prescribed and directed in and by an act made in the forty-eighth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled 'An Act for regulating the Issuing and Paying of Exchequer Bills.'"

Treasury may issue exchequer bills to national debt commissioners for payments to savings banks.

48 Geo. 3, c. 1.

Sect. 56. "It shall and may be lawful for the governor and company of the Bank of England and Bank of Ireland respectively from time to time to advance to the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt such sum or sums of money, on the credit of such exchequer bill or bills issued to or purchased by the commissioners under the provisions of this act as aforesaid, at such time or times, and under such regulations for the purposes of this act, as shall be agreed upon by the said commissioners and the said governor and company of the Banks of England and Ireland respectively, and at such times as the said commissioners shall from time to time require; any law or statute to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Banks of England or Ireland may make advances to commissioners upon such bills.

Sect. 57. "The principal sum of every such exchequer bill which shall have been issued to the said commissioners upon their application, for the purposes hereinbefore directed, upon which any sum of money shall have been so advanced by the governor and company of the Banks of England or of Ireland respectively, under the provisions of this act, shall, together with all interest due thereon, be discharged from time to time by the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, in such portions as the said commissioners shall deem fit and expedient, with and out of any monies invested from time to time by the trustees of any savings banks or friendly societies in England or Ireland respectively, and carried to the credit of the said commissioners on account of any such savings banks or friendly societies, or by the sale of any bank annuities, or with and out of the monies or funds commonly called the sinking fund, standing in the names of the said commissioners in the books of the governor and company of the Banks of England or Ireland respectively, or by all or either of such means of repayment as the said commissioners shall deem most proper and convenient; and that immediately upon any such payment being made by the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, exchequer bills to the amount of the principal sum so paid off and discharged shall be delivered up to the said commissioners by the governor and company of the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland respectively; and the said commissioners shall forthwith cause the said exchequer bills to be delivered to the paymasters of exchequer bills, to be cancelled: provided always, that whenever the principal sum of any such exchequer bill or bills shall have been discharged and paid off by any sum or sums of money advanced from the sinking fund, and under the provisions of this act, the said commissioners shall cause their agent or proper officer to transfer from any account standing in the names of the said commissioners in the books of the governor and company of the Bank of England, or from any accounts standing in their names in the books of the Bank of Ireland, under or by virtue of this act, or of any act or acts relating to savings banks or friendly societies, as the case may be, into the account standing in the names of the said commissioners in the books of the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland respectively, under the title of 'The Account of the Commissioners appointed by Act of Parliament for applying certain Sums of Money annually to the Reduction of the National Debt,' such an amount of stock as shall produce, by computation, the principal sum and interest of all such exchequer bills so paid off and discharged; and the said computations shall be made by the proper officer or officers of the said commissioners, according to the price at which such stock shall have been purchased by the said commissioners on the day of transferring the said amount of stock as aforesaid; and upon every such transfer of stock being made as hereinbefore directed, the accountant-general of the governor and company of the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland respectively shall thereupon transmit to the office of the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt a certificate of every such transfer, containing the amount and description of stock so transferred."

Commissioners may keep a balance in Bank of England for drafts which may be drawn.

Sect. 58, reciting that "it is expedient to provide more effectually in certain cases for the payment of any draft or drafts which may be drawn upon the said commissioners by the trustees of any savings bank in Ireland in pursuance of this act," enacts, "That it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, if they shall so think fit, and they are hereby authorised and empowered, to pay into the Bank of England, from time to time, any sum or sums of money to be placed to their credit in account with the governor and company of the Bank of Ireland, on account of the fund for the banks for savings, under such regulations as shall or may be agreed upon from time to time between the said commissioners and the said governor and company of the Bank of Ireland; and all sums of money so placed to the said commissioners' credit as aforesaid shall be carried to the account of the said commissioners, by the cashiers of the said governor and company of the Bank of Ireland, standing in the books of the said bank under the title of 'The Fund for the Banks for Savings,' and shall be subject and shall be applied to the several purposes hereinbefore mentioned, as if every such sum and sums of money had been originally paid into the Bank of Ireland to the said account under the provisions of this act."

Receipts, &c. to be in form approved by commissioners.

Sect. 59. "All receipts, orders, certificates, indorsements, accounts, returns, or instruments, or other matters or things whatsoever, which shall be required for carrying into execution this act, shall be made in such form and manner, and containing such particulars, and under such regulations as shall from time to time be directed, or required, or approved of by the said commissioners, or their officer or officers."

Indemnity to commissioners, and Banks of England and Ireland.

Sect. 60. "This act shall be and the same is declared to be a full and sufficient indemnity and discharge to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, and to the governor and company of the Bank of England and Bank of Ireland respectively, and their officers, for all things to be done or required, or permitted to be done, pursuant to his act."

Commissioners may employ clerks, &c.

Sect 61. "It shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, and they are hereby authorised and empowered to appoint a barrister at law, and employ such and so many of the clerks and other officers as shall be necessary for carrying into execution the purposes of this act; and that it shall and may be lawful for the lord high treasurer or the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the time being, and they are hereby authorised and empowered to settle and appoint such allowances as shall be proper for the services, pains, and labour of such clerks, or other persons to be appointed and employed by the said commissioners, in manner and for the purposes aforesaid; and out of the fund upon which the establishment of the Treasury may pay them, and discharge incidental expenses.

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Sect. 62. "This act shall extend to all savings banks established, or hereafter to be established, in England and Ireland, and not elsewhere; and be deemed a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices, and other persons whomsoever, without the same being specially shown or pleaded."

Act to extend to all savings banks in England and Ireland.

By the 3 Will. IV. c. 14, intituled "An Act to enable Depositors in Savings Banks, and others, to purchase Government Annuities through the medium of Savings Banks; and to amend an Act of the Ninth Year of his late Majesty, to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Savings Banks," reciting, "Whereas an act was passed in the ninth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, entitled 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Savings Banks,' and it is expedient to alter and amend the same, and also to enable depositors in savings banks, and others, to lay out their funds in the purchase of immediate or deferred life annuities, as well as immediate or deferred annuities for a certain number of years, and that provisions should be made for carrying the said measures into effect as hereinafter expressed; be it therefore enacted, &c. That from and after the 20th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1833, or as soon after as the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt shall think fit, of which due notice shall be given in the London Gazette, it shall and may be lawful for any two trustees or managers of a savings bank legally established to receive from any depositor in the said savings bank, or other person whom the said trustees or managers shall think entitled to become a depositor in a savings bank, any sum or sums of money for the purchase of immediate or deferred life annuities, or of immediate or deferred annuities for a certain limited term of years; such annuities to be contracted for by any two of the said trustees or managers on behalf of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, and to be charged and chargeable, and the said annuities are hereby made chargeable, upon the consolidated fund of the united kingdom, under the limitations, restrictions, and regulations hereafter expressed; and all sums of money from time to time paid to the said trustees or managers on account of the purchase of every such annuity shall be kept separate, distinct, and apart from the other funds of the institution, and be from time to time, when received, paid into the Bank of England to the account of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt; and the cashiers of the Bank of England are hereby required to receive all such monies, and to place the same to the account of the said commissioners, to be entitled 'The Fund for purchasing Life Annuities, or Annuities for Terms of Years, (as the case may be,) on the Account of Savings Banks and Parochial Societies;' and the said commissioners shall in like manner keep distinct and separate accounts of all monies so placed to the said accounts, pursuant to the provisions of this act."

3 Will. 4, c. 14.

9 Geo. 4, c. 92.

Trustees of savings banks may receive money from depositors, &c. for purchase of annuities.

Annuities to be contracted for by two trustees on behalf of commissioners for reduction of national debt.

Money paid to trustees on account of purchase of annuity to be kept distinct, and paid to account of commissioners.

Sect. 2. "No such annuity or annuities shall be contracted for by the said trustees or managers on behalf of the said commissioners upon the life of any nominee, under the provisions of this act, who on the day when the contract for such annuity or annuities shall be made shall be under the age of fifteen years; neither shall any such annuity or annuities sold or granted to or possessed by any one individual exceed in the whole the sum of twenty pounds nor less than four pounds per annum: provided also, that it shall be lawful for the said trustees or managers, or commissioners, or the comptroller general, or assistant comptroller acting under the said commissioners, to decline or refuse to contract for, sell, or grant any annuity, under the provisions of this act, in any case where there shall be, in the opinion of the said trustees or managers, or of the said commissioners, or of the said comptroller general or assistant comptroller, sufficient grounds for refusing or declining so to do: provided also, that if any one individual shall have or Annuities not to be granted on the life of any nominee under fifteen years of age, nor to exceed 20*l.* per annum.

Commissioners, &c. may decline to contract for any annuity.

hold or be possessed at any one time of any annuity or annuities granted under the provisions of this act exceeding in the whole the sum of twenty pounds per annum, the said annuity or annuities shall immediately cease and be forfeited."

Fees to be taken;

Sect. 3. "It shall not be lawful for the said trustees or managers to take, demand, or receive from any person applying to enter into any contract for the purchase of such annuity as aforesaid, for admission fee or otherwise, a greater sum of money than two shillings and sixpence, nor from any person who may have entered into any such contract a greater sum annually than the sum of one shilling, which said several sums the said trustees are hereby authorised and empowered to charge and demand of and from such persons as aforesaid; and that the money arising from such fees and payments shall be applied towards defraying the necessary expenses incurred by the said trustees or managers in carrying into execution the provisions of this act with respect to the contracting for, granting, and paying such annuities."

to be applied in defraying the necessary expenses of trustees.

Payments may be made and annuities received at other savings banks, &c. than that at which the contract was originally entered into.

Sect. 4. "It shall and may be lawful for any person, having contracted for the purchase of any such annuity as aforesaid, with the consent of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, or the comptroller general or assistant comptroller acting under them, to make the annual or other payments, or to receive the said annuity so contracted for as aforesaid, through he hands of the trustees or managers of any other savings bank or society (hereinafter mentioned) than that at which such person originally entered into such contract as aforesaid."

Treasury shall direct use of tables of the value of annuities as approved by them.

Sect. 5. "For the better carrying this act into execution it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them, from time to time, as they shall think fit, to direct the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, to use and adopt such tables as shall from time to time be authorised and approved of by the said commissioners of the treasury, or any three or more of them, for ascertaining the values of annuities, whether immediate or deferred, depending on the continuance of single lives, and also such tables of the values of annuities for a certain limited term of years, immediate or deferred, as may be granted according to the provisions of this act; and such respective tables shall be valid and effectual for the purposes of this act; and all annuities for lives or years, of whatsoever kind, to be purchased under the provisions of this act, shall be purchased according to the values stated in such tables respectively so long as the same shall remain in force; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of the treasury to alter, revoke, and recall all or any of the said tables from time to time, and to direct the use and adoption of such other tables in lieu thereof as shall be approved of by the said commissioners of the treasury, and also to discontinue, by any warrant under their hands addressed to the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt (of which the said last-mentioned commissioners shall give notice in the London Gazette), the granting of any annuities for lives or years under the provisions of this act, if they shall think it fit and expedient so to do: provided always, that the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt shall, previous to the adoption and using of any such tables respectively, give notice from time to time in the London Gazette, in such form and manner as to the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt shall seem fit and proper, that such tables have been authorised and approved by the said commissioners of the treasury."

Purchasers of annuities for lives or for years shall be entitled to such amount of ananuity as shall be specified in the tables.

Sect. 6. "In every case when any sum of money shall be paid as the consideration for the purchase of any annuity for lives or years, of whatsoever kind, under the provisions of this act, the person or persons purchasing any such annuity for lives or years, upon the payment of such sum of money to the said trustees or managers, and by the said trustees paid into the Bank of England to the account of the said commissioners, entitled 'The Fund for purchasing Life Annuities or Annuities for Terms of Years on account of Saving Banks and Parochial Societies,' shall for every sum of money paid be entitled to receive, during the continuance of the single life of the nominee, whether such life annuity shall be immediate or deferred, or during the term of years, immediate or deferred, for which any annuity shall be granted under this act, an annuity for life or for terms of years, as the case may be, of such annual amount as shall be specified in any such table or tables respectively as the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them, shall from time to time authorise and approve, in manner herein-before directed, to be calculated and ascertained according to the age of the nominee, or the continuance of the term of years respectively, as the case may be."

Preventing fractions.

Sect. 7. "In every case where the calculation of the amount of any annuity according to the provisions of this act shall produce a fraction less than sixpence, the fractional part of the said annuity less than sixpence shall be taken from the amount thereof, and shall not be payable by the officer of the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt."

Life annuities granted under this act shall be carried to a separate account, as also annuities for years.

Sect. 8. "All life annuities, of whatsoever kind, which shall be purchased and granted under the provisions of this act, (whether such life annuities shall commence immediately or not,) shall, in their due course as the same shall fall due and become payable, be carried to a new and separate account in the books of the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt; and all annuities for terms of years which shall be purchased and granted under this act shall in like manner be carried to a new and separate account in the books of the said commissioners."

Life annuitants may make further purchases on lives of original nominees, without fresh certificates.

Sect. 9. "Whenever proof of the age of any nominee shall have been produced under the provisions of this act, as herein-after directed, any person or persons who shall be desirous of purchasing any annuity or annuities, whether such annuity shall depend upon the life of such person or not, (the total amount of such annuities not exceeding the sum herein-before mentioned,) on the life of such nominee, (whether such life annuities shall have been originally contracted for to commence immediately or not,) shall be at liberty so to do; and the original proof of the age of such nominee, produced at the time of the purchase of the first annuity upon the life of such nominee, shall be deemed sufficient for that purpose, without the production of any further proof of age."

Amount of annuities from time to time payable shall be certified to the treasury, who shall issue their warrant to the Bank for payment thereof out of the consolidated fund.

Sect. 10. "For the purpose of ascertaining from time to time the amount of annuities for lives or for terms of years payable under the authority of this act, the said comptroller general or assistant comptroller acting under the said commissioners, shall, within fourteen days preceding the fifth day of July, the tenth day of October, the fifth day of January, and the fifth day of April in each and every year, (commencing on the tenth day of October one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three,) certify to the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury the amount of annuities for lives and of annuities for terms of years payable under this act, the half-yearly payments of which shall from time to time be chargeable upon the said consolidated fund on each of such days respectively; and the said commissioners of the treasury, or any three or more of them, shall thereupon order and direct, by warrant under their hands, the sum specified from time to time in every such certificate to be issued and paid out of the said consolidated fund from time to time to the governor and company of the Bank of England, to be by them placed to the account of the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, for the purposes of paying all such annuities respectively."

Time of payment of annuities granted under this act.

Sect. 11. "All annuities for lives or years, of whatsoever kind, which shall be purchased under the provisions of this act, shall be payable by two equal half-yearly payments, to be respectively made on the fifth day of January and on the fifth day of July, or on the fifth day of April and the tenth day of October, in each and every year, according to the respective periods, as herein-after mentioned, within which any money shall be paid for the purchase of any such annuities for life or years, of whatsoever kind respectively; and the first half-yearly payment of every such annuity so purchased shall be made at the times following, (that is to say,) on the fifth day of January, in respect of all such purchases completed by the actual payment of money into the Bank of England to the account of the said commissioners herein-

3 Will. 4, c. 14.

after mentioned at any time during the quarter ending on the tenth day of October preceding such fifth day of January; on the fifth day of April, in respect of all such purchases so completed at any time during the quarter ending on the fifth day of January preceding the fifth day of April; on the fifth day of July in respect of all such purchases so completed at any time during the quarter ending the fifth day of April preceding such fifth day of July; and on the tenth day of October, in respect of all such purchases so completed at any time during the quarter ending on the fifth day of July preceding such tenth day of October; and all future half-yearly payments of every such annuity shall be made with reference to the time of such half-yearly payment: provided always, that upon the death of a nominee in respect of any life annuity, a sum equal to one-fourth part of the annuity depending upon the life of such nominee, (over and above all half-yearly arrears thereof respectively,) shall be payable to the person or persons entitled to such annuity, or his, her, or their executors or administrators, (as the case may be,) on the half-yearly days of payment next succeeding the production of proof to the said trustees, and by them to the said commissioners, certifying the death of such nominee; provided that such proof shall be produced to the said commissioners within thirty days next preceding the fifth day of January, fifth day of April, fifth day of July, and tenth day of October respectively in every year, and that such last mentioned payment shall be claimed within two years after the death of such nominee, but not otherwise: provided also, that the fourth part of any expired life annuity payable under the provisions of this act shall not be payable or be paid upon or in respect of any deferred life annuity, unless one half-yearly payment of such deferred life annuity shall have been actually paid or become due at the time of the decease of such nominee."

Quarterly payment on death of nominee of life annuities

Proviso as to deferred annuities.

Bargains for annuities not to be made for fourteen days after the quarterly day of payment.

Sect. 12. "For the space of fourteen days next after any of the said quarterly days for payment of the said annuities respectively, no bargain or contract shall be made by the said trustees or managers on behalf of the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, for the grant or purchase of any annuity under this act; any thing herein-before contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

Contracts for annuities to be sanctioned by commissioners for reduction of national debt before they are entered into.

Sect. 13. "All contracts for life annuities or annuities for a limited term of years, whether immediate or deferred, which shall be entered into by the trustees or managers of any savings bank, or by the trustees or managers of any society in any parish or place authorised by this act to contract for the same, shall in each and every case be deemed and taken to be contracts made by the said trustees or managers on behalf of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt: provided always, that no life annuity shall be permitted to be contracted for, nor shall any payment of any life annuity be made, under the provisions of this act, until proof of the age of the person proposed to be nominated, and until proof of the existence and identity of the respective nominees upon whose life the payment of any annuity shall be demanded, shall have been previously submitted to and approved of by the said commissioners, or by the comptroller general or assistant comptroller acting under the said commissioners; and the said annuities for lives and for terms of years shall be placed under the same regulations as are contained in the acts now in force for enabling the said commissioners to grant life annuities and annuities for terms of years, so far as the same can be made applicable thereto, save and except that no charge by way of commission shall be made by the said commissioners at any time on any sum of money which shall be paid by any person for the purchase of any annuities under the provisions of this act, and also according to such instructions and regulations as the said commissioners, or the said comptroller general or assistant comptroller, shall from time to time issue and direct for carrying into effect the provisions of this act; and all the provisions, penalties, and forfeitures in the said last-mentioned acts contained shall apply and be in force with regard to any and all annuities granted under this act in the same manner as though the same were expressly enacted herein, except so far as the same shall be altered or varied by this act."

Sect. 14. "Upon the production to the proper officer of the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt of proof of the existence and identity of the respective nominees, as herein-before enacted, and upon the same being approved by such officer, it shall be lawful for any two trustees of the savings bank wherein such respective nominees shall be registered, and also for any two trustees of any society duly established in any parish under this act, to draw upon the said commissioners for the half-yearly payment of the several annuities then due upon the lives of such nominees respectively; and such officer shall and he is hereby required to pay to the said trustees as aforesaid, or their respective agents, now appointed or hereafter to be appointed, within five days after the production of such draft, the several half-yearly payments then due."

3 Will. 4, c. 14.

On production of proof of existence &c., certificate shall be granted for payment of annuity for life.

Sect. 15. "In all cases of annuities for terms of years it shall be lawful for the said trustees, as herein-before mentioned, to draw upon the said commissioners for the half-yearly payment of the several last-mentioned annuities then due; and the said officer shall and he is hereby required to pay to the said trustees or their respective agents, now appointed or hereafter duly appointed, within five days after the draft is presented, the several half-yearly payments then due."

Annuities for terms of years to be paid without proof.

Sect. 16 "The right, title, interest and benefit in and to any annuity, of whatsoever kind, whether such annuity shall be immediate or deferred, which may be purchased under the provisions of this act, shall not be transferable or assignable by the purchaser thereof so as to enable the assignee to receive the same during the lifetime of the said purchaser, except in case of his or her insolvency or bankruptcy, when the same shall become the property of his or her assignee or assignees for the benefit of his or her creditors, and the same shall, in such case, after due notice of such insolvency or bankruptcy, be paid to such assignee or assignees aforesaid; and in case of any such bankruptcy or insolvency, the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt shall repurchase the said annuity according to the value thereof, the same being computed upon the same tables upon which the said annuity was originally purchased; and the receipt of the assignee or assignees shall be a sufficient discharge to the said commissioners."

Annuities granted under this act not transferable, except in case of bankruptcy or insolvency.

Sect. 17. "Life annuities and annuities for terms of years, purchased under the provisions of this act, shall not be subject or liable to any taxes, charges or imposition whatever; and all such annuities shall be deemed personal estate, and in all cases where the same shall not depend upon the life of the person entitled thereto shall go to the executors or administrators of such person as personal estate, and shall not be descendible to the heirs."

As to the liability of annuities to taxes.

Annuities shall be personal estate.

Sect. 18. "Whenever it shall happen that any person, having made any one or more annual payment or payments, in cases where the consideration for any deferred life annuity or annuity for terms of years shall be by annual payments for or in the purchase of any deferred annuity under this act, or their respective executors or administrators, shall make default in paying or continuing to make the residue of such annual payments until the whole consideration for any such life annuity or annuity for terms of years shall be fully paid according to the agreement for the same, or in case the person so contracting for such life annuity or annuity for terms of years should die previous to the said annuity becoming payable, then and in every such case the amount of all annual payments which shall have been actually made previous to such default shall be returned, exclusive of interest, to the said person so making default as aforesaid; or in case of the death of the party having entered into such contract as herein-before mentioned, the annual or other payment or payments which shall have been actually made previous to his death shall be paid, exclusive of interest, to his executors or administrators; and that the money so returned shall be charged, paid, and defrayed out of the monies standing in the names of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt at the bank of England, under the provisions of this act."

If annual payments are not kept up, or if party die before annuity commences, all payments to be returned.

Sect. 19. "No stamp duty whatever shall be paid or payable upon or in respect of any copy of any register of the birth or baptism, or marriage or Registers, receipts, &c. exempt from stamp duty.

burial of any nominee or other person, or upon or in respect of any certificate or declaration to be made or taken in pursuance of this act, or any certificate or other instrument whatsoever respecting the payment of money for the purchase of any annuity under this act, or any power of attorney authorising the receipt, or any receipt for the payment of any such annuity or any part thereof, but that the same shall be respectively free from all stamp duties whatsoever, any thing in any act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding."

Appointment of clerks and officers.

Sect. 20. "It shall be lawful for the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, and they are hereby authorised and empowered from time to time to appoint such officers, clerks, and other persons as may be necessary for carrying this act into execution, and as may be approved of by the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury.

For defraying expenses attending the execution of this act.

Sect. 21. "It shall be lawful for the lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them for the time being, to order and direct to be issued and paid, out of the fund upon which the establishment of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt is chargeable, any sum or sums of money for the payment of salaries to officers and clerks acting in the execution of this act, in such manner as the said lord high treasurer, or commissioners of the treasury, or any three or more of them, shall from time to time think fit and reasonable: provided always, that any incidental expenses incurred by the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt in carrying into execution this act, or the said act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Savings Banks,' or the act made and passed in the tenth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Friendly Societies,' shall and may be defrayed by the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt out of any monies, stocks, or funds standing in the names of the said commissioners at the Bank of England."

10 G. 4, c. 56.

Quorum of commissioners.

Sect. 22. "It shall be lawful for any three or more of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt for the time being to execute and do all matters and things which the said commissioners are required or empowered to do for the execution of this act."

Account to be annually laid before parliament of annuities granted, and of money paid for annuities.

Sect. 23. "There shall be prepared and annually laid before both Houses of Parliament, on or before the twenty-fifth day of March in every year, if parliament shall be then sitting, and if parliament shall not be then sitting, then within fourteen days after the commencement of the then next session of parliament, an account made up by the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt to the fifth day of January preceding, of the gross amount of all sums of money paid to the said commissioners, and the gross amount of annuities for lives and for terms of years which shall have been granted for the same, under the provisions of this act, within the year ending on the fifth day of January as aforesaid."

Monies paid to commissioners on account of this act to be invested in bank annuities for term of years, or exchequer bills which shall be cancelled.

Commissioners may reserve a part of such sums to repay money claimed in case of death, &c. of party purchasing annuity.

Sect. 24. "The said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt shall cause all monies placed to their said accounts in pursuance of the provisions of this act to be invested from time to time, under such regulations as the said commissioners shall direct, in the purchase of any bank annuities, or annuities for terms of years, or exchequer bills, or in either of them, and to be carried to the accounts hereinbefore provided; which said bank annuities and exchequer bills (as the case may be) shall be forthwith cancelled, and all interest or dividends on such bank annuities, shall cease to be charged upon or to be issued out of the consolidated fund from and after the day upon which any such bank annuities shall have been purchased by the said commissioners; provided, nevertheless, that it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt to retain and reserve from time to time so much of such monies as they shall deem expedient for the purpose of enabling the said commissioners to return and pay back any sum or sums of money, as hereinbefore directed, to such person or persons who shall have contracted for the purchase of any annuity under the provisions of this act, by annual or other payments, but who, from death or otherwise, may not be enabled to make good and keep up the same, or to his, her, or their executors or administrators, as well as to the executors or administrators of such person or persons who may die before the annuity which he, she, or they may have contracted for becomes payable."

3 Will. 4, c. 14.

Sect. 25. "It shall be lawful for the said commissioners for the reduction of the national debt from time to time, and as they shall think fit, to sell and dispose of the bank annuities and exchequer bills, or any part thereof, which may be now standing or may hereafter stand in their names in the books of the Bank of England, in pursuance of the said act made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Savings Banks,' and of the said act made and passed in the tenth year of the reign of his said late Majesty George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Friendly Societies,' and with the proceeds thereof to purchase in lieu thereof any other description of bank annuities, or annuities for terms of years, or exchequer bills."

Commissioners may sell and dispose of bank annuities, &c. now standing in their names, pursuant to 9 G. 4, c. 92, and 10 G. 4, c. 56, and purchase other bank annuities, &c. in lieu thereof.

Sect. 26. "It shall and may be lawful for the trustees and managers of any savings banks, desirous of carrying the provisions of this act into execution, to frame rules and regulations for that purpose; and that all the provisions of the said act, made and passed in the ninth year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Fourth, as relate to the framing, enrolling and altering rules of savings banks, as well as to disputes between the said trustees or managers and depositors therein, shall be applicable to the rules and regulations to be made under the provisions of this act, and to the parties purchasing such annuities, as herein mentioned; and that for the purposes of this act every person purchasing an annuity through the medium of a savings bank shall be considered as a depositor in a savings bank."

Trustees may make rules for carrying the provisions of this act into execution.

Sect. 27. "In any parish or place in the United Kingdom where no savings bank is legally established under the provisions of the said act hereinbefore mentioned, it shall and may be lawful to and for any persons in such parish or place to establish a society for carrying the provisions of this act into execution: provided that the rector or vicar or minister of the parish, or elder for the time being, or a resident justice of the peace, shall be one of the trustees of such society; and provided also, that all the provisions of the said last-mentioned act and of this act, in as far as the same can or may be applicable, shall apply to the trustees and managers of any such society to be formed for the purposes of this act, and to the parties purchasing such annuities as herein mentioned, and to the rules and regulations to be made for carrying the same into effect."

Where no savings bank is legally established, other trustees may establish a society for the purpose of granting annuities.

Provisions of 9 G. 4, c. 92, applicable to any society formed under this act.

Sect. 28. "If any person already appointed under the provisions of the said act made and passed in the ninth year of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, or who may hereafter be appointed to any office in a savings bank, or in a society established under this act, and being entrusted with the keeping of the accounts, or having in his hands or possession, by virtue of his said office or employment, any monies or effects belonging to such savings bank or society, or any deeds or securities relating to the same, shall die, or become a bankrupt or insolvent, or have any execution or attachment or other process issued against his lands, goods, chattels, or effects, or make any assignment thereof for the benefit of his creditors, his executors, administrators or assignees, or other persons having legal right, or the sheriff or other officer executing such process, shall, within forty days after demand made by two of the trustees of the said savings bank or society as aforesaid, deliver and pay over all monies and other things belonging to such savings bank or society to such person as the said trustees shall appoint, and shall pay out of the estates, assets, or effects of such person all sums of money remaining due which such person received by virtue of his said office or employment, before any other of his debts are paid or satisfied, or before the money directed to be levied by such process as aforesaid is paid over to the party issuing such process; and all such assets, lands, goods, chattels, estates, and effects shall be bound to the payment and discharge thereof accordingly."

Executors, &c. of officers of savings banks to pay money due to savings banks before any other debts.

Repayment of trust deposits.

Annuities not to exceed 30*l.*

Sect. 8. "That from and after the twentieth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, so much of the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 14, ante, 353, as provides that no annuity or annuities sold or granted to or possessed by any one individual shall exceed in the whole the sum of twenty pounds nor less than four pounds per annum, shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and from and after the twentieth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, no annuity or annuities sold or granted to or possessed by any one individual under the said recited act or this act shall exceed in the whole the sum of thirty pounds nor less than four pounds per annum: provided also, that nothing in this or the said recited act contained shall prevent such annuity being sold or granted to or possessed by any married man or woman, although an annuity to the same amount or a less amount may have been sold or granted to or possessed by the wife or husband of such party."

Annuity may be granted to husband and to wife.

Amount payable on purchase of annuity.

Sect. 9. "That instead of the sums allowed to be charged at the time of purchasing an annuity under this or the said recited act, and the yearly sum payable during the continuance of the said annuity, the said trustees or managers may at the time of purchasing such annuity charge any sum not exceeding the following; (that is to say,) for every annuity under five pounds the sum of five shillings; five pounds and under ten pounds, the sum of ten shillings; ten pounds and under fifteen pounds, the sum of fifteen shillings; fifteen pounds and under twenty pounds, the sum of one pound; twenty pounds and under twenty-five pounds, the sum of one pound five shillings; twenty-five pounds and not exceeding thirty pounds, the sum of one pound ten shillings."

Where deposits and interest do not exceed 50*l.* exclusive of interest, if will, &c. not proved within a month, money may be paid to widow or to party entitled to effects of deceased.

Sect. 10. "That in case any depositor in any savings bank shall die, leaving any sum of money in the said institution belonging to him or her at the time of his or her death, not exceeding in the whole the sum of fifty pounds, exclusive of interest, and probate of the will of the deceased depositor, or letters of administration of his or her estate and effects, is not produced to the trustees or managers of the said institution, or if notice in writing of the existence of a will and intention to prove the same or to take out letters of administration is not given to the said trustees or managers within the period of one month from the death of the said depositor, and in the latter case unless such will is proved or letters of administration taken out within the period of two months from the death of the said depositor, it shall be lawful for the said trustees or managers to pay and divide the same to or amongst any person or persons who shall appear to such trustees or managers to be the widow, or entitled to the effects of such deceased depositor, according to the statute of distribution, or according to the rules of the institution, and the payment of any such sum of money shall be valid and effectual with respect to any demand of any other person or persons as next of kin of such deceased depositor, or as the lawful representative of such depositor, against the funds of such savings bank, or against the trustees and managers thereof; but nevertheless such next of kin or representative shall have remedy for recovery of such money so paid as aforesaid against the person or persons who shall have received the same." 7 & 8 Vict. c. 83.

Sect. 11. "That if any depositor, being illegitimate, shall die intestate, leaving any person or persons who but for the illegitimacy of such depositor and of such person or persons would be entitled to the money due to such deceased depositor, it shall be lawful for the trustees or managers, with the authority in writing of the barrister appointed to certify the rules of savings banks, to pay the money due to such deceased depositor to any one or more of the persons as in their opinion would have been entitled to the same, according to the statute of distributions, if the said depositor and such person or persons had been legitimate." Payment on death of depositor, being illegitimate, and dying intestate.

Sect. 12. And whereas deposits in savings banks may have been made and may be made by married women, and deposits may have been and may be made by women who may have afterwards married; be it enacted, "That it shall be lawful for the trustees or managers of any savings bank to pay any sum of money in respect of any such deposit to any such woman, unless the husband of such woman shall give to such trustees or managers notice in writing of such marriage, and shall require payment to be made to him." Payment to married women of deposits made by them, when declared to be valid.

Sect. 13. "That the time for making out and issuing the half-yearly receipts for interest to the several savings banks and friendly societies shall be extended to sixty days from and after the twentieth of May and twentieth of November respectively in each year, and the time for transmitting the annual statement mentioned in the said recited act shall be extended to nine weeks next after the twentieth day of November in each year." Time for making out half-yearly receipts and annual statement.

Sect. 14. "That if any dispute shall arise between the trustees and managers of any savings bank and any individual depositor therein, or any executor, administrator, next of kin, or creditor, or assignee of depositor, who may become bankrupt or insolvent, or any person claiming to be such executor, administrator, next of kin, creditor, or assignee, or to be entitled to any money deposited in such savings bank, then and in every such case the matter in dispute shall be referred in writing to the barrister at law appointed under the said recited acts, who shall have power to proceed ex parte on notice in writing to the said trustees or managers left or sent by the said barrister to the office of the said institution; and whatever award, order, or determination shall be made by the said barrister shall be binding and conclusive on all parties, and shall be final to all intents and purposes without any appeal; and no submission to, or award, order, or determination of the said barrister shall be subject or liable to be charged with any stamp duty whatever." Settlement of disputes.

Sect. 15. "That on any such reference it shall be lawful for the said barrister and he is hereby authorised, to inspect any book or books belonging to the said institution relating to the matter in dispute, and to administer an oath to any witness appearing before him, or to take the affirmation in cases where affirmation is allowed by law instead of oath; and if upon such oath or affirmation any person making the same shall wilfully and corruptly give any false evidence, every person so offending shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of perjury, and shall be prosecuted and punished accordingly." On reference, barrister may inspect books and administer oath to witnesses.

Sect. 16. "That within one month from the passing of this act the clerk of the peace or town clerk with whom any bond given as security, pursuant to the provisions of either of the said recited acts, shall have been deposited shall transmit the same to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, to be and remain in their custody; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, on any application and receipt signed by not less than two trustees and three managers, in such form as the said commissioners shall direct, to deliver up to the trustees of the institution any bond or bonds which may have been or shall hereafter be given by way of security on behalf of such institution, for the purpose of being cancelled." Bonds given under 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 14, to be sent to commissioners for reduction of national debt. When bonds may be delivered up to be cancelled.

Sect. 17. "That every treasurer, actuary, or cashier who shall be entrusted with the receipt or custody of any sum of money subscribed or deposited for the purpose of such institution, or any interest or dividend from time to time Treasurer and other officers entrusted with receipt or custody accruing therefrom, and every officer or other person receiving any salary or allowance for their services from the funds of any savings bank or government annuity society (unless he shall have already given good and sufficient security), shall give good and sufficient security, to be approved of by not less than two trustees and three managers of such savings bank or government annuity society, for the just and faithful execution of such office or trust; and such security when given by an actuary or cashier, or officer or person receiving any salary or allowance for his services as aforesaid, shall be given by bond or bonds with one or more sureties to the comptroller general of the national debt office for the time being, without fee or reward; and in case of forfeiture it shall be lawful for the trustees or managers for the time being of such institution to sue upon such bond or bonds in the name of such comptroller general for the time being, and to carry on such suit at the costs and charges and for the use of the said institution, fully indemnifying and saving harmless such comptroller general from all costs and charges in respect of such suit; and no bond to be so given shall be subject to or charged or chargeable with any stamp duty whatever; and such bond shall, when executed, be deposited with the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt."

Security to be given by bond to comptroller general.

Trustees may sue upon bond.

Bond not liable to stamp duty.

Repeal of part of 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, as to deposit of rules with clerk of the peace.

Sect. 18. "That so much of the said recited act as requires that the transcript of the rules of a savings bank or government annuity society shall be deposited with or filed by the clerk of the peace, and a certificate thereof returned to the institution, and that such transcript shall be laid before the justices at sessions, shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Two written or printed copies of rules &c. to be submitted to barrister for his certificate.

Sect. 19. "That two written or printed copies of all rules or alterations of rules made in pursuance of the said recited acts or this act, signed by two trustees, with all convenient speed after the same shall be made, altered, or amended, and so from time to time after every making, altering or amending thereof, shall be submitted to the barrister at law appointed under the provisions of the said recited act, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the said rules or alterations, or amendments thereof, are in conformity to law and with the provisions of the said acts relating to savings banks or government annuity society; and that the said barrister shall give a certificate on each of the said written or printed copies that the same are in conformity to law and the provisions of the said last-mentioned acts, or point out in what part or parts the said rules, alterations, or amendments are repugnant thereto; and that the barrister for perusing the rules, or alterations or amendments of the rules, of such respective savings bank or government annuity society, and giving such certificate as aforesaid, shall demand no further fee than specified in the said recited act; and one of such written or printed copies, when certified by the said barrister, shall be returned to the trustees of the said institution, and the other of such transcripts or printed copies shall be transmitted by such barrister to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt; and that all rules, alterations and amendments thereof, from the time when the same shall have been certified by the said barrister, shall be binding on the trustees, managers and officers of the said institution and the depositors therein and their representatives; and the copy of such rules deposited with the said commissioners, or a true copy thereof, examined with the original and proved to be a true copy, shall be received as evidence of such rules respectively in all cases, and no certiorari shall be brought or allowed to remove any such rules into any of her majesty's courts of record."

Barrister to return one copy to institution, and transmit the other copy to commissioners.

Scotland.

Sect. 20, adapts the provisions of the act to the law of Scotland.

Provisions of this act to apply to purchasers of annuities.

Sect. 21. "That all the provisions of this act, in as far as the same can or may be applicable, shall apply to the trustees and managers of any government annuity society, and to the parties purchasing annuities, and to the rules and regulations to be made for carrying the same into effect."

Extent of act.

Sect. 22. "That this act shall extend to Great Britain and Ireland, Berwick-upon-Tweed, and the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, and Isle of Man."

I. Derivation and Description of a Bankrupt.

Derivation.

Lord Coke says, that banque, in French, signifies the same as mensa in Latin; and that route is a sign or mark, as we say a cart rout is the sign or mark where the cart hath gone; and that metaphorically a bankrupt, or banqueroute, is taken for him that hath wasted his estate, and removed his banque, so as there is left but a mention thereof. (4 Inst. 277.)

And it is observable that the title of the first English statute concerning this offence, stat. 34 & 35 Hen. VIII. c. 4, "An Act against such Persons as do make Bankrupt," is a literal translation of the French words, qui font banque route.

But as the first bankers came to us from Italy, it seemeth more probable that they brought their name along with them; and, consequently, that the word bankrupt or banqueroute cometh from the Italian banco rotto, the bench being broken. The banker himself was so called from the bench or table which he used with his name inscribed, and when he failed, his bench was broken. Which word rotto is what remaineth in that country of the Latin ruptus, all which, both word and metaphor, we preserve in our language, when we say, that a person is bankrupt, or that such a one is broken.

But whatever be the derivation of the word, a bankrupt has been defined to be a trader who secretes himself, or does certain other acts, tending to defraud his creditors. Throughout the three first statutes, the bankrupt is uniformly called an offender, and the original policy of the bankrupt laws seems to have been to prevent and defeat the frauds of criminal debtors. The bankrupt being deemed an offender, and being completely divested of the disposition of his property, those statutes at the first would naturally be considered penal statutes. As trade, however, increased, the risks and calamities incident to commercial speculation were found to augment proportionably, and at length a bankrupt ceased to be considered as a criminal. Accordingly the fourth statute on the subject (21 Jac. 1, c. 19) stated at its very commencement, that "all and singular the aforesaid statutes and laws heretofore made against bankrupts, and for relief of creditors, shall be in all things largely and beneficially construed and expounded for the aid, help, and relief of the creditors of such person or persons as already be, or hereafter shall become bankrupt;" and at this day the bankrupt laws are considered to be a system, calculated for the benefit of trade, and founded on the principles of humanity, as well as justice. To that end they confer some privileges, not only on the creditors, but also on the bankrupt or debtor himself; on the creditors by compelling the bankrupt to give up all his effects to their use, without any fraudulent concealment; on the debtor by exempting him from the rigour of the general law, whereby his person might be confined at the discretion of his creditor, though he in truth should be destitute of any means to discharge the debt; whereas the system of laws in relation to bankrupts, taking into consideration the sudden and unavoidable accidents to which men in trade are liable, has secured to them personal freedom and some pecuniary emoluments, upon condition that they surrender up their whole estate for the benefit of those who, in confidence of the bankrupt's solvency, have become his creditors.

1. Definition of.

As to who may be made a bankrupt under the present laws, will be found in the 2d section of the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 10.

II. Non-surrender and Embezzlement by Bankrupts; Destroying or Falsifying Books, &c.; Obtaining, &c., Goods on Credit on False Pretences, &c.; Search Warrants.

By the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 132, s. 32, it is enacted, "That if any person adjudged bankrupt after the commencement of this act shall not, upon the day limited for the surrender of such bankrupt, and before three of the clock of such day, or at the hour and upon the day allowed him for finishing his examination, after notice thereof in writing to be left at the usual or last known place of abode or business of such person, or personal notice in case such person be then in prison, and notice given in the London Gazette of the issuing of the fiat, and of the sittings of the Court authorised to act in the prosecution of the fiat against him, surrender himself to such Court, and sign or subscribe such surrender, and submit to be examined before such Court from time to time upon oath; or if any such bankrupt, upon such examination, shall not discover all his real and personal estate, and how, and to whom, upon what consideration, and when he disposed of, assigned, or transferred any of such estate, and all books, papers, and writings relating thereunto (except such part as shall have been really and bonâ fide before sold and disposed of in the way of his trade, or laid out in the ordinary expense of his family;) or if any such bankrupt shall not upon such examination deliver up to the said Court all such part of such estate, and all books, papers and writings relating thereunto, as shall be in his possession, custody or power; (except the necessary wearing apparel of himself, his wife and children;) or if any such bankrupt shall remove, conceal or embezzle any part of such estate to the value of ten pounds or upwards, or any books of account, papers or writings relating thereto, with intent to defraud his creditors; every such bankrupt shall be deemed guilty of felony, and be liable to be transported for life, or for such term, not less than seven years, as the Court before which he shall be convicted shall adjudge, or shall be liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in any common gaol, penitentiary house, or house of correction, for any term not exceeding seven years."

Bankrupt not surrendering, and submitting to be examined; or making discovery of his estate and effects;

or not delivering up his estate, books, &c.;

or concealing, &c. to the value of 10*l.* guilty of felony, and liable to transportation or imprisonment, with or without hard labour.

Offences under this enactment are not triable at quarter sessions, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1.

Sect. 33. "That the Court authorised to act in the prosecution of any fiat in bankruptcy shall have power, as often as such Court shall think fit, from time to time, to enlarge the time for the bankrupt named in such fiat surrendering himself for such time as such court shall think fit, so as every such order be made six days at least before the day on which such bankrupt was to surrender himself."

Court may enlarge the time for the bankrupt surrendering himself.

Sect. 34. "That if any bankrupt shall, after an act of bankruptcy committed, or in contemplation of bankruptcy, or with intent to defeat the object of this or any other statute relating to bankrupts, and after the commencement of this act, have destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified any of his books, papers, writings, or securities, or made or been privy to the making of Bankrupt destroying or falsifying any of his books, &c. or making false entries, guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to imprison-any false or fraudulent entry in any book of account or other document, with intend to defraud his creditors, every such bankrupt shall be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to be imprisoned in any common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding three years, with or without hard labour."

ment, with or without hard labour.

Bankrupt within three months of his bankruptcy, having obtained goods on credit under false pretence, or removing, concealing, &c. goods so obtained, guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sect. 35. "That if any bankrupt shall within three months next preceding his bankruptcy, and after the commencement of this act, under the false colour and pretence of carrying on business and dealing in the ordinary course of trade, have obtained on credit from any other person any goods or chattels with intent to defraud the owner thereof, or if any bankrupt shall within the time aforesaid, with such intent, have removed, concealed, or disposed of any goods or chattels so obtained, knowing them to have been so obtained, every such person so offending shall be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour."

Prosecution against bankrupt for any offence under this act may be ordered by the court acting in prosecution of the fiat.

Sect. 36. "That it shall be lawful for the Court authorised to act in the prosecution of any fiat in bankruptcy issued after the commencement of this act, upon the request in writing of at least three creditors (not being partners) who shall have respectively proved debts of the amount of fifty pounds or upwards under such fiat, to direct the assignees of the bankrupt named in such fiat, if he shall be suspected of or charged with the commission of any of the offences specified in this act, to institute and carry on a prosecution of such bankrupt for such offence, and to order that the costs and expenses to be incurred in such prosecution shall be paid out of the estate and effects of the said bankrupt, and such assignees shall thereupon institute and carry on such prosecution; and in case the said assignees shall refuse or neglect to institute and carry on to conviction such prosecution, having no lawful or reasonable impediment made known to and allowed by the said Court, the said Court may order the same to be instituted and carried on either by the official assignee alone, or by the creditors making such request as aforesaid, as the said Court may think fit."

Search warrants may be granted by justices.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, sect. 29, "That in all cases where it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of any justice of peace in England or Ireland, that there is reason to suspect and believe that property of the bankrupt is concealed in any house, premises, or other place not belonging to such bankrupt, such justice of peace is hereby directed and authorised to grant a search warrant to the person so deputed by the commissioners as aforesaid, and it shall be lawful for such person to execute the same in like manner, and such person shall be entitled to the same protection as is allowed by law in execution of a search warrant for property reputed to be stolen and concealed."

A warrant under this enactment is not valid if presented to any one besides the messenger under the commission. (Reg. v. Stevenson, 2 C. & P. 464.)

May be granted by the court.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 30, "That in all cases where it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Court authorised to act in the prosecution of any fiat in bankruptcy, that there is reason to suspect and believe that property of any bankrupt is concealed in any house, premises, or other place not belonging to such bankrupt, such Court is hereby directed and authorised to grant a search warrant to any person appointed by the Court in which the adjudication against such bankrupt shall have been made, and it shall be lawful for such person to execute such warrant according to the tenor thereof; and such person shall be entitled to the same protection as is allowed by law in execution of a search warrant for property reputed to be stolen or concealed."

Decisions as to not surrendering.

Decisions, &c.]—The provisions against a bankrupt for not surrendering have been considered so severe, that in cases before the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 119, where it appeared the absence of the defendant was occasioned rather by ignorance or accident than design, the lord chancellor superseded the commission, in order to prevent the commencement of proceedings under it. (Exparte Wood, 1 Atk. 222; 18 Ves. 18; 3 Ves. 238.)

A bankrupt who was in prison for debt did not surrender to his commission, nor did he apply to have the time for his surrender enlarged, nor did he apply to be brought up to surrender under sect. 119 of the act 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, nor did he give notice to commissioners that he was in prison: it was held, that under these circumstances he was not indictable for not surrendering to his commission, even though the imprisonment could be shown to have been conclusive. (R. v. Mitchell, 4 C. & P. 251.)

2. Non-Surrender and Embezzlement by, &c.

If a bankrupt surrender to the fiat, and at the time of such surrender refuse to answer particular questions concerning his property, but takes the oath, and assigns as his reason for not answering, that he intends to dispute the commission, the refusal to such answer would not be a capital offence within the act, but subject him only to a committal to prison by the commissioners. (Page's case, R. & R. C. C. 392; 3 Moore, 656; 1 B. & B. 308; 7 Price, 616, S. C. infra.)

The bankrupt will not be guilty of felony if he surrender before the last moment of the time allowed him, though indeed it is both his interest and his duty to do so as soon as possible. (R. v. Perrott, 2 Burr. 1124; Kenyon v. Solomon, Cowp. 156.)

Concealing effects.

Up to and until his last examination, the bankrupt has a locus pœnitentiæ, and cannot, therefore, until that be passed, be indicted for concealing property, which he may upon his last examination give up. (R. v. Walters, 5 C. & P. 138.)

Form, &c. of indictment.

The Indictment.]—The indictment must show that the party actually became a bankrupt; and merely stating that the commissioners adjudged him a bankrupt will not suffice. (R. v. Jones, 4 B. & Ad. 345; 1 Nev. & M. 78, S. C.)

It must set forth the proceedings accurately. It should state that the fiat was awarded, and issued, and the allegation that it was awarded only will not suffice. (R. v. Frith, 1 Leach, 10.) A statement that it issued out of Chancery would be bad. (1 Rose, B. C. 222) But an averment, that a commission issued under the great seal of Great Britain, was held supported by proof that it issued under the great seal of Great Britain and Ireland. (R. v. Bullock, 2 Leach, 996; 1 Taunt. 71.)

On an indictment for not surrendering the notices required to be published in the Gazette and given to the bankrupt should be stated according to the words of the statute and the notices as given. (R. v. Frith, 1 Leach, 10.) An averment of a notice, requiring the bankrupt to surrender to the commissioners at Guildhall, without naming the commissioners or showing that they were the commissioners appointed by the commission of bankrupt, will be too uncertain (1 Leach, 10. See Gow, 210.)

In an indictment against a bankrupt, he was charged in feloniously making default in not submitting to be examined: it was made a question, whether this was sufficient without charging him with a refusal to surrender and submit to examination. (R. v. Page, 3 Moore, 656; 1 B. & B. 308, S. C.)

The indictment for embezzling the effects must particularly specify the property embezzled, and a distinct value must be put on the articles enumerated, for it is the essence of the offence, that the goods embezzled be of the value fixed by the act, viz. 10*l.* (Forsyth's case, R. & R. C. C. 277.)

Evidence.

Evidence on]—It is necessary to prove a valid fiat against the bankrupt. (See Ex parte Bullock, 14 Vesey, 452.) All the proceedings by which the prisoner was made a bankrupt, as well as the notices requiring him to surrender if the indictment be against him for not surrendering, must be proved. (1 Atk. 211.) Therefore, the trading, the petitioning creditor's debt, the act of bankruptcy, the fiat and adjudication, must be strictly shown in evidence. (R. v. Punshon, 3 Campb. 96; R. v. Barnes, 1 Stark. Rep. 243.)

But this strictness of proof has been held in one case not to be necessary on an indictment for perjury against a third person, in which the adjudication of the commissioners was held to be sufficient evidence of the bankruptcy. (R. v. Raphael, Manning's Index, 232, 2*d ed.*)

2. Non-Surrender and Embezzlement by, &c.

Gazette to be conclusive evidence of bankruptcy, &c in certain cases.

And by the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 24, "That if the bankrupt shall not (if he were within the United Kingdom at the date of the adjudication), within twenty-one days after the advertisement of the bankruptcy in the London Gazette, or (if he were in any other part of Europe at the date of the adjudication) within three months after such advertisement, or (if he were elsewhere at the date of the adjudication) within twelve months after such advertisement, have commenced an action, suit, or other proceeding to dispute or annul the fiat, and shall not have prosecuted the same with due diligence and with effect, the Gazette containing such advertisement shall be conclusive evidence in all cases as against such bankrupt, and in all actions at law or suits in equity brought by the assignees for any debt or demand for which such bankrupt might have sustained any action or suit had he not been adjudged bankrupt, that such person so adjudged bankrupt became a bankrupt before the date and suing forth of such fiat, and that such fiat was sued forth on the day on which the same is stated in the Gazette to bear date, saving all rights which shall have accrued to any such person as aforesaid previous to the commencement of this act, and in respect of which any proceedings shall be pending at the time of the commencement of this act, which shall be adjudged and determined as if this act had not been passed."

It would seem that this enactment applies to criminal prosecutions against the bankrupt. But this seems not free from doubt. (See Thorold v. Thorold, 7 Jurist.)

Proceedings on fiats in bankruptcy were formerly proved either by producing the proceedings themselves duly enrolled, (6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 96,) or, (if the original instrument in writing were filed in the office, or were officially in the possession of the Lord Chancellor's secretary), by copies duly signed and attested. (6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 97.) But now the records of all fiats in bankruptcy, and of all proceedings under the same, heretofore entered of record under the stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, are removed into the Court of Bankruptcy, established by 1 & 2 Will. IV. c. 56, and are kept as records of that Court; and all proceedings in bankruptcy and copies thereof purporting to be sealed with the seal of that Court, are to be received as evidence. (2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 114, s. 9.)

Deposition of deceased witness of petitioning creditor's debt, made evidence.

And by the 5 & 6 Vict. c 122, s. 25, "In the event of the death of any witness deposing to the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or act of bankruptcy, under any fiat in bankruptcy already issued or hereafter to be issued, the deposition of any such deceased witness purporting to be sealed with the seal of the Court of Bankruptcy, or a copy thereof purporting to be so sealed, shall in all cases be receivable in evidence of the matters therein respectively contained."

In order to prove the notice in the Gazette, the production of the Gazette itself will be sufficient, without proving its being bought of the Gazette printer, or where it came from. (Forsyth's case, R & R. C. C. 277.) See "Evidence," Vol. II.

On an indictment for concealing effects, if the evidence be that the bankrupt on his last examination stated that a book given in by him contained an account of all his effects, it is incumbent on the prosecutor to produce the book, or account for it, that it may be seen whether that book mentions the property or not. (Evans's case, R. & R. C. C. 70.)

The defendant may procure an acquittal by proving that he was an infant at the time of contracting the debts mentioned in the indictment, for though such obligations are only voidable by him at his election, no man can be made a bankrupt for debts which he was not compellable to discharge. (R. v. Cole, 1 Ld. Raym. 443; 12 Mod. 243, S. C.)

Baron Court.

What.

Its jurisdiction.

THE Court Baron is a Court which every lord of the manor (anciently called a baron) hath within the precinct of that manor. The business thereof is to inquire of matters concerning the lord and tenant in their civil capacity only, as of the death of tenants since the last Court, of alienations, surrenders, encroachments, trespasses, escheats, forfeitures, and such like. But with this Court is frequently held, by grant or prescription, a Court Leet; the jurisdiction whereof extendeth to all criminal matters within the precinct, for the preservation of the Queen's peace; for which see "Leet," Vol. III.

Liability of steward of.

The steward of a court baron is a judicial officer; and trespass will not lie against him, where the regular bailiff of the court, by mistake, took the goods of B. under a precept, commanding him to take in execution the goods of A. (Holroyd v. Breare, 2 B. & Ald. 473; and see Tinsley v. Nassau, M. & M. 52; 2 C. & P. 582, S. C.; Pitcher v. King, 9 Ad. & Ell. 288.) But he would be responsible where he directs the process to bailiffs specially nominated by the party who sues it out, taking an indemnity. (Bradley v. Carr, 3 Scott, N. R. 523.)

Barratry.

What it is.

WHAT it is.]—This word Barratry we have received either from the Danes or Normans, or both; for barrata in the Danish, and baret in the Norman, do equally signify a quarrel or contention.

And a barrator, in legal acceptation, doth signify a common mover, exciter, or maintainer of suits or quarrels, either in courts or in the country. (1 Inst. 368; 1 Hawk. c. 81, s. 1.)

Barratry in another sense is used to denote a fraudulent act of the master or mariners, committed to the prejudice of the owners of the ship; (see Abbott on Ship. 161;) offences of which description are provided against by legislative enactments, which will be found more aptly considered under title "Ships," Vol. V.

A common mover.]—It seems clear that no one can be a barrator in the first sense in respect of one act only; but every indictment for such crime must charge the defendant with being a common barrator. (1 Hawk. c. 85, s. 5; 8 Rep. 36.)

Mover, exciter, or maintainer.]—Yet it seemeth that an attorney is in no danger of being judged guilty of an act of barratry, in respect of his maintaining another in a groundless action, to the commencing whereof he was no way privy. (1 Hawk. c. 81, s. 1.)

Also it hath been holden that a man shall not be judged a barrator in respect of any number of false actions brought by him in his own right; for in such cases he is liable to costs. (1 Hawk. c. 81, s. 4.)

In Courts.]—Either courts of record, or not of record, as in the county, hundred, or other inferior courts. (1 Inst. 368.)

Barratry.

Or in the Country.]—In three manners: 1. In disturbance of the peace. 2. In taking or keeping possession of lands in controversy, not only by force, but also by subtlety and deceit, and most commonly in suppression of truth and right. 3. By false inventions, and sowing calumniations, rumours, and reports, whereby discord and disquiet may grow between neighbours. (1 Inst. 368.)

How punished, &c.

How punished, &c.]—By stat. 34 Edw. III. c. 1, the justices of the peace shall have power to restrain all barrators, and to pursue, arrest, take, and chastise them, according to their trespass or offence.

And although this statute does not create the offence, but supposes it at common law, and only appoints the punishment, yet an indictment of barratry, concluding against the form of the statute, is holden to be good, and agreeable to many precedents. (Burton's case, Cro. Eliz. 148; 1 Hawk. c. 81, s. 10.)

But it hath been resolved that such indictment is not good, without also concluding against the peace; for this is an essential part of it, as being an offence by the common law; (Id. s. 12;) the omission, however, would not be cured after judgment by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 20, post, "Indictment," Vol. III.

And it hath been holden that an indictment of this kind may be good, without alleging the offence at any certain place; because from the nature of the thing, consisting of the repetition of several acts, it must be intended to have happened in several places; for which cause it is said that a trial ought to be by a jury from the body of the county. (Id. s. 11.)

This case, and that of a common scold, seem to be the only offences for which a general indictment will lie, without showing any of the particular facts in the indictment; for barratry is an offence of a complicated nature, consisting in the repetition of divers acts in disturbance of the peace, and it would be too prolix to enumerate them in the indictment; and therefore experience hath settled it to be sufficient to charge a man generally as a common barrator, and before the time to give the defendant a note of the particular matters which are intended to be proved against him; for otherwise it will be impossible to prepare a defence against so general and uncertain a charge, which may be proved by such a multiplicity of different instances; and therefore the court generally will not suffer the prosecution to go on in the trial of the indictment, without such note being given to the defendant. (1 Hawk. c. 81, s. 13; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 59; J'Anson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 754.)

As to the kind and manner of punishment, it is said that if the offender be a common person, he shall be fined and imprisoned, and bound to his good behaviour, and if he be of any profession relating to the law, he ought also to be further punished, by being disabled to practise for the future. (1 Hawk. c. 81, s. 14.)

And by stat. 12 Geo. I. c. 29, s. 4, made perpetual by 21 Geo. II. c. 3, if any person who hath been convicted of common barratry shall practise as an attorney or solicitor, he shall be transported for fourteen years.

I. Who a Bastard.

Who a bastard. Where no marriage.

A bastard by our English laws is one that is not only begotten, but born out of lawful matrimony. The civil and canon laws do not allow a child to remain a bastard if the parents afterwards intermarry; and herein they differ most materially from our law; which, though not so strict as to require that the child should be begotten; yet makes it an indispensable condition to make it legitimate, that it shall be born after lawful wedlock. (1 Bla. Com. 454; 2 Inst. 96.)

Birth after marriage.

If a woman grossly enceinte marry, it is the child of the husband; for when they testify their consent by a public marriage before the birth of the child, it is a public acknowledgment that the child is his, for at that time the child is one with the mother, and therefore in taking the mother, he takes the child with her. (1 Roll. Abr. 358; 1 Inst. 244; and see per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 207, 208, S. C.; post, 374.)

Birth after death of husband.

As all children born before matrimony are bastard, so are all children born so long after the death of the husband, that by the usual course of gestation they could not be begotten by him. But this being a matter of some uncertainty, the law is not exact as to a few days. (Alsop v. Bowtrell, Cro. Jac. 541.)

II. Proof of Illegitimacy.

Proof of void marriage.

Although there be an actual marriage, the marriage may be shown to be void, and the illegitimacy established, by a prior marriage, want of age, want of reason, want of consent of parent or guardian, where such consent is necessary, or the non-observance of the solemnities required by the Marriage Act, or by a divorce a vinculo matrimonii. (See "Marriage," Vol. V.)

Presumption of legitimacy.

Children born during lawful marriage are presumed to be legitimate, but this presumption may be removed by proof of their illegitimacy.

Disproof of it.

We will consider how the presumption of legitimacy may be removed;—first, in cases where the husband is alive when the child is born;—secondly, when he is dead before it is born;—and lastly, by what witnesses it may be rebutted.

1st. When husband alive at birth.

1st. Proof in Cases where Husband alive at Birth.]—If the husband has had actual access to the wife, the issue will be legitimate, although the woman be proved to have been ever so unfaithful to the nuptial bed. (R. v. Brown, 2 Stra. 811; Cope v. Cope, 5 C. & P. 608; 1 M. & Rob. 269, S. C.)

By want of access.

Access will in general be presumed where there has been an opportunity for it, even though there has been a voluntary separation between husband and wife, and it generally requires strong and difficult evidence to show it has not taken place. (R. v Luffe, 8 East, 207; per Sir J. Leach, in Head v. Head, 1 Sim. & St. 154; 1 Turner, 139; S. C. St. George and St. Margaret, 1 Salk. 123.)

2. Proof of Illegitimacy.

Formerly, indeed, if the husband were within the four seas, no proof of non-access to his wife was admitted, but the child was deemed to be his: but as this notion was built on no rational foundation, it is now departed from; and though the husband and wife are both in England, if there be sufficient proof that he had no access to her, the child will be a bastard. This was determined in the case of Pendrell v. Pendrell, 2 Stra. 925; Andr. 9; which was an issue out of Chancery to try whether the plaintiff were the heir at law of one Thomas Pendrell. It was agreed by court and counsel, on the trial at Guildhall, before Lord Chief Justice Raymond, that the old doctrine of being within the four seas was not to take place, but the jury were at liberty to consider of the point of access, which they did, and found against the plaintiff. And the Court of Chancery acquiesced in the determination.

Wife living in adultery.

The mere circumstance of the wife living notoriously in adultery is not sufficient proof of the illegitimacy of a child born during that period. And therefore, where, during the life of the husband, the wife married and lived with another person, and had children, who were christened and always called by his name, but there was no legal evidence as to access or non-access by the husband before the birth of such children: it was considered that the sessions were not warranted in finding that the children were illegitimate. (Reg. v. Inhabitants of Mansfield, 1 Gale & D. 7; 1 Ad. & Ell. (N. S.) 44, S. C.; and see Bury v. Phillpot, 2 Mylne & K. 349.)

Access may be rebutted:

But access is not to be conclusively presumed merely because the parties are within such a distance as to render it possible. (Id.; and see Clark v. Maynard, 6 Maddox, 364.)

by circumstantial evidence.

In a recent case, where a husband and wife, after living together for ten years, and having one child, agreed to separate; they accordingly afterwards lived apart, but within such distance as afforded them opportunities of sexual intercourse, the husband not being impotent: it was held, that the presumption of law in favour of the legitimacy of a child begotten and born of the wife during the separation, may be rebutted not only by evidence to show that the husband had not sexual intercourse with her, but also by evidence of their conduct: such as that the wife was living in adultery; that she concealed the birth of the child from the husband, and declared to him that she never had such child; that the husband disclaimed all knowledge of the child, and acted up to his death as if no such child was in existence: and also that the wife's paramour aided in concealing the child, reared and educated it as his own, and left it all his property by his will. (Morris v. Davis, 5 Clark & F. 163; 1 Mood. & Rob. 275; and see Goodright v. Saul, 4 T. R. 356; Pendrell v. Pendrell, 2 Stra. 925; B. N. P. 113.)

So proof that the husband left Norwich and went to reside in London, that his wife remained behind and lived with another man as his wife for years, during which time the child in question was born; that this child always went by the adulterer's name, and was reputed illegitimate in the family; has been held sufficient evidence of illegitimacy, though it did not clearly appear where the real husband had been from the time of conception to that of delivery. (Thompson v. Saul, 4 T. R. 356.)

Husband beyond seas.

But now non-access may be established by showing that the child was conceived and born when the husband continued beyond the four seas; (R. v. Alberton, 1 Ld. Raym. 395; 2 Salk. 483, S. C.; Co. Lit. 244;) but he need not be proved to have been so absent during the active period of gestation. (R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 207.) So also proof of the husband's being beyond seas until within a fortnight of his wife's delivery, the child will be considered a bastard. (R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 193; R. v. Maidstone, 12 East, 550.) And this point has been since established by the opinion of the judges in the case of a claim to the Earldom of Banbury, which involved a question of legitimacy in the person from whom the claimant derived his title. (Case of the Banbury Claim of Peerage, 2 Selw. N. P. 731; S. P. reported in 1 Sim. & Stuart's Rep. 153.) The case of the Banbury

Peerage was much cited in the case of Head v. Head, 1 Turner's Ch. Rep. 141; 1 Sim. & Stuart's Rep. 159.)

2. Proof of Illegitimacy.

Divorce.

Proof of a divorce à mensa et thoro will be primâ facie evidence of non-access, for obedience to the ecclesiastical sentence will be presumed; (St. George v. St. Margaret, 1 Salk. 128; 1 Bla. Com. 457; B. N. P. 112;) but such primâ facie evidence may be rebutted by proof of access. (Id.)

Physical impossibility.

Proof of physical impossibility on the part of the husband to procreate the child will be sufficient proof of its illegitimacy; as if the husband be only eight years of age; (1 Roll. Abr. 359;) or if he is diseased, infirm, or bed-ridden. (Foscraft's case, 1 Roll. Abr. 359; 1 Bott, 445; R. v. Cuff, 8 East, 200.) In Lomas v. Holmden, 2 Stra. 940, the defendants to prove illegitimacy were admitted to give evidence of inability from a bad habit of body. But their evidence not going to an impossibility, but an improbability only, that was not thought sufficient. (And see per Lord Ellenborough, R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 207.)

Direct proof of non-access.

Direct Proof of non-access will of course be sufficient to establish the illegitimacy. (R. v. St. Bride, 1 Stra. 51; Pendrell v. Pendrell, 2 Stra. 925, 1073; R. v. Maidstone, 12 East, 550; Morris v. Davies, supra.)

2d. Where husband dead at birth.

2dly. Proof in Cases where Husband Dead at Birth.]—It is a general rule, that if the child comes into the world within the usual period of gestation, it is to be considered legitimate; if beyond that period, illegitimate. (Radwell's case, Co. Litt. 124 b.)

"The usual period of gestation is nine calendar months, but there is very commonly a difference of one, two, or three weeks. A child may be born alive at any time from three months, but we have seen none born with powers of coming to manhood or of being reared before seven months or near that time; at six months it cannot be. I have known a woman bear a living child in a perfectly natural way, fourteen days later than nine calendar months; and I believe two women to have been delivered of a child alive in a natural way, above ten calendar months from the hour of conception." (Harg. & But. Co. Lit. 123 b. Information from Dr. Hunter. And see title "Abortion," ante, 10.)

In a case where the wife was a lewd woman, and she was delivered of a child forty weeks and ten days after the death of the husband, it was held legitimate. (Hale's MSS.; Stark. Evid. Part IV. 221, n. a. So where the child was born forty weeks and eleven days after the death of the first husband. (Hale's MSS.; Alsop v. Bowtrell, Cro. Jac. 541; Godb. 281.)

If a man die, and his widow soon after marry again, and a child is born within such time as renders it dubious, from the course of nature, to which husband it belongs, the issue is said to be more than ordinarily legitimate, and may, upon arriving at the years of discretion, choose which of the fathers it pleases. (1 Bott, 444.) But the question as to which is its father is for a jury to decide on. (Hale's MSS; Cro. Jac. 615; Litt. Rep. 177.)

3d. Who may prove illegitimacy, and how.

3dly. What Witnesses may prove Illegitimacy, and how.]—Any persons usually competent may be called to prove the illegitimacy.

The father and mother may be called to prove the legitimacy, (Lomax v. Lomax, C. T. H. 380; B. N. P. 241; Pendrell v. Pendrell, 2 Stra. 925,) though not always to prove the illegitimacy.

Father's evidence.

In St. Peter's v. Old Swynford, 2 Sess. Cas. 298, the father was permitted to bastardise the son; the chief justice declaring that he saw no reason why the father should be thought an incompetent witness, for his evidence in that case could no way discharge himself, but he would remain liable to maintain the bastard. But he cannot be called to prove non-access (Post, 374.)

Mother's evidence.

So in the case of R. v. Bramley, 6 T. R. 330, Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "The evidence of the mother to prove that she and her supposed husband were never legally married was certainly admissible, though the justices at the sessions were to judge of the effect of it. In the case of R. v. St. Peter's, (Burr. S. C. 25, and Bull. N. P. 112,) it was expressly held that the supposed husband was a competent witness to disprove the marriage. There are also many other cases in which it has been decided that the parents may be called with respect to the legitimacy of their issue; and if they may be called to prove that they are legitimate children, there is no reason why they should be considered as incompetent when called upon to prove that the children are illegitimate. But in all these cases such testimony is open to great observation."

But where the child is born in wedlock, the non-access of the husband ought to be proved otherwise than upon the wife's oath; though she may on account of the necessity of the case prove she had criminal intercourse with other men. (R. v. Reading, 2 Sess. Cas. 175.)—In that case the defendant Reading was adjudged, by an order of bastardy, to be the putative father of a bastard child begotten of the wife of one Almont, of Sherborn. The said woman, on the appeal, gave evidence that the said Reading had carnal knowledge of her body in or about August, 1732, and several times since; and that her husband had no access to her from May, 1731, to the time of her examination in that court, being the 3d of October, 1733, and that the said Reading was the father of the said child. And the question, on the removal of the same into the Queen's Bench, was, whether the wife in this case should be admitted as a witness for or against her husband, and to bastardise her own child? And the whole court were of opinion, that the wife could be a witness to no other fact but that of incontinence, and that this she must be admitted to be witness to from the necessity of the thing; but not to the absence of her husband, which might properly be proved by other witnesses; and they likened it to the case of hue and cry, where the person robbed shall be admitted a witness of the fact of robbery, but not to prove any other matter relating thereto, as in what hundred the place was, and the like, because they may be proved by others. (And see R. v. Stourton, 5 Adol. & Ell. 180.)

In Goodright d. Stevens v. Moss, 2 Cowp. 591, Lord Mansfield, C. J., laid it down as a rule founded in decency, morality and policy, that where a child appears to have been born in wedlock, the evidence of the parents, especially of the mother, who is the offending party, is inadmissible to prove the non-access of her husband, and bastardise the issue. And see R. v. Sowton, 5 Ad. & Ell. 180, in which this doctrine was confirmed; and it was also held that neither the husband nor the wife can be examined or cross-examined as to collateral facts for the purpose of proving non-access.

And it has been held, that a woman cannot give evidence of the non-access of her husband to bastardise her issue, although he be dead at the time when the wife is examined, for the rule is grounded upon the general principle of public policy affecting the children born during marriage, as well as the parties themselves. (R. v. Kea, 11 East, 132.)

Order made as well on oath of wife as otherwise good.

In the case of R. v. Bedall, Andr. 8; 2 Stra, 1076, S. C., the order reciting that on the examination of the mother, and on other proof, it appeared that her husband had no access to her, was held to be good; for there the woman's oath is not set forth as the only evidence, but other proof, which must be intended legal proof.

R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 193. By an order of bastardy, dated Aug. 20, 1806, it was inter alia stated, "whereas it appeared unto us the said justices, as well upon the oath of the said Mary Taylor as otherwise, that her husband hath been beyond the seas, and that she did not see her said husband, nor had access to him from the 9th of April, 1804, until the 29th of June last past; and whereas it hath also appeared to us, the said justices, as well upon the complaint, &c. as upon the oath of the said M. T. that she the said M. T. on or about the 13th of July now last past was delivered of a male bastard child, in the said parish of B., and that the said male bastard child is likely to become chargeable, &c. we, therefore, upon examination of the causes and circumstances of the premises, as well upon the oath of the said M. T. as otherwise, do hereby adjudge, &c." There were three objections made to this order, viz. 1st, that the wife was admitted to prove the non-access of her husband; 2dly, that this being the child of a married woman, the justices had no jurisdiction to make an order of affiliation, unless the child appeared to have been actually chargeable, and not merely likely to become so; 3dly, that the non-access of the husband was not proved to have continued during the whole time of the wife's pregnancy, which was necessary to bastardise the issue. It was held by the Court, that the words "as otherwise" should be intended as evidence given upon oath: that it did not appear to what particular facts the wife deposed, or what was proved by other evidence; and then the rule laid down in R. v. Bedall applied, that if there were other witnesses besides the wife, and she were competent to prove any part of the case, the Court would intend, in support of an order framed like the present, that she was examined only as to those facts which she was competent to prove; as to the second objection, it is a consequence which follows of course from establishing the bastardy of the child that is born out of lawful matrimony. A child born by adulterous intercourse is as much within the provisions of the act of Geo. II. as one which is born of a single woman. As to the third objection, that as it appeared that the husband returned within access of the wife about a fortnight before the child was born, he must be presumed to be the father of it: by the law of the land no man can be a bastard who is born after marriage, unless for special matter. The fact of access or non-access may be gone into. Circumstances which show a natural impossibility that the husband could be the father of the child of which the wife is delivered, whether arising from his being under the age of puberty, or from his labouring under disability occasioned by natural infirmity, or from the length of time elapsed since his death, are grounds on which the illegitimacy of the child may be founded; that on the ground of improbability, however strong, they (the Court) should not venture to proceed, but only upon such as showed absolute physical impossibility; that the general presumption would prevail, except a case of plain natural impossibility were shown, and to establish as an exception a case of such extreme impossibility as the present could not do harm.

2. Proof of Illegitimacy.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 72, enacts, that no order of maintenance shall be made on the father unless the evidence of the mother of the bastard is corroborated in some material particular by other testimony. (See post, 377.)

The mother's testimony must be corroborated.

The parent's declaration, on oath or otherwise, may be adduced as evidence after their decease, of the fact of marriage and of the time of birth; (Anon. 12 Vin. 247; B. N. P. 294; R. v. Bramley, 6 T. R. 330; Vowels v. Young, 15 Ves. jun. 148;) but not in their lifetimes, except for the purpose of contradicting them; (see 2 Stra. 925; B. N. P. 113;) and the declarations of the wife are not admissible to prove her son not to be the son of her husband but of another man; (R. v. Cope, 1 M. & Rob. 275.) Nor can the declaration of a father or mother be received after their deaths to prove the want of access, so as to bastardise a child born during the coverture, for they could not be examined to the fact if alive. (1 Nolan, 335.)

Declaration by parents and others.

The declarations or memorandums of deceased members or relations of the family, or perhaps of others, such for instance as a surgeon living in the habits of intimacy with them, may be admitted in evidence. (See Higham v. Ridgway, 10 East, 120; 3 T. R. 723; B. N. P. 295; 1 M. & Selw. 689; 2 Vin. Abr. Evid. T. b, 91.)

A party charged as a reputed father of a bastard cannot be compelled to give evidence tending to prove the fact. (See R. v. St. Mary's Nottingham, 13 East, 58, n.)

Compelling parents to give evidence.

But justices have, from the power given them to examine in a case of bastardy, an incidental power to compel the woman to answer, and may commit her if she refuses. (See R. v. Jackson, 1 T. R. 655.) And by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, post, 379, justices may enforce the attendance of witnesses.

III. Maintenance of Bastards at Common Law.

At common law the father is not liable for his child's support or his debts, unless he enter into some express or implied promise to become so, for it considers moral duties of this nature, like others of imperfect obligation, as Maintenance of, at common law.

3. Maintenance of.

better left in their performance to the impulse of nature; and therefore a third person who may relieve the child, even from absolute want, cannot sue the father for remuneration, unless he has given the child authority to contract the debt, or has himself contracted it. (Mortimer v. Wright, 6 Mee. & W. 482; Rolfe v. Abbott, 6 Car. & P. 286; Urmston v. Newcomen, 4 Ad. & Ell. 899; Clements v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 58; Seaborne v. Maddy, 9 C. & P. 497.) It is mainly a question for a jury to decide on, whether the father authorised the supply of the articles, or the incurring of the subject-matter of the claim. (See Law v. Wilkins, 6 Ad. & Ell. 718; 1 Nev. & Per. 697, S. C.) (See the cases and law collected post, title "Children.") In Furillio v. Crowther, (4 D. & R. M. C. 1; 7 D. & R. 612, S. C.,) where the putative father had made various payments for maintenance, and then refused to continue its support until the mother obtained an order of filiation, it was held, that no action would lie at the suit of the mother for arrears of maintenance.

A parent, however, may, under circumstances, be indicted at common law for not supplying an infant with necessaries, &c. (See R. v. Friend, Russ. C. C. 20; R. v. Ridley, 2 Campb. 650; ante, 195.) And by a bill now before parliament it is proposed to impose a penalty of 10*l.* on persons maltreating bastards. If passed into a law, it will be found in the Addenda to this work, Vol. VI. under title "Bastards."

Bastards born before the 14th August, 1834.

Where a bastard child is born, for whose support the parents neglect to provide necessaries, the parish officers are obliged to do it without an order of justices for that purpose. (Hags v. Bryant, 1 H. Black. 253.)

IV. Maintenance of Bastards by Statute Law (a).

As regards the maintenance of bastards born before the passing of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, (14th August, 1834,) two justices were, by the 18 Eliz. c. 3, s. 2, empowered by an order of filiation, to compel the putative father or mother, or both, to pay a weekly sum for the child's maintenance; and by the 49 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 3, the order might be enforced by a justice committing the party disobeying it to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for three months, unless the sum was sooner paid.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 69, repeals or supersedes all the prior

(a) An act of parliament will very probably be passed this session (7 & 8 Vict.) which will very materially alter the law upon this branch of the subject. It is proposed by it to take away the power of making an order of bastardy on the putative father except as therein provided. The putative father may be summoned to appear before a petty sessions, on the application of the mother, and the justices at such sessions may, after the birth of the child, make an order on him for the maintenance and costs, and enforce the same by distress and commitment; such application will have to be made within forty days from the service of the summons after the birth of the child. The money payable under the order is to be paid to the mother, or to a person appointed by the justices. The mother is to be made punishable under the vagrant act. Officers of parishes or unions are not to receive money under the order or interfere in any respect. Proceedings may be adopted against the putative father in case of the death or incapacity of the mother. Penalties are to be imposed for promoting the marriage of a mother of a bastard, or for improperly misapplying the monies ordered to be paid for the maintenance, or for maltreating a bastard. Orders existing at the time of the passing of the act are not to be affected, but orders made before 14 August, 1834, are to cease on 1st January, 1849. Clerks to justices are annually to make a return of summonses and orders, &c. to the clerk of the peace, who is to transmit copies thereof to the secretary of state, with a list of appeals. The act, if passed before the publication of this work, will be found in the Addenda, title "Bastards," Vol. VI.

legislative enactments respecting bastards born after the passing of that act, and as questions can but rarely arise respecting the maintenance or affiliation of bastards born before the passing of that act, it is considered not worth while to encumber this work with any notice of them. They will be found considered in the 26th edition of it.

4. Maintenance of.

By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 71, "Every child which shall be born a bastard after the passing of this act shall have and follow the settlement of the mother of such child until such child shall attain the age of sixteen, or shall acquire a settlement in its own right, and such mother, so long as she shall be unmarried or a widow, shall be bound to maintain such child as a part of her family until such child shall attain the age of sixteen; and all relief granted to such child while under the age of sixteen shall be considered as granted to such mother: provided always, that such liability of such mother as aforesaid shall cease on the marriage of such child, if a female."

Bastards born after that time.

Mother bound to maintain.

Sect. 57. "Every man who from and after the passing of this act shall marry a woman having a child or children at the time of such marriage, whether such child or children be legitimate or illegitimate, shall be liable to maintain such child or children as a part of his family, and shall be chargeable with all relief, or the cost price thereof, granted to or on account of such child or children until such child or children shall respectively attain the age of sixteen, or until the death of the mother of such child or children; and such child or children shall, for the purposes of this act, be deemed a part of such husband's family accordingly."

When she marries husband to maintain them (a).

If the mother becomes unable to maintain the child, and therefore it becomes chargeable to the parish, then the putative father may be compelled to reimburse the parish for its maintenance and support, on application to the sessions for that purpose. This is provided for by the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, ss. 72, 73, 74, 75 and 76, as altered by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85. We will proceed to notice these provisions.

Where she is unable to maintain them.

By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 72, "When any child shall hereafter be born a bastard, and shall by reason of the inability of the mother of such child to provide for its maintenance become chargeable to any parish, the overseers or guardians of such parish, or the guardians of any union in which such parish may be situate, may, if they think proper, after diligent inquiry as to the father of such child, apply to the next general quarter sessions of the peace within the jurisdiction of which such parish or union shall be situate, [now by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, s. 1, post, 379, the application can be made only to justices in special or petty sessions,] after such child shall have become chargeable, for an order upon the person whom they shall charge with being the putative father of such child to reimburse such parish or union for its maintenance and support: and the court to which such application shall be made shall proceed to hear evidence thereon, and if it shall be satisfied, after hearing both parties, that the person so charged is really and in truth the father of such child, it shall make such order upon such person in that respect as to such court shall appear to be just and reasonable under all the circumstances of the case: provided always, that no such order shall be made unless the evidence of the mother of such bastard child shall be corroborated in some material particular by other testimony to the satisfaction of such court: provided also, that such order shall in no case exceed the actual expense incurred or to be incurred for the maintenance and support of such bastard child while so chargeable, and shall continue in force only until such child shall attain the age of seven years, if he shall so long live: provided also that no part of the monies paid by such putative father in pursuance of such order shall at any time be paid to the mother of such bastard child, nor in any way be applied to the maintenance and support of such mother."

In that case, on application of overseers, &c. putative father may be ordered to maintain them.

Mother's evidence to be corroborated.

What expense to be allowed.

How long to continue

Monies paid not applicable to support of mother.

Sect. 73. "No such application shall be heard at such sessions unless fourteen [by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 81, s. 1, post, 379, seven] days' notice shall have been given under the hands of such overseers or guardians to the person intended to be charged with being the father of such child of such intended application; and in case there shall not, previously to such sessions, have been sufficient time to give such notice, the hearing of such application shall be deferred to the next ensuing general quarter sessions: provided always, that whenever such application shall be heard, the costs of the maintenance of such bastard child shall, in case the court shall think fit to make an order thereon, be calculated from the birth of such bastard child, if such birth shall have taken place within six calendar months previous to such application being heard; but if such birth shall have taken place more than six calendar months previously to such application being heard, then from the day of the commencement of six calendar months next preceding the hearing of such application: provided also, that if upon the hearing of such application the court shall not think fit to make any order thereon, it shall order and direct that the full costs and charges incurred by the person so intended to be charged in resisting such application shall be paid by such overseers or guardians."

No application to be heard without previous notice.

If party charged does not appear, justices may nevertheless proceed.

Sect. 74. "If such person so intended to be charged shall not appear by himself or his attorney at the time when such application shall come on to be heard before such court, according to such notice, such court shall nevertheless proceed to hear the same, unless such overseers or guardians shall produce an agreement under the hand of such person to abide by such order as such court shall make thereon without the hearing of evidence by such court: provided always, that such court may, notwithstanding such agreement, require that evidence shall be given in support of such application, if it thinks fit, before such order is made."

Party summoned, if suspected of intending to abscond, may be required to enter into recognizance for appearance.

Sect. 75. "Whenever such overseers or guardians shall have determined to make such application as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for one justice of the peace, at the request of such overseers or guardians, to summon the person so intended to be charged with being the father of such bastard child to appear before him; and if such justice shall be satisfied that such person has any intention to abscond or keep out of the way, in order to avoid the consequences of such application, such justice may require such person to enter into a recognizance to appear and answer thereto, and in case such person shall refuse or neglect to enter into such recognizance, may commit such person to the gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or division within which such parish shall be situate, until he shall enter into such recognizance, or until such application shall be heard."

When payments get into arrear, putative father may be proceeded against by distress or attachment of wages.

Sect. 76. "If at any time after the expiration of one calendar month after an order shall have been made in pursuance of such application it shall appear to one justice, upon the oath of any one of such overseers or guardians, that the payments directed to be made by such order have not been made according thereto and are in arrear, it shall be lawful for such justice or any other justice by warrant under his hand and seal to cause such putative father of such bastard child to be brought before two justices of the peace; and in case such putative father shall refuse or neglect to make payment of such sum of money as shall appear to such justices to be due from him under such order, together with the costs of apprehension, it shall be lawful for such or any two justices to proceed to recover such sum and costs by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such putative father, or by attaching the wages of such putative father, for the recovery of such sum and costs, in the same manner as wages may be attached under the provisions of this act."

2 & 3 Vict. c. 85.

By the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, intituled "An Act to enable Justices of the Peace in Petty Sessions to make Orders for the Support of Bastard Children," [26th August, 1839,] reciting that it is expedient to give more speedy and effectual means for obtaining orders upon the putative fathers of bastard children for their support and maintenance, it is enacted, "That after the passing of this act, when any child which has been born a bastard since the passing of an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late majesty, intituled 'An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales,' and with respect to which no application shall have been made to any court of general quarter sessions under the provisions of the said act, shall, by reason of the inability of the mother of such child to provide for its maintenance, become chargeable to any parish, the guardians of any parish, or of the union in which any parish may be situate, or if there shall be no such guardians then the overseers of such parish, may, if they think proper, at any time within three calendar months after such child shall have become chargeable, apply to the justices of the peace holding any special or petty session in and for the division or borough within which such union or parish, or any part thereof, shall be situated, for an order upon the person whom they shall charge with being the putative father of such child, to reimburse such union or parish for its maintenance and support; and the justices then and there assembled, not being less than two, shall proceed with respect to the application, and shall have all the powers and duties in regard thereunto which are given to the court of general quarter sessions by the act 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76; and all enactments in the said act relating to the court of general quarter sessions shall be taken to apply to the said justices in special or petty session, except that the notice to the person intended to be charged with being the father of the child need not be given more than seven days, instead of fourteen days, before the session at which the application shall be heard; and after the passing of this act it shall not be lawful to make any such application to any court of general quarter sessions, nor shall any court of general quarter sessions have any authority to make any order upon any such application."

4. Maintenance of.

2 & 3 Vict. c. 85.

Seven days' notice of application to be given to the putative father.

Sect. 2. "That any justice of the peace, upon the request of either party, may summon any witness to appear and give evidence upon the matter of any such charge, and by warrant under his hand and seal may require any person to be brought before him who shall neglect or refuse to appear to give evidence at the time and place appointed in such summons, proof upon oath being first given of personal service of the summons upon the person against whom such warrant shall be granted, and that the reasonable expenses of attendance were paid or tendered to such person; and the justices before whom any such charge shall be heard may commit any person coming or brought before them who shall refuse to give evidence to any house of correction within their jurisdiction, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any time not exceeding fourteen days, or until such person shall sooner submit himself to be examined; and in case of such submission the order of any such justice shall be a sufficient warrant for the discharge of such person."

Justices may enforce attendance of witnesses.

Sect. 3. "Provided, that if the person whom the guardians or overseers shall charge with being the putative father of such child shall declare to the justices in such special or petty session that he is desirous that the charge shall be heard and determined at the quarter sessions of the peace, and shall then and there enter into a recognizance, with two sufficient sureties, conditioned personally to appear at the quarter sessions of the peace then next or next but one ensuing, as the justices shall think fit, to answer to the said charge, and to abide the judgment of the court at such sessions, and to pay all the costs incurred by the said guardians and overseers in bringing such charge before the said court in case the court shall adjudge him to be the putative father of such child, then the justices in special or petty session shall not proceed further to hear the charge, but shall take such recognizance and transmit it to the clerk of the peace; and in such case all further proceedings in the matter of such charge shall be had before the said court of quarter sessions as if this act had not been made."

Parties charged may enter into recognizance to try the charge at quarter sessions.

Sect. 4. "That the words 'parish,' 'guardian,' 'overseer,' and 'justice' in this act shall be deemed to have the same meaning as in the said act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his said late majesty."

Meaning of certain terms.

In what Cases the putative Father may be compelled to maintain the Child.] —When the child has, by reason of the inability of its mother to maintain it, become chargeable to the parish, then he may be compelled by an order of justices in special or petty sessions to reimburse the parish. (4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 72, ante, 377.)

In what cases the putative father may be compelled to maintain the child.

4. Maintenance of

If the mother marry, the husband will be bound to maintain the child until the age of sixteen, or until the death of the mother. And by virtue of the 57th section, ante, 377, the putative father of a child, though born before the passing of the act, whose mother is married to another person, is no longer liable on an order of justices for the maintenance of such child, at least whilst the husband is of ability to maintain it. (Lang v. Spicer, 1 M. & W. 129.) And it would seem from what fell from Baron Parke in that case, that the affirmative words of the 57th section amounted to a repeal of the former statutes relating to bastardy, and destroyed altogether the effect of the order of filiation during the marriage of the mother.

A soldier, though in actual service, is not it seems protected by the Mutiny Act from the provisions of the act. (R. v. Bowen, 5 T. R. 156; R. v. Archer, 2 T. R. 156.)

In what time the application must be made.

Within what Time the Application against the Father must be made.]—It must be made within three calendar months after the child has become chargeable, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, s. 1, ante, 379.

By whom application to be made.

By whom Application to be made.]—The application for the order on the putative father is directed, by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, s. 1, (ante, 379,) to be made by the guardians of any parish, or of the union in which any parish may be situate, or if there shall be no such guardians, then by the overseers of such parish." (R. v. Justices of Wilts, 12 Ad. & Ell. 793.) And by sect. 4, the words "parish," "guardian," "overseer," and "justice," shall have the same meaning as in 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76. Where an order recited that the application had been made by the "guardians and overseers" of a parish which formed part of a union, it was held that the order was not bad, and that the word "overseers" might be rejected as immaterial. (R. v. Goodall, 2 Dowl. N. S. 382.)

The interpretation clause of the 4 & 5 Will IV. s. 109, enacts, that the word "overseer" shall be construed to mean and include overseers of the poor, churchwardens, (so far as they are authorised or required by law to act in the management or relief of the poor, or in the collection or distribution of the poor rate,) assistant overseer, or any other subordinate officer, whether paid or unpaid, in any parish or union, who shall be employed therein in carrying that act or the laws for the relief of the poor into execution. And the word "guardian" shall be construed to mean and include any visitor, governor, director, manager, acting guardian, vestryman, or other officer in a parish or union, appointed or entitled to act as a manager of the poor and in the distribution or ordering of the relief to the poor from the poor rate, under any general or local act of parliament. In a case before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, where parishes were united under the 22 Geo. III. c. 83, the guardian thereby appointed was substituted in the overseer's place, and one who was de facto such, being so received and acknowledged by the parish, though not legally appointed, was held competent to make the complaint. (See R. v. Martyr, 13 East, 55.) In Exp. Martin, (6 B. & C. 80; 9 D. & R. 65, S. C.,) before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. it was made a question whether a clerk to the guardians of the poor was the proper person to make the complaint, and whether it ought not to be made by the guardians themselves; the point was not decided. (See "Notice of Application," post, 381.)

To what justices application to be made.

To what Justices to be made.]—It will be seen that by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, s. 1, ante, 379, the application for the order on the putative father must now in every case be made to the justices in special or petty sessions in the first instance, and not to the general quarter sessions as directed by sect. 72 of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76. But the charge may be removed from the special or petty sessions to the quarter sessions, in the manner provided by sect 3 of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, ante, 379, when the further proceedings shall be conducted there "as if the latter act had not been made."

The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, s. 1, authorises the guardians of any parish, or of the union in which such parish is situate, or if there shall be no such guardians, then the overseers of such parish, to apply to "the justices of the peace holding any special or petty sessions in and for the division or borough within which such union or parish, or any part thereof, shall be situated," for an order on the putative father. Difficulties have arisen in the construction of this part of the section as to the justices to whom the application should be made. And where a poor law union consisted of several places, over which different divisions of justices had jurisdiction, it was doubted whether a bastardy order could be made by one division, where the child has become chargeable in another. And an application having been made for such an order, and the justices of one division declining to make it, on the ground that they had no jurisdiction in another, a rule for a mandamus to compel them to make it was discharged. (Ex parte Wallingford Union Guardians, 9 Dowl. P. C. 987.) The safest course to pursue, where a union extends into several divisions or counties, is to make the application to those justices who have jurisdiction over the parish to which the child has become chargeable, or within whose jurisdiction the cause of complaint arose.

4. Maintenance of.

Before the passing of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, it was held that the enactment of sect. 72 of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, requiring the application to be made to the next general quarter sessions after the child becomes chargeable, was imperative, and must be taken to mean the next practicable sessions after the child becomes chargeable. (R. v. Heath, 5 Ad. & Ell. 343; R. v. Justices of Oxfordshire, 6 N. & M. 351; and see R. v. Justices of Carnarvonshire, 5 N. & M. 364.) But the order need not have shown on the face of it that the application was made at the next practicable general quarter sessions. (Reg. v. Lewis, 8 Ad. & Ell. 881; see ante, "Appeal.")

Notice to father of application.

Notice of Application to Father.]—The application to the special or petty sessions cannot be heard unless seven days' notice has been given, under the hands of the guardians, or if no guardians, under the hands of the overseers. to the putative father of such intended application; and it must be given within three calendar months after the child has become chargeable. (2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, s. 1; 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 73, ante, 377.) And it lies upon them to show that proper notice was given, and an objection to the notice is not waived though the father appear before the justices to oppose the application in obedience to the notice, provided he raises the objection at the time. (R. v. Justices of Wilts, 12 Ad. & Ell. 793.)

The notice must be signed by a majority of the board of guardians (being three at least, 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 38, Vol. IV.) or by the majority of the overseers of the parish, including the churchwardens in their character of overseers, where there are no guardians. (Reg. v. Justices of Wiltshire, 4 Per. & D. 406; 12 Ad. & Ell. 793, S. C.; Reg. v. Justices of Cambridgeshire, 7 Ad. & Ell. 480; Reg. v. James, 10 Ad. & Ell. 423.) But in the case of a township, which was a perpetual curacy, having its own church (where marriages and burials are performed) and its own churchwardens, raising its own church-rate, maintaining its own poor, and independent of the parish at large in all respects, except paying annually towards the repair of the parish church; the churchwardens of the township are not, by virtue of their office, overseers of the poor, and therefore a notice signed by the overseers only of such a township would now, where there are no guardians, be valid (R. v. Justices of N. R. Yorkshire, 6 Ad. & Ell. 863.)

It is prudent for the purposes of evidence to have both the notice served as well as a duplicate copy signed, and that the witness who swears to the service should also swear to the copy being a copy of that served. Where it appeared that the copy of the notice which was put in evidence at the sessions, in order to prove a service of the notice, had not the names of the overseers, &c. subscribed to it, it was held by the Court of Queen's Bench that the sessions were warranted in dismissing the application for the defect. (R. v. Justices of Carnarvon, post, 382.)

Recognizance, &c. of putative father, suspected of an

Compelling Father to appear—Recognizance, &c.]—If there be reason to believe that the putative father, against whom the affiliation is to be made,

4. Maintenance of.

Intention to abscond to appear.

intends to abscond, to avoid the consequences of such affiliation, a justice may, at the request of the overseers or guardians, summon the party and require him to enter into a recognizance to appear to answer at the sessions, or in default thereof may commit him until he does, or until the application shall be heard. (Sect. 75, ante, 378.) This proceeding is not to be until after the application has been determined on, and therefore it seems not until after he has had notice of the determination; for without such notice, the suspicion of his intending to abscond in order to avoid contingent possibilities, is a violent presumption. (Theobald's Poor Law, 19.) When the recognizance becomes forfeited by the non-appearance, it is estreated as a matter of course without motion of counsel. (See post, "Recognizance," Vol. V.)

Recognizance to appear at quarter sessions.

If the person charged with being the putative father shall desire that the charge should be heard at the quarter sessions, he must enter into a recognizance, with two sufficient sureties, conditioned personally to appear at the quarter sessions then next or next but one, as the justices shall think fit, and such recognizance shall then be transmitted to the clerk of the peace, and the charge heard accordingly. (Sect. 3.)

Where the order of the quarter sessions recited merely the fact of the notice having been served, and the recognizance entered into, the Court refused to entertain any objections to the recognizance or notice. (Reg. v. Goodall, 2 Dowl. N. S. 382.)

Proceedings at the hearing.

Proceedings on hearing—Proofs, &c.]—The putative father either appears by himself or his attorney at the special or petty sessions or not, whichever he does the justices should proceed to hear the application on its being proved that the required seven days' notice has been given; (4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 74.) But if the putative father be desirous that the charge should be heard and determined at the quarter sessions, the justices in special or petty sessions cannot proceed further, but must transfer it to the quarter sessions, on the putative father entering into the proper recognizance. The hearing will then proceed at the quarter sessions in the same manner as at the special or petty sessions. No notice need be given of such hearing. (R. v. Justices of Wilts, 12 Ad. & Ell. 793.)

Under the old law, although it was indispensable that the putative father should be summoned to appear, previously to an order being made upon him, his presence during the mother's examination before the justices out of sessions, was not necessary to the validity of such order. (R. v. Upton Gray, Cald. 308; 1 Bott, 482.)

No proofs necessary if father agrees to an order.

If the overseers or guardians produce an agreement under the hand of the putative father, to abide the order of the justices, they must proceed to hear the case notwithstanding he does not appear by himself or his attorney; and they may make the order without hearing of evidence, further than proof of such signature, and the amount already paid for the child's maintenance for a period not exceeding six months: but notwithstanding such agreement the justices may, if they think fit, require evidence to be given in support of the application. (Sect. 74, ante, 378.)

Proof of notice.

If such agreement is not produced, then the proofs in support of the application must be gone into.

In case the complaint is heard at the petty sessions, proof should be adduced of the service of the notice on the putative father, duly signed, seven days before the application. The appearance of the father before the justices to oppose the application does not waive the necessity for this proof of notice. (R. v. Justices of Carnarvon, 5 Nev. & M. 364.) The notice should be proved by a duplicate copy which had been examined with the original. (See id., and ante, 381.) But where, in pursuance of a notice from the guardians of a union, a party appeared at the petty sessions to answer an application for a bastardy order, and the hearing thereof was, upon his request, referred to the next quarter sessions, he entering into a recognizance to appear there and abide the judgment of the court, and he did appear there accordingly; it is not necessary at the hearing at the quarter sessions to prove the original notice to appear at the petty sessions, nor is any notice from the guardians of their intention to proceed at the quarter sessions required. (Reg. v. Justices of Wiltshire, 4 P. &

D. 406; 12 Ad. & Ell. 793, S. C.) And in another case, where the recognizance recited that notice had been sent to the putative father, this was holden to be a waiver of his right to have the notice proved at the quarter sessions, although no part of the case was entered into at petty sessions, and he merely appeared there for the purpose of declaring his intentions to remove the case. (Reg. v. Stoddart, 1 Gale & D. 654.)

4. Maintenance of.

We have already considered the proofs to be adduced in support of the child being a bastard, (ante, 371.)

Proof of bastardy.

Proof must be adduced of the child having become actually chargeable to the parish, within three calendar months before making the application, from the mother's inability to maintain it.

Chargeability of child.

It must also be proved that the party to whom the notice to appear has been given is the father of the child.

Defendant's being father.

Evidence must also be adduced of the amount already expended for the child's maintenance, not including sums paid to or laid out upon the mother, and of its future probable cost.

Amount of expenditure.

In general the order must be made upon the vivâ voce examination of witnesses, and cannot be founded upon affidavit without such evidence. (R. v. Colbert, Comb. 103; 2 Nol. 292.)

Examination of witnesses must be viva voce.

The mother's testimony, if living, is nearly always resorted to; but though it should nearly always be taken, it is not essential to the order, for it may be made on the evidence of others. (See R. v. St. Mary, Nottingham, 13 East, 57.) If resorted to, it must be corroborated in some material particular by that of some other competent person. This is expressly required by the 72d section of the act, ante, 377; and if not so corroborated the court must dismiss the application. And an order of filiation made upon the oath of the mother, and upon evidence in corroboration thereof, without stating it to be of some material particular, is bad. (Reg. v. Read, 1 Per. & D. 413; 9 Ad. & Ell. 619, S. C.) As to how far the mother can be examined to prove the bastardy, see ante, 373.

The mother's testimony.

We have already seen how far the testimony of the parent is admissible to prove the bastardy, ante, 373, and what is sufficient to prove that fact, ante, 371 to 375. The father's confession of his being the father will suffice to found the order upon him.

Father's testimony.

The bastard himself, if competent in other respects, may be examined on oath to prove circumstantial facts; as that his father, when accused of it, had acknowledged the witness was his child, or that the witness was constantly reputed to be such, or the like. (R. v. St. Mary, Nottingham, 13 East, 57.)

Child's testimony.

The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, s. 2, (ante, 379,) authorises any justice to summon witnesses upon the request of either party; and empowers the justices in special or petty sessions, before whom the charge shall be heard, to commit any person brought before them who shall refuse to give evidence. (See title "Examination," Vol. II.)

Compelling attendance of witnesses.

It seems that the mother or witness refusing to answer a lawful question, may be committed until she or he answer it. (See Billings v. Prince, 2 Bla. Rep. 1017; R. v. Beard, 2 Salk. 278; Exp. Martin, 6 B. & Cres. 80; 9 D. & Ryl. S. C.) It seems questionable whether it is any offence to secrete the woman with her own consent, in order to prevent her giving evidence about the father. (R. v. Chandler, 1 Stra. 612; 2 Ld. Raym. 1368, S. C.)

Commitment for not answering.

A justice might, under the old law, have bound those who procured the putative father or the mother to run away, (so that an order could not be made or performed to their good behaviour,) to be forthcoming at the next general gaol delivery or quarter sessions. (Dalt. c. XI. Bastardy.)

The Order.]—If the justices be satisfied that the person charged is really and in truth the father, they shall make such order upon him as to them shall appear just and reasonable, but not to exceed in any case the actual expense incurred after the birth of the child, and after it became actually chargeable to the parish; that is, incurred for the child alone, not reckoning any sums paid to or laid out for the relief to the mother; or to be incurred

The order.

4 Maintenance of.

while the child remains chargeable; nor to remain in force after the child shall have attained the age of seven. (Sects. 72, 73.) The sum generally ordered to be paid for the future maintenance is 1*s.* 6*d.* or 2*s.*

Form of the order.

The order, it seems, ought to show upon the face of it that it was made upon the complaint of the guardians or overseers, or with their consent, as the fact may be; for upon their complaint alone can the order be made. (Ante, 380; see Reg. v. Justices of Hampshire, 9 Dowl. 175.)

Also, that the putative father has had seven days' previous notice of the application. It may be questionable whether this omission would be cured even by the statement of the appearance of the party; though indeed every intendment should be made in favour of an order of justices. (See R. v. Clegg, 1 Stra. 475; R. v. Clayton, 3 East, 58; 2 Nolan, 299.)

The appearance or absence of the father perhaps need not be averred; (see id.;) and certainly not so when the order is made upon production of an agreement to it signed by the father, and such agreement is stated.

An order made before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, was quashed, because neither the sex of the bastard, nor the name of it was mentioned, only a certain bastard child born of the body of such a woman. (R. v. England, 1 Stra. 503; 1 Bott, 497.)

It ought perhaps to show that the mother had a settlement in the parish, or that she was chargeable to it. (R. v. Justices of Hampshire, 9 Dowl 175.)

It must show that the child is chargeable to the parish by reason of the inability of the mother to maintain it. (See the cases before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76; Comb. 30; Exp. Martin, 6 B. & Cres. 33; 9 D. & R. 65, S. C.; R. v. Hartington, Upper Quarter, 4 M. & Sel. 559; R. v. Matthews, 2 Salk. 475.) But it is sufficient if it state the fact generally. (Reg. v. Lewis, 1 Per. & D. 112; 8 Ad. & Ell. 881, S. C.)

To give jurisdiction to magistrates to make an order of affiliation, under 18 Eliz. c. 3, s. 2, it was necessary that it should be for the relief of the parish in which the illegitimate child was born, and to which it was chargeable. (R v. Wilson, 4 Nev. & M. 243; 2 Ad. & Ell. 230.) And where an order of affiliation, in which the birth of an illegitimate child is alleged to have taken place in A., was confirmed by an order of sessions, subject to a case in which the birth was stated to have occurred in B., to which the putative father had fraudulently removed the mother, who was settled in A.: the order was held bad on the ground (inter alia) that it contained a false recital. (Id.) It was therefore necessary to set forth truly in the order that the child was born in the parish. (Reg. v. Cash, Sett. & Rem 59; R v. Butcher, 1 Stra. 437; 1 Bott, 499; R. v. Childers, 1 Barnard. 326; R. v. Greaves, Nels. Bast.; R. v. Stanley, Cald. 172; 1 Bott, 504; R. v. Fox, 6 T. R. 150; 1 Burn, 26th edit. 367) But this is not now requisite in an order under the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 72.

As to the party charged being the putative father.

An order, before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, must have contained an express adjudication of the party being the putative father of the child. (R. v. Perkasse, 2 Sid. 363; R. v. Pitts, Dougl. 661.) But in an order under that act this is not necessary; and if it follows the words of the section, and states that the justices being satisfied that A. B. is the father, it is sufficient. (Reg. v. Lewis, 1 Per. & D. 112; 8 Ad. & Ell. 881, S. C.) Upon an order of bastardy under the old law, it was stated that the husband had been absent six years, and that during his absence the defendant had carnal knowledge of the wife, and therefore they adjudge him to be the putative father. But by the Court—"This order must be quashed; for his lying with her is not a sufficient reason to infer him the father of this child; and though the justices need not show the grounds upon which they go, yet if they do, and they be not sufficient, their order will be bad." (R. v. Browne, 2 Stra. 811.)

It seems that the justices cannot make an order that the party is not the putative father. (R. v. Jenkins, 2 Sess. Cas. 161; 2 Str. 1050, S. C.; 1 Bott, 474.) Motion to quash an order of two justices under the old law, whereby they adjudge that such a person is not the putative father of a bastard child, and therefore they discharge him; and the rather, because in such a case the parish cannot appeal, because an appeal is only when the party refuses to give security to come to sessions. And by the whole Court, the two justices have no such authority; for their whole power depends on the statute of 18 Eliz., and that is only to take order for punishment of the parties, and for relief of the parish, and this order is for neither the one nor the other.

4. Maintenance of.

The order, as regards the payment of the money to reimburse the parish, should closely follow the terms of the statute. For the by-gone maintenance a specific sum should be named. (See ante, 377.) The sessions have power to order the father to pay so far as is necessary to indemnify the parish for the expense of maintaining the infant, but no further. The payment therefore should be limited in the order to such time as the child shall be a burthen in the parish. And the reason of this is, because the putative father may at any time take the child and maintain it himself. An order to pay so much per week indefinitely is bad. (R. v. Matthews, 2 Salk. 475.) And in R. v. Barebaker, 1 Salk. 121; 2 Salk. 478, S. C.; 1 Bott, 495, an order, before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, to pay so much money by the week till the child shall be fourteen years of age, was adjudged to be bad; for the justices had no power but to indemnify the parish; and that was only to oblige him (the father) to maintain the child as long as it is or may be chargeable. So an order that the putative father should pay so much a week, until the child should be able to get its living by working, was quashed; it should have been for so long time as the child was chargeable to the parish. (1 Vent. 210.) But in R. v. Street, 2 Str. 788; 1 Bott, 498, an order before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, was made to pay so much weekly till the child was nine years old, if it should so long live: and by the Court—"It is a good order, for we cannot intend it able to provide for itself sooner." So in R. v. Buckhall, 1 Barnard. 261, exception was taken that an order made before that act appointed the sum of 2*s.* to be paid weekly till the child should come to the age of twelve years, without saying, if the child shall be so long chargeable to the parish: it was answered, that indeed the old authorities lay it down in general that orders of bastardy, as well as other orders relating to the poor, must be under the limitation mentioned; but the latter authorities have been, that orders of bastardy need not: and this, it was said, is founded upon good reason; for there cannot be any reasonable intendment that bastards, who have no kindred, will have provision from any body till such an age as is mentioned in the order: and of that opinion was the Court, and confirmed the order as to that point. An order, before the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, of payment "till the child shall be no longer chargeable," has been held good. (R. v. Johnson, Comb. 69.) It must now expressly limit the payment until the child attains the age of seven years. It may be for the payment of the money to the overseers. (R. v. Weston, 1 Salk. 122.) It must be for maintenance only: in Brown's case, Comb. 448, it was held that the justices cannot order a sum for putting out the child an apprentice. But in the aforesaid case of R. v. Buckhall, 1 Barnard. 261, where it was objected that the order was for the reputed father to pay 4*l.* to the overseers for binding the child out apprentice when it should come to the age of twelve years, and did not say, if the child shall want it; so that, though the child should be provided for in any other way, the sum must be still paid to the overseers, the objection was overruled by the Court, and the order (which was under the old law) as to that was held good.

As to the payment of the maintenance money.

The order is bad, if it allege that the justices heard evidence in corroboration of the mother's statement, without adding that the corroboration was in some material particular. (Reg. v. Read, 9 Ad. & Ell. 619.)

Should show corroboration of mother's statement.

The order may, it seems, include more than one bastard child, if begotten by the same father upon the same mother. (R. v. Skinn, 4 Bott. 470.)

Where several children may be included in one order.

If the order be made by the quarter sessions, it ought to state that the case had been transmitted from the special or petty sessions, and recite the proceedings at the special or petty sessions, in order to show that the quarter sessions had jurisdiction to make the order. (Reg. v. Justices of Hampshire, 9 Dowl. P. C. 71; R. v. Guardians of Hartley Wintney Union, 1 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 677.) Indeed, there is no distinction between orders by justices in

When made at sessions.

4. Maintenance of.

quarter sessions and out of quarter sessions; in either case it is necessary that the order should show on the face of it that they have jurisdiction. (Patteson, J. ibid.)

May be good in part and bad in residue.

The order may be invalid in one part and held good for the residue. (R. v. Justices of Wiltshire, 4 Per. & Dav. 406; R. v. Sweet, 9 East, 206; R. v. Maulden, 8 B. & C. 78; R. v. St. Nicholas, Leicester, 3 A. & E. 79.)

Custody of the order.

At the time of making an order of bastardy, the magistrates' clerk delivered an order in a correct form to the parish officers, but delivered to the reputed father an order in which the mother was ordered to pay 1*s.* 6*d.* weekly, instead of the father; but at the same time the magistrate told the reputed father that he must pay 1*s.* 6*d.* per week, and the parish officers afterwards served him with a copy of the order in their possession; it was held, that as the parish officers were the proper parties to have the custody of the order of bastardy, the one delivered to them must be deemed the original, and the defective order to the father only a "notice thereof," under 18 Eliz. c. 3, s. 2, the defect in which might be cured by the statement of the magistrate at the time of making the order, or by a subsequent service of a correct copy of the valid order; and that the father was not justified in refusing to pay the arrears of the maintenance. (Wilkins v. Wright, 2 C. & M. 191.

Defective order, how cured.

Costs of overseers or guardians.

Costs.]—If an order is made, the justices have no power to award costs against the putative father, for it is not given by the statutes. And although the case has been carried before the quarter sessions, after a recognizance entered into by the putative father, under the 3rd section of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, by which he binds himself to pay such costs, still the sessions have no power to order the payment of the costs incurred by the overseers or guardians in bringing the charge before them, and if they did so order them, so much of the order would be quashed, though it would remain good for the residue. Such costs can be recovered only by means of the recognizance. (Reg. v. Justices of Wiltshire, 4 Per. & Dav. 406; 12 Ad. & Ell. 792, S. C.)

Costs of putative father.

If upon hearing the application the justices shall not think fit to make an order, they shall order and direct that the full costs incurred in resisting the application shall be paid by the overseers or guardians to the person charged. (4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 73, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, ss. 1, 3; ante, 377, 378.)

It would seem that if the application be entered at the sessions, even though the overseers, &c. decline to offer evidence in support of it, the sessions are bound to hear and determine it, with a view to give the party charged his costs. (R. v. Justices of Essex, 1 Dowl. P. C. 539.) But where by a rule of the quarter sessions it was ordered, that all intended applications for orders of maintenance in bastardy should be entered in a book kept in the office of the clerk of the peace; and no application should be received unless so entered, and that such application should be called on for trial in their order of entry: the overseers of N. entered an application, but when it was called on, did not appear to support it. The person intended to be charged having had notice, appeared in Court to resist the application, and applied for his costs under sect. 73. The Court made an order for costs, to be paid by the overseers: held, that the entry, the calling on of the case, and the attendance of the opposing party, were a sufficient application and hearing, within the meaning of the 73d section, to enable them to make the order for costs. (Reg. v. Stamper, 1 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 119; 4 P. & D. 539, S. C.)

An order of quarter sessions made under the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 73, and the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, ss. 1, 3, requiring the overseers to pay the costs of the putative father of a bastard, against whom an application has been made, must state an application to the justices at petty sessions, the recognizance to appear at quarter sessions, and the transmission of that recognizance to the quarter sessions, and if it does not state those matters, the defect cannot be supplied by affidavit. (Ante, 385.)

Appeal.

Appeal.]—There is no appeal to the quarter sessions, under the 4 & 5

Will. IV. c. 76, s. 103, or the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, against an order of affiliation made at special or petty sessions. (Reg. v. Justices of W. R. Yorkshire, 1 Ad. & Ell. N.S. 325.) Nor where the charge has been removed, at the request of the putative father, to the quarter sessions, and the order of maintenance made there, as directed by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, s. 3, is there any appeal from this order to another quarter sessions, under the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 103. (Ibid.)

4. Maintenance of.

Certiorari.]—The order may be removed by the defendant into the Court of Queen's Bench by writ of certiorari for the purpose of quashing it. And as to this writ in general, and the proceedings on it, see post, "Certiorari."

Certiorari.

A rule for a certiorari to remove an order of bastardy was discharged because not applied for in six months. (R. v. Howlett, 1 Wils. 35.)

The Court in giving their decision look to the matters as they appear on the face of the proceedings. They will quash the order if it appear that the persons making it had not sufficient jurisdiction so to do; (R. v. Tenant, 2 Stra. 716;) or if it appear that the reasons for the adjudication are not sufficient; (R. v. Browne, 2 Stra. 811;) or if the order be in other respects substantially defective. (R. v. Pitts, Dougl. 662; ante.)

If the order be defective only in one point, they may quash it as to that and confirm as to the rest. (Ante, 386.)

If the order be confirmed, the Court will not take security of the party for the performance, but will grant an attachment for non-performance. (See R. v. Chaffey, 2 Ld. Raym. 858.) If a recognizance has been taken in the Court below, although the Court of Queen's Bench does not take security for the performance of the order confirmed there, it seems to continue in force so as to entitle the parish to their remedy thereupon for any subsequent disobedience of the order. (2 Roll. 327.)

The Court used, before the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, when it quashed the order as bad, to bind the defendant to appear at the next sessions, and abide their order. (R. v. Gibson, Bla. Rep. 198; sed vide R. v. Matthews, 2 Salk. 475; R. v Price, 6 T. R. 147.)

Enforcing the Order.]—If after the order is made the payment get into arrear, the putative father may, by the 76th section, ante, 378, be proceeded against by distress and sale of his goods, or by attaching his wages. (See as to distresses under magistrates' warrants in general, title "Distress under Justices' Warrant," Vol. II.)

Enforcing the order.

Where a justice was called upon to enforce an order of filiation under the 49 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 3, on proof of the weekly sum ordered to be paid being due to the parish, and of the putative father's refusal to pay; it was held he had no jurisdiction to inquire how the weekly sum was expended; and therefore where a justice refused to commit such father to the house of correction, on the ground that the weekly sum expended by the parish officers was not wholly employed in the support of the bastard child, a mandamus was issued to the justice to compel him to make the committal. (Reg. v. Codd, 1 Per & D. 456; 9 Ad. & Ell. 682, S. C.)

In Q v. Chaffey, 2 Ld. Raym. 858; 3 Salk. 66, S. C.; 1 Bott. 472; an order under the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 19, to the churchwardens and overseers to seize of the putative father's goods what they should judge proper for securing of the parish was quashed; for that it should be what the justices think proper, and not what the churchwardens and overseers think proper.

When an order is confirmed by the Court of Queen's Bench, on a removal of it there for the purpose of quashing it, an attachment lies for non-performance (supra); but the Court will not in general make the party give security for performance of the order. (See supra.)

If the father disobey the order, he may be indicted for it, like for the disobedience of any other justice's legal order. (See R. v. Robinson, 2 Burr. 799; 1 Bott. 381.) Having taken a recognizance is no bar to the indictment, and both might be proceeded on. (2 Nolan, 338. See further, post, "Order," Vol. III.)

Indictment for disobedience of.

V. Right of the Father or Mother to the Custody of a Bastard Child.

Custody of bastards.
Cases deciding the mother has a right to.

It seems that in the case of illegitimate children the mother is the proper party to have the custody of them during the age of nurture. (See R. v. Soper, 5 T. R. 278; R. v. Hopkins, 7 East, 579; Exp. Reece, F. N. B. 148; Re Lloyd, 4 Scott, N. R. 200; 1 M. & Gr. 547, S. C.; and see 2 Saund. 83.)

In the case of R. v. Soper, 5 T. R. 278, a child of three years of age being brought up at the instance of its mother, on an habeas corpus, by the putative father, on whom an order of filiation had been made, and who had obtained the possession of the child by fraud, Lord Kenyon, C. J., said that the putative father had no right to the custody of the child, and it was accordingly restored to the mother.

Upon a motion on behalf of the mother of a bastard for a habeas corpus to the defendants, to bring it before the Court, in order that her bastard child, which the defendants had taken from her by force, might be restored to her, it was said by Lord Ellenborough, C. J , that as the mother had had the child in her quiet possession under her own care and protection during the period of nurture, and had been first divested of her possession by stratagem, and afterwards by force, in such a case every thing was to be presumed in her favour. And he said that, without touching the question of guardianship, it was a proper occasion, by means of this writ, to restore the child to the same quiet custody in which it was before the transactions happened which were the subject of complaint. (R. v. Hopkins and Wife, 7 East, 579; 3 Smith, 577, S. C.)

In Exp. Ann Knee, 1 N. R. 148, it was held that the mother of an infant illegitimate child is entitled to the custody of the child in preference to the father, though from these circumstances he may be better able to educate it. This was an application for an habeas corpus to bring up the body of an infant illegitimate child, in order to restore it to the mother. It appeared by the affidavits, that the child had been placed by consent of the father and mother under the care of a nurse; that it was afterwards removed by the father to another woman; that the father then went abroad, having entrusted Mr. Brandon, a friend, with the superintendence of the child; that Mr. Brandon (to whom the writ was prayed to be directed) wished to have the child placed with some person where the mother could have access to the child, and under those circumstances was willing to pay for its maintenance, but the mother insisted upon having it delivered up to her. The child being brought up, and the mother being present, Shepherd, Serjt. showed cause, and urged that it would be for the benefit of the child that it should be placed with some person whom the father might approve of, as the father, from his situation of life, was better able to maintain the child than the mother. Best, Serjt. contrà, insisted upon the right of the mother to the custody of her own child, and referred to R. v. De Manneville, 5 East, 221, and R. v. Moseley, 5 East, 224, (notis), and R. v. Soper, 5 T. R. 278. Sir James Mansfield, C. J., "There is no affidavit before the Court to show any ground of apprehension that the child would incur any danger from being left with the mother. It is not unlikely indeed that by granting this application we may be doing a great prejudice to the child, but still the mother is entitled to the child if she insists upon it. The application in this case may have arisen from pure affection, and the mother may be disposed to take care of the child, but it is not probable that it will be so advantageously brought up under her care as under the care of some person whom the father approves of. It often happens that the mother insists upon the custody of the child, not so much out of regard to the child itself as with the view to make the father pay a sum of money towards its maintenance and education. Nevertheless the mother must have the child unless some ground be laid by affidavit to prevent it. Let the child be delivered to the mother." Accordingly, the other judges, Heath, Rooke, and Chambre, being of the same opinion, the child was delivered to the mother in Court.

Where an illegitimate child of the age of twelve years had been placed at school by her putative father, and was brought up to the Court by a writ of habeas corpus at the suit of her mother, who moved the Court that her daughter should be given up to her, the Court would not compel the daughter to go against her own will, but allowed her to exercise her own discretion. But it it would seem by the decision in that case that if she had been under the age of seven, in which case the Court would have considered her as of tender years, the order would have been, that she should be delivered to her mother. (In re Lloyd, 4 Scott, N. R. 200; 1 M. & Gr. 547, S. C.)

5. Right to Custody of.

Cases showing that the father has a right to.

But in Pope v. Sale, 7 Bingh. 487, Tindal, C. J., said, "That perhaps, on consideration of the authorities on the subject, it would be considered that the putative father has a right to the custody of the bastard child."

In the following case it was held, that the putative father may take his bastard child from the parish, and maintain him himself. (Newland v. Osman, Trin. 27 Geo. II. MS. (B.); 1 Bott, 466, S. C.) Debt upon bond conditioned to indemnify and save harmless the parish of Eling from a bastard child. Plea, that the defendant had maintained, supported, and nourished the said child to a certain day, that is to say, to the 27th October last, and that then he offered to take the child to maintain, which they refused, and that if the churchwardens or any of them have been damnified, it is of their own wrong. Replication, that for three weeks from and after the said 27th day of October, the defendant did not provide nourishment for the child, but failed, and by reason thereof the plaintiffs, after the three weeks, expended 3*s.* for the maintenance of the child, and so were damnified. Demurrer, and joinder in demurrer. The question of law is, whether a putative father may take a bastard child into his own custody to maintain it, or whether the parish shall have the care of it. And the case in 2 Saund. 83, was mentioned, wherein the Court held this to be a good plea. (Burwell's case, 1 Vent. 48.) That the father may maintain the child himself. (Sherman's case, 1 Vent. 210.) That the justices can only make an order to maintain, so long as the child shall be chargeable. It was considered by the Court that the putative father might take his child and maintain it himself, and that this was the reason always given why orders for the maintenance of such children must not be limited to any certain time. (Foster, J., dub.)

Cases leaving the point doubtful.

In the case of Hulland v. Malkin and Bristow, 2 Wils. 126; 1 Bott, 488, (which was on an action on a bond for indemnifying the plaintiff from the charges of a bastard child, but it went off upon an error in the pleadings,) the Court said, "We need not in this case say whether the father or the mother hath a right to have the child while under seven years of age." And by the Lord C. J. Wilmot, "I give no opinion whether the father has any power over the child, who is nullius filius. Grotius says, truly the mother is the only certain parent. And an order of justices to remove the mother always removes the child." (See R. v. Smith, Set. Cas. 64; 1 Bott, 497, S. C.)

So in the case of Strangeways v. Robinson and another, 4 Taunt. 498, (which was an action of debt on a bond conditioned for payment of a weekly sum for maintenance of a bastard child, so long as it should be chargeable, to which the defendants pleaded, that after the child attained the age of seven years, the putative father offered thenceforth to keep and maintain the child, and requested the overseers to deliver the child to him, without showing that the child was in their power and custody, and which plea was held bad), Sir J. Mansfield, C. J., observed, "I say nothing upon the grand point, whether, after the child is out of the age of nurture, any father whatsoever, be he who he may, can go to the mother and claim the custody of the child; upon that point the Court gives no opinion." Judgment for the plaintiff. And see Middleham v. Bellerby, 1 M. & Sel 311.

Power of mother to appoint a guardian.

The mother of an illegitimate child has no power to appoint a guardian for it under the 12 Car. II. c. 24, s. 8. Therefore the Court of Queen's Bench will not, on habeas corpus, order an illegitimate child to be delivered up by a person to whose care it had been committed by the mother, into the custody of a person who was appointed guardian and devisee, in trust, for its benefit, by the will of the mother. (Exp. Glover, 1 Harr. & W. 508.)

Custody of legitimate children.

As to the respective parents' rights to the custody of legitimate children see the case of R. v. Greenhill, 4 Ad. & Ell. 624; 8 N. & M. 244, S. C., and authorities there cited, and the stat. 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 54, passed subsequently to that decision for amending the laws relative to that custody. In a late case where the father was convicted of felony the Court granted a habeas corpus in order to give the mother the custody of the bastard. (Exp. Bailey, 6 Dowl. 311.)

5. Right to Custody of.

VI. Capacity of a Bastard as to Inheritance, &c.

Capacity of bastards as to inheritance.

A bastard can have no name of reputation (a) as soon as he is born, but after he is born, and hath gained by time a name of reputation, he may purchase by his reputed name, to him and to his heirs; though he can have no heirs but of his body. (1 Inst. 3; 6 Rep. 65.)

A bastard may take by gift or devise, provided he be sufficiently described and has gained a name by reputation. (See 1 Ves. & B. 423.) But this rule as to a bastard's taking by his reputation must be understood as giving a capacity to take by that name merely as a description, not as a child by claim of kindred; therefore a bastard cannot claim a share under a devise to children generally, though the will was strong in his favour by implication. (5 Ves. 530; 1 Ves. & B. 434.)

A bastard is terminus à quo; he is the first of his family, for he hath no relation of which the law takes any notice; but this must be understood as to civil purposes; for there is a relation as to moral purposes, therefore he cannot marry his own mother, or sister, or the like. (Reg. v. Chafin, 3 Salk. 66; 2 Ld. Raym. 858, S. C.; Haines v. Jeffell, 1 Ld. Raym. 66.)

Consideration of natural affection will not raise an use to a bastard; for though there is natural affection between them, yet the raising the use is a constitution of the law, and therefore the issue will never arise. (Jenk. 47; Dyer, 374.)

If the issue of a man who is a bastard purchase land, and die without issue, though the land cannot descend to any heir on the part of the father, yet to the heir on the part of the mother (being no bastard) it may; so if the bastard were attaint; for the heirs of the mother make not any conveyance by the bastard. (Noy, 159.)

If a bastard die intestate, without wife or issue, the Queen is entitled to the personalty, subject to his debts, and the ordinary of course grants administration to the patentee or grantee of the crown. (Jones v. Goodchild, 3 P. Wms. 33; Rutherford v. Maule, 4 Hagg. 213; 2 Black. Com. 505.) It is usual, however, for the crown to grant administration of it to some relation of the bastard's father or mother, reserving one tenth or other small proportion of it. (1 Wood, 308; 1 Will. Exors. 286.)

But the rule, that a bastard is nullius filius, applies only to the case of inheritance; it was so considered by Lord Coke. (See Haines v. Jeffell, Ld. Raym. 68; Comb. 356, S. C.)

Devise to.

A bastard cannot take as the issue of a particular father until it has acquired the reputation of being the child of that person, which cannot be before its birth. (Co. Lit. 3 b.) Hence, bastards unborn at the date of the will, and described as the children of the testator or of another man, to be born of a particular woman, cannot take under that description. (Metham v. Duke of Devon, 1 P. Wms. 529; see Arnold v. Preston, 18 Ves. 288; Lomas v. Wright, 2 M. & K. 769.) But if the bequest be to a natural child of which a particular woman is enceinte without reference to any person as the father, this difficulty does not exist, and the legacy will be supported. (Gordon v. Gordon, 1 Meriv. 141; Evans v. Massey, 2 Price, 22; Dawson v. Dawson, Madd. & Geld. 292; and see observation of Sir W. Grant in Earle v. Wilson, 17 Ves. 532; 2 Will. Exors.)

Marriage of.

As to the marriage of bastards, see R. v. Hodnett, 1 T. R. 96; post, "Marriage," Vol. V.

(a) In an indictment for the murder of a bastard child, it was held he was improperly described by his mother's name, he not having gained that name by reputation. (Rex v. Clark, Russ. & R. C. C. 358, post, Indictment, Vol. III.)

Bathing.

When an offence.

IT is an established principle, that whatever openly outrages decency, and is injurious to public morals, is a misdemeanor at common law. (4 Bla. Com. 65; 1 Hawk. c. 5, s. 4; 1 East's P. C. c. 1, s. 1.) It is therefore indictable for a person to bathe in an indecent manner near a highway, or in any part of a public river. In R. v. Crunden, 2 Campb. 89, it was held an indictable offence for a man to undress himself on the beach, and to bathe in the sea near inhabited houses, from which he may be distinctly seen, although these houses may have been recently erected, and till then it may have been usual for men to bathe in great numbers at the place in question. See form of indictment, 2 Chit. C. L. 41.

By the Vagrant Act, a person may be treated as a rogue and vagabond who shall wilfully, openly, lewdly, and obscenely expose his person in any street, road, or public highway, or in the view thereof, or in any place of public resort, with intent to insult any female. See post, "Vagrant," Vol. VI.

Public no right to bathe, &c. in sea.

In Blundell v. Catterall, 5 B. & Ald. 268, it was held that the public at large have no common law right to bathe in the sea, and, as incident thereto, of crossing the shore on foot or with bathing machines for that purpose.

Bent.

By stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 33, s. 6, whereas on the north-west coasts of England, and especially in the county of Lancaster, the sea is bounded, and the lands are prevented from being overflowed by large hills, the sand of which is so loose that in dry weather it is thrown by the winds on the adjacent lands, to the damage thereof and the danger of the inhabitants, who are exposed thereby to the inundation of the sea; to prevent which the landowners are at great charges annually to plant and maintain a sort of rush or shrub, called starr or bent, but many disorderly persons pluck up and carry away the same to make mats and brushes; therefore, if any person without consent of the owner shall cut, pull up, or carry away any starr or bent, planted or set on the said hills on the north-west coasts of England, on complaint thereof on oath to one justice, the offender shall be summoned; and on default of appearing, the justice shall issue his warrant to apprehend and bring him before him; and being convicted on oath of one witness or confession, he shall forfeit 20s., half to the informer and half to the owner of the bent by distress; and for want of sufficient distress, be sent to the house of correction for three months, to be kept to hard labour; and for a second offence, he shall be committed to the house of correction for one year, to be whipped and kept to hard labour. 15 Geo. 2, c. 33.

Sect. 7. And if any starr or bent shall be found within five miles of the said sand hills, the persons convicted of having the same in custody shall forfeit 20s. in like manner, and for want of sufficient distress shall be committed to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for three months.

Sect. 8. But this shall not restrain any person from the exercise of any ancient prescriptive right to cut starr or bent on the sea coasts in the county of Cumberland.

Black Act.

Repeal of Black Act.

THE 9 Geo. I. c. 22, which was called the Black Act, and passed on the occasion of some devastations being committed near Waltham, in Hampshire, by persons in disguise or with their faces blacked, is now totally repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27. But its provisions are consolidated and amended by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, being the act consolidating and amending the laws in general relative to malicious injuries to property. See title "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. V.

Repeal of Lord Ellenborough's Act.

The 43 Geo. III. c. 58 (commonly called Lord Ellenborough's Act) is now partially repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, and what is not repealed by that act is so by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, consolidating and amending the laws in general relative to injuries to the person. See title "Malicious Injuries to Persons," post, Vol. V.

Blasphemy and Profaneness.

AS to profane swearing, see Swearing, Vol. V.

Blasphemy.

All blasphemies against God, as denying his being or providence; and all contumelious reproaches of Jesus Christ; all profane scoffing at the Holy Scriptures, or exposing any part of them to contempt or ridicule; impostors in religion, as falsely pretending to extraordinary commissions from God, and terrifying or abusing the people with false denunciations of judgments; and all open lewdness grossly scandalous—are punishable by fine and imprisonment, and also such corporeal punishment as to the Court shall seem meet, according to the heinousness of the crime. (1 Hawk. c. 5, s. 6; 1 East's P. C. 3.)

Punishment for.

Also seditious words, in derogation of the established religion, are indictable, as tending to a breach of the peace. (1 Hawk. c. 5, s. 6.)

Writing against Christianity in general.

In R v. Woolston, 2 Stra. 834, Fitzgib. 64, the defendant was convicted on four informations, for his blasphemous discourses on the miracles of our Saviour: And attempting to move in arrest of judgment, the court declared they would not suffer it to be debated, whether to write against Christianity in general was not an offence punishable in the temporal courts at common law: they desired it might be taken notice of, that they laid their stress upon the word general, and did not intend to include disputes between learned men upon particular controverted points. The next term he was brought up and fined 25*l.* for each of his four discourses, to suffer a year's imprisonment, and to enter into a recognizance for his good behaviour during his life, himself in 3000*l.* and 2000*l.* by others.

Blasphemy and Profaneness.

In the case of R. v. Waddington, 1 B. & C. 26, a publication stating Jesus Christ to be an impostor, and a murderer in principle, and a fanatic, is a libel at common law, Christianity being a part of the law of the land.

In the year 1656, James Naylor, for personating our Saviour, and suffering his followers to worship him, and pay him divine honours, was sentenced to be set in the pillory, and to have his tongue bored through with a red hot iron, and to be whipped, and stigmatized in the forehead with the letter B.

In R. v. Annet, 1 Bla. R. 395, the defendant was convicted on an information, for writing a most blasphemous libel in weekly papers, called the Free Inquirer; to which he pleaded guilty. In consideration of which, and of his poverty, of his having confessed his errors in an affidavit, and of his being seventy years of age, and some symptoms of wildness that appeared on his inspection in court, the court declared they had mitigated their intended sentence to the following, viz. to be imprisoned in Newgate for a month; to stand twice in the pillory with a paper on his forehead, inscribed blasphemy; to be sent to the house of correction, to hard labour, for a year; to pay a fine of 6*s.* 8*d.*, and find security, himself in 100*l.* and two sureties in 50*l.* each, for his good behaviour during life.

What discussion allowable.

Contumely and contempt are what no establishment can tolerate; but, on the other hand, it would not be proper to lay any restraint upon rational and dispassionate discussions of the rectitude and propriety of the established mode of worship; (4 Bla. Com. 51; 1 Russ. 219;) and Mr. Starkie, upon the subject, says, "that it may not be going too far from the principles and decisions that no author or preacher, who fairly and conscientiously promulgates the opinions, with whose truth he is impressed, for the benefit of others, is for so doing amenable as a criminal, that a malicious and mischievous intention is in such case the broad boundary between right and wrong; and that if it can be collected from the offensive levity with which so serious a subject is treated, or from other circumstances, that the act of the party was malicious, then, since the law has no means of distinguishing between different degrees of evil tendency, if the matter published contain any such tendency, the publisher becomes amenable to justice."—Starkie on Libel, 496, 497. See per Cur. in R. v. Woolston, supra, and the following cases on this subject: R. v. Attwood, Cro. Jac. 421; R. v. Taylor, Vent. 293; R. v. Clendon, Str. 789; R. v. Hale, Str. 416; R. v. Wilkes, 2 Stark. Sl. 141; R. v. Williams, ib.; R. v. Eaton, ib. 142; R. v. Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 161; R. v. Taylor, 2 Stark. Sl. 143.

Proceedings in a court.

It is not lawful to publish even a correct account of the proceedings in a court of justice, if such an account contain matter of a scandalous, blasphemous, or indecent nature. (R. v. Mary Carlisle, 3 B. & Ald. 167.)

An obscene book.

An information was exhibited by the attorney-general against Edmund Curl, for printing and publishing two obscene books, the one styled "The Nun in her Smock;" the other, "The Art of Flogging;" setting out the several lewd passages, and concluding against the peace. And of this the defendant was found guilty. It was moved in arrest of judgment, that however the defendant may be punishable for this in the spiritual court, as an offence against good manners; yet it cannot be a libel, for which he is punishable in the temporal courts. But after long debate and consideration, the Court at last gave it as their unanimous opinion, that this was an offence properly within their jurisdiction; they said, that religion is a part of the common law, and therefore whatever is an offence against that, is evidently an offence against the common law. And the defendant was set in the pillory. (R. v. Curl, 2 Stra. 788; 1 Burn. 29.) And see further title Lewdness, Libel, Vol. III.

Not material whether oral or written.

It is immaterial whether the blasphemous publication be verbal or written. (See 2 Stark. Sl. 141.)

Blasphemy and Profaneness.

Statutes as to.

Penalties against blasphemy.

By stat. 3 Jac. 1, c. 21, if any person shall, in any stage play, interlude, show, may-game, or pageant, jestingly or profanely speak or use the holy name of God, or of Christ Jesus, or of the Holy Ghost, or of the Trinity, he shall forfeit 10*l.*; half to the king and half to him that shall sue.

And by stat. 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 32, reciting, "Whereas many persons have, of late years, openly avowed and published many blasphemous and impious opinions, contrary to the doctrines and principles of the Christian religion, greatly tending to the dishonour of Almighty God, and may prove destructive to the peace and welfare of this kingdom; wherefore, for the more effectual suppressing of the said detestable crimes," it is enacted, "that if any person or persons, having been educated in, or at any time having made profession of the Christian religion within the realm, shall by writing, printing, teaching, or advised speaking [deny any one of the persons in the Holy Trinity to be God] (a), assert or maintain there are more gods than one, or shall deny the Christian religion to be true, or the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be of divine authority, and shall, upon indictment or information in any of his Majesty's courts at Westminster, or at the assizes, be thereof lawfully convicted by the oath of two or more credible witnesses, such person or persons, for the first offence, shall be adjudged incapable and disabled in law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, to have or enjoy any office or offices, employment or employments, ecclesiastical, civil, or military, or any part in them, or any profit or advantage appertaining to them or any of them; and if any person or persons so convicted as aforesaid shall, at the time of his or their conviction, enjoy or possess any office, place, or employment, such office, place, or employment shall be void, and is hereby declared void. And if such person or persons shall be a second time lawfully convicted as aforesaid of all or any of the aforesaid crime or crimes, that then he or they shall from henceforth be disabled to sue, prosecute, plead, or use any action or information, in any court of law or equity, or to be guardian of any child, or executor or administrator of any person, or capable of any legacy or deed of gift, or to bear any office, civil or military, or benefice ecclesiastical, for ever, within this realm, and shall also suffer imprisonment for the space of three years, without bail or mainprize, from the time of such conviction."

Limitations of prosecutions under act.

Sect. 2 provides and enacts, "That no person shall be prosecuted by virtue of this act, for any words spoken, unless the information of such words shall be given upon oath before one or more justice or justices of the peace, within four days after such words spoken, and the prosecution of such offence be within three months after such information."

Relief from penalties.

Sect. 3 provides and enacts, "That any person or persons convicted of all or any of the aforesaid crime or crimes in manner aforesaid, shall, for the first offence, (upon his, her, or their acknowledgment and renunciation of such offence or erroneous opinions, in the same court where such person or persons was or were convicted, as aforesaid, within the space of four months after his, her, or their conviction), be discharged from all penalties and disabilities incurred by such conviction, anything in this act contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

The statutes do not alter the offence at common law.

This statute of 9 & 10 Will. III. has not altered the common law as to the offence of blasphemy, but only given a cumulative punishment. It is therefore still an offence at the common law to publish a blasphemous libel. (R. v. Richard Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 161; Reg. v. Hetherington, 5 Jur. 529.)

It seems that the stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 160 (b), does not alter the common law, but only removes the penalties imposed by 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 32, on (a) This part of the enactment as relates to denying the Holy Trinity is repealed by the 53 Geo. III. c. 160.

(b) By stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 160, intituled "An Act to relieve Persons who impugn the Doctrine of the Holy Trinity from certain Penalties," reciting, that whereas in the nineteenth year of his present Majesty an act was passed, intituled "An Act for the further Relief of Protestant Dissenting Ministers and Schoolmasters," and it is expedient to enact as hereinafter provided, it is enacted, "that so much of an act passed in the first year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, intituled 'An Act for exempting his Majesty's Protestant Subjects dissenting from the Church persons denying the Trinity, and extends to them the benefits conferred on all other Protestant dissenters by stat. 1 Will. & M. c. 18, s. 1. (R. v. Waddington, 1 B. & Cres. 26.)

Blasphemy and Profaneness.

By stat. 22 Geo. II. c. 33, art. 2, all persons in or belonging to H. M.'s ships or vessels of war, being guilty of profane oaths, cursings, execrations, drunkenness, uncleanness, or other scandalous actions, in derogation of God's honour, and corruption of good manners, shall incur such punishment as a court-martial shall think fit to impose.

Bodies (dead), and Schools of Anatomy.

Stealing a body.

IT is clear no action lies for violating or disturbing the remains of the dead; nor is the stealing a corpse felony; a corpse being nullius in bonis. (3 Inst. 203,) But in R. v. Lynn, 2 T. R. 733; 2 Leach, Cr. C. 497, S. C., it was determined that stealing dead bodies, though for the improvement of the science of anatomy, is an indictable offence as a misdemeanor, it being a practice contrary to common decency, and shocking to the general sentiments and feelings of mankind.

Stealing shroud, &c.

If the shroud, coffin, &c. be stolen, an indictment for the felony is sustainable, and the property should be laid in the representatives; (2 East's P. C. 652; 1 Hale, 515;) or if none, in the ordinary, and in case of doubt, it is best to add counts laying the property both ways. It is questionable if the apprehension of a person in the act of stealing a dead body from the churchyard is a lawful apprehension, so as to subject such person to an indictment for cutting, &c. a sexton, in order to obstruct such apprehension. (R. v. Duffin, R. & R. C C. 365.)

Selling bodies.

The taking away a dead body to dispose of it for gain and profit is an indictable offence. (R. v. Gillies, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 366, n.) To sell a dead body of a capital convict for dissection, where dissection is no part of the sentence, is a misdemeanor, indictable at common law. (R. v. Cundick, D. & R. N. P. C. 13; R. & R. C. C. 366, n. S. C.) An indictment charging that one E. L. was executed, and that the defendant was retained and employed by the gaoler for certain reward to bury the body, and that in pursuance of such retainer it became his duty to bury the body, but that he did not, nor would bury the body, but on the contrary thereof, for the sake of lucre and gain, sold it for the purpose of being dissected, is good; and to support such an indictment it is not necessary to give direct evidence that the defendant sold the body for the purpose of being dissected. (Id. See the 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 75, post, 415.)

Preventing a burial.

A conspiracy to prevent a burial is indictable as a misdemeanor. (Young's case, 2 T. R. 734. See post, "Conspiracy.")

An indictment for wilfully obstructing W. C., clerk, in reading the service of the burial of the dead, in the parish church of A. and by threats and menaces hindering the burial, must state that W. C. was a clerk in holy orders, or that he had a right to bury the corpse, and must also set out the threats and menaces. (R. v. Cheere, 7 D. & R. 461.) As to burials in general, see post, "Church."

Arresting a dead body.

A vulgar and erroneous notion once prevailed, that a dead body might be arrested for debt. (Lindwood, 278, and Wood. Cr. Law, 143.) But such a proceeding is clearly illegal and indictable.

In the case of Quick v. Copleton, 1 Levinz, 161; 1 Sid. 242, S. C.; a case of Weeks v. Copleston, 1 Keb. 866, was quoted where a woman who feared the dead body of her son would be arrested for debt, was holden liable on a promise to pay in consideration of forbearance, though she was neither executrix nor administratrix. But Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in Jones v. Ashburnham, 4 East, 460, denied the correctness of such a decision, and said, "It is impossible to contend that this last forbearance could be a good consideration for an assumpsit; for to seize a dead body upon any such pretence would be contra bonos mores, and an extortion on the relatives. It is contrary to every principle of law and moral feeling. Such an act is revolting to humanity, and illegal; and therefore any promise extorted by the fear of it could never be valid in law. It might as well be said, that a promise in consideration that one would withdraw a pistol from another's breast could be enforced against the party acting under such unlawful terror."

Gaoler refusing to deliver up a dead body.

And where upon request by the executors a gaoler refused to deliver up to them for interment the body of a debtor in execution who had died in gaol, until the amount of certain detainers was paid, the Court directed a mandamus to issue peremptory in the first instance, commanding him to deliver it up. (In re Wakefield, (Bailiff of,) 1 Gale & Dav. 566; 2 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 248; and see the form of an indictment against the gaoler for such a refusal, 2 A. & E. N. S. 248 n. R v. Scott.) Bodies (dead).

By stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 37, s. 2, the body of a murderer (where the conviction and execution was in Middlesex or London) was to be conveyed by the sheriff to the hall of the surgeons' company, and dissected by such surgeons or their appointee; and when such execution happened in any other county or place in Great Britain, the body was to be delivered by the sheriff to such surgeon as the judge directed; but this enactment was repealed by the 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 75, s. 16, post, "Homicide," Vol. III. by which the body is to be buried in the prison. The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 26, s. 1, post, "Homicide," Vol. III. abolishes the hanging the body in chains. Body of murderer.

Sect. 10. Rescuing the body from the sheriff during conveyance to the surgeon, or from the house of the surgeon, is felony, punishable by seven years' transportation. (See post, "Homicide," Vol. III.) Rescuing body.

By the 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 75, intituled "An Act for regulating schools of anatomy," reciting, "Whereas a knowledge of the causes and nature of sundry diseases which affect the body, and of the best methods of treating and curing such diseases, and of healing and repairing divers wounds and injuries to which the human frame is liable, cannot be acquired without the aid of anatomical examination: and whereas the legal supply of human bodies for such anatomical examination is insufficient fully to provide the means of such knowledge: and whereas, in order further to supply human bodies for such purposes, divers great and grievous crimes have been committed, and lately murder, for the single object of selling for such purposes the bodies of the persons so murdered: and whereas therefore it is highly expedient to give protection, under certain regulations, to the study and practice of anatomy, and to prevent, as far as may be, such great and grievous crimes and murder as aforesaid;" it is enacted, "That it shall be lawful for his Majesty's principal secretary of state for the time being for the home department in that part of the United Kingdom called Great Britain, and for the chief secretary for Ireland in that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland, immediately on the passing of this act, or so soon thereafter as may be required, to grant a license to practise anatomy to any fellow or member of any college of physicians or surgeons, or to any graduate or licentiate in medicine, or to any person lawfully qualified to practise medicine in any part of the United Kingdom, or to any professor or teacher of anatomy, medicine, or surgery, or to any student attending any school of anatomy, on application from such party for such purpose, countersigned by two of his Majesty's justices of the peace acting for the county, city, borough, or place wherein such party resides, certifying that, to their knowledge or belief, such party so applying is about to carry on the practice of anatomy." Schools of anatomy, &c. Secretary of state to grant licenses to practise anatomy.

Sect. 2. "It shall be lawful for his Majesty's said principal secretary of state or chief secretary, as the case may be, immediately on the passing of this act, or as soon thereafter as may be necessary, to appoint respectively not fewer than three persons to be inspectors of places where anatomy is carried on, and at any time after such first appointment to appoint, if they shall see fit, one or more other person or persons to be an inspector or inspectors as aforesaid; and every such inspector shall continue in office for one year, or until he be removed by the said secretary of state or chief secretary, as the case may be, or until some other person shall be appointed in his place; and as often as any inspector appointed as aforesaid shall die, or shall be removed from his said office, or shall refuse or become unable to act, it shall be lawful for the said secretary of state or chief secretary, as the case may be, to appoint another person to be inspector in his room." Secretary of state to appoint inspectors of schools of anatomy;

Sect. 3. "It shall be lawful for the said secretary of state, or chief secretary, as the case may be, to direct what district of town or country, or of both, and what places where anatomy is carried on, situate within such dis- and to direct what district every inspector shall superintend.

trict, every such inspector shall be appointed to superintend, and in what manner every such inspector shall transact the duties of his office."

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 75. Inspectors to make returns of subjects removed for anatomical examination;

Sect. 4. "Every inspector to be appointed by virtue of this act shall make a quarterly return to the said secretary of state or chief secretary, as the case may be, of every deceased person's body that during the preceding quarter has been removed for anatomical examination to every separate place in his district where anatomy is carried on, distinguishing the sex, and, as far as is known at the time, the name and age of each person whose body was so removed as aforesaid." and to inspect places where anatomy is practised.

Sect. 5. "It shall be lawful for every such inspector to visit and inspect at any time, any place within his district, notice of which place has been given, as is hereinafter directed, that it is intended there to practise anatomy."

Salaries to inspectors.

Sect. 6. "It shall be lawful for his Majesty to grant to every such inspector such an annual salary, not exceeding one hundred pounds, for his trouble, and to allow such a sum of money for the expenses of his office as may appear reasonable; such salaries and allowances to be charged on the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom, and to be payable quarterly; and that an annual return of all such salaries and allowances shall be made to parliament."

Persons having lawful custody of bodies may permit them to undergo anatomical examination in certain cases.

Sect. 7. "It shall be lawful for any executor or other party, having lawful possession of the body of any deceased person, and not being an undertaker or other party intrusted with the body for the purpose only of interment, to permit the body of such deceased person to undergo anatomical examination, unless, to the knowledge of such executor or other party, such person shall have expressed his desire, either in writing at any time during his life, or verbally in the presence of two or more witnesses during the illness whereof he died, that his body after death might not undergo such examination, or unless the surviving husband or wife, or any known relative of the deceased person, shall require the body to be interred without such examination."

Provision in case of persons directing anatomical examinations after their death.

Sect. 8. "If any person, either in writing at any time during his life, or verbally in the presence of two or more witnesses during the illness whereof he died, shall direct that his body after death be examined anatomically, or shall nominate any party by this act authorised to examine bodies anatomically to make such examination, and if, before the burial of the body of such person, such direction or nomination shall be made known to the party having lawful possession of the dead body, then such last-mentioned party shall direct such examination to be made, and, in case of any such nomination as aforesaid, shall request and permit any party so authorised and nominated as aforesaid to make such examination, unless the deceased person's surviving husband or wife, or nearest known relative, or any one or more of such person's nearest known relatives, being of kin in the same degree, shall require the body to be interred without such examination."

The body not to be removed from the place where such person may have died without a certificate.

Sect. 9. "In no case shall the body of any person be removed for anatomical examination from any place where such person may have died, until after forty-eight hours from the time of such person's decease, nor until after twenty-four hours' notice, to be reckoned from the time of such decease, to the inspector of the district, of the intended removal of the body, or, if no such inspector have been appointed, to some physician, surgeon, or apothecary, residing at or near the place of death, nor unless a certificate stating in what manner such person came by his death shall previously to the removal of the body have been signed by the physician, surgeon, or apothecary who attended such person during the illness whereof he died, or if no such medical man attended such person during such illness, then by some physician, surgeon, or apothecary who shall be called in after the death of such person to view his body, and who shall state the manner or cause of death according to the best of his knowledge and belief, but who shall not be concerned in examining the body after removal; and that in case of such removal, such certificate shall be delivered, together with the body, to the party receiving the same for anatomical examination."

Professors, surgeons, and others may receive person lawfully qualified to practise medicine in any part of the United Kingdom, or any professor, teacher, or student of anatomy, medicine or surgery, having a license from his Majesty's principal secretary of state or chief secretary as aforesaid, to receive or possess for anatomical examination, or to examine anatomically, the body of any person deceased, if permitted or directed so to do by a party who had at the time of giving such permission or direction lawful possession of the body, and who had power, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, to permit or cause the body to be so examined, and provided such certificate as aforesaid were delivered by such party together with the body."

Such persons to receive with the body a certificate as aforesaid, which shall be transmitted to the inspector.

Sect. 11. "Every party so receiving a body for anatomical examination after removal, shall demand and receive, together with the body, a certificate as aforesaid, and shall, within twenty-four hours next after such removal, transmit to the inspector of the district such certificate, and also a return stating at what day and hour, and from whom the body was received, the date and place of death, the sex, and (as far as is known at the time) the christian and surname, age, and last place of abode of such person, or, if no such inspector have been appointed, to some physician, surgeon, or apothecary residing at or near the place to which the body is removed, and shall enter or cause to be entered the aforesaid particulars relating thereto, and a copy of the certificate he received therewith, in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, and shall produce such book whenever required so to do by any inspector so appointed as aforesaid."

Notice to be given to secretary of state of places where anatomy is about to be practised.

Sect. 12. "It shall not be lawful for any party to carry on or teach anatomy at any place, or at any place to receive or possess for anatomical examination, or examine anatomically, any deceased person's body after removal of the same, unless such party, or the owner or occupier of such place, or some party by this act authorised to examine bodies anatomically, shall, at least one week before the first receipt or possession of a body for such purpose at such place, have given notice to the said secretary of state or chief secretary, as the case may be, of the place where it is intended to practise anatomy."

How bodies are to be removed for examination.

Provision for interment.

Sect. 13. "Provided every such body so removed as aforesaid for the purpose of examination shall, before such removal, be placed in a decent coffin or shell, and be removed therein; and that the party removing the same, or causing the same to be removed as aforesaid, shall make provision that such body, after undergoing anatominal examination, be decently interred in consecrated ground, or in some public burial ground in use for persons of that religious persuasion to which the person whose body was so removed belonged; and that a certificate of the interment of such body shall be transmitted to the inspector of the district within six weeks after the day on which such body was received as aforesaid."

Persons described in this act not to be liable to punishment for having in their possession human bodies.

Sect. 14. "No member or fellow of any college of physicians or surgeons, nor any graduate or licentiate in medicine, nor any person lawfully qualified to practise medicine in any part of the United Kingdom, nor any professor, teacher, or student of anatomy, medicine, or surgery, having a license from his Majesty's principal secretary of state or chief secretary as aforesaid, shall be liable to any prosecution, penalty, forfeiture or punishment for receiving or having in his possession for anatomical examination, or for examining anatomically, any dead human body, according to the provisions of this act."

Act not to prohibit post-mortem examinations.

Sect. 15. "Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to extend to or to prohibit any post-mortem examination of any human body required or directed to be made by any competent legal authority."

So much of 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, as directs that the bodies of murderers may be dissected, repealed.

Sect. 16. "And whereas an act was passed in the ninth year of the reign of his late Majesty, for consolidating and amending the statutes in England relative to offences against the person, by which latter act it is enacted, that the body of every person convicted of murder shall, after execution, either be dissected or hung in chains, as to the court which tried the offender shall seem meet; and that the sentence to be pronounced by the court shall express that the body of the offender shall be dissected or hung in chains, whichsoever of the two the court shall order; be it enacted, that so much of Limitation of actions.

Sect. 17. "If any action or suit shall be commenced or brought against any person for any thing done in pursuance of this act, the same shall be commenced within six calendar months next after the cause of action accrued; and the defendant in every such action or suit may, at his election, plead the matter specially, or the general issue not guilty, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon."

Offences against this act.

Sect. 18. "Any person offending against the provisions of this act in England or Ireland shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being duly convicted thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or by a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, at the discretion of the court before which he shall be tried; and any person offending against the provisions of this act in Scotland shall, upon being duly convicted of such offence, be punished by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or by a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, at the discretion of the court before which he shall be tried."

Interpretation of certain words in this act.

Sect. 19. "And in order to remove doubts as to the meaning of certain words in this act, be it enacted, that the words 'person' and 'party' shall be respectively deemed to include any number of persons, or any society, whether by charter or otherwise, and that the meaning of the aforesaid words shall not be restricted, although the same may be subsequently referred to in the singular number and masculine gender only."

Commencement of act.

Sect. 20. "This act shall commence and take effect from and after the first day of August in the present year."

"It shall and may be lawful for the several bakers or sellers of bread within the limits aforesaid, to make and sell, or offer for sale, in his, her or their shop, or to deliver to his, her, or their customer or customers, bread made of such weight or size as such bakers or sellers of bread shall think fit; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Bread to be sold by weight only.

Sect. 4. "All bread sold within the limits aforesaid, shall be sold by the several bakers or sellers of bread respectively within the said limits by weight; and in case any baker or seller of bread within the limits aforesaid shall sell, or cause to be sold, bread in any other manner than by weight, then and in such case every such baker or seller of bread shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding forty shillings, which the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom such offender or offenders shall be convicted, shall order and direct: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent or hinder any such baker or seller of bread from selling bread usually sold under the denomination of French or fancy bread, or rolls, without previously weighing the same."

Proviso for French, &c. bread or rolls.

Avoirdupoise weight to be used.

Sect. 5. "The several bakers or sellers of bread respectively within the said limits, in the sale of bread shall use the avoirdupois weight of sixteen ounces to the pound, according to the standard in the exchequer, and the several gradations of the same for any less quantity than a pound; and in case any such baker or seller of bread shall at any time use any other than the avoirdupois weight, and the several gradations of the same, he, she, or they shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds, nor less than forty shillings, as the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom such conviction shall take place, shall from time to time order and adjudge."

Sect. 6 enacts, "That the peck loaf and its subdivisions shall not be made or sold during the space of two years from the commencement of the act." (29th September, 1822.)

Selling bread not previously weighed.

Sect. 7. "In case any such baker or seller of bread shall at any time before the expiration of two years from the commencement of this act, sell or deliver in his, her, or their shop, house, or premises, any bread which shall not have been previously weighed in the presence of the party purchasing the same, whether required by the purchaser so to do or not, except as aforesaid, then and in every such case every such baker or seller of bread so offending, shall,

Adulterating corn, &c. Selling flour of one sort of corn as flour of other sort.

Sect. 11. "If any person within the limits aforesaid shall put into any corn, meal, or flour, which shall be ground, dressed, bolted, or manufactured for sale within such limits, either at the time of grinding, dressing, bolting, or manufacturing the same, or at any other time, any ingredient or mixture whatsoever, not being the real and genuine produce of the corn or grain which shall be so ground; or if any person shall within the limits aforesaid knowingly sell, or offer or expose for sale, either separately or mixed, any meal or flour of one sort of corn or grain, as the meal or flour of any other sort of corn or grain, or any ingredient whatsoever mixed with the meal or flour so sold or offered or exposed for sale; then and in every such case every person so offending shall, upon conviction before any one or more magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices of the city, county, borough, or place where such offence shall have been committed, on the oath, or in the case of a Quaker by affirmation, of one or more credible witness or witnesses, or by his, her, or their own confession, forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds, nor less than five pounds, which such magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom any such offender or offenders shall be convicted, shall think fit and order."

Bread made of mixed meal or flour to be marked with a Roman M.

Sect. 12. "Every person who shall make for sale, or sell or expose for sale, within the limits aforesaid, any bread, made wholly or partially of the meal or flour of any other sort of corn or grain than wheat, or of the meal or flour of any peas or beans, shall cause all such bread to be marked with a large Roman M; and if any person shall at any time within the limits aforesaid, make or sell, or expose for sale, any such bread without such mark as herein-before directed, then and in every such case every person so offending shall, upon conviction in manner herein-after mentioned, forfeit and pay for every pound weight of such bread, and so in proportion for any less quantity, which shall be so made for sale or sold or exposed for sale, without being so marked as aforesaid, any sum not exceeding ten shillings, as the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom such conviction shall take place, shall from time to time order and adjudge."

Magistrates, &c. may search baker's premises, and if adulterated flour, &c. found, the same may be seized and disposed of, &c.

Sect. 13. General issue may be pleaded.

Sect. 30. "If any action or suit shall be commenced against any other person or persons than a magistrate, justice, or peace officer, for any thing done in pursuance of this act, the defendant or defendants in any such action or suit may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this act; and if it shall appear so to have been done, or if a verdict shall be recorded for the defendant or defendants, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall be nonsuited, or discontinue his, her, or their action after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared, or if judgment shall be given upon a verdict or demurrer against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants in every such action shall and may recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant or defendants hath or have in other cases by law for the recovery of his, her, or their costs." But now, by the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 2, the defendant shall have only such costs taxed to him as will fully indemnify him.—See "Justices," Vol. III.

Limitation of information.

Sect. 31. "No person shall be convicted of any offence under this act, unless the complaint is made within forty-eight hours after the offence shall have been committed, except in cases of perjury; and that no person who shall be prosecuted to conviction for any offence done or committed against this act, shall be liable to be prosecuted for the same offence under any other law."

Application of penalties.

Sect. 32. "All penalties and forfeitures by this act inflicted, and the application of which is not hereinbefore directed, shall, when recovered or paid, go and be disposed of in manner following; that is to say, one moiety thereof, where any offender or offenders shall be convicted, either by his, her, or their confession, or by the oath or affirmation of one or more credible witness or witnesses, shall go and be paid to the person or persons who shall inform against and prosecute to conviction any such offender or offenders; and the other moiety thereof, or in case there be no such person informing, then the whole thereof shall go and be paid to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish or parishes, for the use of the poor in the parish wherein such offence shall be committed, in such manner as such churchwardens and overseers of the poor shall in their discretion think fit."

By sect. 35, "the act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices and others, without being specially pleaded."

II. Baking Bread out of London or Liberties thereof, and beyond the Weekly Bills of Mortality, and Ten Miles of the Royal Exchange.

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 37.

By the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 37, intituled "An Act to repeal the several Acts now in force relating to Bread to be sold out of the City of London and the Liberties thereof, and beyond the Weekly Bills of Mortality, and Ten Miles of the Royal Exchange; and to provide other Regulations for the Making and sale of Bread, and for preventing the Adulteration of Meal, Flour, and Bread, beyond the Limits aforesaid," [28th July, 1836,] reciting "Whereas by an act passed in the third year of the reign of his late Majesty, King George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to repeal the Acts now in force relating to Bread to be sold in the City of London and the Liberties thereof, and within the Weekly Bills of Mortality, and Ten Miles of the Royal Exchange; and to provide other Regulations for the Making and Sale of Bread, and preventing the Adulteration of Meal, Flour, and Bread, within the Limits aforesaid,' certain regulations and provisions were made relative to the making and selling of bread, and for preventing the adulteration of meal, flour, and bread, within the aforesaid limits, which have been found beneficial to the public as well as to the bakers within the said limits: and whereas it is deemed expedient that the several acts of parliament now in force relating to the making and selling of bread, or to the assize and price thereof, or to the adulteration of meal, flour, or bread, beyond the limits aforesaid, should be altogether repealed, and that in lieu thereof the regulations, provisions, and penalties hereinafter contained, and which are similar to those contained in the said recited act of the third year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Fourth, should be substituted: but inasmuch as the purposes aforesaid cannot be effected without the aid and authority of parliament;" it is therefore enacted, "That from and after the 1st day of October, 1836, all and every act or acts of parliament now in force relating to the making and selling of bread, or to the assize and price thereof, or to the punishment of persons who shall adulterate meal, flour or bread, or who shall sell bread deficient in its due weight, out of the city of London and the liberties thereof, and beyond the weekly bills of mortality, and ten miles of the Royal Exchange, be and the same are hereby repealed; and there shall be no longer any assize of bread beyond the limits aforesaid, or any regulation respecting the price thereof."

Bakers to make bread of any weight or size.

Sect. 3. "It shall and may be lawful for the several bakers and sellers of bread beyond the limits aforesaid to make and sell, or offer for sale, in his, her or their shop, or to deliver to his, her, or their customer or customers, bread made of such weight or size as such bakers or sellers of bread shall think fit, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding." (See 4 M. & Sel. 214, ante, 420, n. (a).)

Bread to be sold by weight, and in no other manner.

Sect. 4. "From and after the commencement of this act all bread sold beyond the limits aforesaid shall be sold by the several bakers or sellers of bread respectively beyond the said limits by weight; and in case any baker or seller of bread beyond the limits aforesaid shall sell or cause to be sold bread in any other manner than by weight, then and in such case every such baker or seller of bread shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding forty shillings, which the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices before whom such offender or offenders shall be convicted shall order and direct: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent or hinder any such baker or seller of bread from selling bread usually sold under the denomination of French or fancy bread or rolls without previously weighing the same."

Proviso for French and fancy bread and rolls.

Bakers to use avoirdupois weight.

Sect. 5. "The several bakers or sellers of bread respectively beyond the said limits in the sale of bread shall use avoirdupois weight of sixteen ounces to the pound, according to the standard in the Exchequer, and the several gradations of the same for any less quantity than a pound; and in case any such baker or seller of bread shall at any time use any other than the avoirdupois weight, and the several gradations of the same, he, she or they shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than forty shillings, as the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices before whom such conviction shall take place shall from time to time order and adjudge."

Bakers to provide in their shops weights, &c. and to weigh bread, &c.

Sect. 6. "Every baker or seller of bread beyond the limits aforesaid shall cause to be fixed in some conspicuous part of his, her, or their shop, on or near the counter, a beam and scales with proper weights, or other sufficient balance, in order that all bread there sold may from time to time be weighed in the presence of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, except as aforesaid; and in case any such baker or seller of bread shall neglect to fix such beam and scales, or other sufficient balance, in manner aforesaid, or to provide and keep for use proper beam and scales and proper weights or balance, or shall have or use any incorrect or false beam or scales or balance, or any false weight not being of the weight it purports to be, according to the standard in the Exchequer, then and in every such case he, she, or they shall for every such false beam and scales and balance, or false weight, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds, which the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom such offender or offenders shall be convicted shall order and direct."

Bakers, &c. delivering by cart, &c. to be provided with weights, &c.

Sect. 7. "Every baker or seller of bread beyond the limits aforesaid, and every journeyman, servant, or other person employed by such baker or seller of bread, who shall convey or carry out bread for sale in and from any cart or other carriage, shall be provided with and shall constantly carry in such cart or other carriage a correct beam and scales with proper weights, or other sufficient balance, in order that all bread sold by every such baker or seller of bread, or by his or her journeyman, servant or other person, may from time to time be weighed in the presence of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, except as aforesaid; and in case any such baker or seller of bread, or his or her journeyman, servant, or other person, shall at any time carry out or deliver any bread without being provided with such beam and scales with proper weights, or other sufficient balance, or whose weights shall be deficient in their due weight according to the standard in the Exchequer, or shall at any time refuse to weigh any bread purchased of him, her or them, or delivered by his, her, or their journeyman, servant, or other person, in the presence of the person or persons purchasing or receiving the same, then and in every such case every such baker or seller of bread shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds, which the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices before whom such offender or offenders shall be convicted shall order and direct."

Adulterating bread. (a)

Sect. 8. "No baker or other person or persons who shall make bread for sale beyond the limits aforesaid, nor any journeyman or other servant of any such baker or other person, shall at any time or times in the making of bread for sale beyond such limits use any mixture or ingredient whatsoever in the making of such bread, other than and except as hereinbefore mentioned, on any account, or under any colour or pretence whatsoever, upon pain that every such person, whether master or journeyman, servant, or other person, who shall offend in the premises, and shall be convicted of any such offence by the oath, or in case of a Quaker by affirmation, of one or more credible witness or witnesses, or by his, her, or their own confession, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds nor less than five pounds, or in default thereof shall, by warrant under the hands and seals of the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom such offender shall be convicted, be apprehended and committed to the house of correction or some prison of the city, county, borough, or place where the offence shall have been committed, or the offender or offenders shall be apprehended, there to remain for any time not exceeding six calendar months, with or without hard labour, from the time of such commitment, unless the penalty shall be sooner paid, as any such magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, shall think fit and order; and it shall be lawful for the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom any such offender or offenders shall be convicted, to cause the offender's name, place of abode, and offence to be published in some newspaper which shall be printed or published in or near the city, county, borough, or place where the offence shall have been committed, and to defray the expense of publishing the same out of the money to be forfeited as last mentioned, in case any shall be so forfeited, paid or recovered."

Names of offenders to be published.

Adulterating corn, meal, or flour.

Sect. 9. "If any person beyond the limits aforesaid shall put into any corn, meal, or flour which shall be ground, dressed, bolted, or manufactured for sale beyond such limits, either at the time of grinding, dressing, bolting, or manufacturing the same, or at any other time, any ingredient or mixture whatsoever not being the real and genuine produce of the corn or grain which shall be so ground; or if any person shall, beyond the limits aforesaid, knowingly sell or offer or expose for sale, either separately or mixed, any meal or flour of one sort of corn or grain as the meal or flour of any other sort of corn or grain, or any ingredient whatsoever mixed with the meal or flour so sold or offered or exposed for sale, then and in every such case every person so offending shall, upon conviction before any one or more magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices of the city, county, borough or place where such offence shall have been committed, on the oath, or in case of a Quaker, by affirmation, of one or more credible witness or witnesses, or by his, her, or their own confession, forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds nor less than five pounds, which such magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom any such offender or offenders shall be convicted, shall think fit and order."

Selling flour or one sort of corn as the flour of another sort.

Bread made of mixed meal or flour to be marked with a Roman M.

Sect. 10. "Every person who shall make for sale, or sell or expose for sale, beyond the limits aforesaid, any bread made wholly or partially of peas or beans, or potatoes, or of any sort of corn or grain other than wheat, shall cause all such bread to be marked with a large Roman M; and if any person shall at any time, beyond the limits aforesaid, make or sell, or expose for sale,

No miller or baker, &c. to act as a justice of the peace under this act.

Sect. 16. "In case any person or persons shall resist or make forcible opposition against any person or persons employed in the due execution of this act, every such person offending therein shall for every such offence forfeit any sum not exceeding ten pounds, at the discretion of the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices of the peace, before whom he or she shall be convicted of such offence."

Opposing execution of the act.

Sect. 17. "All penalties, forfeitures and fines by this act inflicted or authorised to be imposed (the manner of levying and recovering and applying whereof is not herein otherwise directed) shall upon proof and conviction of the offences respectively before any magistrate or justice of the peace for the city, county, or place where the offence shall have been committed (as the case may require), either by the confession of the party offending, or by the oath, or in the case of a Quaker on affirmation, of any credible witness or witnesses, which oath or affirmation every such magistrate or justice is in every such case hereby fully authorised to administer, be levied, together with the costs attending the information and conviction, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party or parties offending, by warrant under the hand and seal of such magistrate or justice (which warrant such magistrate or justice is hereby empowered and required to grant); and the overplus (if any), after such penalties, forfeitures and fines, and the charges of such distress and sale, are deducted, shall be returned upon demand, unto the owner or owners of such goods and chattels; and in case such fines, penalties, and forfeitures, shall not be forthwith paid upon conviction, then it shall be lawful for such magistrate or justice to order the offender or offenders so convicted to be detained and kept in safe custody until return can be conveniently made to such warrant of distress, unless the offender or offenders shall give sufficient security to the satisfaction of such magistrate or justice for his or their appearance before such magistrate or justice on such day or days as shall be appointed for the return of such warrant of distress, such day or days not being more than seven days from the time of taking any such security, and which security the said magistrate or justice is hereby em-

Information to be laid before acting magistrates of district.

Sect. 20. Provided always, "That all offences committed against this act shall be laid before the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, usually acting in and for the district in which the offence shall have been committed, in a summary way, upon complaint, and the said magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, is and are hereby empowered to issue his or their summons for the purpose of hearing and determining the same."

Power to summon witnesses in prosecuting offences.

Sect. 21. "If it shall be made appear by the oath or affirmation of any credible person or persons, to the satisfaction of any magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, that any person or persons within the jurisdiction of any such magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, is or are likely to Examination upon oath.

Committal.

False evidence, perjury.

Sect. 22. "If any person who shall take any oath, or make any affirmation by this act directed to be taken or made, shall wilfully forswear himself or herself, or make any false affirmation, every such person shall be subject and liable to be prosecuted for perjury by indictment or information, according to the due course of law, and, if convicted thereof, shall be subject and liable to the pains and penalties which persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject and liable to."

Form of conviction.

Sect. 23. "The magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom any person shall be convicted in manner prescribed by this act, shall cause every such conviction to be drawn up in the form or to the effect following: (that is to say)

—— } BE it remembered, that on this day of in the year of Tender of amends.

Appeal to quarter sessions. (a)

Sect. 25. Provided always, "That if any person or persons convicted of any offence punishable by this act, shall think him, her, or themselves aggrieved by the judgment of the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom he, she, or they shall have been convicted, it shall be lawful for such person or persons from time to time to appeal to the justices at the next general or general quarter sessions of the peace which shall be held for the city, county, division, liberty, town or place where such judgment shall have been given, and that the execution of such judgment shall in such case be suspended, the person or persons so convicted entering into a recognizance within twenty-four hours of the time of such conviction, with two sufficient sureties in double the sum which such person or persons shall have been adjudged to pay or forfeit, upon condition to prosecute such appeal with effect, and to be forthcoming to abide the judgment and determination of the justices at their said next general or general quarter sessions; which recognizance the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom such conviction shall be had, is and are hereby empowered and required to take; and the justices in the said general or general quarter sessions are hereby authorised and required to hear and finally determine the matter of every such appeal, and to award such costs as to them shall appear just and reasonable to be paid by either party; and if, upon hearing the said appeal, the judgment of the magistrate or magistrates, justice or justices, before whom the appellant or appellants shall have been convicted, shall be confirmed, such appellant or appellants shall forthwith pay down the sum he, she, or they shall have been adjudged to have forfeited, together with such costs as the said justices in their said general or general quarter sessions shall award to be paid to the prosecutor or informer for defraying the expenses sustained by reason of any such appeal; and in default of the appellant's paying the same, any two justices, or any one magistrate or justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the place into which any such appellant or appellants shall escape, or where he, she, or they shall reside, shall and may by warrant under their hands and seals, or his hand and seal, commit any such appellant or appellants to the common gaol of the city, county, division or place, where he, she, or they shall be apprehended, until he, she, or they shall make payment of such penalty, and of the costs and charges which shall be adjudged on the conviction; but if the appellant or appellants in any such appeal shall make good his, her, or their appeal, and be discharged of the said conviction, reasonable costs shall be awarded to the appellant or appellants against such informer or informers who would (in case of such conviction) have been entitled to a moiety of the penalty to have been recovered as aforesaid, and which costs shall and may be recovered by the appellant or appellants against any such informer or informers in like manner as costs given at any general or general quarter sessions are recoverable: provided always, that no person shall be detained in prison for any such offence for any greater length of time than three calendar months."

Sect. 31. Provided also, "That no person shall be convicted of any offence under this act unless the complaint is made within forty-eight hours after the offence shall have been committed, or within such reasonable time as to the justice or justices shall seem fit, except in cases of perjury; and that no person who shall be prosecuted to conviction for any offence done or committed against this act shall be liable to be prosecuted for the same offence under any other law."

Application of penalties.

Sect. 32. "All penalties and forfeitures by this act inflicted, and the application of which is not herein-before directed, shall, when recovered or paid, go and be disposed of in manner following; (that is to say,) one moiety thereof, where any offender or offenders shall be convicted either by his, her or their confession, or by the oath or affirmation of one or more credible witness or witnesses, shall go and be paid to the person or persons who shall inform against and prosecute to conviction any such offender or offenders, and the other moiety thereof (or in case there be no such person informing then the whole thereof) shall go and be paid to some one of the overseers of the poor, or to some other officer, (as the convicting justice or justices may direct,) of the parish, township or place in which the offence shall have been committed, to be by such overseer or officer paid over to the use of the general rate of the county, riding or division in which such parish, township or place shall be situate, whether the same shall or shall not contribute to such general rate; and no inhabitant of such county, riding or division shall be deemed an incompetent witness in any proceeding under this act by reason of the application of such penalty or forfeiture to the use of the said general rate as aforesaid."

Proviso for rights of particular persons.

Sect. 33. Provided always, "That this act or any thing herein contained shall not extend or be construed to extend in any way to affect, lessen, or infringe upon any right or custom of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge or either of them, or of any lord or lords of any leets, or the rights of any clerk or clerks of the market in any place which may be exercised and enjoyed by them or any of them by virtue of any charter, bye-laws, prescriptions, usages, customs, privileges, grants or acts of parliament, except so far as relates to the assize of bread and the regulations of the price and weight thereof; but that all such rights and privileges shall be held, exercised, and enjoyed by the parties respectively entitled thereto, as fully and amply to all intents and purposes as the same were held, exercised and enjoyed before the passing of this act, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Bribery.

BRIBERY, in a strict sense, is taken for a great misprision of one in a judicial place taking any thing whatsoever, except meat and drink in small value, of any one who has to do before him any way, for doing his office, or by colour of his office, but of the Queen only; and is punishable at the common law by fine or imprisonment, both as to the party receiving and the party giving or offering the bribe. (1 Hawk. c. 67, s. 1, 2, 7; 3 Inst. 147.) What is.

But this definition, in confining the offence to judicial officers, seems too narrow. (See R. v. Beale, 1 East, 183; R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494; Com. Dig. Officer, (1)).

A mere attempt to bribe is an offence. Thus an attempt to bribe a privy councillor to procure a reversionary patent of an office grantable by the Queen under the great seal was held indictable, though it did not succeed. (R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2495; R. v. Pollman, 2 Campb. 231; ante, "Attempts.") Attempts to bribe.

So in the case of an attempt to bribe at an election for parliament. (R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2500; R. v. Plymton, 2 Ld. Raym. 1377; and see Hemslow v. Fawcett, 3 Ad. & Ell. 51; post, "Parliament," Vol. V.) So of such an attempt at an election for a corporation. (Harding v. Stokes, 2 M. & W. 233.)

So is an attempt to bribe an officer of customs. (R. v. Cassano, 5 Esp. 231; R. v. Everett, 8 B. & Cres. 114; 2 M. & Ry. 35, S. C.) See 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 51, s. 8, "Excise," Vol. II.

Bricks and Tiles.

For the Duties on Bricks and Tiles and other Excise Regulations, see "Excise," Vol. II.

BY the 17 Edw. IV. c. 4, every person using the occupation of making of the tile called plain tile (otherwise called thak tile), roof tile or cres tile, corner tile, and gutter tile, shall make it good, seasonable, and sufficient, and well whited and annealed. Quality and size of tiles.

And the earth, whereof any such tiles shall be made, shall be digged and cast up before Nov. 1st next before they shall be made, and stirred and turned before Feb. 1st next following; and not wrought before March 1st next after; and the same earth before it be put to making of tile shall be truly wrought and tried from stones.

And the veins called malin or marle, and chalk, lying commonly in the ground near to the land convenient to make tile, after the digging of the said earth whereof any such tile shall be made, shall be well severed from the earth of which the tile shall be made.

And every such plain tile so to be made shall be 10½ inches long, 6¼ inches broad, and half an inch and half a quarter thick; roof tile or cres tile 13 inches long, half an inch and half a quarter thick, with convenient deepness; gutter tile and cover tile 10½ inches long, with convenient thickness, breadth, and deepness.

And if any person shall set to sale any such tile otherwise made, he shall forfeit to the buyer double value of the tile, and make fine and ransom at the Queen's will; to be recovered by action of debt, with costs. And also the justices of the peace and every of them may hear and determine offences against this act; who shall assess upon the offender no less fine than for every 1000 plain tile 5*s.*; for every 100 roof tile 6*s.* 8*d.*; and for every 100 corner or gutter tile 2*s.*

Bricks and Tiles.

Searching for tiles, &c.

And the said justices shall have power to call before them or any of them persons having experience or knowledge in making tile, to search and examine the digging, casting, turning, parting, making, whiting, and annealing aforesaid; and no person shall put any such tile to sale before it be searched, on pain of forfeiture. And if the searcher shall find any persons offending against this act, he shall present the defaulters at the next sessions, which shall be equal to a presentment of twelve men. And the searcher shall have of the tile maker for his labour for every 1000 plain tile searched one penny, for every 100 roof tile a halfpenny, and for every 100 corner and gutter tile a farthing. Searcher neglecting his duty shall forfeit 10s.; and the justices may hear and determine the faults of the searchers in like manner as of the tile makers.

Pantiles.

The reason why no provision was made concerning pantiles, among the other sorts of tiles, by the above-mentioned act of the 17th Edw. IV. is because pantiles are a modern invention, long after the date of that act.

Exemptions from duties.

Tiles for draining land are exempt by several statutes from all duties. (34 Geo. III. c. 15; 42 Geo. III. c. 93; and 46 Geo. III. c. 138.) And this exemption is, by stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 176, extended to tiles which are necessary for the "foundations and support" of such drains, according to the following description: "flat tiles not exceeding one inch in thickness, each thereof having at one end a semicircular projection, and at the other a semicircular arch or indent, such projection and arch being portions of circles of equal diameters, and each such tile being also not less than nine inches in length, and not exceeding seven inches in breadth, such flat tiles being also perforated with circular holes, each thereof being not less than two inches in diameter, and the sum of the areas of such holes in each such flat tile amounting to not less than a quarter part of the surface or superficial content of such flat tile, and no such flat tile being fit or proper for the purpose of being used in building, or in the roof or covering of any house, shed, or other building whatever."

Quality and size of bricks and pantiles.

By the 17 Geo. III. c. 42, s. 1, 2, "All bricks made for sale shall, when burnt, be not less than eight inches and a half long, two inches and a half thick, and four inches wide; and all pantiles not less than thirteen inches and a half long, nine inches and a half wide, and half an inch thick; on pain that the maker shall forfeit twenty shilling for every 1000 bricks, and ten shillings for every 1000 pantiles, and so proportionably for a greater or less number."

Sect. 3. "And the size of the sieves or screens for sifting or screening sea-coal ashes, to be mixed with brick earth in making of bricks, shall not exceed one quarter of an inch between the meshes."

Combinations to enhance the price.

Sect. 4. "All contracts for enhancing or fixing the price of bricks or tiles shall be void; and every brickmaker or tile-maker, or other person interested in the making for sale, offending therein shall forfeit twenty pounds; and every clerk, agent, or servant, ten pounds; half to the poor, and half to him who shall sue in six calendar months in one of the courts of Westminster." This seems an offence at common law, post, "Conspiracy."

Penalties.

Sect. 5. "All other penalties and forfeitures, not herein otherwise directed, shall be recovered before one justice, on proof by confession or oath of one witness, (the oath to be administered gratis); to be levied by distress and distributed half to the informer, and half to the poor of the parish where the offender dwells; and if sufficient distress shall not be found, or such penalties and forfeitures shall not be forthwith paid, the justice shall commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction for the place where the matter shall arise, for any time not exceeding two calendar months, unless such penalties and forfeitures and all reasonable charges shall be sooner paid."

Conviction.

Sect. 6. "The conviction to be in this form, or to the like effect:—

"BE it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , A. B. is convicted before me C. D. one of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the of [specifying the offence, and the time and place when and where the same was committed, as the case shall be]. Given under my hand and seal the day and year aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "But no penalty in respect of the dimensions of bricks or tiles shall be recovered, unless the information shall be laid within one calendar month after sale or delivery of the bricks or tiles."

Limitation of proceedings.

Sect. 8. "Persons aggrieved may, within four calendar months after the cause of complaint shall have arisen, appeal to the general quarter sessions for the county, riding, division, or place, giving twenty-one days' notice at the least, in writing, of his intention to bring such appeal, and of the matter thereof, to the person or persons whose acts are complained against; and within eight days after such notice entering into recognizance before a justice with two sureties, conditioned to try such appeal at, and abide the order of, and pay such costs as shall be awarded at such sessions. And the justices at such sessions, on proof of such notice and recognizance, shall hear and determine the appeal in a summary way, and award such costs to the party appealing or appealed against as they shall think reasonable; and their determination shall be conclusive; and no order or other proceedings in the premises shall be quashed for want of form, or removed by certiorari or other process, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

Appeal.

I. What is a Public and what a County Bridge, Freehold, &c. in.

What a public bridge.

A public bridge is a highway, and a bridge of common right, to be used by the public on all occasions like a highway. (2 Lord Raym. 1174; Salk. 359, pl. 8.) The same rules as to deciding what will be a public highway will for the most part here apply. Post, "Highway," Vol. III.

To constitute a public bridge, the circumstance of its being always open along a highway is primâ facie evidence thereof. (R. v. Buckinghamshire, 12 East, 192; R. v. Salop, 13 East, 95.)

It is not, however, necessary that the bridge should be always open, but if the public use it at particular seasons it will suffice, as if they use it at all times when it is dangerous to pass through the river. (R. v. Northamptonshire, 2 M. & Sel. 262.) And a bridge used only on occasion of floods, and lying out of and alongside the road, may be a public bridge. (R. v. Devon, R. & M. C. N. P. 144.)

But if a bar be put across the bridge, which is always kept locked, except in times of flood, such is not a public bridge; for the bar shows that the public have only a right to use the bridge at times of flood. (R. v. Marquis of Buckingham, 4 Camp. 189.)

A bridge erected for the mere purpose of connecting a private mill with the public highway, or for any other private purposes, although the public may occasionally participate with the private proprietor in the use of it, does not on that account necessarily become a public bridge. (R. v. Buckinghamshire, 12 East, 204.)

A useless or mere ornamental bridge is not a public bridge. (R. v. West Riding, Yorkshire, 5 Burr. 2594; 2 Black. 685, S. C.; R. v. Inhabitants of West Riding, Yorkshire, 2 East, 342; R. v. Gloucestershire, 2 East, 356, n.)

Upon a question whether a particular structure be a bridge or a culvert, the fact of its being without parapets is not decisive. (R. v. Whitney, 3 Ad. & Ellis, 69; 7 Car. & P. 208, S. C.) Nor is the fact that it is built over water flowing in a channel between banks, though nothing can be a bridge which is not built over such a flow of water. (Id.)

Must be over a river or flowing water to make it a county bridge.

The bridge, to make it a public one and render the county liable to repair it, must be a "common and public building over a river or water flowing in a channel more or less defined, whether such river or channel be occasionally dry or not." (See R. v. Oxfordshire, 1 B. & Adol. 289; R. v. Whitney, suprà; Reg. v. Inhabitants of Derbyshire, 2 Gale & Dav. 97.) And therefore where the road, by which a bridge was occasionally flooded by a river, and for convenient access to the bridge a raised causeway had been made having arches or culverts at intervals for the passage of the flood of water, which were equally necessary to the safety of the main bridge and the causeway, it was held that the inhabitants of the county were not bound to repair, such arches being at the distance of more than 300 feet from the end of the main bridge. (R. v. Oxfordshire, suprà.)

But where a structure, called Swarkeston Bridge, was 1275 yards long, at the eastern end were five arches, under which the river Trent flowed; at the western end eight arches, under one of which a stream constantly flowed; the rest of the space consisted of a raised causeway, at different intervals in which there were twenty-nine arches, under most of which there were pools of water at all times, and under all of which the water of the Trent flowed in time of flood. There was no interval of causeway between the arches of the length of 300 feet. The county of Derby had immemorially repaired the whole structure. On an indictment against the inhabitants of the county, for the non-repair of the structure, describing the whole as a bridge: it was held, that it was properly so described, and that the verdict was properly entered for the crown. (Reg. v. Inhabitants of Derbyshire, sup.)

2. Who shall Repair at Common Law.

Freehold, &c. in bridges.

As the freehold of highways in general is vested in the adjoining proprietors, or lord of the manor, and not in the public, so the freehold in bridges is in him that hath the freehold of the soil; but the free passage is for the public. (2 Inst. 705.)

Where a person built and dedicated a bridge to the public, and the materials ceased to be part of the bridge, it was held that the property in them reverted to the original owner. (Harrison v. Parker, 6 East, 154.)

II. Who shall Repair at Common Law.

Liability of county.

The County.]—The inhabitants of a county are primâ facie bound by common law to repair all public bridges in the county. (2 Inst. 701.)

And this liability of the county exists without distinction as to whether the bridge be a foot, horse, or carriage bridge. (R. v. West Riding, Yorkshire, 5 Burr. 2594; R. v. Salop, 13 East, 95; 2 Inst. 700.)

But the county may relieve themselves from liability by showing that the whole, or that a part of the bridge is within a franchise, in which former case the whole, or in the latter case so much as is within the franchise, shall be repaired by those of the franchise; (1 Hawk. c. 77, s. 1; 1 Inst. 701;) or by showing that others are bound to repair ratione tenuræ or otherwise. (See R. v. Salop, 13 East, 95; R. v. Bucks, 12 East, 192; 2 Inst. 700.)

Liable though built by an individual, if before the 43 Geo. 3, c. 59.

The county are liable, notwithstanding the bridge was built by a private individual, if it was built for the public benefit, and before the 43 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 5; (post, 450;) or if built after that act, provided it were built in a substantial and commodious manner, under the direction or to the satisfaction of the county surveyor, &c. If indeed a man wantonly erects a useless, or a merely ornamental bridge, neither he nor the public are bound to sustain it. And if it is principally for his own benefit, and only collaterally of benefit to others, the county has nothing to do with it. But where it is of public utility, the county ought to sustain the burden of repairing it, since the public reap the benefit of it. Else it would be a great discouragement to public spirited persons to erect a beneficial bridge, provided they must either repair it themselves, or it must run to ruin. The authorities on this subject were all considered in R. v. West Riding of Yorkshire, (5 Burr. 2594; 2 Bla. R. 685). In the case of Glusburne Bridge, decided before the 43 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 5, where to an indictment against the riding for the non-repair, the plea stated, that there was an ancient foot-bridge over the stream, which the township of Glusburne, who were bound to repair it, took down, and in lieu thereof erected the carriage bridge in question, and had repaired the new bridge since its erection; that the new bridge was of public utility, and used constantly, till carried away by a flood; that the ancient foot-bridge stood sixty yards below the new bridge in the same highway; and all the Court held the riding liable to the repair, on the general principle, that if a private person build a bridge which afterwards become a public convenience, the county is bound to repair it.

If indeed a person erect a bridge in a highway of a slight and incommodious nature, and evidently intended to throw a burden on the county, it may be indicted and abated as a common nuisance. (R. v. West Riding of Yorkshire, 2 East, 348; and see the enactment of the 43 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 5, post, 450.)

The county is liable to repair a public bridge built in the highway, and

2. Who shall Repair at Common Law.

used by the public above forty years, though originally erected for the convenience of an individual. (R. v. Glamorganshire, 2 East, 356, n.)

And where a person about forty-five years back erected a mill and dam thereto for his own profit, per quod he deepened the water of a ford, through which there was a public highway, but the passage through which was, before the deepening, very inconvenient at times to the public, and the miller afterwards built a bridge over it which the public had ever since used, the Court of Queen's Bench held that the county and not the miller were chargeable with the reparation. (R. v. Kent, 2 M. & Sel. 513.)

By their act of incorporation the proprietors of the Surrey Canal were required to erect and maintain bridges over the canal where it intersected any public highway, bridle-way, or footpath, and also for the use of the owners and occupiers of land, &c. adjoining to the canal. In 1804 the company erected a swivel bridge (of sufficient dimensions to allow a carriage to traverse it) across the canal, at a spot where there had formerly been a public way, which at the most was only a bridle-way. This bridge was originally intended for the exclusive accommodation (as a carriage-way) of the tenants of an estate adjoining called the Rolls Estate. The neighbourhood having become extremely populous, and a district church having been built near the bridge, the public, from 1822 to 1832, freely and without interruption used it as a carriage-way. In 1832 the company for the first time imposed a toll upon all carriages traversing the bridge, with the exception of those belonging to the tenants of the Rolls Estate; and in 1840 they removed the old swivel bridge, and erected a convenient stone bridge in the place of it. In an action of trespass against the defendant for passing over the bridge without paying toll, the judge told the jury, that, supposing the bridge in question to have been originally erected for the exclusive accommodation of the tenants of the Rolls Estate, still, if, in consequence of the acts of the company, an idea grew up in the minds of the public that the company had dedicated the way to the public use, they might find such dedication. This was held not a misdirection; and the Court thought the evidence warranted the jury in finding a dedication. (Surrey Canal Company v. Hall, 1 Scott, N. R. 264.)

Liable though built by the crown.

So the county is liable to the repair notwithstanding the bridge was erected and repaired by the crown and for the benefit of the sovereign. Thus in an indictment against the inhabitants of the county of Bucks for not repairing the half of Datchet Bridge, they pleaded specially, and traversed the bridge being a public one. The defendants were found guilty, subject to a special case. The case stated that Queen Anne, for her convenience in passing to and from Windsor Castle, built a bridge over the Thames at Datchet, in the common highway leading from London to Windsor, in lieu of an ancient ferry, with a toll which belonged to the crown. She and her successors repaired the bridge till 1726, when it having in part fallen in and become impassable, the whole was removed, and the materials converted to the use of the king, who re-established the ferry. The question was, whether this was a public bridge and the defendants liable to repair and rebuild? The opinion of the Court was, that this bridge, situated in a principal highway, and used, as it so long was, for all persons as a public bridge, and being also of great public use and convenience, was and is a bridge repairable, as to the half part now in question, by the county of Bucks, in which it was, until the period of its late dilapidation and destruction, situate. (R. v. Bucks, 12 East, 192.)

Liable though built under act of parliament or by trustees of turnpike road before the 43 Geo. 3.

The county or riding are even liable to the repair of a public bridge erected by commissioners under an act of parliament before the 43 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 5, though the latter are empowered to raise tolls in order to support it, or though other funds are provided for the repairs, there being no special provision for exonerating them from the common law liability or transferring it to others. (R. v. West Riding of Yorkshire, 2 East, 342.) Et per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., "By the common law counties are chargeable with the repair of public bridges, unless it be shown, as the statute 22 Hen. VIII. c. 5, (which was founded on the common law, and of which hereafter, post, 453,) says, 'what persons, lands, tenements, and bodies politic, ought to make and repair such bridges.' In the absence of such proof, that burden is, by the operation of the common law, thrown on the inhabitants of the county in which the bridge lies. But in order to effect this, it is not enough that a new bridge shall be built in a highway used by the public, it must also be useful to the public. I do not lay stress on the idea of the public having adopted the bridge by passengers going over it, because if it occupy the highway they cannot help using it. I only rely on the using of it so far as to show that it does not appear to have been treated as a nuisance, but to have been acquiesced in by the public. If, however, it be built in a slight or incommodious manner, no person can at his choice impose such a burden on the county, and it may be treated altogether as a nuisance, and indicted as such. But if the public lie by without objection, and make use of it for some time, it is evidence that they adopt the act, and the bridge becoming of public benefit, the burden of repair ought properly to fall upon the public. Now that this bridge is for the common good, is proved by the use of it by all the king's subjects passing that way, by its not having been treated as a nuisance, but acquiesced in. Then, after having enjoyed the benefit of it, shall the public object to it when they begin to feel the burden of repair? The rule laid down by Aston, J. in the Glusburne Bridge case, seems to be the true one, that 'if a man built a bridge, and it becomes useful to the county in general, the county shall repair it.' And as to the adoption of it by the public, there is good sense in not relying on that, except as evidence of its being a public bridge and of utility to the public." Per Grose, J. "It being stated in the plea that the bridge was erected by the trustees of a turnpike road under a public act of parliament, I cannot suppose that it was not a public bridge built for the benefit of the public, and of public utility; and not merely for ornament, or for private benefit. If it were shown that a bridge had been built at first in a slight and imperfect manner, for the purpose of throwing the expense immediately on the county, I should think that it was a public nuisance and indictable." Lawrence, J. agreed, and said, "The principle to be collected from the Glusburne Bridge case is, that if the bridge be of public utility, the county who derive advantage from it must support it. But it is said that we cannot collect that the bridge in question is of such a description. But when we observe that it was erected by trustees of a turnpike road under an act of parliament, we cannot suppose it was erected for other purposes than for the public utility."

2. Who shall Repair at Common Law.

In the same case as to the particular question of the liability of the trustees of the road, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. said, "As to the objection that it ought to be repaired by the commissioners of the turnpike by whom it was erected, and who have authority to raise tolls for the purposes of the act, I cannot find any authority for them to erect bridges under this act; however, I will suppose they were authorised to erect the bridge: yet no fund having been specially provided by the legislature for the repair of it, the burden must necessarily fall where the common law has placed it, viz. on the riding. I am aware of the extent of this opinion, and if the trustees under similar acts throw this burden generally on the counties, it may be necessary to make special legislative provision in future." Per Lawrence, J. "As to the objection that the trustees are empowered to take tolls, that is, supposing that they are to derive some private advantage from the tolls, which is not the case, whatever tolls are raised must be laid out on the maintenance of the roads. It might as well be contended, that if a parish were to build a new bridge on a road within their limits, they would be bound to keep it in repair afterward, and that the county would not be liable, as that the trustees are in this case, because the bridge is built in the turnpike road; in truth, the trustees are merely substituted in lieu of the parish;" and Le Blanc, J. observed, "That the circumstance of the bridge being built by trustees under an act of parliament, to which the defendants must be considered as parties and assenting, and by those to whom the legislature delegated the trust of determining whether it were proper to build the bridge, made the case stronger against the defendants than where an individual had in the first instance exercised his own discretion."

Liable though built by trustees of a road if before the 43 Geo. 3.

And this common law liability of a county to repair a public bridge is so strong, that although a public bridge has been erected and constantly repaired by trustees under act of parliament, and although there be funds for the repairs, the county are still liable to repair it if it was built before the 43 Geo. III. (R. v. Oxfordshire, 4 B. & Cres. 194; 6 D. & R. 231, S. C.)

2. Who shall Repair at Common Law.

And where trustees of a turnpike act built a bridge across a stream where a culvert would have been sufficient, but a bridge was better for the public, the county cannot refuse to repair such bridge on the ground that it was not absolutely necessary. (R. v. Lancashire, 2 B. & Adol. 813.)

In 1 Ld. Raym. 725, Lord Holt says, "The inhabitants of every parish of common right ought to repair the highways, and, therefore, if particular persons are made chargeable to repair the said ways by a statute lately made, and they become insolvent, the justices of the peace may put that charge upon the rest of the inhabitants."

Where an act of parliament appoints trustees for taking down an old bridge and building a new one in its room, the county is not liable to repair until the purposes of the act are accomplished, and the powers it confers cease to operate. (16 East, 395.)

Liable though built by public company, if before the 43 Geo. 3.

Where the Medway Navigation Company, being empowered under a local act to make the river navigable and to take tolls, "and to amend or alter such bridges or highways as might hinder the passage or navigation, leaving them or others as convenient in their room," had forty years before destroyed a ford across the river, in the common highway, by deepening its bed, and built a bridge over the same place; it was held that they and not the county were bound to keep such bridge in repair, they being under a continuing condition to preserve the new passage in lieu of the old one, which they destroyed for their own benefit. (R. v. Kent, 13 East, 220.)

And where certain persons and their successors were authorised by act of parliament to make a river navigable, and to cut the soil of any person for making any new channel, &c. by virtue of which they cut through a highway and render it impassable, and a bridge was built over the cut, over which the public passed, and which had been repaired by the proprietors of the navigation; the Court of Queen's Bench held, that the proprietors and not the county were liable to repair. After argument in this case, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. said, "The undertakers of this navigation have a duty, as it seems to me, arising out of the execution of their own powers under this act. The act enables them to cut new channels as occasion shall require; and if occasion requires them to cut through a public highway, their duty is to furnish a substitute to the public by means of a bridge." Bayley, J. said, "This differs from the last case of R. v. Kent (supra); there the county derived a very essential benefit from the bridge; they had before but a passage through the ford, which is always an inconvenient one; but what benefit does this county derive from passing over a bridge instead of the solid highway." Judgment for the crown. (R. v. Kerrison, 3 M. & Sel. 526.)

So where a canal company before the 43 Geo. III. cut and deepened a ford across a highway, and thereby rendered a bridge necessary for the use of the public, which they built; it was held they were bound to repair it, the bridge being necessary for the purposes of the company, and not for the public. (R. v. Lindsey, Lincolnshire, 14 East, 317.)

Bridges built after the 43 Geo. 3, not liable to repair unless built to satisfaction of county surveyor, &c.

43 Geo. 3, c. 59.
